SICK TALES OF A HEALTHY LAND

Manhattan's New West Side Story: Realty Improvements, Hotels, Niteries

Indications are pointing to the upbeat on New York's west side as the coming centre of chichi in the town. All kinds of construction are underway. New realty developments range from the forthcoming Lincoln Center, which will make a former slum area the cultural hub of the city, to office buildings, hotels and refurbishing of existing facilities.

These changes are figured as making the wrong side of the tracks acceptable to the haut monde who rarely leave the east side unless to attend the theatre or sail to Europe. The long held attitude that the west side could never be de rigueur no longer obtains what with longterm denizens of Madison Ave. invading the west.

Advertising agencies are appearing with greater frequency in the Rockefeller Center area, and class restaurants are now opening on the west side. Restaurant Associates, for example, following the clicko of its Four Seasons, east of Park Avenue, has opened an equally soigne beanery atop the Time & Life Building. Maude Chez Elle

White House Barker

Washington, Feb. 28.

President Kennedy today became honorary barker of Variety Clubs.

In a White House ceremony, he accepted the post along with lifetime membership from Edward W. Emanuel, of Philadelphia, international chief barker.

Priest-and-Actor Work Up a Turn

Milwaukee, Feb. 28.

Rev. Richard J. Powers, priest from Boston, and Dan Ferrone, singer and actor from New York, offered a turn here billed as "Musical Comedy in America." Playing the Holy Angels High School and Cardinal Stritch College here last week, pair's performance is a combination of vocals by Ferrone and commentary by the cleric concerning what Rev. Powers terms "America's great contribution to the theatre."

Presentation has its genesis in a lecture on history of the musical theatre given by the priest before a Boston women's club. Boston U.'s speakers bureau encouraged more such appearances and Ferrone was brought in to expand the recital.

Format calls for Rev. Powers to discuss the days of song-&-dance artists and the development of musical comedy through the years. Ferrone breaks in at intervals with renditions (23 in all) of songs representative of each period covered in Rev. Powers' talk.

Student audiences apparently admired the "hip" lecturn-vocal turn.

N.Y. Child-Killing Creates Hostile Climate for Repeal Of Cafe Employee I.D. Cards

The cause of repealing the New York City provision calling for fingerprinting and issuance of identity cards for all cabaret employees received a setback this week with the announcement that a fugitive being sought in the rape-slaying of a four-year old girl, has been fingerprinted by the police dept. The fugitive, identifed as Fred Thompson, had applied in 1953 for a police card having made application for a job as a cabaret doorman.

It's expected that the N.Y. Police Dept., which has always opposed repeal of the ordinances requiring cabaret employees to carry identification cards, will urge the retention of the law in its present form. Mayor Robert F. Wagner recently announced that all licensing provisions, except gun permits, will be transferred to the N.Y. City License Dept. He will request the City Council to pass such legislation.

Comedie Francaise Co. Berthed in Blair House

In his latest bow to culture, President Kennedy has offered French Ambassador Herve Alphand use of Blair House here to prevent cancellation of a party honoring the Comedie Francaise on

YEN BALANCED POINT-OF-VIEW

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

Evidence mounts of a rebellion in middleclass America against the assumption of certain producers, directors and authors, stage and screen, that only neurotically sick people make fascinating fiction. Significantly, literary critics are complaining that the protagonists in too many novels are not worth knowing. At the same time an articulate portion of the family audience is similarly tired of screen heel-heroes and their nympho, psycho or dipso girl friends in dirty denims. You wouldn't have them in your homes as guests, runs the argument.

Though many film showmen remain skeptical about the boxoffice response to socalled "family features" and cling to the belief that "adult" themes are starkly necessary, the background of today's debate over censorship, and or classification, must realistically recognize that there is much more to the dispute over film content than a struggle between prudery and liberalism, village rednecks and urban intellectuals. The point is whether too many films are out of balance, peddling too many sick

Preminger-Schary TV Debate on Pix

Otto Preminger and Dore Schary will debate "Should the Movie Industry Be Forced to Classify Its Films" on a full network telecast Saturday, April 29. Framework for the hourlong stanza will be NBC-TV's regular "Nation's Future" series, dedicated until now entirely to political and more direct sociological matter.

Preminger will take the proposition and Schary the con. Arthur Knight served as consultant on this show biz-slanted session. Arthur Barron, Irving Gitlin's chief aide at NBC, will produce, as he has all recent "Future" programs.

Knight, the author of "The Lively Art: Panoramic History of the Movies," is inviting 600 actors and artists in motion pictures to serve

Many Omens Write a Warranty That 'Worst Is Over' for Pictures

Film industry is feeling chipper. Everything's not coming up roses, of course, but it's for certain that there's more cheer around than perhaps at any point in a decade.

The bears of the business have gotten the bounce. Producers, distributors and exhibitors who undertook to "fight back" when things were plenty dismal in the past now have good reason to be heartened.

At Metro's annual meeting of stockholders in New York last week, Joseph R. Vogel made like the most optimistic of Nostradamuses. The president said the 25% increase in M-G earnings in the past fiscal year will be followed by another 25% hike in the current year. He boldly predictly further fiscal advances in the next few years.

Wall Street has gotten the message, not alone about Metro but about nearly all picture outfits. The downtown pundits have sent various show business issues to new highs.

Keeping Up With JFK

Washington, Feb. 28.

United Artists press release on premiere of "Exodus" here contained this paragraph:

"This may well be the first event since the inauguration of President Kennedy when practically all of the men he has appointed will have an opportunity to mingle socially and meet their wives."

'Curb Teen Driver' Ideas Irk Ozoners

Boston, Feb. 28.

Film interests are watching 17 bills in Massachusetts, filed to raise and regulate age limits for driver licenses and to restrict the hours during which teenagers may be on the highways. Drive-in theatres have been much concerned about bills filed in many states this year seeking to restrain and restrict the number and activities of teen drivers.

Frank C. Lydon, executive secretary of Allied Theatres of New England, says there is a firm possibility that a composite "control" bill will be developed. The present age requirement of 16 years is expected to be maintained, he said.

However, he pointed out, it is possible that all future applicants will be required to take a driver training course in order to qualify for a license. Licenses would be suspended for varying periods depending upon the accidents or violations involved with extended periods of suspension for second or third offenders.

Business Segregation Ending in Louisville?

Louisville, Feb. 28.

Louisville Negroes appear to be near a major victory in their fight against segregation in the downtown area. Two of the town's leading department stores, Stewart's and Kaufman's, Saturday (25) agreed to end discrimination and an unspecified number of other businesses were reported to have agreed to follow suit as soon as

Washington, Feb. 28.

"You are leaving at a very important moment. The tour of these shows will show a side of American culture which is important to show to the world."

These were President Kennedy's words as he received at the White House four stars of the Theatre Guild Repertory Co. who will leave Sunday (5) for performances in 22 cities in 17 countries of Western Europe and the Near East. Players were Helen Hayes, Leif Erickson, June Havoc and Helen Menken, who will offer abroad "Skin of Our Teeth," "Glass Menagarie" and "The Miracle Worker."

Also present at the "farewell" were the Theatre Guild's Lawrence Langner and Robert W. Dowling, chairman of the American National Theatre & Academy.

Kennedy said he was "pleased" with the choice of plays and wanted to "congratulate everyone concerned for the hard work done to get them ready."

Hamburg's Reeperbahn Cafes Form Assn. to Keep the Clip Out of Strip

By HAZEL GUILD

Hamburg, Feb. 28.

Of course there's still a sucker born every minute in West Germany, but they aren't flocking to the tawdry, tinselly nightclubs and neon-lit pleasure palaces of Hamburg's notorious Reeperbahn after dark play area any more.

Business has dwindled so much in the Reeperbahn section of late, following worldwide reports of the gyps and clips of the clubs, the waiters, the bartenders, the B-girls and the bums lying in wait to roll a stiff, that 19 of the owners of strip and nude shows and cabarets have banded together in a "Protective Organization."

The St. Pauli Selbhilfe-Organization (St. Pauli Self-Help Organization) as the group is formally known is out to combat the area's unsavory reputation, to hold the line on zooming prices, to keep the clip out of the strip.

Diplomat's $131 Bill

On Jan. 5 a Swiss official and his son spent an evening in the Casanova nitery on the Reeperbahn, and later protested, both to the Hamburg city government and to his own Swiss government, about the astounding 724 mark bill (about $131) which was handed him for a few drinks that he bought for himself for his son and for a persistent B-girl.

The German papers have recently been full of stories about other tourists, foreigners and visit-

Joey Bishop Wows JFK At Annual White House Correspondents Dinner

By JAY LEWIS

Washington, Feb. 28.

In contrast to the marathon, sometimes tedious Inaugural Gala, President Kennedy was treated to a snappy, neatly-balanced one hour and 50-minute revue Saturday (25).

Occasion was White House Correspondents Dinner at Sheraton-Park Hotel, an annual shindig usually of import but somewhat neglected during the Eisenhower years.

Consensus of the estimated 1,500 attendees—Capital newsmen and guests, mostly VIP's—was that Joey Bishop was the hit of the evening. A late substitute emcee for ailing Danny Thomas, Bishop saw everyone of his gags meeting bursts of yocks. And the White House newsmen have a rep for being tough on performers.

In both his m.c. chores and his own act, Bishop's humor was topical, flawlessly presented and dignified. The President (a stag affair, the First Lady natch was absent) appeared genuinely amused while

Update 'Soldier Schweik'

Milan, Feb. 28.

Bertold Brecht, the late Communist dramatist of East Germany, is having his "Good Soldier Schweik" updated to World War II and presented here by the Piccolo theatre. An armored car is used, driving off the stage and into the audience.

Tino Buazelli, a newcomer here, played the title role. Production was staged by Giorgio Strehler.

Frau Brecht was present.

Presley Rocks 'Em In Memphis Cuffo; 51G for Charity

By MATTY BRESCIA

Memphis, Feb. 28.

Memphis' own Elvis Presley came back to the home folks for a one-day stand Saturday (25) by pouring it on aplenty in a cuffo stint and after deservedly earning an earth-shaking salvo of applause, the "Rex" of rock 'n roll, sans sideburns, tucked his music box under his arm and returned to his $100,000 palatial Graceland estate (seven miles from downtown Memphis) apparently rocking away in his unique style.

He came and he conquered—but not without the terrif all-around showmanship and promotional direction of his skipper, Col. Tom Parker, who literally steered the event into a cool $51,612 grab-bag for some 27 Memphis charities.

Parker pulled out all the stops in making "his boy's homecoming" a whopper. The Colonel dispatched invites to a top array of bigwigs

35th Sponsored Opera For Mrs. Wm. R. Hearst

"Don Carlo" performance of March 23 at the Metropolitan Opera, N. Y. will be the 35th annual sponsorship of an opera by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst on behalf of Free Milk Fund For Babies Inc. Dowager founded the charity, which dispenses to poor kids up to age six, in 1924.

Jon Vickers will sing Carlo, Georgia Tozzi the king and Robert Merrill the Roderigo. Role of Princess for which Giuletta Simionato was originally cast goes to Irene Dalis, owing to illness in Italy of the former. Leonie Rysanek is the Elizabeth.

Mrs. Hearst's annual affair always marshalls a brigade of debutantes and society women for the big ticket push.

Wald's First Refusal on 46 Novels So Far

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Jerry Wald, who rarely misses an opportunity to sound-off about the need for more fresh story material, has quietly put his money where his mouth is. The producer, through his Wald Publishing Co., a branch of Jerry Wald Productions, has shelled out some $250,000 during the last year in the form of advance royalties to 46 authors who now are working on prospective books.

Wald, of course, is not so much interested in stimulating the flow of stories to bolster exchequers of publishing as he is in prospective story material for motion pictures.

He doesn't control any of the story ideas he hands over to authors, or which they in turn bring to him. Only jump he gets on his film competitors is the advantage of first reading of the completed novel.

Wald actually has his royalty advances, which have ranged from approximately $5,000 to as high as $20,000 (depending on both stature of the writer and the story outline) protected up to a point through working arrangements with publishers and authors. When a publisher accepts a story, Wald is repaid the advance royalty by being assigned the publisher advance which normally goes to the writer. Just how the producer's profit or loss tally will figure over a long haul remains to be determined.

According to Robert Joseph, who operates under the high flying title of Director of Literary Activities for Wald Productions, 14 books by authors tied-in with the plan are committed for publication in the next several months.

"Wald Productions' interest in

JACK KELLY'S OFFBEAT WILL A 'BESTSELLER'

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.

The last will and testament of John B. (Jack) Kelly, former Olympic oarsman, founder of the Philadelphia municipal theatre named after him and the father of Princess Grace, is moving into the "bestseller" class at $7 a copy.

At the Register of Wills Office it was said 30 copies of the document have been ordered since Kelly died last June. Requests have come from as far as England, Los Angeles and San Diego. Cost of photostatic copies is $1.50 for the first page and 50c each for the remaining pages of the 12-page will.

Kelly stated in his will that he would not use legal language if he could help it and that his "kids" would be referred to as "kids" not "issue." Orders for copies of this testament in the vernacular have come from such diverse sources as an advertising agency, a banker, a number of attorneys, a jury commissioner and the probate office of Cook County, Ill.

Why Broadcasters Go Nuts

Washington, Feb. 28.

Television has aggravated another top Federal cop.

Mr. Secret Service—U. E. Baughman, head of the celebrated outfit—has sent CBS a protest over the Dupont Show of the Month production, "The Lincoln Murder Case." In the show, the Frank Stanton network implied Edwin M. Stanton, Lincoln's Secretary of War, was implicated in the Lincoln assassination.

Without getting involved in the fingerpointing at Edwin Stanton, Baughman wrote Frank Stanton that CBS was far offbase in history as far as the Secret Service was concerned.

During the program, there were two references to the fact that the Secret Service didn't do anything about the plot against Lincoln. All he wanted to know, Baughman asked in effect, is how the Secret Service could have done anything when it didn't exist?

The agency wasn't founded until July 5, 1865 (after Lincoln was shot) and had no responsibility for guarding the U. S. President's life until after the William McKinley assassination in 1901, Baughman noted.

Baughman added: "I believe in the interest of accuracy and good reporting this should be brought to your (Frank Stanton's) attention for the record, and any such implication corrected in future showings of the production."

Earlier, James Bennett, head of the Bureau of Prisons, blew up over inaccuracies (historically) in ABC's "The Untouchables."

'Easier to Handle Actors Who Never Went to Drama School'—Raoul Walsh

Kyoto, Japan, Feb. 28.

After shooting five days worth of script during the first three working days of "Marines, Let's Go" (20th-Fox) on location here, vet director Raoul Walsh said, "I like to keep the actors moving. Fundamentally the thing is a motion picture, so let's keep it moving."

Again undertaking a rough-and-tumble service comedy, the difference this time is that Walsh is working with a cast of limited name value. But this is the way he wanted it. He's had his fill of actors who demand retakes, who want to rewrite their dialog and who ask the nature of the character's mother while the production waits.

Walsh is known for bringing his pictures home ahead of schedule. He offered one possible explanation when saying to the VARIETY rep here, "There's only one way to show a guy coming into a room. You don't have to shoot it five ways."

The cast he is keeping in motion is headed by Tom Tryon, David Hedison, Tom Reese, Linda Hutch-

FILM CATALOG: 1950-1959

A valuable reference volume has been published by the Library of Congress and is available at $10 a copy from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D.C. This is a listing of 27,310, titles, 1950 through 1959.

Title, subtitle, title if translated, series title, producer, copyright owner and other pertinent data are supplied.

Library of Congress has previously published similar catalogs for 1940-49 at $10; 1912-1939 at $18; and the early silent period, 1894-1912, at $2.

Twilight of Antitrust Suits; Docket Once at 500, Now But 100

Antitrust suits brought by exhibitors against the film companies, for years headlined as a potential nemesis of the entire industry, no longer represents any "difficulty," Benjamin Melniker, Metro's v.p.-general counsel, stated in New York last week. He said that cases still pending number about 100.

Several years ago there were close to 500 actions on file, with alleged damages demanded high in the hundreds of millions of dollars. Bulk of these now have been settled or adjudcated and in some cases where damages were awarded the money involved was for the most part only a small fraction ot what the complaintant had asked.

Also easing the burden for the film companies is the fact that the institution of new cases has long since come to be only sporadic. Most of the a-t suits were launched within a few years following promulgation of the decrees in U.S. vs. Paramount et al.

UA's 6% Notes Due Feb. 1976, Privately Taken by Group

United Artists has concluded arrangements for private placement with a small group of institutional investors of $10,000,000 of 6% subordinated notes due Feb. 1, 1976, and 10-year warrants to purchase 200,000 shares of common stock of the company at prices in excess of the present market, Arthur B. Krim, UA prexy, announced Thursday (23).

Krim said the funds would be used for repayment of certain shorter term debt and for continued expansion of company's business. Placement was arranged by F. Eberstadt & Co. and Lazard Freres & Co.

TO ATTACK VIRGINIA'S CENSORSHIP STATUTE

Times Film Corp., now pressing for a rehearing of its case vs. City of Chicago's licensing statute before U. S. Supreme Court (see separate story), also plans to press its case against the state of Virginia's licensing system, Felix Bilgrey, Times counsel, said in New York Monday (27).

Last week the Circuit Court in Richmond upheld a ban imposed on Times' "The Respectful Prostitute" on grounds that it would incite to riot. Bilgrey plans to appeal this decision to the Virginia Supreme Court, but will not take this action until he gets the decision on his petition for a rehearing of the Chicago case.

Single-Featuring 'Suzie'

As it did with "Psycho," Paramount is insisting in many locations on playing "World of Suzie Wong" on single-feature policy. This obviously makes for greater turnover possibilities.

Another blow to dual-featuring has been the increased length of many productions. When they exceed the two-hour line there's not much programming time left for another feature.

CHI FEATURE CARTOON

Herschel Lewis Preps 'My Pal Is a Horse'

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Herschel Lewis' Mid-Continent Films is prepping its third release, this one an animated cartoon feature titled "My Pal George Is a Horse." Project likely won't be off the boards before early '62.

The indie's second pic, "Living Venus," reportedly opened to fine grosses in first five dates, and is booked for the Coronet Theatre, Dallas, next Tuesday (7). Lewis is handling his own distribution, except for the New York area, where Jack Alexander is covering.

Happier Days In Spain for MPEA

Spanish situation re the Motion Picture Export Assn. seems definitely to be improving, G. Griffith Johnson, MPEA veep, reported in New York Friday (24). Johnson returned to the States earlier in the week from a month's European trip during which he negotiated with Spanish officials on current film pact which runs until Sept. 30, 1961.

Spanish government reps, Johnson reported, have agreed to increase the quota on U.S. short subjects from 40 to 60 a year, and to increase the quota on subtitled imports from six to 10. Most importantly, however, the remittance situation seems to be easing.

Under present setup, 30% of American monies earned in Spain go into a "A" account, with the remaining 70% in a "B" account. Theoretically, the A accounts are completely remittable but in actual practice it hasn't worked out that way. Last year, MPEA companies got about $700,000 out of Spain, but this was nowhere near the complete A account.

In his most recent talks with Spanish reps, Johnson said they had agreed to make arrangements to liquidate a greater portion of this A account and, he hopes, on a regular basis.

C. Robert Fine's Action Over Perspecta Starts; Nizer for Defense

New York Supreme Court trial started this week in the $90,000,000 fraud action brought by C. Roberts Fine, inventor of Perspecta Inc.'s "directional sound system," against Arthur Loew Jr., MGM International, Warner Bros., Paramount, Fine Sound, Inc., and Perspecta Sound.

Fine charges that he surrendered stock control to Loew and MGM with the understanding they would exploit his sound system to the benefit of all. Instead, he charges, Loew turned over the system to MGM International without provision for royalties or other payments to the inventor.

Trial opened Monday (27) in the court of Justice Henry Epstein with jury selection and opening statements by attorneys.

Attorney for the defense is Arthur L. Danzig of the Nemeroff, Jelline, Dannzig & Paley office. Louis Nizer is representing the defendants.

LONDON'S 0 SOLO MIO ON 'CLEO'

London, Feb. 28.

First of the "Cleopatra" writs which 20th-Fox is taking out against insurance companies has been issued. It went to the Hanover Insurance Co. on Friday (24) and affects the first $450,000 of 20th's $8,400,000 insurance on its much troubled film production.

Some 40 insurance companies and 90 syndicates of Lloyd's underwriters have refused to accept liability for losses on "Cleopatra." 20th-Fox is not asking for a monetary judgment, but for a declaration from the court that the insurance on the film is valid. Final amount for which insurers might be liable, if 20th-Fox action succeeds, will not be known until the pic is finished, but to date the sum is in excess of $3,000,000. Case is not expected to come to court until about July, and may be settled out of court before then.

The film company alleges that the insurers are seeking to evade liability on a technicality concerning the health of Elizabeth Taylor whose illness stopped production of the film and whom, they say, was perfectly fit to work on "Cleopatra" until she was afflicted by a tooth ailment. The insurance people contend that she was not, though they admit that the medical certificate supplied by the film company when the policies were taken out, was offered in good faith.

Over weekend Elizabeth Taylor was bedded by an influenza attack, but not retarding the film, yet to roll. Reports from London say underwriters want to "settle" the 20th-Fox claim for $1,300,000, or perhaps 50%.

Just before the first writ was issued 20th-Fox put out a statement declaring that the company "cooperated with the insurance assessors at all times and supplied them with all necessary information and, at the request of the insurers, even re-scheduled the picture in order to comply with the assessors' requirements.

"20th-Fox met the wishes of the insurers in shooting for several weeks' scenes in which Miss Taylor did not appear, but when it became apparent that Miss Taylor's illness was going to be of longer duration than at first suspected, the assessors recommended that Fox suspend production. Accordingly Fox gave the necessary notice to the technicians and production personnel as requested by the insurers."

Cite 20th's Record in Britain

Statement adds that the company has made about 20 films in U. K. within the past five years and never once claimed a loss in any of them. "It is inconceivable that 20th Century-Fox's good faith in this matter would be challenged."

According to the statement, the premium charged on "Cleopatra" was around $500,000 "and a substantial portion, we believe, was based on an additional premium demanded because of Miss Taylor." Meanwhile the long held-up picture (which went into production at Lord Rank's Pinewood Studios back in September) is still further delayed by a complete rewrite of the script.

New Director and Conception

Joseph L. Mankiewicz, who has taken over the direction of the Walter Wanger production from Rouben Mamoulian, stated that his conception of "Cleopatra" was not the same as Mamoulian's. British poet and novelist Lawrence Durrell is now at work with Sidney Buchman on turning the Mankiewicz conception into a new screenplay. Mankiewicz said he hoped to be ready to re-start shooting at the end of March or early in April. All the film already shot—about 12 minutes—would be scrapped.

20TH MEETING MARCH 8

See John Loeb & Milton Gould Joining Board

Twentieth-Fox board meeting, originally scheduled to be held last Wednesday (22) but postponed at last minte, has now been rescheduled for March 8.

Official explanation for the postponement was the inability to gather a quorum as result of the airlines strike.

Principal business on the agenda is proposal to increase board membership from 10 to 12 directors. Expected to be seated as new directors are John Loeb, of Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades & Co., and attorney Milton S. Gould, of Gallop, Climenko & Gould.

U.S. Players Visit Columbia Festival

Motion Picture Export Assn. has firmed up a delegation of eight film and stage personalities to go to the second international film fest at Cartegena (Colombia) this year. Fest runs March 10-20

Last year fest, which was organized rather quickly, drew principally private U.S. participation. This year's delegation will include Celeste Holm, James Daly and wife Hope Newall, Barbara Baxley, John Gavin, Rosemary Murphy, Deborah Walley and Nancy Kovak. Daly, Miss Baxley and Miss Murphy all are from cast of legit "Period of Adjustment."

U.S. entries at the fest—and all drawn from unreleased pix already on hand in Colombia and subtitled in Spanish—are United Artists' "Never on Sunday," Columbia's "Let No Man Write My Epitaph" and UA's "Elmer Gantry."

'CinderFella' Shapes As One Jerry Lewis Release Which Didn't Make Big

Grosses so far indicate that Jerry Lewis' "CinderFella" could become a losing money proposition. For a single motion picture to go into the red is not unusual, of course, except that in this case it would be the first Lewis comedy to drop into deficit category.

Adding to the significance is the fact that Lewis' string of successes —about 20 winners in a row—is unprecedented.

"CinderFella" has had a fiscal roadblock in that its negative costs soared to well over the potential (in terms of rentals) of a Lewis picture. And this means rentals of over $3,000,000.

On the market just before "CinderFella" was "Bellboy," which is doing just fine. But "CinderFella" was ready first and held back in order to develop a campaign.

Also to be noted is the fact that "CinderFella" has had to contend with blizzard conditions in many showcase situations.

All Names Changed In Robt. Kennedy's 'Enemy'

Producer Jerry Wald, accompanied by 20th-Fox prexy Spyros P. Skouras, flew to Washington Monday (27) evening for a dinner conference with Attorney General Robert Kennedy re Wald's projected screen version of Kennedy's "Enemy Within." Film execs returned to New York later in the evening.

Wald plans to do a fiction film on the Kennedy book, using the factual accounts of union skulduggery as his starting point. All names will be changed, except the Kennedy authorship.

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

The long pending report that Jack L. Warner, president of Warner Bros., would start easing some of the production lead and turn over more and more of it—theatrically as well as the film television end—to William T. Orr is now confirmed. Orr becomes vicepresident in charge of all WB production, theatrical as well as tv, and his first assistant, Hugh Benson, likewise has been upped "in the wider guidance of all studio production."

Warner remains at the top of everything but with the realignment of vidpix production under three supervisors—Jules Schermer, Howie Horwitz and Arthur Silver —this will ease the tv load for the Orr-Benson team.

In making the announcement of Orr's promotion, Warner saluted his "spectacular success" in the 10 television network shows—"Maverick," "77 Sunset Strip," Hawaiian Eye," "Surfside 6," "Roaring 20s," "Cheyenne Show," "Lawman," "Bronco," "Sugarfoot" and others, plus "several upcoming new shows."

While Orr becomes v.p. in charge of all WB production, prexy Jack L. Warner stresses that everything will continue under his own supervision.

Steve Trilling, longtime executive associate to Warner in theatrical production, continues as v.p. of Warner Bros. Pictures and will become head of "special production projects" and "in addition will assume the role of producer on certain theatrical motion pictures."

In the supervisory breakdown—as reported in VARIETY last week—Schermer assumes responsibility for "Roaring 20s," "Lawman" and "Las Vegas," Horwitz will supervise "77 Sunset Strip," "Hawaiian Eye" and "Surfside 6"; Silver will o.o. "Cheyenne," "Maverick and the new "Tumbleweed" series.

Warner stresses acquisition of new tv and theatrical production packages, also added writers and directors for same, and in addition reiterates that the Burbank plant's 28 stages are "available to independent producers."

WB president's salute to Orr who, incidentally, is married to Joy Warner (his daughter), accents a "brilliant and enviable record" and that Orr has "demonstrated great talent and originality" which Warner feels will "bring the same astute leadership to major motion picture production."

For First Time: Vox Hollywood On MPAA Board

The Hollywood influence was immediately felt as representatives of the Screen Producers Guild attended their first meeting of the board of the Motion Picture Assn. of America in New York Monday (27). SPG's Jerry Wald and William Perlberg sat in as MPAA board members. Walter Mirisch and Pandro S. Berman, also of SPG and also new to the MPAA directorate, didn't make it.

Session, presided over by MPAA president Eric A. Johnston, was a talk fest with little definite action taken. But prominent in the conversation was the matter of talent loan-outs from one studio to another and the allegation, reportedly made by Wald, that homeoffices are setting up prohibitive prices.

No information was given, out officially by MPAA. Which is characteristic of MPAA. But it was inferred that voices from the west were raised against the practice of lending out a contract player unless the borrowing studio is willing to shell out far more money than said contract player is paid by the lot holding the contract. This reduces exposure for promising new faces, for the reason that the po-

300 Ex-Staffers of RKO Theatres Claim Glen Alden Crimps Pensions; Committee Explores Legal Angles

Dismayed by the action of the board of directors of the Glen Alden Corp. in apparently bypassing a section of the RKO Theatres pension plan, several former RKO Theatres employes are forming a committee of pensioners with the stated purpose of carrying their grievances to the N. Y. state attorney-general. In this way, the group hopes to obtain some satisfaction for some 300 ex-RKO Theatres' employees who have been notified that the $1,000 death benefit portion of the pension plan has been dropped.

Some former RKO Theatre workers individually already have appealed to the U. S. Federal Income Tax Bureau, to the Bankers Trust Co. (which apparently only acts as an agent for RKO) and to the N. Y. State Labor Commission. From these visits, they have decided the smartest course of action is via a committee which can present their grievances to the state attorney-general's office.

Gist of what has aroused these former company employees is the note received a couple of weeks ago, addressed to RKO Theatre pensioners, which stated in part:

"The board of directors of the Glen Alden Corp. (it now controls RKO Theatres) has adopted a uniform group life insurance plan, effective Feb. 1 for various divisions and subsidiaries. We regret to advise you that such plan does not provide for any group life insurance after termination of employment. Under these circumstances, you will no longer be insured by the company for $1,000 of life insurance after March 3."

Notice goes on to say that under provisions of the Group Life Policy, the ex-employe is entitled to apply to the Equitable Life Assurance Society for individual policy on life insurance in an amount up to the amount of "your contributory insurance," with no medical examination required. Checkup revealed that for those having $6,000 policies and 68-69 years of age, it would cost about $600 per year; for the $1,000 policy, it would cost roughly $114.

$6,000 Policies

Additional notice from the Glen Alden company stated that "if you are on pension but still employed, this does not apply." It is estimated that about 280 RKO-ites had $1,000 policies while upwards of 70 had $6,000 policies at the time their services with the company were terminated.

Something not put forth in the original notices to ex-employees is the wording of Section 10, Article 2, of the RKO Theatres Pension Trust Plan, dated Dec. 31, 1950. This reads:

"The beneficiary or beneficiaries of a member dying after his retirement, or after his normal retirement date while in the employ of the corporation, shall receive a death benefit equal to $1,000."

In presenting their case to the attorney-general, the members of the committee will try to ascertain what became of the fund set aside to cover the pension plan, now that the Glen Alden company has decided it will not pay out the $1,000 benefit in the case of the death of former employees.

Those who were employed at RKO Theatres and were covered by the pension-insurance plan up to $6,000 include Major Leslie Thompson, former labor administrator; William W. Howard, vice-president; David Bines, producer of stageshows; John Hearns, division manager; H. Russ Eade, zone manager; Charles McDonal, division manager; and some 34 others.

Mortal Fame

Bennett Cerf, publisher, punster columnist, television panelist and member of the board of Metro, was present at the M-G annual meeting in New York last week.

As the meeting was adjourned a stockholder in all seriousness walked over and asked, "Mr. Cerf, what's your line?"

Reason Re Fall, Not Easter, For 'King of Kings'

As previously stated here, Samuel Bronston's "King of Kings," is to be released by Metro next fall although all original intentions were to open the Biblical epic this Easter. Producer Bronston and M-G re-studied recent history. Hence the switched decision.

It was noted that Paramount's "Ten Commandments" started off in the fall and "hit it right." M-G's own "Ben-Hur" was a fall release and ditto. As a matter of fact, M-G execs say "Hur," following the same release pattern of "Commandments," is going ahead of the latter in many situations.

Distinct impression given by president Joseph R. Vogel of Metro is that "Hur" is on the way to surpassing "Commandments," whose global rentals now amount to $69,000,000.

This all simply means, apparently, that the public is more likely to crowd around an epic-sized production in the autumn, and that this type of film can build and build right through the following summer. Whereas, a big-scale feature, having been initially exposed at Easter, might encounter a possible hardship during the hot-weather months (when lightweight fare traditionally is preferred) without the long-range penetration.

First interpretation was that M-G didn't want to go with "Kings" at Easter because this would have meant having two hard-ticket pictures on sale at the same time, other being "Hur." An officer of M-G says this is not the case, for "Hur" will still be available in the fall as will be, too, other roadshow pictures from other companies.

There's no fear of overloading the market with the hard-ticketers, just so long as each one of them qualifies for this special marketing approach. Or, so it sounds.

HY HOLLINGER TO PAR, JACK PITMAN INTO N.Y.

When Hy Hollinger, VARIETY staffer, joins Lou Novins at Paramount's Telemeter, Jack Pitman, from this paper's Chicago office, shifts to New York.

Pit will take over the film news "beat" formerly handled by Holl. Morrie Roth, ex-Wall Street Journal, succeeds Pitman in the Chi bureau of VARIETY.

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Morrie Roth will take the review signature of Mor. Since bureau head Les Brown's signature is Les, that's Mor or Les in the new Chi tandem.

United Artists' Mostest Of Nominations (41) In Oscar's 3d-of-Century

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

United Artists has greatest number, 41, of nominations ever given a distributor. The 41 cover nine releases in the 33d annual Oscar vote by the film colony here. UA entries included six on two features handled by Lopert Pictures, owned by UA. Nearest competitors were 20th-Fox, Warner Bros., tied with 13 nominations each on six films each. Columbia trailed with eight taps for two films. Metro, last year's leader, Paramount, Universal have seven nominations apiece, on five, four, two films, respectively.

Most nominated film was UA's "The Apartment," which garnered 10 nominations, including near-record five out of six top categories.

Spencer Tracy, up for "Best Actor" in "Inherit the Wind," and Greer Garson, one of nominees for "Best Actress" via "Sunrise at Campobello," are nominated for seventh time in their careers; Laurence Olivier and Deborah Kerr for sixth time. Wilder's nomination for "Best Direction" also marks a seventh mention for him.

Previous high in number of nominations for single company was 32 registered by Metro in 1954 on 17 films, 31 on 11 in 1956.

"Best Motion Picture of Year" nominations are these:

"The Alamo," Batjac, United Artists, John Wayne, producer.

"The Apartment," Mirisch, United Artists, Billy Wilder, producer.

"Elmer Gantry," Burt Lancaster-Richard Brooks Production, United Artists, Benard Smith, producer.

"Sons and Lovers," Company of Artists Inc., 20th Century-Fox, Jerry Wald, producer.

"The Sundowners," Warner Bros., Fred Zinnemann, producer.

Choices offered voters on "Best Director" are:

Billy Wilder for "The Apartment."

Jules Dassin for "Never On Sunday."

Alfred Hitchcock for "Psycho."

Jack Cardiff for "Sons and Lovers."

Fred Zinnemann for "The Sundowners."

Here are the choices before those here in Hollywood qualified to vote:

For best performance by an actor—
Trevor Howard, "Sons and Lovers," Company of Artists, Inc., 20th Century-Fox.
Burt Lancaster, "Elmer Gantry," Burt Lancaster-Richard Brooks Production, United Artists.
Jack Lemmon, "The Apartment," Mirisch Company, United Artists.
Laurence Olivier, "The Entertainer," Woodfall Productions, Continental Distributing Inc.
Spencer Tracy, "Inherit the Wind," Stanley Kramer Production, United Artists.

Best performance by actor in supporting role—
Peter Falk, "Murder Inc.," 20th Century-Fox.
Jack Kruschen, "The Apartment," Mirisch, United Artists.
Sal Mineo, [illegible] le-Alpina S.A. Production, United Artists.

Moscow Film Fest Rules

Washington, Feb. 28.

Soviet Embassy in Washington has furnished these particulars on the second Moscow International Film Festival to be held July 9-23.

—All nations are invited to participate.

—Each participating country may submit for competition one full-length feature and one short (with the latter being art, documentary, popular science, or cartoon).

—Prints in either 35m, 16m or 70m may be submitted with normal or stereo sound. Panorama and circorama films also acceptable.

Not Previously 'Fested'

—Submitted films must have been completed not more than 18 months before opening date of festival, and must not have been shown in any other International Festival.

—In exceptional cases, by decision of the Festival's Organization Committee, a larger selection of films than provided for above, may be included in the Festival program, if they contribute to "the importance and ultimate aim of the Festival."

—Organization Committee of the Festival retains right to exclude any film "which may offend the national feelings and dignity of any country."

Prefer Russian Titling

—All films on the program will be shown in the language of the country of origin but preferably should have Russian subtitles.

—Each participating country may send an official delegation of three members selected among executives or personalities of the motion picture industry. Expenses of official delegation while in Moscow will be paid by the Festival.

—A 15-man jury, comprised of reps from industry, arts and literature, will be formed to judge feature films. A similar nine-man group will judge shorts.

—Awards will consist of (1) the Grand Prize, for the best full-length feature (2) Three Gold Prizes, for features of "outstanding artistic distinction," (3) Gold Prize, for best short, and (4) Silver prizes for best documentary short, popular science short, cartoon, puppet film, children's film, screenplay, direction, photography, best actress, best actor, art direction and music.

'Eulogy for the Living' Characterizes Industry Luncheon to Sol Schwartz

By ABEL GREEN

At $10-a-head "the tribute to Sol A. Schwartz by his friends in the motion picture industry" packed the Waldorf-Astoria's Sert Room Friday (24) to overflowing and, as cochairman Si Fabian observed, this luncheon is unique in that it's "a warm family affair" and "no pressure had to be exerted to get people to attend. It is the most spontaneous turnout experienced in many, many industry dinners."

Without being sticky, there was such a warmhearted outpouring of encomiums that George Jessel—a highlight comedy contribution albeit not the toastmaster general, per usual—ad libbed that this sounded like a eulogy instead of a salute to a vital showman who was merely changing hats—from exhibition to production.

Columbia Pictures exec veepee Abe Montague, in a humorous speech, "defined" Schwartz's "new" duties as a Col veepee and apologized for the absence on the Coast of prexy Abe Schneider and veepee Leo Jaffe. The only wire read was the one from incumbent production veepee Sam Briskin, a rousing welcome-to-the-organization communication, with accent of Scwwartz's upcoming duties as production head, topping it off, "the sooner the better."

In this connection Schwartz, in an excellent, ad lib speech, observed that after a brief holiday he found himself "this week with no office to go to. When I called somebody and left my name, the girl wanted to know 'Mr. Schwartz of where?' and I told her 'Mr. Schwartz of in between.'" He checks into the Col homeoffice Monday (27). It is still indeterminate whether he will go to London for production huddles with Mike Frankovich before checking into the California studio.

On The Dais

The dais was topdrawer, with industryites such as Russ Downing, Eric Johnston, Barney Balahan, Spyros Skouras, Arthur Krim, Milton Rackmil, Albert A. List (head of Glen Alden, the holding company which includes RKO Theatres), Bill German, Laurence Tisch, among others. Exhibition leaders and the executive end of the business rounded out the rostrum.

Ned Depinet's cavalcade of the RKO dynasty was virtually a history of that company's shifting tides and trends over the last third-of-a-century. "And so I welcome you, too, to the RKO alumni association," said the former RKO prexy to the just resigned president of RKO Theatres. Depinet reeled off names which have tread the Radio-Keith-Albee corriders over the years, such as David Sarnoff, Hiram S. Brown, Dean Aylesworth, Joseph P. Kennedy, Nate Blumberg, Major Leslie Thompson, Charles Boasberg, Walter Branson, Robert S. Wolff, N. Peter Rathvon, Malcolm Kingsberg, Joseph I. Breen, Howard Hughes, Leo Spitz, Charles Koerner, Herbert Bayard Swope, Harold B. Franklin, John J. O'Connor, Ed Alperson, Jules Levey, Walter Mirisch, Phil Reisman—a who's who of manpower which was startling in the sharp focus of a company whose fortunes and misfortunes swung like a pendulum with each successive administration.

Cochairmaning the "tribute" were Schwartz's fellow exhibitor leaders—Si Fabian, on behalf of the American Congress of Exhibitors, Harry Brandt, head of the Independent Theatre Owners Assn., and Leslie Schwartz, prez of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatre Assn. (A death in the family kept Brandt away). Each attested to their regard for the veteran theatre man — "goodbye exhibition, hello Hollywood" as one put it—as an individual, as a family man, and as a showman.

'Voice of Experience'

Depinet, as the selfstyled "voice of experience" (again harking back to the RKO debacle), recalled how Joseph I. Breen, ex-head of the industry's self-regulation board, was made production head, and his first speech said, "I thank you and I want you to know that I'm starting from scratch—I don't know a thing about making motion pictures." Depinet accented that if Schwartz then had been shifted to Hollywood, as many in the homeoffice suggested, "there never would have been any problem of shortage of films and quality of films."

Schwartz realistically, in his signoff speechlet, observed that he had ample time to prepare a speech "but this I knew is not that kind of an affair, it's too warm and informal and honest," but in "changing hats" he stressed that "every company here has had a taste of success and knows that good pictures don't get good but great business" and is dedicating himself to being of some value to Columbia in producing the type of pictures that will do well at the boxoffice.

He saluted his ex-boss, Albert A. List, for making the transition so smooth; his staff for their good wishes; a special nod to new prexy Harry Mandel "with whom I've worked shoulder-to-shoulder"; to List again "for that lovely Thunderbird you and the bunch gave me, along with the other gifts"; a plea to "keep RKO Theatres vital" and a pledge to his new association.

Departure for such industry affairs was the presence of wives. Mrs. Schwartz (Marion) was saluted, along with Mrs. List (who insisted on a warm little speech "for Sol") and Mrs. Mandel, wife of the new RKO Theatres president.

COMING UP ROSES AT METRO

New York Sound Track

Metro's budget on "Mutiny on the Bounty," according to an excellent source, is $11,000,000. Meaning lots of loot tied up in Marlon Brando negatives, his "One-Eyed Jacks," via Paramount, having been brought in at $6,000,000.

Last week's issue of Time has a piece on Joe Levine cued by VARIETY's Levine special.

N. Y. Post columnist Murray Kempton reporting on the Greenwich Village showing of "Operation Abolition," the much-attacked "film produced by a government agency and certified by the government's top cop," raked the whole thing with a deadly sarcasm, to wit:

"Some critics of 'Operation Abolition' have described it as a doctored film. They would not say this if they had seen it. I believe it all. Producer Fulton Lewis 3d culled all the available newsreel footage, and he could not find a single picture of a demonstrator aggressing against a cop.

"This then is the work of an extraordinarily adventurous creative spirit. Has any other director dared the experiment of putting together old newsreel clips and then writing a commentary which says the direct opposite of what the pictures show? It is like watching 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' and hearing the announcer say, 'Now here is dear Simon Legree offering the adamant rebellious Eliza the comfort of his home.'"

Twentieth-Fox bought film rights to legit comedy, "Drink To Me Only," which had brief Broadway run in fall of '58, with Vincent Sherman set to produce and play's authors, Ira Wallach and Abram Ginnes, to script . . . Robert J. Enders set up an indie unit and will do "A Thunder of Drums" as initial production for Metro, with Richard Boone, George Hamilton, Luana Patten, Arthur O'Connell, Charles Bronston and directed by Joe Newman . . . David Janssen optioned by Paramount to star in two additional films after his present costar stint in "Deadlock". . . David Miller inked to direct "The Last Hero." Kirk Douglas starrer for co-production by actor's Bryna Productions and U.

Loew's new Summit Hotel, on the site of the Lexington Theatre, will have a concierge, under v.p.-g.m. Claude C. Philippe's idea of patterning the east side hotel in the best European tradition. Robert Huyot, manager of the Carlyle, will become resident managing director of the N. Y. 800-room inn.

Barbara Rush, identified with roles of suffering socialite and suburban young ladies, wants to do comedy. On a visit to Japan she submitted, "A good comedy is more difficult than drama. You require many more skills of timing and taste. With a good director, a newcomer can get away with drama, but not with comedy."

Harry Golden's editorial from the Carolina Israelite on Brotherhood Week: "If it were once again left to me to decide who should win the Interfaith Brotherhood Week Award for 1960, my choice, without a moment's hesitation, would be Marilyn Monroe. Marilyn has married a Protestant, a Catholic, and a Jew, in that order, and divorced all of them, impartially, with the proper amount of tears. That's what I call Brotherhood."

Astor, Broadway firstrun playing the successful "Facts of Life," includes a commercial put out by Australia's Department of Interior and to tout Canberra.

With his full-page ad in a recent New York Times promoting the new novel, "The Side of The Angels," producer Otto Preminger, who'll make the film version, was following the same tactics he used in his long-range campaign of "Exodus" and "Anatomy of a Murder" . . . Donald Henderson, 20th-Fox treasurer, has again accepted chairmanship of the motion pictures committee in the commerce and industry division of the Salvation Army's 1961 appeal.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was guest of honor at a special screening here last week of Allied Artists' forthcoming German import, "The Bridge" . . . Mike Beck has been retained by Atlantis Films as consultant on sales, advertising and publicity on "Anna's Sin."

Griff Johnson, Motion Picture Assn. of America veep, hosted a cocktail party yesterday (Tues.) at Savoy-Hilton for visiting Film Polski reps, Andrzej Skawina and Julianna Szaniawska . . . Munio Podhorzer's Casino Films and United Film Enterprises are moving into bigger quarters just several doors down the street from present Broadway offices . . . Jim Scovotti, publicist currently working on special promotion for UA's "Hoodlum Priest," hired by the Legion of Decency to be the Catholic reviewing org's press representative. Scovotti has been on the Legion's Board of Consultors for last three years . . . AIP producer Herman Cohen in town.

German actors Erik Schumann and Almut Eggert, featured in the new Lutheran Film Associates production, "Question 7," Louis de Rochemont Associates release, are in town for promotion work on the pic. Film, incidentally, received a special commendation from the Legion of Decency . . . Baronet theatre, where "Modigliani of Montparnasse" is currently playing its premiere U. S. engagement is featuring an exhibition of Modigliani paintings in its lobby . . . Publicist Jim Moran ("a spinning midget is a mad midget") took off Friday (24) for the Far East to sign up an underwater tiger act for engagements in the U. S. in connection with the opening of Continental Distributing's "Hippodrome."

James Garner inked four-pix pact with Mirisch Co., following his bowout from Warner Bros., and goes into "The Children's Hour," with Audrey Hepburn and Shirley MacLaine . . . Mirisch dropped its six-month option on Marcia Davenport Italian novel, "The Constant Image," with property now being peddled to other companies . . . Charles Schneer added "The Quest of the Golden Fleece," based on Greek mythological tale of "Jason," to his Columbia Pictures releasing slate . . . Ray Bradbury set by Metro to pen narration for its release of Samuel Bronston's "King of Kings" . . . Kim Novak takes over title role in Columbia Pictures' "The Notorious Landlady," teaming with Jack Lemmon . . . Robert Fellows inked James Komack to do script changes on "Formosa," his upcoming WB release.

RKO Theatres first of the circuits to pledge promotional support of the April 17 Oscar awards tv'er. Was first last year, too . . . Joshua Logan in from Barbados. Has "Fanny" (he produced and directed) coming up this summer via Warners . . . Erik Schumann and Almut Eggert due in Gotham this week from their West Germany habitat to plug "Question 7" locationed in Germany by producer Lothar Wolff for Louis de Rochemont Associates.

Twentieth-Fox proxy Spyros P. Skouras will again host luncheon launching the motion picture industry's 1961 Red Cross campaign March 9 at the St. Moritz Hotel. Gen Gruenther, national Red Cross prexy, will be principal speaker . . . Fred Hift, who isn't due to start his promotion duties on Darryl Zanuck's "The Longest Day" until later in the spring, got an early start with his Paris-taped interview with Zanuck heard on NBC's Monitor Sunday (26) night.

HOOT MEMORY OF 'SABOTEURS'

By GENE ARNEEL

Joseph R. Vogel told the annual meeting of Metro stockholders in New York last Thursday (23) that earnings for fiscal 1961 expectedly will surpass the 12-year record-high rate of 1960 by 25%. The president noted that 1960's net of $3.83 per share ($9,595,000) represented a 25% rise over 1959.

Vogel was bullish all the way. He said the upward trend that began in the past couple of years will continue in the "foreseeable future," adding that theatrical feature projects, development of new material for television, expansion of the music and recording business and intensified use of overseas facilities "lead us to believe that 1962 will show a further increase over the estimate for this year."

Vogel went on to predict a further profit rise in 1963. He thus took an unusually optimistic position for the film business in undertaking to crystal-ball earnings increases for three years in a row. The fiscal year ends Aug. 31.

40c Divvy As Is

He doesn't see any lessening of the 40c quarterly dividend. At the same time he indicated little hope for another early increase, but this is a matter for the board to decide. The melon in the past year was upped from 30c per quarter; the third 40c divvy was declared immediately following the annual session.

Metro had a good house for its meeting, this time staged in the grand ballroom of the Astor Hotel. One of the approximately 300 minority stockholders in attendance didn't like the idea of hiring such a hall, the expense being in mind, but Vogel pointed out the company doesn't own any theatres in which to convene.

Questions from the floor reflected no hostility toward management; expressed criticism was mild and by far outbalanced by congratulations to Vogel, et al., for the resuscitation job done.

Theatre Complaint

One complaining party pointed to the fact that an original investment in Loew's Inc. is now divided between M-G and Loew's Theatres and the latter is not paying dividends. Vogel explained he couldn't be held responsible for the exhibition company that's now on its own.

Lewis Gilbert, minority stockholder in many companies, and a voice heard at many annual meetings, lost his battle for cumulative voting of directors and promised to re-introduce a resolution for same next year. His motion this time was voted down by a count of 1,658,983 to 132,000. Vogel and his fellow directors were reelected by an overwhelming majority.

No Bargains Around

In his prepared talk, and in answers to questions from the floor, the chief exec covered a variety of subjects. He said the board constantly has in mind possibilities of outside acquisitions and even a merger but good companies at bargain rates have ceased to be. M-G has cash on hand to buy now, but this is a relatively recent situation.

He said company is now in process of classifying post-1948 features for television channelling and made it clear this to be a slow process and pictures will be licensed on rental basis, rather than sold outright. He mentioned, too, there'll be "a significant gap" between theatrical release of a picture and tv exposure. TV continues to be second source of revenue, for most part from licensing of the early backlog. He said record industry is experiencing a slump this year but in fiscal 1960 MGM records reached its highest sales in 14 years of operation, having climbed to fifth position in the industry. Robert H. O'Brien, M-G's v.p.-treasurer, disclosed that $2,900,000 was paid for Verve Records in the deal entered several months back.

M-G's advertising last year was in the amount of $7,400,000, an increase of $350,000 over the previous year.

18 Await Release From 20th, 70 Properties in Preparation

Production and release plans reaching as far ahead as October, 1962, were set by 20th-Fox studio execs at top level meetings in New York this weekend hosted by prexy Spyros P. Skouras. Robert Goldstein, studio production chief, headed the West Coast delegation in town for the talks.

Company currently has 18 productions completed and awaiting release, plus a stockpile of 70 properties in various stages of preparation, described by Goldstein as the largest number in the history of the company. Company is aiming for release of at least two major productions a month, with the sked to be supplemented by a number of smaller budget product.

Among the property acquisitions and or talent assignments not previously announced until the weekend were the signing of Bobby Darin to costar with Pat Boone and Arthur Godfrey in "State Fair" remake, and the signing of Debbie Reynolds to star in a Clair Huffaker original, "Star of The West." It also now appears solid that Ingrid Bergman will do the screen adaptation of the legit play, "The Visit," with Nunnally Johnson producing.

In addition to Goldstein, coast execs in New York included Fred L. Metzler, studio administrative head; Cy Landau, exec assistant; Ted Strauss, story exec; Pete Montemurro, studio manager; Jack Codd, studio treasurer and comptroller; "Doc" Merman, exec production manager; John Healy, N. Y. office rep, and Frank Ferguson, studio legal rep.

Home office toppers on hand included Murray Silverstone, 20th International prexy; Charles Einfeld, veep in charge of ad-pub activities; Glenn Norris, general sales manager; Joseph Moskowitz, veep and eastern studio head; Donald Henderson, treasurer, and Pete Levathes, prexy of 20th-Fox Television.

MG Ups Industry

Washington, Feb. 28.

Dividends paid by film companies took an upturn in January, figuring $1,353,000, compared with $1,067,000 for the same month a year before, Commerce Dept. reports.

Largely responsible for the increase, a spokesman explained, was the bigger divided paid by Metro this year, against the disbursement of a year before.

Metro Quote Up $4.25 on Bullish Trend, Residuals

Climb of Metro common shares on the New York Stock Exchange was given further impetus last Thurs. (23) immediately following the company's annual meeting at which Joseph R. Vogel, president, gave an upbeat report on current earnings and prospects for the future (separate story).

The issue went up $4.25 per share on the day, to a new high of $51.37½. This is more than double the year's low of $24.87½. Several other show business enterprises went to new highs (see Wall Street chart) but the M-G gain of $4.25 on a single day was the most unusual. Stock gained $7 for the week ended yesterday (Tues.), closing at $53.50.

In addition to the operating earnings, a stock trading stimulant was the disclosure that Metro is now in process of sorting out the post-1948 pictures in the vaults for licensing to television. The money potential here obviously is big and the income will be over a protracted period.

Significantly, an M-G officer said there will be no deal for the entire library. Instead, the approach will be to rent out the product bit by bit, and all the time making sure there's an extensive time gap between theatrical and tv release.

Enders Takes Wage Cut For Pleasure of Company At Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Some producers have a fetish for making pix at $5,000,000 or $10,000,000, but Robert J. Enders is satisfied to turn out a solid pic with a ceiling of $1,000,000.

He's new to feature production, moving from vidfilms to Metro's producer roster with "A Thunder of Drums," original by James Warner Bellah. Pic, in Cinemascope and color, starts shooting exteriors at Phoenix-Tucson area early April with George Hamilton, Luana Patten, Richard Boone, Arthur O'Connell. Joe Newman will direct. Story is post-Civil War cavalry yarn.

Having produced 26 half-hour "Best of the Post" teeveers with Satevepost as partner, Enders is happy to get away from three-day shooting sked each week for past six months.

Comparing theatrical to teevee production Enders contends, "At Metro you're dealing with experience like that of Sol Siegel, Ben Thau, Eddie Mannix, Bernie Smith, Ray Klune and Marge Thorson from whom you can always learn something." There's nothing comparable in vidfilms, but plenty of problems: Sponsor, ad agencies, et. al.

Enders has made up to $1,500 a week as teevee producer, but at Metro he's taken a cut in salary with participation.

SWEDE AS CHRIST IN STEVENS' BIBLE EPIC?

Stockholm, Feb. 23.

Swedish actor Max von Sydow has returned to Stockholm after meetings with George Stevens in Hollywood. He's in line to play the part of Christ in "The Greatest Story Ever Told." Von Sydow expressed the hope that he will be able to accept Stevens' offer. However, his contract with Svensk Filmindustri and the Royal Dramatic Theatre may preclude if they refuse a release.

Actor was most favorably impressed by Stevens' approach to the Bible story as the Swede felt the film would relate the story of a "human" Christ and His sufferings would be understandable as a result.

Sydow is best known for the parts he has played in Ingmar Bergman films. These include the knight in "The Seventh Seal," the magician in "The Magician" and the father in "The Virgin Spring." He has also appeared in a number of Bergman's stage productions.

IMPORTED CRITIQUES

N. Y. Bulletin's Reprint Rights From French Cahiers du Cinema

The biweekly New York Film Bulletin, house org for film buffs in this area, has received reprint rights from the French magazine, Cahiers du Cinema, house org for France's "nouvelle vague." Cahiers critics such as Francois Truffaut, Claude Chabrol, Alain Resnais and Jean-Luc Godard, started off by writing about films and then went on to make their points by directing pix.

R. M. Franchi, publisher of the New York Film Bulletin, reports first Cahiers article to be reprinted here will be Jean Douchet's review of Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho."

Los Angeles, Feb. 28.

L. A. first-runs in an otherwise spotty stanza are being bolstered by "The Sundowners," in first general release. It looks to hit great $37,000 or close, playing in five theatres. Only other newie is "Man With Green Carnation," which shapes fair $3,000 at the Crest.

Among the regular holdovers, "Wackiest Ship in Army" is heading for fairly modest $14,000 playing three houses in second stanza. "World of Suzie Wong," however, still is strong in 11th Chinese session with socko $13,000 looming.

"Grass Is Greener" is aiming to land a fine $12,000 at the Beverly in third week. "Can-Can" on return date is loud in first at the Los Angeles.

"Exodus" still is leading the hardtix pictures with $20,000 for 10th round at Fox Wilshire. It is hard-pressed by "Ben-Hur," which looks to get a torrid $19,500 in 66th frame at Egyptian.

'Impostor' Great $12,000, Pitt Ace

Pittsburgh, Feb. 28.

The Saturday night snow appeared on schedule again but it isn't dampening "Great Impostor" which is rolling toward another boff total in second session at Fulton. No new entries this round but holdovers are running good to soft because of weather and length of run. Easing up are "Misfits," in fourth at Penn and "Can-Can" in third at Gateway. "Spartacus" at Nixon in ninth still is hardy. "General Della Rovere" in third at Squirrel Hill looms trim. "World of Suzie Wong" faltered in Saturday storm but shapes fine for second week at Stanley. "Alamo," in final nine days, is gathering strength.

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Shea) (1,635; $1-$1.50) — "Great Impostor" (U) (2d wk). Wow $12,000. Last week, $15,000.

Gateway (Associated) (2,100; $1-$1.50) — "Can-Can" (20th) (2d wk). Oke $5,500. Last week, $5,900.

Nixon (Rubin) (1,760; $1.50-$2.75) — "Spartacus" (U) (9th wk). Still hardy at $8,000. Last week, $9,000.

Penn (UATC) (3,300; $1-$1.50) — "Misfits" (UA) (4th wk). Good $9,000. Comes out Friday (3) for "Gorgo" (M-G). Last week, $14,900.

Squirrel Hill (SW) (834; $1.25) — "General Della Rovere" (Cont) (3d wk). Trim $2,800 with some help via "Upstairs and Downstairs" (20th) on Saturday night.

Stanley (SW) (3,700; $1-$1.50) — "Suzie Wong" (Par) (2d wk). Fine $15,000. Last week, $17,500.

Warner (SW) (1,536; $1.25-$1.80) — "Alamo" (UA) (9th wk-9 days). Okay $9,000. Comes out March 4. "Exodus" (UA) comes in on March 8 for run after three nights of previews. Last week, $7,100.

Snow Sloughs L'ville; 'Misfits' Nice $8,000

Louisville, Feb. 28.

Heaviest snowfall of the year crippled the entire area on Saturday (25), resulting in closing of stores. Most film houses closed their boxoffices about 7 p.m. The United Artists, with "The Misfits," and the Brown, with "Gigi," kept their b.o. open, and both are doing well. Kentucky, Mary Anderson, Ohio, and Rialto, all closed early, due to the inclement weather and hazardous driving conditions. "World of Suzie Wong" is okay in fourth at the Kentucky.

Estimates for This Week

Brown (Fourth Avenue) (1,100; 75-$1) — "Gigi" M-G). Heading for fairish $4,500. Pic has played drive-ins and nabes, so biz has been well milked. Last week, "Captain's Table" (20th), same.

Kentucky (Switow) (900; 75-$1) — "Suzie Wong" Par) (4th wk). Oke $5,000 after third week's $6,000.

Mary Anderson (People's) (900; 75-$1) — "Carthage in Flames" (Col) and "Sword of Sherwood Forest" (Col). Crimped by severe snows which had stores closing early. Light $3,500. Last week, "Gold Seven Saints" (WB), $4,000.

Ohio (Settos) (900; 75-$1.25) — "Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) 6th wk). Fair $5,000, after fifth week's $6,000.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (3,000; 60-$1) — "Goliath and Dragon" (AI). This is way below hopes at $6,000. Last week, "Look In Any Window" AA) and "Unfaithfuls" (AA), $5,500.

United Artists (UA) (3,000; 75-$1.25) — "Misfits" (UA). Nice $8,000; holds. Last week, "Where Boys Are" (M-G) (4th wk), $6,000.

'Canadians' Light 7G, Buff; 'Suzie' Fat 16G, 3

Buffalo, Feb. 28.

Absence of any big openers and the fact that some of the long-runs are starting to slip makes the biz outlook rather spotty here this week. "The Canadians" shapes sad at Century while "Blueprint for Robbery" is rated thin at Paramount. Best bet looks to be "World of Suzie Wong," great in third round at the Center. "The Misfits" looms okay in third at the Buffalo.

Estimates for This Week

Buffalo (Loew) (3,500; 75-$1.49) — "Misfits" (UA) (3d wk). Okay $10,000. Last week, $14,000.

Center (AB-PT) (2,000; 70-$1.25) — "Suzie Wong" (Par) (3d wk). Great $16,000 or over. Last week, $19,000.

Century (UATC) (2,700; 70-$1) — "Canadians" (20th) and "39 Steps" (Indie). Sad $7,000. Last week, "10 Commandments" (Par) (reissue), $7,400.

Lafayette (Basil) (3,000; 70-$1) — "Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (3d wk). Okay $8,000. Last week, $13,000.

Paramount (AB-PT) (3,000; 70-$1) — "Blueprint for Robbery" (Par) and "Foxhole in Cairo" (Par). Thin $7,500. Last week, "Black Sunday" (AI) and "Code of Silence" (AI), $10,200.

Teck (Loew) (1,200; 70-$1.25) — "League of Gentlemen" (20th) (2d wk). Poor $4,000. Last week, $4,500.

Cinema (Martina) (450; 70-$1) — "Carry On Nurse" (Gov) (17th wk). Sturdy $2,500. Last week, $2,600.

'Can-Can' Sock 8G, Omaha; 'Village' 6G

Omaha, Feb. 28.

Biz is on the torrid side this week despite competition with Omaha Sports Show and hockey. Second week of hard-ticket "Cinerama" is wham at the Cooper while return date of "Can-Can" at the Omaha is sockeroo. Lone new entry, "Village of Damned," looms good at the State. "World of Suzie Wong" is torrid in third session at the Orpheum but will probably bow out.

Estimates for This Week

Cooper (Cooper) (687; $1.55-$2.20) — "Cinerama" (Cinerama) (2d wk). Fine $7,600 after $7,000 debut.

Omaha (Tristates) (2,066; 75-$1) — "Can-Can" (20th) (rerun). Sock $8,000 or over. Last week, "Blueprint for Robbery" (Par) and "Foxhole Cairo" (Par), $4,000.

Orpheum (Tristates) (2,877; $1-$1.25) — "Suzie Wong" (Par) (3d wk). Remains hot at $7,500. Last week, $10,500.

State (Cooper) (743; $1) — "Village of Damned" (M-G). Good $6,000 or near. Last week, "Where Boys Are" (M-G) (2d wk), $6,000.

Winter Wilts Mpls. Biz But 'Window' Sharp 7G; 'Exodus' Boff 15G, 5th

Minneapolis, Feb. 28.

Biz is taking it on the chin because moderate weather did not cause moderate weather did not return until late in week. Only current fresh entry is "Look in Any Window," big at Lyric.

"Exodus," now starting second month at Academy, remains boffo. Nifty, too, is "World of Suzie Wong," in fourth canto at State. Winding up terrific 10-week stay at Gopher is "Swiss Family Robinson." Also bowing out is "Misfits," so-so in third stanza at Orpheum.

Estimates for This Week

Academy (Mann) (947; $1.75-$2.65) — "Exodus" (UA) (5th wk). Maintaining socko pace at $15,000. Last week, $16,000.

Century (Cinerama, Inc.) (1,150; $1.75-$2.65) — "Cinerama Holiday" (Cinerama) (reissue) (10th wk). Fancy $8,600. Last week, $6,500.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; $1-$1.25) — "Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (10th wk). Concluding smash run with hep $6,500. Last week, $5,000. "Where Boys Are" (M-G) opens March 1.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; 85-$1) — "Look in Any Window" (AA). Big $7,000 or near. Last week, "Fever in Blood" (WB), $4,000.

'Alamo' Wow 22G, D.C.; 'Exodus' 27G

Washington, Feb. 28.

Upbeat continues this round with Washington's Birthday and spring-like temperatures the biggest factors. "Great Impostor" looks solid at two houses. "Alamo," in its first popscale session here, is headed for a wow take at Palace. "Exodus" looks smash at Uptown after glossy preem.

"Pepe" is rated sock in second Trans-Lux round. "Misfits" in fourth at Keith's looms bright. "Gorgo" at Capital shapes okay on opener.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador-Metropolitan (SW) (1,490; 1,000; 90-$1.49) — "Great Impostor" (U). Nice $14,000 or over. "Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (5th wk), $13,000.

Capitol (Loew) (3,426; 90-$1.49) — "Gorgo" (M-G). Okay $12,000. Last week, "Circle of Deception" (20th), $11,000.

Keith's (RKO) (1,850; $1-$1.49) — "Misfits" (UA) (4th wk). Boff $14,000. Last week, $18,000.

MacArthur (K-B) (900-$1.25) — "Virgin Spring" (Janus) (3d wk). Neat $4,200. Last week, $4,700.

Ontario (K-B) (1,240; $1-$1.49) — "Tunes of Glory" (Lope) (2d wk). Tall $11,000 after $15,000 opener.

Palace (Loew) (2,390; $1-$1.49) — "Alamo" (UA). Wow $22,000 for first popscale run here. Last week, "Sword and Dragon" (Val), $10,000.

Playhouse (T-L) (458; $1-$1.49) — "Wild One" (Col) and "Pal Joey" (Col) (reissues) (2d wk). Mild $3,000. Last week, $4,200.

Plaza (T-L) (276; $1-$1.80) — "European Nights" (Indie) (3d wk). Good $4,100. Last week, $4,700.

Town (King) (800; $1.25-$1.49) — "Suzie Wong" (Par) (10th wk). Dandy $6,000. Last week, $7,500.

Trans-Lux (600; $1.49-$2) — "Pepe" (Col) (2d wk). Socko $15,000 after $18,000 opener.

Uptown (SW) (1,300; $1.25-$2.25) — "Exodus" (UA). Great $27,000. Last week, "Alamo" (UA) (8th wk-9 days), $7,500 on hard-ticket.

Warner (SW) (1,440; $1.49-$2.25) — "Spartacus" (U) (6th wk). Lusty $15,000. Last week, $14,500.

'Village' Brisk $9,000, Port.; 'Circle' Dull 4G

Portland, Ore., Feb. 28.

Standout newcomer here currently is "Village of Damned," which looks lofty at the Fox. "The Misfits" shapes nice first at Paramount but "Circle of Deception" is slow on initial round at Orpheum. "Exodus" is steady in sixth frame at Music Box. "Spartacus" is rated solid in fourth at the Broadway.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (983; $1.50-$3) — "Spartacus" (U) (4th wk). Solid $9,500. Last week, $10,300.

Fox (Evergreen) (1,600; $1-$1.49) — "Village of Damned" (M-G) and "Legions of Nile" (20th). Tall $9,000. Last week, "Grass Is Greener" (U) and "Shakedown" (U) (3d wk), $6,100.

Music Box (Hamrick) (640; $1.50-$3) — "Exodus" (UA) (6th wk). Steady $12,000. Last week, $12,500.

Orpheum (Evergreen) (1,536; $1-$1.49) — "Circle of Deception" (20th) and "Hunters" (20th). Slow $4,000 or near. Last week, "Go Naked in World" (M-G) and "Three Blondes In Life" (M-G), $5,300.

Paramount (Port-Par) (3,400; $1-$1.50) — "Misfits" (UA) and "Frontier Uprising" (UA). Nice $8,000. Last week, "Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) and "Mysteries of Deep" (BV) (5th wk) (5 days), $6,800.

Kansas City, Feb. 28.

Standout here is "101 Dalmatians," playing the Uptown-Granada combination to sock biz. "Dalmatians" had the benefit of Washington's Birthday school holiday to open at capacity and is set for at least five weeks, tops for these houses. "Village of the Damned" at Paramount, looks sturdy. "Spartacus" likewise opened with great play on hard-ticket policy at the Capri. Holdovers, too, are good, and week is pleasing all around.

Estimates for This Week

Brookside (FMW-NT) (800; $1.25-$1.50) — "Ben-Hur" (M-G) (2d wk). Okay $6,500; holds. Last week initiated regular first-run date with nifty $6,800, after playing a year on hard-ticket downtown at the Capri.

Capri (Durwood) (1,260; $1.25-$3) — "Spartacus" (U). Great $20,000, on 10-shows per week basis, and introducing new $3 top to this house. Preem on Feb. 21 raised over $2,000 for K. C. Boys Club. Regular run began Feb. 22. Last week, "Cimarron" (M-G) (5th wk-5 days), $12,000.

Empire (Durwood) (1,280; $1.25-$3) — "Exodus" (UA) (10th wk). Pleasing $9,000. Last week, $10,000.

Kimo (Dickinson) (504; 90-$1.25) — "Please Turn Over" (Col) (10th wk). Nice $1,600. Last week, same.

Paramount (UP) (1,900; 75-$1) — "Village of Damned" (M-G) Sturdy $10,000; could hold. Last week, "Savage Innocents" (Par), $4,000.

Plaza (FMW-NT) (1,900; $1.25) — "Misfits" (UA) (3d wk). Hep $7,000. Last week, $9,500.

Roxy (Durwood) (650; $1-$1.50) — "Suzie Wong" (Par) (4th wk). Big $8,500. Last week, same.

Uptown, Granada (FMW-NT) (2,043, 1,217; $1-$1.25) — "101 Dalmatians" (BV). Sock $28,000; stays. Last week, "Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (5th wk). Uptown only, $9,000 and better than most first weeks.

Granada, Fairway, Isis, Vista (FMW-NT) (1,217, 700, 1,360, 700; $1) — Currently Fairway, Isis, Vista are on sub-runs. Last week, "Goliath and Dragon" (AI) and "Desert Attack" (20th), good $11,000.

'Goliath' Stalwart 17G, Hub; 'Impostor' Hen 25G, 'Dalmatians' Tall 22G

Boston, Feb. 28.

Film biz hit new highs with spiraling grosses way above expectations as two big winners, "101 Dalmatians" at the Metropolitan and "Great Impostor" at the Memorial surged into their respective second weeks way out in front.

New films, "Goliath and Dragon" is hotsy at the Paramount and "Underworld U.S.A." is slick at the Pilgrim. "Two - Way Stretch" opened well at the Exeter. "Pepe" is picking up in second week at Gary. "Seven Wonders of World" opened nicely on rerun at the Boston. "Ballad of Soldier" is gaining strength in its fifth round.

"Exodus," on hardticket, still is capacity at Saxon in 10th week. "Misfits" is holding strong at the Orpheum in fourth week. Continuous downpour on Saturday (25) and fog causing bad driving conditions is denting b.o. takes.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (B&Q) (1,170; $1.90-$3) — "Spartacus" (18th wk). Fine $9,000. Last week, $12,000.

Beacon Hill (Sack) (678; $1.50) — "Tunes of Glory" (Lope) (10th wk). Nice $8,000. Last week, $10,000.

Boston (Cinerama Inc.) (1,354; $1.20-$2.65) — "Seven Wonders of World" (Cinerama) (reissue). Neat $17,000. Last week, "Cinerama Holiday" (Cinerama) (reissue) (15th wk), $7,800.

Chi Sturdy; 'Psycho' Fairish $8,500; 'Pepe' Potent 43G, 'Alamo' Big 20G, 4, 'Exodus' Capac. 27G, 'Suzie' Hot 15G

Chicago, Feb. 28.

First-run biz is contingent mainly on holdover product this round, and the array remains potent enough to chalk up brisk tallies. Esquire is reprising "Psycho" to fairish $8,500. New Monroe pair, "Desert Attack" and "Sniper's Ridge," is okay $5,500.

"Pepe," in second Chicago Theatre stanza, is rated robust. "101 Dalmatians" looks potent in State-Lake third. "Alamo" moveover on regular scale looks big in fourth Roosevelt session.

Oriental's "Where Boys Are" is headed for a busy third frame. "Misfits" shapes bright in United Artists' fourth stanza. "The Entertainer" in third lap at the World is hot.

"World of Suzie Wong" is fancy in 10th session at Woods. "Never On Sunday" moveover looks lively in Surf fourth. "Nature's Paradise" shapes fine in sixth Loop Theatre term.

On the hard-ticket scene, "Exodus" was virtual capacity again in 11th Cinestage round. "Spartacus" bagged a good 29th session at McVickers. "Ben-Hur" continues mighty in 62d Todd Theatre frame.

Estimates for This Week

Carnegie (Telem't) (495; $1.80)—"Rikisha-man" (Fave) (4th wk). Fast $4,800. Last week, $6,000.

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 90-$1.80)—"Pepe" (Col) (2d wk). Sockeroo $43,000. Last week, $60,000, not up to hopes.

Cinestage (Todd) (1,038; $1.75-$3.50)—"Exodus" (UA) (11th wk). Capacity $27,000 or close with extra show. Last week, $25,500.

'IMPOSTOR' LUSH 10G, DENVER; 'SUZIE' 14G

Denver, Feb. 28.

Biggest money is being landed this round by "World of Suzie Wong," in third stanza at Orpheum. However, "Great Imposter" actually is making the best showing with big takings in second session at the Centre. "Circle of Deception" is rated bad on opener at the Denver while "Gold of Seven Saints," also new, is only fair in first at Paramount. "Spartacus" looms lofty in sixth at the Aladdin.

Estimates for This Week

Aladdin (Fox) (900; $1.25-$2.50)—"Spartacus" (U) (6th wk). Stout $7,500. Last week, $7,800.

Centre (Fox) (1,270; $1-$1.45)—"Great Imposter" (U) (2d wk). Big $10,000. Last week, $12,500.

Denham (Indie) (800; $1.25-$2.50)—"Ben-Hur" (M-G) (46th wk). Sturdy $7,500. Last week, $7,000.

Denver (Fox) (2,432; $1-$1.25)—"Circle of Deception" (20th) and "Sons and Lovers" (20th). Bad $6,300. Last week, "Shepherd Kingdom Come" (20th) and "Walk Tall" (20th), $10,500.

Esquire (Fox) (600; $1)—"Millionairess" (20th). Good $3,500. Last week, "Man in Cocked Hat" (Indie) (2d wk), $2,100.

Orpheum (RKO) (2,690; $1-$1.25)—"Suzie Wong" (Par) (3d wk). Sock $14,000 or near. Last week, $16,000.

Paramount (Indie) (2,100; 90-$1.25)—"Gold of Seven Saints" (WB). Fair $11,000 or close. Last week, "Misfits" (UA) (3d wk), $10,500.

Towne (Indie) (600; $1-$1.45)—"Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (10th wk). Good $5,500. Last week, $6,000.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i.e., without usual tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include U. S. amusement tax.

'Gorgo' Grand 15G, Cincy; 'Suzie' 10G

Cincinnati, Feb. 28.

"Gorgo" is a big entry at Palace this round. Continuing strength of holdovers, "Suzie Wong" and "Swiss Family Robinson," also will help this round here. Downtown Capitol is dark this week after disappointing start on switch from reserve-seat to grind policy. It reopens March 1 with "Pepe." Longruns "Spartacus" and "Alamo" are in 10th weeks and nearing closing stretch. Twin ozoner shapes so-so with "Where Boys Are" on subsequents.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,109; $1-$1.50)—"Suzie Wong" (Par) (3d wk). Good $10,000. Last week, $11,500.

Esquire Art (Shor) (500; $1.25)—"Never on Sunday" (Lope) (6th wk). Swell $1,500. Same last week.

Grand (RKO) (1,300; $1.75-$2.75)—"Spartacus" (U) (10th wk). Oke $3,000. Ninth was $3,500. Four-week notice posted.

Guild (Vance) (300; $1.25)—"Please Turn Over" (Col) (10th wk). Okay $1,400. Last week, $1,500.

Hyde Park Art (Shor) (500; $1.25)—"Portrait of Sinner" (Indie). Firm $1,400. Last week, "Swan Lake" (Col), $1,500.

Keith's (Shor) (1,500; 90-$1.25)—"Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (5th wk). Solid $8,000. Last week, $10,200.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; $1-$1.25)—"Gorgo" (M-G). Big $15,000. Last week, "Misfits" (UA) (3d wk), $3,000.

Twin Drive-In (Shor) (600 cars, west side, 90c)—"Where Boys Are" (M-G) and "Sergeant Rutledge" (WB) (subsequents). So-so $2,000. Same last week on "Circle of Deception" (20th) and "Legions of Nile" (20th).

Valley (Wiethe) (1,200; $1.50-$2.50)—"Alamo" (UA) (10th wk). Good $4,500. Last week, $5,200. Holds until March 19.

'Misfits' Fancy $10,000, St. Loo; 'Suzie' Hot 16G

St. Louis, Feb. 28.

There are two newcomers here this stanza but neither is helping brighten the b.o. scene. Main strength is in the holdovers. "Goliath and Dragon" is rated mild at the St. Louis while "Millionairess" is drab on opener at Ambassador. "The Misfits" looks fancy in fourth at State. "World of Suzie Wong" looms lofty in third at the Fox. "Spartacus" shapes trim in 10th session at Esquire.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador (Arthur) (2,970; 60-90)—"Millionairess" (20th) and "Ferry Hong Kong" (20th). Drab $6,000 or less. Last week, "Savage Innocents" (Par) and "Happened in Broad Daylight" (Indie), $8,000.

Apollo Art (Grace) (700; 90-$1.25)—"Never On Sunday" (Lope) (4th wk). Oke $1,200. Last week, $1,000.

Esquire (Schuchart-Levin) (1,800; $1.25-$2.50)—"Spartacus" (U) (10th wk). Trim $8,000. Last week, $9,000.

Fox (Arthur) (5,000; 60-90)—"Suzie Wong" (Par) (3d wk). Lofty $16,000. Last week, $20,000.

Loew's Mid-City (Loew) (1,160; 60-90)—"Swiss Family Robinson"

Cleveland, Feb. 28.

Freaky blockbuster downpour which turned into a snowstorm put Cleveland cinemas in the deep freeze last Saturday (25), sloughing weekend biz in some houses as much as 60%. "Great Impostor" at the Hipp is pulling best but, of course, below what it could have been under normal conditions.

"Black Sunday," which had done such big trade opening week, was hard hit and is dropping down to just okay total in second at the Allen. "Circle of Deception" is only fair at State while "Go Naked in World" is rated lean in second round at Stillman.

Estimates for This Week

Allen (SW) (3,500; $1-$1.50)—"Black Sunday" (AI) (2d wk). Okay $9,000. Last week, $18,000.

Continental Art (Art Theatre Guild) (800; $1.25)—"Carry On Nurse" (Gov) (m.o.) (10th wk). Average $2,000. Last week, $2,600.

Heights Art (Art Theatre Guild) (925; $1.25)—"Never On Sunday" (Lope) (10th wk). Nice $2,500. Last week, $3,400.

Hippodrome (Eastern Hipp) (3,700; $1-$1.50)—"Great Impostor" (U). Good $11,000 or near. Last week, "Grass Is Greener" (U) (2d wk), $9,000.

Ohio (Loew) (2,700, $1-$1.65)—"Suzie Wong" (Par) (m.o.) (10th wk). Brisk $6,500. Last week, $5,900.

Palace (Silk & Halpern) (2,550; $1.25-$2.75)—"Spartacus" (U) (10th wk). Fairly good $8,500. Last week, $12,200.

State (Loew) (3,700; $1-$1.50)—"Circle of Deception" (20th). Fair $7,500 or less. Last week, "Misfits" (UA) (3d wk), $7,000.

Stillman (Loew) (2,700; $1-$1.50)—"Go Naked in World" (M-G) (2d wk). Lean $5,500. Last week, $6,800.

'Alamo' Lusty 14G, Philly; 'Pepe' 23G

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.

Trade is on the upswing this round here, with nearly every spot showing good or bigger totals. "The Alamo" is holding near opening week's fast gait with a rousing take in second at the Stanton. "Pepe" is sockeroo in second at the much larger Stanley.

"Where Boys Are" is rated fancy in fourth at the Viking while "Swiss Family Robinson," running ahead of last week, shapes neat in fifth at Midtown. "World of Suzie Wong" looks lofty in 10th stanza at Arcadia, nearly the same as a week ago. "The Misfits" is solid in fourth at Randolph. "Gorgo" looms okay in third at the Fox.

Estimates for This Week

Arcadia (S&S) (536; 99-$1.80)—"Suzie Wong" (Par) (10th wk). Sweet $10,000. Last week, $10,300.

Boyd (SW) (1,563; $2-$2.75)—"Exodus" (UA) (4th wk). Loud $28,500. Last week, $29,000.

Fox (Milgram) (2,200; 99-$1.80)—"Gorgo" (M-G) (3d wk). Okay $8,000. Last week, $13,000.

Goldman (Goldman) (1,200; $2-$2.75)—"Spartacus" (U) (17th wk). Trim $9,000 or near. Last week, $10,000.

Midtown (Goldman) (1,000; 99-$1.80)—"Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (5th wk). Neat $11,000. Last week, $10,000.

Randolph (Goldman) (2,500; 99-$1.80)—"Misfits" (UA) (4th wk). Sound $11,000. Last week, $12,000.

Studio (Goldberg) (483; 99-$1.80)—"Big Combo" (AA) and "Herod Great" (AA). Lean $2,000 in 4 days. Last week, "Love in City" (Indie) and "Naked City" (Indie) (3d wk), $5,000.

Trans-Lux (T-L) (500; 99-$1.80)—"Never on Sunday" (Lope) (13th wk). Brisk $5,000. Last week, $5,200.

Viking (Sley) (1,000; 99-$1.80)—"Where Boys Are" (M-G) (4th wk). Fast $9,000. Last week, $11,000.

World (R&B-Pathe) (449; 99-$1.80)—"Ballad of Soldier" (Union) (2d wk). Nice $5,000. Last week, $5,600.

B'way Marks Time; 'Sanctuary' Good $42,000, 2 Spots; 'Facts' Bright 43G, 'Dalmatians' Big 29G, 'Misfits' 37G

With a dearth of new product, Broadway deluxers are more or less marking time in the current stanza. Continued mild weather, of course, is a plus factor but rain Saturday afternoon and night was a damaging blow on this prize day of the week.

Biggest important newcomer, "Sanctuary," hit $42,000, being fair at the Paramount and nice at the arty Trans-Lux 85th Street. Business is comparatively much better at the latter. "Breathless" still is amazing at $18,300 in third week at the Fine Arts. "Male and Female" continues great in second round at the tiny World after setting a new house record opening week.

"Cimarron" with stageshow looks to land a fair $125,000 in second session at the Music Hall, and stays. "101 Dalmatians" is holding well in third round with fast $29,000 likely at the Palace.

"Facts of Life" is heading for a fancy $43,000 or close, day-dating at the Astor and arty Beekman in third week. "Circle of Deception" is down to mild $11,000 in second stanza at the Victoria.

"Swiss Family Robinson" looks to get a smart $10,000 or close in current (10th) round at the Embassy. "Wackiest Ship in Army" looms okay at $20,000 in third week or nine days at the Forum, making way for "Cry For Happy" Friday (3).

"The Misfits" is off to nice $37,000 for fourth session at the Capital, and stays only one more. "Go Naked in World" is due in March 8.

Newest of hard-ticket pix, "Pepe," finished its 10th stanza at the Criterion with a sturdy $27,000 for 10 performances. That's ahead of previous week, mainly because taking in the Washington's Birthday holiday.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,094; 75-$2)—"Facts of Life" (UA) (3d wk). Current stanza winding tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like big $30,000 after $34,000 for second. Holds.

Capitol (Loew) (4,820; $1-$2.50)—"Misfits" (UA) (5th-final wk). Fourth session ended yesterday (Tues.) hit nice $37,000 after $51,000 for third. "Go Naked in World" (M-G) opens March 8.

Criterion (Moss) (1,520; $1.50-$3.50)—"Pepe" (Col) (11th wk). The 10th round finished last night (Tues.) was big $27,000 for 10 shows taking in Feb. 22 holiday after $22,000 for ninth week. Seats are now selling through April 2.

DeMille (Reade) (1,463; $1.50-$3.50)—"Spartacus" (U) (21st wk). This week finishing today (Wed.) is heading for solid $20,000 or near after $25,000 for 20th round, which took in Washington's Birthday holiday. Coontinues.

Embassy (Guild Enterprises) (500; $1.25-$2)—"Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (10th wk). Current week winding tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like smart $10,000 or near after $11,000 for ninth round. Stays.

Palace (RKO) (1,642; 90-$2.50)—"101 Dalmatians" (BV) (3d wk). Current stanza finishing tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like fast $29,000 after $32,000 for second week, which included Feb. 22 holiday. Holding.

Forum (Moss) (813; 90-$1.80)—"Wackiest Ship" (Col) (3d wk-9 days). This frame concluding tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like okay $20,000 after $18,000 for second week. "Cry For Happy" (Col) opens Friday (3), day-dating with Trans-Lux 52d St.

Paramount (AB-PT) (3,665; $1-$2)—"Sanctuary" (20th) (2d wk). Initial session ended Monday (27) was fair $30,000. In ahead, "Millionairess" (20th), $45,000, far from good for 11 days. Stayed only four days of second week before being yanked.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (6,200; 90-$2.75)—"Cimarron" (M-G) and stageshow (2d wk). This week finishing today (Wed.) is heading for fair $125,000. Holds. Initial stanza, helped by Washington's Birthday holiday, hit $145,000. Easter stageshow was "Absent-Minded Professor" (BV) is due in next but not before March 16.

Rivoli (UAT) (1,545; $1.50-$3.50)—"Alamo" (UA) (19th wk). The 18th round finished last night (Tues.) was okay $15,000 after $14,500 for 17th week. "King and I" (20th) (rerun), in 70m and Grandeur version, opens hard-ticket engagement March 23.

State (Loew) (1,900; $1.50-$3.50)—"Ben-Hur" (M-G) (66th wk). This stanza winding today (Wed.) is heading for good $24,500—after $31,000 for 65th week. Stays indef.

Victoria (City Inv.) (1,002; 50-$2)—"Circle of Deception" (20th) (2d wk). This session ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like mild $11,000 or near. Opener was $15,000, considerably below expectancy.

Warner (SW) (1,813; $1.50-$3.50)—"Exodus" (UA) (11th wk). Current round finishing tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like $54,000, capacity for week. The 10th week was $55,000, also capacity, but reflecting the holiday scale on Feb. 22. Stays indefinitely, natch!

First-Run Arties

Baronet (Reade) (430; $1.25-$2)—"Modigliani" (Cont.) Opened yesterday (Tues.). Last week, "Make Mine Mink" (Cont) (11th wk-8 days). Okay $7,000 but after a very strong longrun.

Fine Arts (Davis) (463; 99-$1.80)—"Breathless" (Films Around World) (4th wk). Third week ended Monday (27) was wow $18,300, topping the $17,800 for second. Looks in for a very longrun here. Length of pic makes for fast turnover.

Beekman (R&B) (500; $1.20-$1.75)—"Facts of Life" (UA) (3d wk). Current session winding tomorrow (Thurs.) is heading for rousing $13,000 or over after $13,000 for second week.

Fifth Ave. Cinema (R&B) (250; $1.25-$1.80)—"Virgin Spring" (Janus) (m.o.) (3d wk). Current week ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks lofty $6,000 after $7,000 for second.

55th Street Playhouse (Moss) (273; $1.25-$2)—"Don Quixote" (M-G) (6th wk). This session ending tomorrow (Thurs.) is heading for nice $9,000, same as fifth.

Normandie (T-L) (592; $1.25-$1.80)—"Hand in Hand" (Col) (4th wk). Third stanza ended Sunday (26) was fast $8,000 as against $7,000 in second.

Toronto, Feb. 28.

Only newcomers are "The Canadians," dull at Canada's largest theatre, the Imperial, and "Great Impostor," rated hefty playing a Rank three-house combo. "The Misfits," in second stanza, and "World of Suzie Wong," in fourth, are leading the city neck-and-neck on holdover. Biz is generally good, as reflected by few changes at the boxoffice

Estimates for This Week

Carlton, Danforth, Humber (Rank) (2,318; 1,330; 1,203, $1-$1.50)—"Great Imposior" (U). Hefty $22,000. Last week, "Wackiest Ship" (Col) (2d wk, Carlton only), $8,000.

Dear Variety,

MISSION ACCOMPLISHED!

No other phrase could more succinctly describe the impact or the sensational results of the February 8th issue of VARIETY.

We had a story to tell and we told it. If the success in the telling can be measured in hundreds of telephone calls, letters, telegrams and cablegrams, then we were a tremendous success. Starting with noon on February 8th, we began to be inundated with congratulatory and business messages from the domestic market. In a short time, similar messages were coming in from all over the world. "Time" magazine picked up the story in their February 24th edition.

I have long been a staunch advocate of the urgent need of telling our story to our customers before they can tell our story to their own customers --- the public. Call it hard sell, soft sell or readers' service. Call it whatever you will, the motion picture industry throughout the world knows today what Embassy has available for all of 1961 and part of 1962. That's what we set out to do and I say, unequivocally, MISSION ACCOMPLISHED!

Thanks to all the folks at VARIETY for making our section in the February 8th issue the success that it was and is.

Sincerely,

EMBASSY PICTURES CORP.

Six Common Market Nations Meet in Belgium on Films & TV

By JOHN FLORQUIN

Brussels, Feb. 21.

"It might seem preposterous that Belgium, whose weakest industry is the production of films, took the initiative of asking the great nations of the European Community to confront their film and television problems during a three days conference. Nevertheless this should not be interpreted as an act of defiance but as an act of faith in our own aims as well as in the destiny of this old battered but still evergreen Europe."

With these words, Richard Declerck, Governor of the Province of Antwerp and chairman of the European Film and Television Conference, addressed the delegates of the six Common Market countries. France, Italy, Germany, the Netherlands, Luxemburg and Belgium. No great names attended but it was hoped that some constructive work was achieved.

An encouraging fact remains: the very idea of this Congress proves a need and a will for severe self-criticism. The immense impact of television on the masses, the new problems thus created, the realistic light in which these must be viewed make it imperative not only to re-examine them in a new context but to try and eliminate many sources of friction amongst which are a levelling of custom duties, unreasonable taxation, a new regulation of social charges, problems affecting the dubbing of films, free exchange of shorts, their production teams and raw film.

A closer link between cinema and television, presently engaged in fierce battle, was discussed also. In words and on paper a more congenial attitude towards one another sounds rather simple and easy, but a simple recommendation, put forward here, that no fiction films should be shown on video screens on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, rich harvest days at the boxoffice of film houses, might well prove a stumbling block.

Most interesting discussion occurred the last day when different problems concerning censorship brought forth heated arguments. One would have thought that the very principle of censorship would

Asian Film Fest Opens in Manila

Hong Kong, Feb. 28

The Eighth Asian Film Fest opens in Manila March 7 and runs through March 11. Hong Kong, as usual, is actively participating, sending five films and a large delegation.

The festival when first held in Tokyo back in 1954, was called the Southeast Asian Film Fest. It took a Hong Kong governor to draw attention to this misnomer, Sir Alexander Grantham noting that it was geographically incorrect to include Japan in Southeast Asia. Hence, the tag was changed to Asian Film Fest.

Asian films are generally considered to be getting better, technically and as to acting. But India, with every reason to be a festival member, still is not one. India makes more films than Hong Kong and perhaps Japan, but has been content to just send observers to the festival and having some of its films shown as guest entries and not compete for prizes

Speculation here is that India this time will apply for membership which the FPA (Festival Producers Assn.) doubtlessly will approve.

India's case is different from Red China's. The latter theoretically is also eligible for membership, but her entry is frowned upon by members. Peking, however, has never sought to be a member, but its ap-

University of Michigan Symphony Band last night (Mon.) launched its tour of Russia, east Europe and Asia with a concert at the Sports Palace here. Tour, part of the international cultural exchange program, is due to cover 25,000 miles before it winds up in June.

The Michigan band, 94 players plus two conductors, will tour Russia until April 15, then move on for shorter dates in Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, Cyprus, Turkey, Bulgaria, Romania, and Poland. A homecoming concert at Carnegie Hall, N.Y., is planned for June 2.

Opera Guild In Zurich Follows Met's Example

Zurich, Feb. 21.

Since the taking-over of the artistic top spot of the Zurich opera house, Stadttheatre, by ex-Met stage director Herbert Graf last fall, opera has again become — after a long hiatus—the topic of conversations in this Swiss city. This is due to a number of factors, including (1) realization of several long overdue reorganization projects; (2) hiring of a large contingent of young U. S. talent; (3) a definite raise in performance standards; and (4) a general aura of excitement in the public and press camp where heretofore indifference or negative reactions prevailed.

One result is the foundation of a "Society for the Promotion of the Zurich Opera," presided over by Franz Reichenbach. This is similar to the Metropolitan Opera Guild of N. Y. On a private and independent basis, it aims to reactivate interest among audience sectors which, in the past 15 years, have been estranged; to sponsor financial contributions by its own members or third parties to particularly costly new productions or first performances of artistically valuable new works, especially by Swiss composers. Furthermore, the new society plans to take an active interest in promoting the long-discussed new opera building in Zurich and to further public comprehension in the necessity of raised subsidies by the city authorities.

In addition, the society will play an active part in a long-range plan destined to build up new opera talent on an international basis,

Yank Stand Vs. Selling Films to Tunisia While Tax Remains Pays Off

Paris, Feb. 28.

It is now four months since the US has stopped selling pix to Tunisia because of the 6c per metre tax on all imported pix levied last October 19. It was found that for the $300,000 garnered from this mart the Yanks would lose $20,000. But the boycott was slapped on mainly as a matter of principle to show that it would deal in like manner with other African countries which might try the same move. Morocco has since prepared a bill to hit all foreign pix for 10c a metre, but has not put it into effect as yet.

Only one Yank pic, "Crack in Mirror" (20th), has played Tunisia in this interim. The French and English are also behind the Yanks

EQUALS OF ANY SAYS HILL UNIT

By HALSEY RAINES

Madrid, Feb. 28.

United Artists' prospective release, "Once A Thief," which is now rolling locally as a James Hill production starring Rita Hayworth, employs a higher percentage of Spain's own film technicians than on any American-generated production so far photographed here.

United Artists was a pioneer in American production here some seven years ago with "Alexander The Great" under George (Bud) Ornstein, UA's Barcelona-based chief of operations (production as well as distribution). In the present film the UA flavor is increased since the novel on which it is based, "The Oldest Confession," was written by Richard Condon, long with UA though now wearing sandals in Mexico as an Authors League corresponding member.

Producer Hill, Ornstein and production manager Ed Woehler, here from California, believe that after some eight years of exposure to American tempo and methods and people (plus further education provided by Britishers working here) the Spanish studio crews have attained a level of efficiency comparable to the best in Europe. A group of alert, eager-to-please bi-lingual key technicians now exists in Madrid.

Outside of the American director, George Marshall, and Ed Woehler; the head cameraman, Paul Beeson, one of London's busiest lensmen; the British script girl, Angie Allen; the auditor, Fred Wallach; the British make-up man, John O'Gorman; Joan St. Oegger, who is Rita Hayworth's favored hairdresser from California; the British editor Oswald Hafenrichter, and a number of sound men whose native language by necessity must be English, the big unit is Spanish to the core, and to the corps' last assistant's assistant.

"It is no longer a question really of saving money by making a certain picture in Spain," said Ornstein. "That particular motive, if it existed in the past, has nothing like the same validity today. Picture costs have risen everywhere in Europe, and our above-the-line costs on this film, for example, are proportionately higher than any other we have made in Spain.

H'wood Pix Elements, Mex Producers Back of Move to Overthrow Present Censorship Setup; Yen Brit. Plan

Mexico City, Feb 28.

Unspecified Hollywood production elements, who understandably prefer to remain in the background, and Mexican producers have joined forces in a common drive to attempt an overthrow of present censorship practices. In this aim, they also have full support of a few European elements who occasionally make pictures in Mexico. What producers want is for the Film Bureau and Jorge Ferretis to bow out of the censorship picture. Instead, a censorship commission, made up of elements not necessarily allied with the industry, should be installed.

This actually would follow the censorship setup operating in England where qualified, trained persons of ample discernment and artistic knowledge, serve as censors, completely free and disassociated from the government. Ronald Neame, British director, found highly interested Mexican ears when he expounded this system during a visit here.

The producer beef is that even after censors snip and cut what they deem objectionable on a finished picture, after having also laid down the law on script prior to shooting, they turn around and slap a "for adults only" classification on many pictures that are completely innocuous after censor treatment.

Feeling here is that censorship should be freed of bureaucratic overbearance. Now producers want a showdown. Their feeling is that better pictures can result from private censorship by elements independent of the industry and the government.

But in this latest drive, it is the State Department which will have the last word as to whether an independent commission will be considered, or if the Film Bureau will continue its censorship powers as usual.

Me Know You

Kyoto, Feb. 21.

The global penetration of pictures and tv was re-proven when Hollywood actor Tom Tryon attended a geisha party at a teahouse in the ancient Pontocho district of this classic city. Strapping Tryon, after removing his shoes and bumping his head on the low woodwork, was surprised to find that one of the geisha recognized him.

"You flom Horrywood," she exclaimed while flapping the folds of her kimono.

Tryon is here playing a leading role in "Marines, Let's Go" (20th-Fox) under Raoul Walsh.

Unions, Pix Orgs. Plan to Up Mex Film Quality

Mexico City, Feb. 21.

A new production trend is developing in Mexico whereby unions and film organizations plan to pitch in to lift up film quality via their own production efforts. Both the Union of Film Production Workers (STPC) and Union of Film Industry Workers (STIC), still having differences of opinion over "invasion of spheres of influence," are tentatively considering feature pix production plans.

Oscar Brooks, head of the Mexican Assn. of Film Producers, also has announced that a special commission has been set up to give impetus to producting of one or two major efforts per year. And the National Assn. of Actors has a project of its own calling for picture making.

Brooks is thinking in terms of super-super productions and possibly able to stand up to the best of Hollywood efforts. He feels that

Mex Indie Exhibs Voice Beef Vs. Tactics of Churches on Screenings

Mexico City, Feb. 21.

Mexican independents finally have taken their courage in hand and given voice to a beef that has been affecting Hollywood film exploitation in the hinterlands. Gist of it is that the indies charge "unfair competition" on the part of Church in urging inhabitants of villages and small towns to boycott pictures considered unsuitable. And in outright competition, church social halls run 16m shows which draw patrons from the one or more commercial cinemas in a populated center.

Added to all this, priests or vicars foment a seemingly unending series of religious fests to keep the faithful out of those "dens of iniquity," the film theatres. And on top of all this, indies admit that business is also hurt by economic factors brought on by excessive rains or drought. But the biggest block to fair boxoffice in the backwoods is the policy of "attacking" pictures from pulpits or banning them via bulletins posted at church doors, the indies charge. This, and 16m shows, often means that attendance at the local cinemas is badly slashed.

The church view here is that it is not doing anything untoward, that it has a right to show 16m films (these generally older) and a lot with religious overtones. Also, a spokesman said that the church has the right to defend public morals. The only times it frowns on films is when these have an "immoral" script, highly provocative scenes or are in bad taste. But the church definitely has taken no stand against Mexican or Hollywood or foreign pictures.

Support for the church came from an unexpected quarter, the State. Jorge Ferretis, head of the Film Bureau, said the clergy has every right to make recommendations as it sees fit, and according to religious standards. Also, that the church has a right to express its opinion. But it was carefully pointed out that church classifications of films have nothing whatsoever to do with official classifications.

On another sore point independents have petitioned Mexican authorities to revoke the 10% levy they have been paying to former independently owned film circuits to assure a steady flow of Mexican material. Matter has been taken up for consideration by Quirino Ordaz Rocha, present head of the chains, who is coping with a replanning of Mexican exhibition with the production end.

Greater Union's Nabe Loop, Par End Hassle

Sydney, Feb. 21.

Following conferences here with George Weltner, Paramount home-office exec, and Robert Graham, Par's local chief, Greater Union Theatres' executives, headed by Horrie Nagel, have agreed finally to terms covering the Acme-Odeon-Kings suburban loop, under the GU tent, for all Par product geared through Paramount's Sydney showcase, Prince Edward.

First Par pic to hit the suburban loop is "G.I. Blues," to be followed by "Psycho" and "It Started in Naples." It's understood that Par will receive a higher percentage than hitherto on the new deal.

United Artists and Hoyts have settled their long product deal hassle, with "The Devil's Disciple" first in on blanket release.

THIS IS THE STORY OF TEMPLE DRAKE

...who sank into degradation and rose to seek redemption at the hands of the woman her silence had condemned to the gallows...

...of CANDY MAN, her Creole lover, who first lit the fires that smouldered within her and taught her the ways of evil...

...of GOVERNOR DRAKE, her father, who had never heard the truth from his daughter, and when at last he did, it was too late...

...of GOWAN, her husband, whose weakness nearly destroyed them all, who had to learn to face the truth that alone could set them free...

...and of NANCY, who laid down her life that those who lived might find salvation.

Film Reviews

Offbeat
(BRITISH)

Slick little dualer which shapes up excellently as one of new-look British second features. No U.S. marquee value here, but still a worthwhile booking as secondary pic.

London, Feb. 26.

British Lion release of M. Smelley Aston production. Stars William Sylvester, Mai Zetterling; features Anthony Dawson, John Meillon, John Phillips, Victor Brooks. Directed by Cliff Owen. Original story and screenplay, Peter Barnes; camera, Geoffrey Faithfull; editor, Antony Gibbs; music, Ken Jones. At Studio One, London. Running time, 72 MINS.

Layton/Steve Ross ..... William Sylvester
Ruth Lombard ..... Mai Zetterling
Johnny Hemick ..... John Meillon
James Dawson ..... Anthony Dawson
Leo Farrell ..... Neil McCarthy
Gill Hall ..... Harry Baird
Superintendent Gault ..... John Phillips
Inspector Adams ..... Victor Brooks
Maggie Dawson ..... Diana King
Jake ..... Gerad Heinz
J. B. Wykenham ..... Ronald Adam
Pat Ryan ..... Neil Wilson

British producers in general, and those working for British Lion in particular, are doing a worthwhile job in trying to raise the stature of low-budget second feature pix. Typical example of this is "Offbeat," which was brought in for around $70,000. It is a compact little crime yarn, well acted, and briskly written and directed. A very useful dualer for Britain, this could well click in the U.S. though it has no names known to American audiences.

It has William Sylvester as a Scotland Yard undercover man who is recruited to pose as a crook, then join a gang and find out for the police about a new type of criminal in the underworld, the men who run crime on strictly business level.

He is accepted by a gang whose boss runs a small export firm as a front. A big robbery is planned in which Sylvester is the main brains. But he has become involved with a young widow in the gang and also finds that his friendship for the crooks is growing, so that he is loath to betray them. The widow discovers that he has connections with the police but he persuades her that he is now on their side and has broken with the police. But when a fence exposes him as an impostor he unwittingly plays into the police's hands and the gang is rounded up.

This is a neat story. But it is a pity that a wholly unnecessary "prologue" before the credit titles partly gives away the ending. Production and direction are smooth, dialog and characterization plausible and technically it measures up to many pix from far more ambitious producers.

Sylvester gives a strong performance as the sleuth. Mai Zetterling is appealing as the widow while John Meillon and Anthony Dawson, as the two principal crooks, are both sound. Victor Brooks and John Phillips fill their chores as limbs of the law very competently. There are some shrewd touches in the way the "new wave" of criminals plan their crimes like a respectable, law abiding business. Rich.

Das Wirtshaus im Spessart
(The Spessart Inn)

Casino Film Exchange release of Constantin-Film production. Stars Liselotte Pulver, Carlos Thompson; features Ina Peters, Herbert Huebner, Guenther Lueders, Otto Storr, Helmut Lohner, Hans Clarin. Directed by Kurt Hoffman. Written by Heinz Pauch and Liselotte Enderle, based on story by Wilhelm Hauff; camera, Richard Angst; music, Franze Grothe. Previewed at Bonded Film Storage screening room Feb. 15, '61. Running time, 99 MINS.

The only thing to complain about in this new German import directed by Kurt Hoffman is that it is years behind the times in terms of subject matter. The performance is a good one and the cinematic techniques are right up to date. The tinted photography is professional, the pacing is brisk, and sound, editing, etc., all firstrate.

Unfortunately, these talents were lavished upon thematic material of a bygone era. It's billed as a spoof of the story anent robbers of the forest kidnapping titled young lady along with her apparently in adequate spouse-to-be for purposes of ransom.

Captain of the robbers is the one to whom the countess eventually turns for purposes of romance. But before this, with the idea of deceiving the highwaymen, the countess poses as a male and her newly-found young male friend (who takes up with her maid) poses as the countess.

These and other of the characters on and off break out into song with Teutonic gusto.

Well done, and parts of it are fun but hardly fitting all the way for the taste of modern times. Gene.

El Gato
(The Cat)
(MEXICAN)

Mexico City, Feb. 21.

Columbia Pictures release of Alfa Films production. Stars Joaquin Cordero, Lucha Moreno; features Angel Infante, Andres Solcer, Chucho Salinas, Ramon Bugarini, Salvador Terroba, Carlos Leon. Directed by Miguel M. Delgado. Screenplay, Alfredo Varela Jr., from original by Jose Ma. Fernandez Unsain; camera, Victor Herrera; music Raul Lavista. At Nacional and Tlacopao Theatres, Mexico City. Running time, 80 MINS.

Main point about the preem of this one is that it opened in two nabe houses, with an oldie Pedro Infante film as the second feature.

Based on American westerns, an attempt is made to present a western badman always ready with an itchy trigger finger. But it turns out flat and even the action scenes including fist fights and gun duels are overplayed and exaggerated.

"The Cat" gets his in the end but it all adds up to a very poor imitation of a cowboy meller. Emil.

Paloma Brava
(Brave Pigeon)
(MEXICAN)

Mexico City, Feb. 21.

Peliculas Nacionales release of Churubusco production. Stars Rosita Quintana, Miguel Aceves Mejia, Sara Garcia; features "Beto the Pharmacist," Alfredo Varela Jr., Guillermo "Lobe," Manuel Vergara "Mamber," Jose Galvez. Directed by Rogelio Gonzalez. Screenplay, Janet Alcoriza; camera, Victor Herera; music, Gustavo Cesar Carrion. At Orfeon Theatre, Mexico City. Running time, 99 MINS.

Rosita Quintana as the brave pigeon who copes with assorted situations in this comedy with oater overtones deserves better roles because she is capable of handling roles better than one in this quickie. Veteran Sara Garcia also is miscast in a picture which follows pattern of getting together boxoffice names for a quick recoup of production investments via exhibition in nabe houses.

Director Rogelio Gonzalez is also worthy of better things than this feeble commercial effort. Emil.

Ca Va Etre Ta Fete
(It's Your Birthday)
(FRENCH)

Paris, Feb. 28.

Unidex release of GEF-Belmont Film-Contact production. Stars Eddie Constantine; features Barbara Laage, Claude Cerval, Stephen Schnabel, Medina, Lloyd Kerber. Directed by Pierre Montazel. Screenplay, Clarence Weiss. Montazel; camera, Michel Kelber; editor, Raymond Lainy. At Balzac, Paris. Running time, 90 MINS.

Jarvis ..... Eddie Constantine
Michele ..... Barbara Laage
Chief ..... Claude Cerval
Bargarian ..... Stephen Schnabel

After making films in other countries, Eddie Constantine is back in France with his action vehicles in the American detective genre. Pic has a lame script but enough movement, fights and gags to make it an okay entry here but shapes mainly of dualer calibre for any possible Yank chances. But Constantine has a flock of these pix behind him which could be bundled into a tv series.

Here he is on a mission for the U.S. Secret Service to unearth a double agent in Lisbon which he does by setting himself up as a decoy. Constantine has his usual casual charm and drinks less than in other pix with not too many femmes dropping into his arms.

united action of association members can achieve a high budget quality picture whereas individual effort would always be hampered by lack of finances. Further, the one or two pictures definitely will be of help to the industry as a whole and give prestige to Mexico throughout the world.

The association wants big themes to counteract Hollywood plans to do film stories on Montezuma and Simon Bolivar. Preferred will be film bios of other outstanding Mexican or Latin American figures or incidents. And casting, staging and production is to be on a lavish scale, perhaps with budgets in excess of several million dollars. (If realized, this would set a precedent in Mexico where budgets so far have run to four or five million pesos—$320,000 to $400,000).

The National Assn. of Actors will turn out more modest efforts, but still on high quality standards, according to Rodolfo Landa.

This concerns an International Opera Studio to be initiated next fall, sponsored by the City of Zurich and, in all probability, the U. This Studio will enable young artists from here and abroad — singers, composers, librettists and set designers—to study operas in original language under firstrate professional guidance and to take part in public studio performances. be severely condemned all round. Nevertheless censorship is apparently valued by some as a weapon against too much violence, the glorification of a licentiousness, etc. Children and adolescents must be protected, it was stressed by several delegates.

In Belgium there is no censorship but persons below 16 are barred from seeing certain films. In the Netherlands some films are scissored, others—like "The Lovers" and "The Green Mare"—banned without remission. But here again one sees clearly how divergent the attitude adopted towards these problems in the different Common Market Countries. It will take time and infinite patience to eliminate one after the other the multiple obstacles which will change six into one.

New Attack on Chicago Censors Says Court Evaded Basic Issue; Eds, Broadcasters, Authors Rally

Times Film Corp., in petitioning the U. S. Supreme Court for a rehearing of its case vs. Chicago's film licensing statute, claims that the Court's five-to-four ruling last month, upholding Chicago, "decided a question other than the one" which Times brought before the court.

This is the major point in Times' petition filed in Washington Monday (27). Backing up Times' plea are a number of amicus curiae briefs from such interested groups as American Society of Newspaper Editors, National Assn. of Broadcasters, Authors League of America, American Book Publishers Council, Society of Magazine Writers, Society of Magazine Photographers, as well as Playboy Magazine.

Motion Picture Assn. of America also is supporting Times with a friend-of-the-court brief, taking a similar line to that of Times to the effect that Court did not rule on the question actually presented to it.

Conspicuous by its absence in the otherwise fairly united communications front vs. the court's ruling is the American Newspaper Publishers Assn. An MPAA spokesman Monday explained the ANPA's absence by saying the publishers preferred not to get into the current case "so late in the game," but had promised assistance in future fights.

Times' petition for the rehearing was explained Monday at a press conference in New York by Felix Bilgrey, Times counsel who, with Abner J. Mikva, Chicago attorney, argued the case before the Supreme Court last fall. Also attending the conference were reps of the Magazine Photographers and the MPAA, the Independent Film Importers & Distributors of America, and Independent Theatre Owners Assn.

According to Bilgrey, Times Film had never asked the court for "complete and absolute freedom to exhibit at least once any and every kind of motion picture. The majority opinion ruled on these issues which we were not bringing before the court."

To test the Chicago licensing statute, Times complied with all details of the statute with the exception of submitting the picture in question (the opera film, "Don Juan") to the licensing board for prior viewing.

Times takes the position that provisions of the ordinance, which provide "for the censorship of all motion pictures prior to their exhibition, are unconstitutional under the First and Fourteenth Amendments."

Distrib, basing its argument on premise that motion pictures are not an exception to free speech, says that a city or a state must come up with a better argument to back censorship than simply the one that film communication is on celluloid.

(Actually there seems to be some difference of opinion among industry lawyers as to just what the Supreme Court's majority opinion means. According to Ephraim London, who fought the "Miracle" and "Lady Chatterley's Lover" cases before the court, Times majority decision only upholds right of a licensing board to view a picture before issuing a license, and specifically states that whether or not a license can be withheld for any reason whatsoever is another matter left unanswered by the court. The Times attorneys, on the other hand, equate the board's "right to view" with right to censor, and declare the right to view to be a form of prior restraint).

Bilgrey's petition points out that 46 states and hundreds of cities exist without a prior submission ordinance, all of which states "have not been overwhelmed by pornography" from film sources.

MPAA brief states that both it and Times Film recognize the right of a community to "suppress certain classes of constitutionally unprotected speech," and adds that the real attack here is on 'the constitutionality of the method employed by the City of Chicago—a method which excludes from public showing all films until after inspection by the licensor, not upon the right of the community to control objectionable matter."

MPAA also says that the court should reconsider "whether (Chicago's) interest in protecting against obscenity required its ordinance to be upheld in a decision which may engender the proliferation of similar ordinances in the hundreds of cities and towns in the United States."

In addition, MPAA points out that cities afraid of obscene films can always take injunctive action against them, which action protects both parties to the case.

Brief filed by the Magazine Photographers takes a slightly different tack. It says that if films are so different from still photography, books and newspapers as to require "highly unusual treatment," the reasons requiring the special treatment should be spelled out in a court of law. Thus it petitions the Supreme Court to send the case back to trial court for a trial on the equal protection issue.

In addition to the groups already cited, the American Civil Liberties Union, Screen Directors International Guild, Screen Producers Guild and the Screens Writers branch of the Writers Guild of America have sent pledges of aid to Times Film on the petition for a rehearing.

Maine First In Years to Propose Taxing Tickets

Boston, Feb. 28.

Frank C. Lydon, executive secretary, Allied Theatres of New England Inc., has alerted every theatre in Maine to fight H. P. 1032 or L.D. 1433, which would impose a sales tax on all theatre tickets of admission. A public hearing is expected to be held in mid-March at which exhibitors will be urged to attend to voice their opposition.

Exhibitors in Maine are up in arms. Lydon reported, as films shown on tv, would be tax free, under the bill.

Lydon reports that 92 theatres in Maine have gone out of business and receipts have dropped 47% Federal government and more than 100 taxing bodies, states, cities or towns have abolished admission taxes, and nowhere has a new admission tax been imposed for the past several years.

Unreserved 'Reservations' Angle at B'way Capitol For 'One-Eyed Jacks'

"One-Eyed Jacks" will open at Loew's Capitol Theatre, New York, March 30 with an admissions policy departing from the routine. Prices will be regulation but the public will be invited to purchase unreserved tickets for specific performances up to a week in advance.

Boxoffice showings for immediate performances also will be available, but in no case will there be a ticket sale exceeding capacity. Unreeling will be on a continuous basis.

Further, advance tickets will be on sale at all Loew's theatres in the Greater N. Y. area.

AMPP Reelects Johnston

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Eric Johnston was reelected prexy of Assn. of Motion Picture Producers and other officers returned for another year at annual meeting held here last week. Continuing office are Y. Frank Freeman, board chairman; Charles S. Boren, exec v.p.; Steve Broidy and E. L. De Patie, v.p.s; and Alfred P. Chamie, secretary-treasurer.

At annual election of Central Casting following session, Boren was continued as prexy; Freeman, chairman; Chamie, secretary-treasurer.

We predict...

"THE HOODLUM PRIEST" will not only be one of the top grossers of the year—but one of the most critically acclaimed and most talked-about motion pictures for years to come!

With all the thrilling excitement and top quality values of "I WANT TO LIVE"—backed by the same kind of aggressive sales and promotion drive; plus the human appeal and heart-warming qualities of "A MAN CALLED PETER" —we predict this attraction, brought to the screen by the dynamic new producing team of Don Murray and Walter Wood will have tremendous boxoffice potential!

DON MURRAY reaches the peak of an exciting career as the star of the film. All the promise he showed on the stage and on the screen in such hits as "Bus Stop", "Bachelor Party" and "Hatful of Rain" is now a promise fulfilled. Here is a talent, a performance, a picture to remember!

Spain's Crews Now 'Educated'

The real reason for doing a movie in Spain—or Italy or France—should be that it gives a very special production value to a special story indigenous to the environment. That is what audiences have indicated they want and that is what producers are trying to give them.

"Local Spanish-language productions have averaged about 50 pictures year in and year out, but it is the overseas productions that have immensely sharpened the skill and range of studio workers. I think it is fair to say that today there is no better local production manager anywhere in Europe than Manuel Perez, who is assisting Ed Woehler, any more creative art director than Ramiro Gomez, or a more capable assistant than Pedro Vidal.

During the last few days Ornstein has been conferring in Madrid with Francis Winikus, in charge of UA overseas ballyhoo on promotional and exploitation angles for the new film.

The fact that all processing for "Once a Thief" is being handled at the ultra-modern Fotofilm plant in Madrid, instead of being shipped to London, is also an item of significance. Both Madrid and Barcelona now have film laboratories which stack up with the most efficient in Europe, the Barcelona one specializing in color as well as black-and-white processing.

Important Assist

High praise is voiced by James Hill for the exceptional degree of cooperation provided his unit by Jose Munoz Fontan, who is Spain's cinematic Director General, under the aegis of the Ministry of Information. "His understanding of our problems and his desire to help work them out in the best interests of quality of production indicate why Spain has been forging ahead so rapidly in film work," said the producer.

With the aid of this personage, $10,000,000 worth of noted paintings have been made available for photography in "Once a Thief," and maximum aid provided for the four weeks of exterior shooting that will be required to capture some of Madrid's best-known landmarks on the screen.

Some of the reasons given by Ornstein for the rising graph of picture costs in Spain are the fact that general overhead has risen, that living allowances for people coming into the country have to be higher than formerly, and that despite the equipment available in Spain, such items as special booms or Brute lights have to be transported from England, France or Italy, then paid for over a period of eight weeks or more instead of (as would be the case with local rental) on a day-by-day basis, which might reduce the cost to about one-sixth.

"One of the special reasons in the past for making films in Spain," said Ornstein, "was found in the large amounts of blocked currency. This totalled at one time more than five hundred million pesetas. Although profit-making from productions always adds new currency credits, all the old reserves have been used up by picture projects or 'compensation deals' of various sorts."

Now producers are thinking far less in terms of the dwindling sums of blocked currency than of such items as stories that seem to cry out for actual Spanish locales, as is the case with "Once a Thief." One of the main points of attraction in Spain also is the great variety of climate and topography, ranging from the verdant green of the Northern coast, to the date palms of Malaga, the famous fishing and hunting areas, the Moorish architecture of the old cities and the contrasts of such cities as Barcelona, Seville and Madrid. Only one hour from sun-drenched Madrid you have excellent skiing at Navacerrada.

There are three principal studios now functioning in Madrid, although most projects coming to Spain do so because of the unusual exteriors which can be utilized. The Sevilla Studios, where "Once a Thief" interiors will be made, is a 15-minute taxi ride from the heart of the city, with six modern stages. At the CEA studios five big stages are to be found, and Chamartin, now leased wholly by Samuel Bronston, has three stages.

INVITE THE LIGHTNING TO STRIKE 'GWTW' AGAIN

Atlanta, Feb. 28.

Judson E. Moses Jr., is in the field here carrying through on strategy for a campaign trying to outdo, or at least equal, the bally for the original, historial 1939 premiere of David O. Selznick's "Gone With the Wind." This southern exploitation chief for Metro, is trying to groove "Wind" into the Civil War Centennial scheme of things and thereby make film's sixth-time-around release on par with the opening of "Wind" in 1939.

The M-G brass in New York is calling the turns, of course, but the preliminaries—the local build-up—are being handled by Moses. And unlike the first-time-out for "Wind," the competition is far greater, for their are such other big ones M-G's own "Ben-Hur," and "Exodus," "Pepe," "Spartacus," "Can-Can" and "The Alamo."

A costume ball is to be among the highlights of the three-day celebration centered around the "opening" of "Wind" March 10 at Loew's Grand Theatre.

Len Freeman on Own

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Leonard Freeman, after writing and producing two films, completed a 15-month tenure with Warner Bros. and checked off lot over the weekend to set up his own indie production company.

While at studio he did "Gold of the Seven Saints," now in general release, and "Claudelle Inglish," currently being scored.

WB Buys 'Love & Mrs. S.'

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Warner Bros. is prepping another comedy based on a book by Patrick Dennis, author of "Auntie Mame," one of studio's big grossers.

New tome, purchased last week, is tagged "Love and Mrs. Sargent," and written under Dennis' other pen name, Virginia Rowans.

THERE HAS NEVER BEEN ANYTHING QUITE LIKE THE SUCCESS STORY ON THE GREAT IMPOSTOR

Record Crowds Flock To See Fulton Comedy

By KASPAR MONAHAN

It was like old times over the weekend at the Fulton. They started piling into the theater early Friday, began forming long lines that night. And the rush to see the Tony Curtis comedy continued on Saturday and yesterday. That's the way they used to flock into a movie house when the word got around that a top picture was on view.

And the Fulton crowds were not disappointed. I heard them in the lobby telling one another about how swell a picture this was, this bouncing true-life yarn about a prize faker, one Ferdinand Waldo Demara, Jr.

TONY CURTIS

With that name, he couldn't be blamed too much for assuming the monickers and professions of other men. In the movie, "The Great Impostor," Curtis plays six of the persons impersonated ever so cunningly by the wily Demara, and each time it's funnier than the previous masquerade.

Kap Monahan of the Pittsburgh Press says it best of all.

...and Boston was even more sensational than Pittsburgh. At the RKO Keith Memorial in Boston, THE GREAT IMPOSTOR equalled the all-time U-I record set by OPERATION PETTICOAT in its Christmas week opening last year. IMPOSTOR actually played to more people than PETTICOAT. This same record-breaking success story is now being written in 250 other New England openings, in 70 engagements throughout the Pittsburgh territory, in Miami, Denver, Rochester, Houston, Salt Lake City, New Haven, Hartford and many other engagements too numerous to list.

TONY CURTIS as "THE GREAT IMPOSTOR" co-starring EDMOND O'BRIEN • ARTHUR O'CONNELL • GARY MERRILL RAYMOND MASSEY • JOAN BLACKMAN • ROBERT MIDDLETON and co-starring KARL MALDEN as "Father Devlin" with the exciting music of HENRY MANCINI, composer of America's best-selling records!

'Aida,' Early Loren, Encoring On Show-and-Blow-Town Tactics

"Aida," Italo opera spec starring Sophia Loren (another did singing) and originally released here by I.F.E. in 1954-55, is getting profitable new "release" via its current go round by Exclusive International Films, sales exec Sanford Weiner reports.

Pic, which took in about $300,000 on 250 dates during its first release, has already brought in rentals of about $50,000 on 160 bookings between Nov. 1, 1960 and Feb. 1 this year, according to Weiner. Exclusive International has hopes of getting about 1,000 dates in this drive, with a total rental at least as good if not better than that brought in in the original release.

This is mightly good coin for any foreign pic, much less one that would be expected to appeal to as specialized an audience as an opera film can ordinarily expect.

Interestingly enough, most of the new "Aida" money is being brought in via one and two-night stands, whereas the original release emphasized the extended engagement approach. Exclusive International also has gotten a lot of bookings in selected circuit houses—E. M. Loew's, Stanley Warner, Fox West Coast, Walter Reade and Balaban & Katz—in those communities where distrib has made tie-ins with universities and schools, culture groups of one sort and another, and Italian-speaking groups.

As the kind of money still to be had from a five-year-old opera pic, Weiner cites the examples of the small-seat Ritz, Clearwater, Fla., where film took in $814 Jan. 24, and the University Theatre, Cambridge, which racked up $914 in one day. At the larger Capitol Theatre (E. M. Loew) in Worcester, Mass., film brought in $1,463 in one day.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown has lent his name anew to advisory committee of San Francisco Film Festival.

London Policies

sets already created would not be used in the new version. Costumes designed for Miss Taylor to wear as Cleopatra appeared to him "too innocent." Explaining his conception of Cleopatra, Mankiewicz said he saw her as "a remarkably brilliant woman who nearly made it. And by made it I mean making herself empress of the world by using the two greatest men in the world—Caesar and Anthony. Both failed her—one by being inconveniently assassinated and the other by turning coward."

Indicated Large Outlay So Far

Asked how much had been spent on the film so far, Mankiewicz said "I have been told that it is between four and five million dollars. I understand a million has been spent on sets and props and another million has gone to Rank for studio space and services. But these are not hard figures."

The original cost of the production, he added, was $12,000,000. But he could not work out the cost of his new version until the script was finished. Nor could he say when the film would be finished. "It's as much as I can do to set a starting date." The re-scripting, he thought, would cost about $50,000.

He hoped to include a good deal of location work in Egypt on the re-scripted "Cleopatra." The huge set of Alexandria harbour and palace built on the lot at Pinewood was a super construction but "it was built in the wrong country at the wrong time."

He went on: "I would be delighted to know why anyone decided to build an exterior set of sun-baked Egypt at Pinewood Studios in mid-winter. But it would be out of the question to scrap that exterior now. I shall have to use it."

Miss Taylor Happy Over New Ideas

He had discussed his new conception of Cleopatra with Miss Taylor and she seemed very happy with his ideas. He had also talked over his conception of Caesar with Peter Finch. Mankiewicz saw Caesar as "a man at war within himself" and Finch liked this interpretation of the part.

Reminded by a reporter that Plutarch had said that Cleopatra was an ugly woman with a long nose, Mankiewicz said he did not think Miss Taylor's beauty disqualified her for the role.

According to the 20th-Fox statement, the insurance assessors had suggested that Marilyn Monroe, Kim Novak, Rossana Podesta or Shirley MacLaine could replace Miss Taylor as Cleopatra. "No," said Mankiewicz, "I wouldn't have chosen any of them. Miss Taylor would always be my choice for Cleopatra. She is a superb actress, in spite of the fact that she has a beautiful nose."

Summing up his thoughts about the picture he said: "At the worst, we'll make an adult Eastern out of it. I promise that no one will eat grapes from a horizontal position." But first the new script had to be written—"One way you can't make 'Cleopatra' is to shoot it off the cuff."

plication, if ever made, will be rejected because the festival charter insists that films be made exclusively for entertainment and not to put across propaganda reasons. Red Chinese films shown here have always tried to sell the Communist message.

Japanese films, despite their popularity in Europe, have not gone over well in Hong Kong and other parts of Asia. Toho, for instance, is spending considerable on a percentage deal it has with second-run theatres here to have its pictures shown.

Three of Hong Kong's five-film entries this year are from Shaw Brothers and two from MPGI (Motion Picture General Investment). The Shaw films are "Les Belles," with Lin Dai and Peter Chen Ho (a musical in color) and "Swallow Thief" and "The Deformed." MPGI's entries are "Wild, Wild Rose," a Chinese version of "Carmen Jones," starring Grace Chang, and a documentary "This Is Hong Kong."

Hong Kong and Japan, between them, have swept practically all the major awards at this festival. Films from the Philippines, Indonesio, South Korea and Taiwan are apparently lagging behind in standards.

Crew Hazards Under Red Guns Set As Documentary for U's 'Secret Ways'

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

A bleak, six-minute untitled documentary film showing the communist menace encountered by the crew of Richard Widmark's recently completed "The Secret Ways," for Universal release, is ready for Free World distribution to prime the pub campaign.

Release of Widmark's indie pic under his Health Productions banner is skedded for May. Pic was shot in the border zone of Austria, within feet of the Red-Hungary line. Process shots were made in London.

"Much of the filming was done directly under the guns of communist guards only yards away, and a crewman was shot at on several occasions," according to Euan Lloyd, assistant to the producer.

The documentary was secretly made by Lloyd without knowledge of Red sentries, and required risk of life and the bribing of a Hungarian police officer, he said.

The new Widmark starrer, second under Health banner, is "anti-communist in nature" and costars German actress Sonja Ziemann, who will participate with Lloyd and Widmark in the international pub campaign. Director Phil Karlson overseered the $1,000,000 production from the novel by Alistair MacLeab.

As part of the exploitation campaign, the short documentary is to be made available to TV stations and civic groups here and abroad.

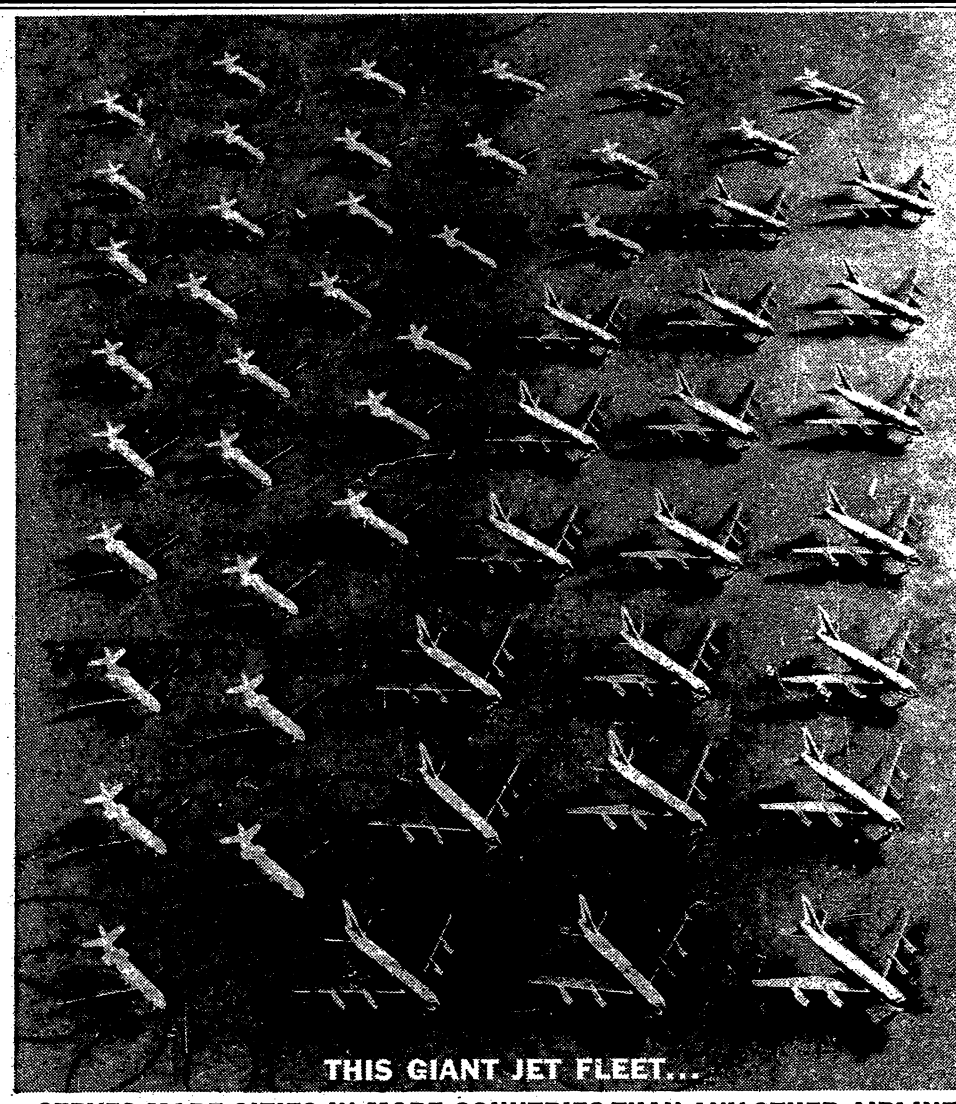
in this move, but the Russo bloc countries are sending pix and paying the tax even though they get smaller rental fees than western countries.

Tunisian Info Minister Mohamed Masmoudi was recently in France and tried to iron out matters with local film people and governmental reps. So far, no decision has been reached.

Motion Picture Export Assn. Paris rep Fred Gronich and MPA veepee Ralph Hetzel are on a reconnoitering African trip at present and may look in on the Tunisian problem before coming back next month. A recent meeting of film distribs of North Africa in Algiers voted to stand with the U.S., France and Britain on the Tunisian problem and decided to stop selling pix there until it was settled.



SERVES MORE CITIES IN MORE COUNTRIES THAN ANY OTHER AIRLINE

53 pure jets! This is the giant Air France Jet fleet. 20 Boeing 707 Intercontinental Jets—more American-built Boeing 707 Jets, in fact, than any other European airline. And 33 medium-range Caravelle Jets. The Caravelle is the jet Air France pioneered so successfully.

Already well over one million people have flown Air France Jets. For Air France Jets fly around the world. Air France Boeing 707 Jets fly direct to Europe from New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Montreal, Anchorage and Mexico City. Air France Boeing 707 Jets also provide swift giant steps from Europe to South America, Africa and the Far East. And the outstanding Air France Caravelle Jets serve 42 cities in Europe, North Africa and the Middle East.

The pilots who fly Boeing 707 Jets are as remarkable as the jets they fly—6,000,000-mile-experienced veterans. No other airline in the world has higher standards for flight personnel. Small wonder that Air France, with a 42-year record of flying experience and service, is the world's largest airline.

scripts for the digestion of a healthy nation.

Apparently not too many Americans actually favor censorship. A multiplying number do favor classification, separating adults from children. But even beyond these questions there is the nostalgia for healthy-mindedness, an old American trait, and with it a distaste for an excess of Freud, Krafft-Ebing and Faulkner influences in screen material.

Are a lot of Americans yearning for experiences to recall and revive their folk past? There is some evidence that this is the case. Affirmative attitudes toward life itself gets lost in a flood of sensational kicks angles. How many dope addicts make a cycle? When is the novelty of the switch-blade dramatically exhausted? Does sex have no "boot" to the film-going public except way-out in the corn crib?

Taboo-Breakers

Whether it's the European producers who are giving the Americans bad habits of emulation, or whether the present tendencies to break taboo almost for the sake of doing so, a lot of Americans are aroused against "amoral" example.

The literary fashion for some time has produced a flood of more or less charming heels, incurable rebels, indiscriminate killers and fornicators, reeking of self-pity, mother-loathing and irresponsibility. It is hardly surprising that a reaction develops. In its extreme form the reaction is expressed in a book like Richard La Piere's recent "The Freudian Ethic" attacking a general moral softness in America and refusal to punish evildoers on the grounds of their sickness.

Men in power positions, not excluding the Pentagon, worry quite seriously whether a self-pitying and self-indulging youth would pay the terrible price in a shooting showdown with Communism. If that sounds extreme, they invariably cite the lesson of 1940 when vice-cynical Europe proved a pushover for Hitler. True, many young men are enraged by this argument, despising the implication that they must keep physically fit to qualify as prime-quality cannon fodder. In this connection, however, President Kennedy and Health Secretary Abe Ribicoff are clearly on the side of the worryers.

To mention the foregoing "side-issue" is again to emphasize the obvious: there is a lot more underlying the debate on censorship and classification than is usually stated out loud.

As commonly interpreted censorship solves nothing and represents the primitive parochial mentality accepting a counsel of frustration, because unable to articulate public opinion otherwise. Moreover the existence of censorship is symptomatic of dictatorships, not democracies. For the artist censorship is limitation, and poison. But the right to write and the right to produce, acknowledged, is no answer to dubious commercial judgment and tongue-clucking artistic taste which drags in offensive scenes not integral to the story for supposed kicks.

Bluenose Blunders

Part of the reaction in the sticks is a wish to strike at the theme of sexual deviation, as implied in some features. It's true enough that clamor for "action" often comes from persons who have not seen but merely have heard about, given releases. Hence absurd grandstand plays by hick district attorneys. Melodramatic raids on drive-ins, sirens going full blast, result in the seizure of nudist colony footage, more fake than incitement and not half so sexy as the neighborhood swimming pool or dance hall. It's typical of unthinking reformer zeal that in groping to hit what they don't understand, sex diviation, they nab instead comparatively harmless health faddist film which some dollar-chasing operator is palming off as anything but the travelog bore it frequently is. Awarness of such clumsy prosecutions makes sober citizens reluctant to impose issues of moral discrimination on rural sheriffs or city cops. It confuses them.

The idiocies of censorship are well known—as per the six red-faced widows who decided in Chicago or the alderman's wife who is the sole judge in Atlanta of what scenes, ideas or lines grown-up Atlantans may see or hear. The certainty of Memphis preachers yipping at the heels of the film industry, usually sight unseen so far as the denounced product goes, is altogether familiar to readers of this periodical. But the force and persistence of public clamor cannot be dismissed on these grounds alone. Nor discounted because local viewers-with-alarms are often caught blindly obedient to mimeographed instructions from national headquarters. This is the standard operating procedure of the modern pressure group and part of our democracy.

Reader's Digest Blast

Manhattan film trade reaction divided last week following publication by the Reader's Digest of a lead article by Don Wharton, a staff editor, captioned, "How To Stop The Movies Sickening Exploitation of Sex."

Some showmen shrugged off the blast as only a clever rewrite job of little original content, relying upon quotations from critics, lifted blurbs from sexploitation come-on outside the theatres and parrotting institutionalized attacks on "adult" themes.

Other showmen, however, were gravely disturbed, citing the 14,000,000 circulation of the Digest. On top of many other evidences of resentment around the land this was a blow to the solar plexus. The one satisfaction was the Digest's refraining from the advocacy of official censorship by states and municipalities.

Remember Plug-Uglies

Oldtimers recalling that the Digest had repeatedly led massed assaults upon radio's and television's "plug-uglies" asked, sardonically, if advertising copy on the air had been reformed? It was not a question that could be patly answered. The implication was that the exploitation of sex on the screen, as in perfume ads or on bathing beaches could be expected to continue.

The Digest's descriptive word "sickening" expressed a dangerous point of revulsion, declared some showmen, and must be respected. It was not sex alone that was causing the outcries but a rash of diseased characters, bankrupts, weaklings with rampant vices. Producers had succumbed to a dubious conviction that boxoffice survival depended upon dope, deviation and decadence. This "kick" had gone too far.

The film industry has, of course, often practiced self-imitation-unto-satiety. A cycle of scripts about brutality in military schools broke out one season. Another season it was the fashion to slap women around following the sensation of James Cagney letting his cinematic sweetheart have a grapefruit in the kisser.

20th-SPG Hassling Over Letout of 12-Man Art Dept.

Reps of 20th-Fox and Screen Publicists Guild meet today (Wed.) in New York to discuss projected firing of 20th's 12-man art department. Management wrote the Guild Monday (27) that it was "contemplating" the transfer of its art department duties to outside jobbers. Under the terms of company's current contract with the SPG, company must give 90 days' notice of any such move.

Union reps find the 90-day notice at this time somewhat hard to understand, since current contract expires April 15, and, in fact, negotiations have just been started for a new contract. Union reps obviously intend to fight for continuance of the 20th artists' status quo as part of the negotiations, and say they will stage a walkout—of both publicists and artists—to make their point.

It's also suggested in some quarters that the 20th notice to the artists may be principally a threat to strengthen company's hand in the present negotiations. During last year's negotiations, there were rumors—but no letters—that the company was planning to farm out its publicity work.

At present time, Warner Bros. is the only major company that has its art work done on the outside.

tential borrower balks at the premium tariff. Reported pitch was that the homeoffices who set the prices ought to become realistic and work among themselves on setting up some sort of price-scale formula.

This, it was said, could serve to help build new public acceptance of tyro performers through more exposure and could work to the benefit of all studios.

Fred Metzler, treasurer of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences, discussed the Acad's finances and indications were that the MPAA board will continue to provide support. But here again no action was taken.

Perlberg was appointed to the Production Code's self-regulation committee, joining Johnston, Paramount's Barney Balaban, Universal's John O'Connor and Columbia's Abe Schneider. This group reviews any proposed changes in the Code before they're passed on to the full board.

Sidney Raises 'Nationalism' Defense; Foreign Producers Real Culprits, Abetted by American Critics

By BILL ORNSTEIN

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Claiming Hollywood is taking the rap for European sex pix imported by distributors and shown by exhibitors not bound by the Motion Picture Code Administration, Columbia Pictures producer George Sidney declared here the time may very well be at hand for a re-examination and overhauling of rules and regulations governing production in this country.

"If the Code is applicable to U. S. citizens, it should also be enforced for non-citizens," meaning foreign producers who sell their wares here," he expounded.

Enraged over what producers of other countries inject into their films that would be taboo here, Sidney takes exception to men who make pix outside this country and can do anything in the films as long as they are entertainingly. This is wrong and when this condition continues, "We do not have a Johnston Office."

Col producer feels every pic brought into this country should be passed by Administration Code for seal. "We are torn between two poles when critics say foreign films have real life stuff and we don't have it," Sidney believes.

"The MPAA should be more strong. Why only censor Hollywood pictures and not Europe or other countries? This kind of stuff encourages a lot of fellows to make a fast buck with sex films. If they can make these pictures and get away with them, why not we? There should be equality for everybody. There should be no division. If we don't have a uniform understanding we will have censorship in every hamlet in the country and then really have a problem."

One avenue of relief would be exhibitors acting as their own censors on films, Sidney contends. "But for us to be criticized by the press as not making films to life in face of sex pix imported, it's about time something was done about it."

Allied States Board Date Permits Attendance At MPAA and COMPO

Detroit, Feb. 28.

The regular spring board meeting of Allied States Assn., will be held in Manhattan April 11-12, it's disclosed by Ben Marcus, Allied's chairman of the board.

Marcus noted that the dates were selected so that Allied leaders could attend a COMPO executive committee meeting and the Eric Johnston testimonial dinner while they are in town.

Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey will be hosts for this meeting.

LEGION DATA REFUTES GEORGE SIDNEY CREDO

If the Legion of Decency ratings are any criterion, foreign films would not seem to be too much worse, morally speaking, than the domestic product. (See George Sidney's views in adjoining column.)

The Roman Catholic reviewing group's annual report shows that in the period from Oct. 1, 1959 to Sept. 30, 1960, the LOD gave the Class C (condemned) rating to three domestic (1.35% of the 222 domestic films reviewed) compared with five foreign (9.43% of the 53 foreign films reviewed). That's a difference of two pix.

Percentage-wise, the domestic product was even more offensive than the foreign product in the Class B (morally objectionable in part for all) rating. Only 18.87% of the foreign total fell into this category, while 24.33 of the domestic pix were Class B.

Of the major U. S. distribs, 20th-Fox and United Artists tied with having the most pix rated B by the Legion. Both came up with 12. 20th, however, also released the most films rated A-1 (morally unobjectionable for general patronage)—19, followed by Columbia with 15. Perhaps largely for the reason that it distributed more films during the period than any other major, 20th also had the most films in the A-III category (morally unobjectionable for adults)—10 pix.

Twist in Censoring Puts 'Never on Sunday' Off Limits Save One House

Memphis, Feb 28

This time Mrs. Judson McKellar, head of this town's censor board, has "greenlighted" the Greek prostitute comedy "Never on Sunday" to be shown at the Guild Theatre "but not anywhere else."

"Personally the film glorified prostitution more than 'Go Naked in the World' (this pic drew scores of protests here recently) and the members and myself felt it should only play the Guild," she added. The Guild in mid-town here limits attendance to 16 and over.

A staff member of the local UA office here, distribs of "Never," said it would contact Lopert Pictures in New York and see if the importers of the film "would agree with the Memphis censor board's conditions."

Sensitive About Yanking of 'Porgy'

Atlanta Journal Editorializes About Goldwyn Denying Film to Segregated Audiences

Atlanta, Feb. 28.

John and Ruth Carter, owners and operators of Fine Art Cinema, booked Samuel Goldwyn's "Porgy and Bess" released story to newspapers, and advertised the forthcoming engagement. Then they had to backtrack when Goldwyn withdrew George Gershwin folk opera from circulation in South.

Many were disappointed and voiced their disapproval, a lot of them thinking that pic had run into censorship trouble because of its all-Negro cast. To set the record straight, Atlanta Journal Friday (24) editorialized on subject under heading: "Banned in Atlanta." Editorial read:

"As one might expect, the film industry is a leading critic of the practice of movie censorship. It is ironical then that a film producer, not our censor, is responsible for preventing the showing of an American musical classic here.

"Producer Sam Goldwyn has cancelled Southern engagements of 'Porgy and Bess,' declaring that he did not want the film to contribute to racial tension in the South. This was extraordinary news to those who know this folk opera and disappointing to those looking forward to seeing it on the screen.

"'Porgy and Bess' has no racial theme, as such. It is George Gershwin's musical adaptation of DuBose Heyward's literary classic, set on Charleston's waterfront. It has an all-Negro cast and it was picketed in Chapel Hill because Negroes were excluded from the audience.

"For a film that is neither controversial nor inflammatory in itself, the studio's action looks like excessive timidity or excellent press agentry. Presenting 'Porgy and Bess' for a limited engagement would probably be child's play compared to operating a lunch counter in the South these days.

"Let there be no confusion as to who banned this one."

Foes Cry 'Fake' But Toll Gets Test

FCC Declines Pre-Judgment of Sincerity and Showmanship But Promises Close Scrutiny of Hartford's Phonevision Trial

By JAY LEWIS

Washington, Feb. 28.

RKO General has received the formal, unanimous okay of the Federal Communications Commission for its pioneer trial of pay television in Hartford. It's America's first commercial over-the-air pay-tv venture. Fate of large-scale tollvision in this nation could hang on the results.

FCC's decision follows years of vacillation, intense pressures—both from Congress and affected entertainment business interests—voluminous studies and drawn-out hearings.

Report and decision giving RKO the go-ahead represents a slap at the exhibitor interests who fought the application at every turn. Nearly every argument and objection posed by exhibitor attorney Marcus Cohn was pointedly demolished by the Commission.

The Hartford trial, and others which may be authorized later, will serve as a prototype from which FCC will garner information needed for its ultimate decision as to whether full-blown nation-wide tollvision should be given the greenlight. Commission approval of the RKO application, taken by the five Commissioners present (Robert E. Lee was absent), was made in accord with FCC's Third Report on pay-see which set forth the idea of trial operations under fairly elaborate conditions.

Six Months Deadline

RKO was given six months (as of Feb. 24) to start its Hartford operations, but, if good cause can be shown, FCC said it will grant an extension. The FCC order specified that the three-year period should begin with the first subscription program, and renewal of RKO's license was strictly up to the Commission and not a matter of vested right.

RKO will operate through its wholly owned subsidiary, Hartford Phonevision, licensee of WHCT, Channel 18, Hartford UHFer. Zenith and its subsid, Teco, will be partners. Zenith's phonevision system — using scrambled signals and decoders installed on sets of subscribers — will be used. Teco is charged primarily with furnishing programming.

According to RKO's testimony during the hearings before the Commission last fall, so-called "box-office," i.e., first-run feature films supplemented by legit plays, ballet and sports events, will dominate subscription fare. Advertising programs will be telecast during non-subscription operating hours of WHCT.

Losses At Outset

RKO prexy Thomas O'Neil said he expects to lose over $1,000,000 during the trial period, but voiced hope profits would be forthcoming after the third year—if FCC then grants a renewal.

After reciting RKO's proposals, FCC said simply that they jibed sufficiently with the Third Report, and "the Commission concluded that grant of the proposed trial operation would serve the public interest."

FCC knocked down opposition arguments, as voiced by Cohn primarily one by one. It expressed confidence that the RKO application met the requisite conditions as follows:

—"We cannot foresee any appreciable adverse effect on the 'free' television services available in the Hartford area as result of (the proposed trial)." In line with the Third Report, one of the issues laid down for determination in the Hartford proceeding was whether free tv would suffer.

—"FCC was satisfied the Third Report's requirement that all data from the trial be furnished the Commission would be fulfilled despite RKO's plea that info valuable to rivals be kept confidential. It termed Cohn's objection on this score "speculative and premature at best."

Close Scrutiny, Yes—

—In one of the few concessions to Cohn, FCC agreed that "close scrutiny" is warranted of the roles of Zenith and Teco. The Third Report edicts that Hartford Phonevision, as the licensee, have unrestricted freedom over programming and charges to subscribers. Although contracts between RKO, Hartford Phonevision, Teco and Zenith grant such freedom, Cohn contended they amounted only to "words."

—RKO, FCC said, has "satisfactorily shown that most of the conventional programs replaced by subscription have counterparts at some time on other area stations. Any losses of regular WHCT programming as a result of the tollvision operation "cannot be held to outweigh the distinct advantage of an actual trial of subscription tv," Commission averred. One of the hearing issues—harped on by Cohn was whether pay-tv would deprive Hartford viewers of programs which would otherwise be available.

—In a major view of confidence for RKO, Commission termed "workable" the company's expressed policy of offering toll programs of "box-office" quality even if they were tendered at prices feasible for commercial outlets in Hartford. "We are not unmindful of (Cohn's) charge that the conventional service might be unable to improve its programming with new material since a program supplier would most likely offer such new matter to subscription tv first," the report said.

Woe-Peddling

—As for arguments raised by National Assn. of Broadcasters and Cohn that regular advertising-supported tv outlets in Hartford would suffer because of Phonevision (in violation to the Third Report), FCC said:

"Expert testimony on this issue established one point convincingly; without experience in the field, economic impact is normally very difficult to predict."

FCC added: "Perhaps more significant than all the guesswork . . . is fact that the Hartford area tv stations did not seek to become parties to this proceeding."

—As for allegations by Cohn that testimony of RKO, Zenith and Teco could not be trusted, the report said: "We find charges to be without merit."

—In answer to Cohn's point that the RKO proposals were counter to the Supreme Court's edict in the Paramount case, Commission declared that Cohn failed to demonstrate this allegation. Noting Cohn's seizure on RKO's statement its operation amounted only to "one more theatre" in Hartford, FCC said: "We need not determine at this time whether this is a 'theatre' within the meaning of Paramount decision, for even assuming that it is, it is our opinion that RKO's proposal . . . does not violate the edict and does not tend toward monopoly or unreasonable restraint of trade which was subject of that (Paramount) proceeding."

—FCC torpedoed Cohn's argument RKO's programming would ignore local programming needs. It said: "Any concern we may have had with respect to (Cohn's charge that no survey was made of community programming needs) is dispelled by (RKO's) uncontradicted proposal to seek advice of a representative group of Hartford area residents on its subscription programming. This so-called 'Committee of 400' should provide an acceptable cross-section of viewers and (the) proposal is commendable in this respect."

Various conditions which the Broadcast Bureau suggested accompany the trial grant were, for the most part, not included in FCC's report and order. Most of them, FCC said, were in force by implication. However, the report did state Commission's intention to require RKO to maintain complete files on the operation for FCC's inspection. Although it wasn't laid down as a condition, as urged by Broadcast Bureau, FCC said it wanted to "encourage" RKO to make a survey of viewer desires "since it would appear, potentially at least, to be useful to (RKO) and the Commission, and could make the trial more meaningful for our purposes."

In conclusion, the report said: "We have considered the testimony and other evidence of record, and the proposed finding of fact and conclusions of law by (RKO and the other parties), and have concluded that RKO has complied with the Third Report, insofar as can be ascertained at this stage; that adverse effect on conventional tv cannot be expected to occur, and that RKO can be expected to retain full freedom of discretion to meet its responsibilities as a licensee to the Commission.'

Kansas City, Feb. 28.

Motion Picture Investors Inc., will render a major report to exhibs at the fourth Show-A-Rama to be held March 7-9 at the Hotel Continental here. The report has two major projects, according to word from Walter Reade Jr., MPI president.

Expected to be of greatest concern to the gathered exhibs is the word about the re-issue of "Friendly Persuasion" and "Wichita." Pair of features is being packaged with new ads and released March 22 on a plains area premiere. This will be the second saturation plan for exhibs in one month, Universal's "Great Imposter" getting the heavy treatment this week.

Other project includes details on the TOA-sponsored production of Patsy-America's "The Deadly Companions" and the financial interest of MPI. Footed on the film, now in production, already has been upped from $1 million to $1-150,000, Reade reports.

These plans are in line with MPI's avowed goal of providing exhibs with additional pictures against the current feature shortages. Projects are evidence of MPI's aims to move to serve exhibs, Reade said.

Meanwhile Show-A-Rama hopes to exceed all prior exhib attendance. Booth spaces are virtually filled and registrations already indicate attendance will run more than a dozen states. Last year's big convention passed the 700 mark.

Reed Scrams 'Mutiny'

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Carol Reed has ankled direction of Metro's "Mutiny on Bounty." He calls parting amicable.

Disharmony has been gathering past several months, over Reed's difference of opinion on treatment with studio head Sol Siegel and producer Aaron Rosenberg.

METRO IN FOUR-FILM DEAL WITH CINERAMA

Metro and Cinerama will be partnered in four productions in the Cinerama process, first of which, "How the West Was won" is scheduled to roll in May and will require eight months to a year to complete. M-G and Cinerama participate equally in the deal, which originally was presumed to cover only one film.

Some time ago Cinerama shifted all its facilities from Oyster Bay, N. Y., to Hollywood where its technical experts under v.p. Tom Conroy have been working in collaboration with M-G. Significant improvement in the process have resulted from a year of experiments.

St. John's Hospital, Santa Monica, Calif., whose auxiliary committee is headed by Irene Dunne, and M-G are arranging for a number of star appearances in "West," and for this the hospital will have a financial participation. Film is figured to cost $10,000,000.

Meanwhile, the number of Cinerama theatres is on the increase, to the extent that 109 will be available around the world when "West" is ready. Presently there are 15 Cinerama domestic runs, with seven more to open this month. Operating overseas are 23 houses, with four more set for opening.

Daily Blackout Forces Radio-TV Campaign For 'Look in Any Window'

Minneapolis, Feb. 28.

Minnesota Amusement Co. (Paramount) was forced to resort almost entirely to a radio-tv ad campaign for "Look in Any Window" (AA), current Paul Anka starrer, when the John Cowles-owned Minneapolis Star and Tribune, this city's only dailies, rejected virtually all ads for the film.

Ev Seibel, advertising director, said that the papers bluepenciled every blurb submitted to them. "We finally sent them the distributor's press sheet, and they marked everything off as unacceptable," Seibel said.

"They told us, in effect, that the entire advertising campaign was unacceptable and suggested we recommend to Allied Artists that they make a new press book with new ads to sell the picture."

Stand was the strongest the Star and Tribune have taken on any film exhibited by the AB-PT unit. In the past, the papers have nixed one or two ads but never on a wholesale basis as with "Look in Any Window." Paper's position may have been largely justifiable, an MAC spokesman admitted, inasmuch as ad stills showed film's principals skimpily clad and in poses of questionable taste.

Paul Anka As A Peeper

AA execs in Manhattan were disinclined to talk about the reasons the ad layouts had been found objectionable by Star-Tribune. Picture stars young singer Paul Anka as a "peeping Tom." All ad material, of course, was previously passed by the Motion Picture Assn. of America's Ad Code Administration.

Rubine Wings O'Seas

Irving Rubine, v.p. of Carl Foreman's High Road Productions, left Manhattan Monday (27) for confabs with Foreman in London on "Guns of Navarone."

Then to Paris, Rome and Athens.

'YOU'RE ONLY AS GOOD AS 8:30'

There's Trouble in Sudsville

Fans of the tv soapers have never squawked when their heroines have had one foot in the grave—a situation that's like as not in the perilous careers of the daytime damsels. But both feet straight-up that's something else.

Last week Procter & Gamble and agency Benton & Bowles, producers of the mighty meller CBS-TV morning strip, "Edge of Night," summarily knocked off actress Teal Ames, who's had the lead for five years. The fictional demise of Miss Ames, according to a web spokesman, touched off a national shockwave of resentment that set a new voltage high for sudsville.

By standards of "Edge," where supporting cast members have preceded Miss Ames to final glory (or perdition) via deadly weapon, choking, or sundry homicidal mayhem, the leading lady was allowed to chuck the coil with sweet dignity. She was struck down by a car on Friday (17), and gently promoted to final reward three episodes later.

The passing of Miss Ames was worked out a few months ago when the actress gave notice that she wanted out in order to concentrate on legit thesping. P&G and B&B execs figured a new face would be too absurd because of Miss Teals long association with the role.

Even with the extended preparations, the extraordinary lovalty of the glycerene buffs to Miss Teal was a surprise. Stations down the CBS line got immediate and heavy phone and letter response to the death scene and passed the word along to the web.

Finally, late last week the corpse was revived for a 10-city phone-interview hookup with newspaper tv columnists, and at least one beeper-phone interview as set up. KCMO-TV, Kansas City, planned to ease viewer minds with the voice of Miss Teal backed by still photos of the star.

Meanwhile, Benton & Bowles was preparing a letter for client P&G to send out when the complaints start rolling in. The "official" missive will explain in detail as to how the sponsor believes in reality in its video dramas, and there was no other way out.

'Bonanza' A Bonanza Without Kids?

Sunday 9 to 10 Slotting for Chevy Seen Invited Calculated Risk

Although "Bonanza" has proved to be one of NBC's toprated shows, winding up in the Top 20 in virtually every Nielsen report, the network's decision to shift the western to Sundays at 9 as Chevy's replacement for Dinah Shore is not without its risks.

Key question posed by the shift is how much the moppet audience has to do with the show's success. Insiders think the answer is "plenty," and figure that a 9 to 10 Sunday exposure, with school the following day, could damage the show's audience pull. Whether the adults will pick up where the kids leave off is the poser.

It's no secret that when NBC laid out the show, the network and producer David Dortort planned a "something for everybody" approach in the casting and format, what with Lorne Greene to appeal to the older age groups, Pernell Roberts and Michael Landon to the housewives, and Dan Blocker to the kids. But by far the most popular of the quartet of leads has been Blocker, a pretty good indication of the show's moppet pull.

The American Research Bureau's audience composition breakdowns also support the thesis. Recent viewers-per-set breakdown on the show by male and female show that kids 6-12 form the second highest viewing bracket, and that

All-American Gab

Until New York Giant football star Frank Gifford joined WCBS, N.Y., as its sportscaster Monday (27), station staffer Hal Simms had been temporarily holding down the sports spot. Gifford, of course, is an All-American, All-Pro gridder.

Simms only claim to sports fame, on the other hand, was that he had managed to make his high school chess team.

CBS-TV Mulling Pair of Cartoons Vs. 'Wagon Train'

CBS-TV is considering a pair of cartoon shows as the way to compete against "Wagon Train" on Wednesdays at 7:30. The cartoon pairing, both off the Format Films (group that splintered off from UPA some years ago) drawingboards, is "Alvin and the Chipmunks" and "The Shrimp."

"Alvin," of course, is based on the Ross Bagdasarian characters he created a couple of years back on disks and which subsequently became a big source of merchandising coin as well as disk bestsellers. "The Shrimp" is based on the Saturday Evening Post cartoon character.

Network hasn't made a final decision on the two shows, principally because it's still unsure on whether to go with half-hours or an hour against "Wagon Train." Decision should be made in about a week, after program v.p. Oscar Katz returns from the Coast and a look at the hourlong pilots being filmed for the network. Also, if the half-hour route is picked, while "Alvin" seems the choice for 7:30, the network is considering its "Oh Those Bells" comedy series as an alternative choice for 8 to 8:30.

Katz' Coast jaunt—he planed out over the weekend—was primarily to observe the progress on several hourlong pilots in production, since the only holes in the network's fall schedule are those periods being set aside for hour shows, principally Wednesday 8:30 to 9:30 (as well as the possibility of

Bristol-Myers Buys '3 Wishes'

Bristol-Myers has started its big moves for next season, too. Sponsor, at the same time that it locked in "Top Cat" on ABC-TV (see separate story), also decided to take Fridays-at-8 on NBC-TV for a new half-hour.

Stanza is "Three Wishes," a Don Sharpe telefilm series, believed to be in the love story vein. It looked last week as if "Wishes" wouldn't be berthed anywhere in the coming tv season, because after a turndown by CBS-TV, ABC-TV withdrew Tuesday at 8 as a potential slot for the Bristol-Myers show, and gave it to "Bachelor Father," which is shifting in '61-'62 from NBC-TV.

What made it seem even dimmer for the stanza's chances was that, along the way, NBC-TV also turned it down, but for another time period.

HOTTEST SLOT IN 3-WEB STRATEGY

By GEORGE ROSEN

"What have we got 8:30 to 9 p.m.?" pretty much sums up the current strategy around the three tv networks in setting their program schedules for next season. It's the hot half-hour in tv, with some of the bitterest jockeying in network-client-talent relations involving the disposition of the time slot in the upcoming '61-'62 program sweepstakes.

Time was when resolving the 7:30 to 8:30 cross-the-board periods occupied top priority among the program braintrusters, since these were the crucial lead-in segments for the rest of the evening. But once having put their 7:30 to 8:30 hours in order, the webs soon discovered that their respective evenings were falling apart at the seams with weak 8:30 shows.

NBC-TV thought it was off to the Friday night races this season when, in cahoots with Westinghouse, it made the mistake of slotting the Nanette Fabray vidfilm comedy series at 8:30. It not only weakened the whole Friday night structure but may cost NBC some $5,000,000 in time-program billings, since Westinghouse may blow the half-hour. What makes it doubly tough is that NBC tried for years to romance Westinghouse billings; finally succeeded after more than a decade of CBS identification. Today the Westinghouse biz is up for grabs.

The Friday 8:30-9 calamity can be translated over many another evening, all networks.

The half-hour "Wells Fargo" hardly helped the NBC Monday night cause. To bolster Monday, NBC is installing "Price Is Right" in the time period next season.

This leaves Wednesday 8:30 open on NBC—by all odds the choicest half-hour time slot in all nighttime video, thanks to its post-"Wagon Train" position. Sponsors are clamoring for it; NBC is being very choosy. It's already provoked intra-product fussing and feuding. Procter & Gamble made an allout pitch for the time in which to install the new Nat Hiken comedy series. But when Lever Bros., which has been sponsoring "Price Is Right" in the period, tentatively agreed to switch over to Monday 8:30 (it has until tomorrow to either okay or reject its Wed. heave) along with it went the proviso that no rival product —meaning P & G—would get the Wed. slot. Had NBC agreed to the installation of the Hiken series for P & G, it would have been tantamount to an invitation for Lever to blow some $25,000,000 in NBC billings.

So, in turn, P & G and Hiken are moving into the Sunday 8:30 NBC time, once more getting NBC off the hook on a currently weak 8:30 entry—the Tab Hunter Show. Latter disappears from the spectrum at the end of the season.

ABC-TV is mulling a whole new deal for Sunday night, from the bumping of "Maverick" (7:30 to 8:30) right on through. But, recognizing that 7:30 to 8:30 is anybody's victory in the hot three-web Sunday rivalry (with Disney as the formidable NBC competition) Ollie Treyz is making dead certain that the 8:30 to 9 entry comes out a miniature blockbuster. To him

DODGE CANCELLING ABC-TV WELK SHOW

After six seasons, Dodge is quitting Lawrence Welk. Sponsor, it's said, may dispose of its alternate-week hour coin from Welk in other programmatic ways at ABC. Network is showing it other product, but there is no decision.

ABC says it intends keeping Welk on into '61-'62. Bandleader, who does a Saturday 9-10 p.m. stanza from the Coast, still has an ABC-TV contract into next season, despite the Dodge $4,000,000 defection.

NBC-TV's $40,000,000 Sunday Nite Windfall With RCA, Kodak, P&G, Chevy, DuPont Sponsorship Parlay

This time last year (even later), NBC-TV couldn't legitimately count much more than the Dinah Shore hour for Chevy as Sunday night business, but suddenly the Sabbath has showered the network with a blessing of nearly $40,000,000 for next season.

Disney seems to have helped satisfy the web's weekend prayers. Expensive 7:30-8:30 stanza has already returned a half-sale to RCA, the NBC parent. Additionally, Eastman-Kodak, apparently excited by the prospects of tying up with a color film show by Disney, is in for the remaining half.

Procter & Gamble, holding back for some days until it got the slot it wanted, signed with NBC-TV for Sundays from 8:30 to 9 p.m., in which the sponsor will put the new situation comedy by Nat Hiken called "Snow Whites."

Then there's Chevrolet, which will shed Dinah at the close of this semester, again picking up the 9-10 p.m. Sunday time for "Bonanaza." From 10 to 11, it's "DuPont Show of the Week."

Disney sponsors will be paying about $12,000,000 per annum, P&G (including cost of "Snow Whites") about $4,275,000, Chevy between $10,000,000 and $11,000,000 for "Bonanza" and DuPont $12,000,000 to $12,500,000 for its potpourri of pubaffairs, dramas and musicals. That's a grand total of at least $38,500,000.

Three's still more Sunday money in the offing: NBC wants to fill 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. as a leadin for Disney.

Tab Hunter's current 8:30-9 Sunday stanza is dead next season, but the network is still looking around its schedule other nights to find a spot for the Rexall-bankrolled "National Velvet," seen at 8 p.m. this season. One of the chief reasons (apart from whatever program value the half-hour has) that NBC doesn't want to relinquish "Velvet" is that it pays a hefty sum into the web's merchandising coffers on royalty items like books, clothes, etc.

JFK's Clean Sweep

NBC News did the first of three studies on John F. Kennedy last night (Tues.), which Purex sponsored.

That was "JFK #1." "JFK #2" is to be sponsored March 11 by Procter & Gamble and "JFK #3," on July 4, is going to Lever.

Kodak to Disney, Exits Sullivan In Shift to Tint TV

Deal was finalized this week for Eastman Kodak to buy the Walt Disney Sunday tint series on NBC-TV (sharing the tab with RCA). The Rochester camera people will call it quits with the Ed Sullivan show on CBS. Obviously E-K can't sponsor both, since they run smack into one another between 8 and 8:30. In addition Kodak is pulling out of "Ozzie & Harriet" on ABC-TV.

Kodak has been happy with the Sullivan results, but it's just a case of embracing new program horizons, and particularly an area which will permit full exploitation of the Kodachrome product. Hence the Disney color series was figured as a natural.

J. Walter Thompson is the agency on the account.

ABC-TV LAUNCHING 'MID-DAY REPORT'

ABC-TV will launch its first regular daytime newscast next Monday (5) by shaving off the last five minutes of the cross-the-board stanza "About Faces" and inserting "Mid-Day Report." Program will be seen from 1:25 to 1:30 p.m., with correspondent Al Mann handling the on-the-air chores.

Mann has been a Chicago correspondent for ABC News, but he'll shift to N. Y. for the new stanza—"first of several proposed series of Monday-through-Friday, five-minute ABC News daytime telecasts," says the web. (ABC-TV is also planning some regular news shows on weekends.)

Susskind's 'Haunted' As Gleason Successor?

David Susskind's Talent Associates and CBS-TV are jointly developing a new half-hour mystery anthology titled "The Haunted" and being considered as a possibility to replace Jackie Gleason on Friday nights, effective March 31.

No final decision has been made on "Haunted" for the timeslot, although L&M, which sponsors Gleason, has been advised of the CBS-Susskind discussions. Series is to comprise offbeat yarns in the Roald Dahl manner, rather than ghost stories or straight whodunits.

Adler Helms KTLA-TV

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Seymour L. (Stretch) Adler has been named v.p. and general manager of KTLA-TV, station owned and operated by Paramount Pictures. He replaces Jim Schulke, resigned.

Adler joined Paramount Television Productions as director of national sales in October, '59. Adler previously headed both network and syndication sales for Official Films.

Dick Van Dyke's P&G Tues. Berth

Procter & Gamble has picked up weekly sponsorship of a new Dick Van Dyke comedy series, "Double Trouble," and has slotted it Tuesdays at 8 on CBS-TV, between "Gunsmoke" reruns and "Dobie Gillis."

Series is a Danny Thomas-Sheldon Leonard-Lou Edelman package, scripted by Carl Reiner. Show has a somewhat unusual background in that it was done as a pilot a year ago, with Reiner starring and scripting and Peter Lawford providing the financing. Pilot, which concerns the home life of a tv comedy writer, was then titled "Head of the Family."

The pilot was even shown on the air this past summer on CBS-TV, but appeared headed for limbo. Then Thomas and Leonard got hold of it, sat down with Reiner on a new approach, and finally got Van Dyke for the lead. Out of some 20 scripts Reiner had written, they salvaged several and dovetailed them to the new approach, as well, of course, as shooting a new pilot.

Deal cinches the Tuesday night lineup on CBS, which now has "Gunsmoke" as the 7:30 kickoff, "Double Trouble" at 8, "Dobie Gillis" at 8:30, Tom Ewell at 9, Red Skelton at 9:30 and Garry Moore at 10.

Court Upholds 'Magna Carta' For Performers in Tossing Out Saphier's Suit Vs. Allen's Mgr.

Agent James Saphier lost his lawsuit against Steve Allen's manager Jules L. Green and with the loss came a reaffirmation of a relatively untried rule by the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists called "12-B."

Judge Ritter of the N. Y. federal district court ruled recently that Saphier had no right to collect fees from Green, a former employee, because, in effect, the Green-Saphier alliance had long since ended.

Ritter hailed 12-B as a "Magna Carta for performers." In his decision, the judge said: the "Saphier contracts . . . contained the type of provision which AFTRA was striving to eliminate in contracts between entertainers and their agents."

Originally, agent Saphier had a three-year contract with Allen himself. But before its termination, he and Allen split and a "settlement" was made, ending Saphier's services, with Green quitting Saphier and joining Allen fulltime. Between the settlement and the contract termination, Allen made some multi-million dollar deals with NBC. Subsequently, Saphier brought an arbitration against the personality, seeking his fee for the post-settlement earnings of Allen, but he lost. Thereafter, he brought the lawsuit against Green on essentially the same grounds of his Allen arbitration. Suit was for over $500,000, according to one of the lawyers.

Ritter held that since Saphier, in accordance with the AFTRA rule, had no right to collect from Allen, he consequently did not have the right to collect anything from Green either.

Unless Saphier appeals to higher court and wins, the Ritter ruling last week is thought to establish firmly actor protection against, as the judge termed it, being "tied forever to a sort of serfdom and end up paying two full commissions or perhaps more than that to as many different agents."

In short, the precedental ruling by the U. S. District Court judge makes it illegal for an agent to write a contract with a talent that entitles him to fees beyond the termination of the pact. One exception is that the agent can continue collecting his stipend from a performer or writer, et al., if the latter is still making money from a specific deal negotiated during the valid period of an agent-talent contract—but he can never collect indiscriminately, that is, no coin for new jobs undertaken by a performer after his agent and he part ways.

Saphier was repped in court by lawyers Michael Halperin and Emil K. Ellis and Green's lawyer was Irving Cohen.

Sig Mickelson's Time Inc. Post

Sig Mickelson, who quit as prexy of CBS News in early February, has lighted at the Time Inc. broadcasting division. Reporting to Time veep Weston C Pullen Jr., the former network officer will "assume broad responsibilities for Time Inc. plans in the fields of international broadcasting and broadcast news."

Time's got a definite foreign broadcast itch, and one of the reasons for hiring Mickelson is that, as longtime CBS News chieftain, he developed widescale contacts abroad. Time board chairman Andrew Heskell is now [illegible] a six month world tour of Time-Life installations, and is exploring, says his corporation, "opportunities in the international field."

Mickelson will work closest, it appears, with Frederick S. Gilbert, general manager of the broadcast division.

It's probable, too, that Mickelson will spend some of his time before long supervising the operation of the recently-established N.Y. Broadcast news bureau (under Dick McCutchen, a former CBS writer) and the news bureau in Washington, both of which are meant as feeding points for Time's station chain.

Freed Exits CBS News To Helm Dave Garroway

Fred Freed has resigned from CBS News to join NBC-TV as producer on the Dave Garroway show. Freed, who's been a public affairs producer at CBS for the past five years, steps into his new post March 13.

He's succeeding Shad Northshield, who moved into the NBC pubaffairs setup to produce the "JFK #1" profile, as the Garroway producer. Northshield, coincidentally, is another ex-CBS pubaffairs staffer, having worked on "Adventure" and other stanzas with Freed under Irving Gitlin. Gitlin, of course, is now at NBC with several others of his old CBS staffers.

Freed, however, had an earlier NBC credit, as managing editor of the old "Home" show during the "Today"-"Home"-"Tonight" era, so that he's had experience in the participating program area at NBC. He left "Home" to work with Gitlin at CBS, where he produced some of the "Woman" stanzas, "The Last Word" and other shows. Freed's most recent effort was the Garry Moore pre-Election musical special, "The Right Man."

Scherick Tapped For a Key Sales Role at ABC-TV

Ed Scherick, until now the owner and operator of Sports Programs Inc. and, hence, the man virtually in charge of all ABC-TV's sports efforts this season, has become the new vicepresident in charge of sales for the network. He replaces Bill Mullen, who, high network sources say, will stay on in sales, probably as a trouble shooter.

Ollie Treyz, ABC-TV prexy, and Leonard Goldenson, topper of the American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres empire, had decided on Scherick some time ago, but the announcement of his appointment to the sales staff could not be made until last weekend, because it took a great deal of time arranging purchase of Sports Programs Inc. As of now, SPI is an owned subsidiary of AB-PT, but Scherick, except through his regular sales chores, will no longer be active in the sports department.

SPI had seemed to be functioning all along as a subsidiary of ABC. On contract, Scherick was devoting all his time to the network's programming.

Scherick, who began work immediately on Monday (27) morning, has been likened by high web brass to the "team's quarterback," with Mullen and another former sales chieftain, Slocum (Buzz) Chapin functioning as "halfbacks."

Speculation has already begun about Treyz's own intentions. He's always been his own sales "quarterback," with Mullen running interference. Question arising is whether Treyz will begin to devote more time to general administration and programming.

Offbeat Casting

When Ollie Treyz, ABC-TV prexy, told his staff Saturday (25) morning that Edgar (Ed) Jay Scherick was the network's new sales topper, he performed his third major piece of offbeat casting in as many years.

Scherick, not without sales experience, is still essentially a sports producer. Treyz had previously taken Tom Moore from sales and made him program veep and Julie Barnathan from research and made him station relations chief.

'CBS Reports' Locked In

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

In fairness to Mr. Paley, to the CBS News Executive Committee, to the CBS Television Network, to those who are trying to find sponsors, to Fred Friendly and his great team and to me, let's end the speculation once and for all about the future of "CBS Reports" and "Face the Nation" for the 1961-62 season.

"When the curtain goes up on the 61-62 season in September" to use your phrase, Thursday 10-11 p.m. will be occupied by "CBS Reports" and by other programs produced by Fred Friendly and his team. This is definitely set. We may well be the only television network next season with a regularly scheduled full hour of informational public affairs programming in nighttime option time, week in week out, come hell or high water. Period!

Showdown Today (Wed.) On Capital Cities-Webs Eichmann Trial Coverage

This morning (Wed.) the three tv networks and Capital Cities Broadcasting, which made a deal with Israel to televise the Eichmann trial, are going to meet for what one network exec called "a fish or cut bait meeting." If negotiations break down today, the networks will most likely go directly to the Israeli government and ask for some kind of pool arrangement for their own tv coverage.

A couple of major issues remained this week. ABC-TV, CBS-TV and NBC-TV news departments want Capital Cities to put in writing that the chain broadcaster is merely serving as "the pool representative" of other broadcasters and not, as it apparently seeks to be, the sole tv agent for the Eichmann trial.

Webs are prepared to reiterate their offer of a $50,000 fee per web, but they want Capital to withdraw the demand that the daily feed (of 60 minutes) be limited to a 50-station lineup per network. ABC, CBS and NBC want to be able to use the tapes to be flown here from Israel on unlimited network hookups, if they can get them.

Some problems will occur surely if the networks decide not to go along with Capital, or visa versa. Israel, reportedly not willing to turn the trial into a "tv circus," particularly since the courtroom will be of limited size, might find it hard to arrange room for an extra set of pool cameras. Moreover, every nation with a tv station will probably start shooting for the honor of doing the pool work.

It's understood that Capital Cities has made a deal with BBC-TV that will pay the American chain $150,000 for the tv rights in England. Capital has also lined up some of the smaller indie U.S. stations for the taped coverage. Reason why the chain wants the webs to limit their web lineups for the news show is so that Capital can be assured of a reasonably sized syndication market.

CBS-TV, Affils Meet On Convention Plans

Board of directors of the CBS-TV Affiliates Assn. met with network brass Friday (24) in New York to set an agenda for the annual Affiliates convention in Gotham May 4-5 and to review current sales and program strategy.

Session, attended by CBS-TV prexy Jim Aubrey, sales administration v.p. Bill Hylan, program v.p. Oscar Katz, information services v.p. Jack Cowden and station relations brass headed by Bill Lodges and Carl Ward, also comprised something of a gripe session by affiliates, including some squawking on having been bypassed on recent decisions affecting affiliates. Richard Borel of WBNS-TV, Columbus, head of the affiliates' group, chaired the meeting.

The More Snow the More Viewing

Heavy winter snows brought television viewing way up during the last weeks of January and the first of February, the new Nielsen National Report for the two weeks ended Feb. 5 indicates. Average nighttime sets-in-use for the three networks from 6-11 during the two weeks rose to a 61.2% level, the equivalent of an average nighttime audience of 28,719,000 homes for all three webs.

As per the pattern all season, CBS-TV again took the honors for the Feb. 1 report, averaging out to a 21.9 rating and an average of 10,272,000 homes; ABC had a 20.2 rating, reaching an average of 9,496,000 homes; NBC ran last with 19.1 and 8,951,000 homes. Audiences for all three webs were up over a year ago at this time, and all but NBC were up over the previous Nielsen report—NBC's homes-reached were up but the rating was the same.

CBS pulled out six of the Top 10 and 12 of the Top 20; ABC had three out of 10 and five out of 20; NBC had one out of the Top 10 and three out of 20. In half-hour wins, CBS had 25, ABC 20 and NBC eight. CBS dominated five nights of the week, NBC took Wednesday and ABC grabbed Thursday.

On the multi-city Nielsens for the week ending Feb. 19, ABC-TV made it seven weeks in a row on average audience wins, copping a 20.4 rating. CBS was second with 19.0 and NBC third with 16.3. Of the 51 prime time half-hours, ABC scored 21 firsts, CBS had 19 and NBC registered with 11. ABC was in front Monday, Thursday and Friday; CBS took Tuesday, Saturday and Sunday and NBC grabbed Wednesday.

McPhail's 52-Week Sports Gleam For CBS-TV in Expanded Schedule

Now that the sports operation at CBS has become an operating department within the CBS-TV network, v.p. Bill MacPhail is setting his sights on a 52-weeks-a-year weekend sports schedule that embraces events on each and every Saturday as well as Sunday.

MacPhail & Co., under previous wing of CBS News, of which they were a department, had succeeded in programming year-round weekend sports on Sundays, but had huge gaps in the Saturday schedule, filled only during spring and summer by the limited "Baseball Game of the Week." Now, however, under the comparatively freer setup at the network, MacPhail is moving at full speed to sew up a complete year-round weekend package.

On the Sunday side, it's already done via pro football in the fall, the 13-week "Sunday Sports Spectacular" 90-minute series and the Sunday "Baseball Game of the Week," which segues right back into baseball.

On the Saturday front, the gaps are fall and winter. For fall, MacPhail is considering two choices, Canadian pro football, or if it can be worked out, a Sunday pro game not carried on the network to be taped and edited down to a 60- or 90-minute show the following Saturday. He's not happy about a six-day delay, but at the same time figures it's a game not seen by the fans and would help promote viewership for the next day live pick-ups. As for futures, there's a

Jo Dine to CBS News As Director of Info

Jo Dine has joined CBS News as director of information and special services. The yet publicist is exiting as eastern rep of the Pat McDermott flackery to take on the post, until now held by Mike Horton. Latter goes on "special assignment" for CBS News, nature of which isn't disclosed.

CBS marks Dine's second network affiliation. He'd been director of the press department at NBC in the early '50s, and subsequently was publicity boss for Ziv and partners in the company of Dine & Kalmus. He split from Alan Kalmus, who retained the firm, about a year ago.

Dine will report to CBS News prexy Dick Salant and v.p. Blair Clark, and will act as liaison for the news operation with the press info departments of CBS-TV, CBS Radio and the CBS Television Stations division.

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Pet Milk is taking its $4,000,000 out of tv and scattering it to other media. Dropped next week will be half of Red Skelton, ending an association of seven years. Johnson wax, as full share alternate, will assume the entire tab for rest of the season. A soaper, "Edge of Night," also loses the Pet bankrolling.

Pet's pullout of network tv is in line with the company's new policy to abandon national advertising. Some of the budget will be used for radio and tv spots. Pet officials say there was no dissatisfaction with the Skelton show or its ratings and that its sales have increased since the association but still haven't caught up with its chief competitor in the field, Carnation.

Colgate Exits 'Eileen'

Colgate has done an about-face and will cancel "My Sister Eileen" at the end of its 26-week cycle April 12. Sponsor had originally indicated it would go along with "Eileen" till June.

But Colgate somehow got out of its commitment on the time period, and consequently CBS now has the time up for grabs. Web also hasn't made a decision yet on a replacement for "Eileen."

Lipton to Sponsor TV Guide Awards

Thomas J. Lipton will sponsor NBC-TV's second "TV Guide Award" Tuesday, June 13, in the 10-11 p.m. slot. Dual origination from Hollywood and New York, only 15 minutes of the total stanza will go to presentation of the annual awards, voted by the mag's readership, rest will be entertainment.

There are only eight award categories—favorite series, favorite news series best single musical or variety show, best single dramatic program, best single news or information program, best news or information series, favorite male and female performers. Last year, amid a plethora of tv and motion picture awards by other orgs, TV Guide stanza won critical plaudits for its "reserve" and the injection of entertainment into an awards program during network time.

TV Guide printed nominating ballots in a mid-February edition, with the final ballot to be published on March 25.

AUTOS TAKING A TV DETOUR?

Hub (Back-to-Back) Robinson

Hubbell Robinson Jr. appears to have accomplished a rare feat in television. Few, if any, indie producers have ever been able to boast two hours a week of programming on network time much less two solid hours a week back-to-back, but the former CBS-TV exec veep "owns" 9 to 11 p.m. Mondays on NBC-TV next season, unless the web changes its plans.

NBC has scheduled "87th Precinct" between 9 and 10 p.m. Robinson's "Thriller" has been renewed for fall, with sponsors already in and shifted from Tuesdays to Mondays from 10 to 11 p.m.

With time included, Mondays from 9 to 11 might be termed "Robinson's $20,000,000 vault." No sale yet on "Precinct" but NBC says there are sponsor nibbles.

Pilot on "Precinct," incidentally, will get exposure on "Thrillers" in late March.

ABC-TV Finds Gen. Foods, Ralston No Chumps When It Comes to Chimps

Maybe its because one of the species made the outer-space scene before mankind, but show biz chimps are getting as hard to negotiate as Doris Day.

Anyhow, ABC-TV had a taste of the talent-contract shakes that have hit the other webs; only this time the snarl involved the trio of chimps featured in the Screen Gem's half-hour comedy show, "The Hathaways," slated for the fall schedule.

ABC accepted an order for half sponsorship from Ralston, via the Guild, Bascom & Bonfigli ad agency. This was fine all around—except, primarily because the chimps weren't talking, nobody knew the trio was under contract for commercials to General Foods Post cereals division, which is direct competition for Ralston's Wheat and Rice Checks. Ralston's show pact naturally covered product exclusivity, and the chaff really flew when somebody caught the chimp's tv blurb act for General Foods.

Double contract was doubly embarrassing, since Ralston and General Foods had clashed last fall when ABC sold Post cereals a spot in "Bugs Bunny," which follows Ralston's "Expedition" Thursday nights. That one was solved when Ralston got an injunction against ABC that forced a lapse between commercials.

The monkey business has also been solved. General Foods, via Benton & Bowles, graciously bowed out of their contract when Screen Gems reportedly offered up $53,000 worth of bartered tv spot time that was lying around the shop. The simian spot will leave the air in September before "Hathaway's" preem. Of course, viewers may be raising the question of what the chimps really eat for breakfast.

Gross Revenues At Met Doubled

Estimated gross revenues of Metropolitan Broadcasting Corp. for 1960 more than doubled the 1959 total, rising to a record high of $42,579,477 for the 52 weeks ended Jan. 31. The company's gross for the comparable 1959 period was $16,543,422.

The 1960 figures are still subject to audit and year end operations, but indicate that net profit also rose, from $1,552,463 in 1959 to $1,708,253 in 1960. Despite an increase of shares outstanding of 150,000 during the year, the per-share net rose to $1.01 as compared with $1.00 in 1959. Increase in net occurred also despite the fact that a tax-loss carryover of $480,000 was applied in 1959 but not in 1960.

Increase in gross was attributed to the wide expansion program of the company during 1960. Met during the year took over such companies as WRUL, the international commercial shortwave operation; Foster & Kleiser, the Coast-based outdoor ad firm; and tv stations in Peoria and Decatur, Ill.

NBC News Additions

NBC News hired two new staff men this week. One is Jack Perkins, out of Cleveland, who'll move to N.Y. to work as a general writer-reporter, most probably with the Reuven Frank-produced news shows, and Bill Leeds, who worked as a regional reporter for the web during the summer conventions.

Both men have to go through the brief but traditional "training period" with web news in N.Y. but chances are that both will ultimately end up with on-the-air assignments.

Gross Revenue At Peak for RCA But Net Is Down 13%

Radio Corp. of America has written another record—$1,494,896,000 in sales for 1960. Figure, divulged in the corporation's annual report, puts RCA 7% ahead of the previous year when the tally was $1,395,620,000.

RCA profits after Federal income taxes were $35,117,000, which is down from '59's $40,142,000 by 13%. Earnings on each of the 170,000 outstanding shares was $2.10 compared to the previous return of $2.65.

RCA prexy John L. Burns said the profit falloff was due to the "continuing heavy investments in electronic data processing" and the write-off of the $4,000,000 cost of centralizing RCA's Indianapolis consumer products operation.

Burns reiterated the report that NBC's "profits for 1960 were the largest in the company's history."

Company reinvested $247,560,000 of its earnings in 1960, slightly over $3,000,000 more in plough-back coin than a year before. RCA's longterm debt at the end of last year was $151,996,000 while in 1959 it was $245,220,000. At the same time, working capital at year's end went down from the '59 level of $316,102,000 to $295,205,000. Ratio of current assets to current liabilities remained 2.4 to 1.

Schlitz Eyes Summer Sports Series on CBS

Schlitz Brewing is in discussions with CBS-TV on possible sponsorship of an hourlong primetime sports series for summer. Show would be patterned after the network's 90-minute "Sunday Sports Spectacular" and, if negotiations can be worked out, would replace the Ann Sothern show Thursdays at 7:30 starting in May. "Angel," at 8, would move over to Monday as the Danny Thomas summer replacement.

Originally, CBS and Schlitz were talking a Monday at 10:30 slot, but the brewery decided it wanted an earlier timeslot. Then General Foods decided to drop the Sothern show as well as the Thursday time, so that the door was opened for the current discussions.

BULK OF BUDGET IS UNCOMMITTED

The automobile companies apparently are running true to form. Historically, in times of recession, they run fast, the first to trim their advertising budgets. (The automotives tax each car sold for advertising allocation, with their ad budgets determined by the number of units they expect to sell).

Usually, the Detroit sponsors are the first to wrap up their commitments for the following season—sometimes six months in advance. But whereas a General Foods, a Procter & Gamble, etc., have already made known their programmatic intentions, the auto companies for the most part aren't budging, indicating a retreat or a drastic cutback for the '61-'62 semester.

This season something like $60,000,000 in automotive coin is riding on the three tv networks. As of the moment the bulk of its tv coin outlay for next season remains uncommitted Traditionally NBC has enjoyed the major slice of business, stemming from a yen for specials and color. (Fifteen percent of the web's billings are from Detroit.) But of late the car czars have been detouring into the more conventional vidpix areas embracing all three webs, as with Chevy's "My Three Sons" (ABC); "Route 66" (CBS) and "Bonanza" (NBC).

Oldsmobile has $5,000,000 tv coin still uncommitted. (It got hurt this season with "Michael Shayne.") Buick has been riding with the Bob Hope specials, but as yet has refused to declare future intentions. Pontiac, which siphoned some coin into "Surfside 6" this season and also did the John Wayne special, isn't talking about next season either.

Dodge has dumped Lawrence Welk, leaving $4,000,000 in tv coin dangling midair. In dropping Dinah Shore and buying "Bonanza" Chevy has reduced its weekly program outlay from $140,000 to $100,000. Plymouth's continued allegiance to Garry Moore is iffy and shaky.

A $15,000,000 annual tv buyer, Ford has quickly become an enigma to network execs. Big car house has already cut back from an hour to a half-hour alternate weeks on the hot "Wagon Train," which only goes to show how lean the Detroit pickings seem to have become, and it is also cutting back on "Alfred Hitchcock Presents."

(Nabisco has taken the half-hour in "Train" that Ford let go and the remaining Ford half-hour goes for the rest of this season to Revlon, which apparently cuts the automotive house out of the Wednesday show completely. Also, Revlon is picking up—at least for much of the rest of this tv season—Ford's share in "Hitchcock.")

There won't be a decision until later this month about Ford's future intentions on Tennessee Ernie.

Berle's Bowling Show Going Off March 13

"Jackpot Bowling" is going off, as expected, after the March 13 telecast. The Monday night 10:30 half-hour, which brought Milton Berle back as a tv regular at the outset of the season, has been getting clobbered on the Nielsens and, besides, Berle wants to do a legit show next fall.

Bayuk Cigars has failed to renew "Jackpot," with the half-hour being given by NBC to its affiliates for local programming during the remainder of the season.

Jane Powell's Spec

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Jane Powell's NBC-TV spec "Young At Heart" will be produced live from network's Burbank studios April 28. Singer will forego advance taping which has been the trend this season.

Show will be taped live only for delayed broadcast purposes. Bob Wells produces and directs and Pepsi-Cola sponsors full hour.

R. J. Reynolds' $3,000,000 Budget For Sat. Nite NBC-TV Features, But Is It Drainoff from Spot Biz?

ABC's 5 Out of 10

.. (Arbitrons; Feb. 20-26)

Untouchables (ABC)	30.2
Gunsmoke (CBS)	29.2
Ed Sullivan (CBS)	27.9
Flintstones (ABC)	27.3
Candid Camera (CBS)	27.2
Have Gun (CBS)	26.3
Red Skelton (CBS)	26.1
Leave to Beaver (ABC)	24.9
Rebel (ABC)	24.7
77 Sunset Strip (ABC)	24.3

R. J. Reynolds will be banking heavily on NBC-TV come the '61-'62 tv season. One of the first moves at the network is to lay in $3,000,000 for two minutes a week on the network's 9-11 p.m. Saturday motion picture programming.

Money for buying these 20th-Fox ex-theatrical films (first regular network run for such product) may come from Reynolds' usual spot television budget. This would deliver a mighty blow to the tv station reps and their station clients, who get nearly 100% of the dollar from spot and closer to 30% if the money is filtered through network programming.

But a final decision on whether money for the NBC feature films comes from Reynolds' spot budget won't be made for a few more days, it's understood. Sponsor wants to see what the rest of its network tv sked looks like for the fall. (Presently, the cigaret company spends money in parts of 11 network tv shows.)

Also, Reynolds has decided to pour some coin into a Thursday-at-10 anchorage for Mitch Miller's taped hour. Buy'll most likely be for an alternate-week half-hour next season. This virtually assures that NBC will keep the musician-turned-host around well beyond his current seven-week Friday run

Lastly for the moment, Reynolds reportedly will renew its share in the half-hour "Tall Man" series.

The Saturday feature film programming at NBC-TV is said to be really hot along agency row. Besides Reynolds' firm business there is an order in the house for an undisclosed amount of time (possibly a minute a week) from Union Carbide. Young & Rubicam, which was reportedly in on the beginning of NBC's recent negotiations for the purchase of feature films and then seemed to drop out), is thought to have a few of its own clients interested in buying into the two-hour weekly stanza. Network is figuring on a sellout in the period within a week.

Actual charges haven't been designed by NBC, but cost of one (out of 12 weekly) commercial slottings is expected to border on $30,000.

ABC's Late Night TV News Strip If Affils Go Along

ABC-TV is seeking time for a news program between 11 and roughly 11:12 p.m. nightly, beginning next fall. Last two or three minutes of the nightly strip will go back to the web affils for a local weather fill-in.

This indicates that ABC will use the reruns of the Warner Bros. hour film from 11:15 p.m. to 12:15 a.m. from Monday through Friday during the '61-'62 tv season.

Web management reportedly has approached several affiliate stations and "a number of them" are hot on the idea of a network news stanza at 11 p.m. Of course, there may be some resistance since local stations do get most of the advertising dollar from local newscasts but not from network feeds.

Besides these tentative late-night plans, Jim Hagerty's news department might end up doing four other regular news programs, the one about to begin in the 1:25-1:30 p.m. slot, another perhaps at 11:25 a.m. and still a third at eitherr 4:25 or 4:55 p.m. and a quarter-hour at 6 or 6:15 p.m.

Hagerty is still working on plans for the early evening news strip. There will be an anchorman, allright, but tentative plans indicate that his job may be little more than introducing various feeds. Hagerty, a believer in letting the correspondent on the spot do his own coverage, is devising a system of cuts to the reporters with "the most familiarity with the subject" at hand. If nothing else, ABC intends experimenting in this direction.

Hagerty's primary concern still is filling his Washington staff, but he's also expanding his idea of journalistic expertese to some veteran staffers. For instance, Quincy Howe, Bill Shadel or Don Goddard, primarily studio-based men, will get out on the street to cover many of their stories.

The early evening 15-minute newscast might be taped at 6 p.m. and ABC-TV could begin showing takes of it (depending on the time zone) at 6:15.

18-Hour Span for Title Bout Screening on BBC

London, Feb. 28.

BBC-TV will be screening a taped looksee at the Patterson-Johannsen heavyweight scrap on March 14, 18 hours after the pugilists meet at Miami for the title. Peter Dimmock will be over for the fight to make arrangements for this "Sportsview" scoop. It will involve recording in N.Y., and then a plane dash to London via Prestwick.

Also subject to technical arrangements being finalized satisfactorily, the BBC expects to televise Russia's May Day celebrations on May 1. It will be the first live tv broadcast from Moscow.

130G Weekly Tab For Garry Moore

Garry Moore and CBS worked out terms for next season's Tuesday night hour stanza, with the show getting another $10,000 budget hike to bring it up to the $130,000 per week mark. The 130G figure, of course, holds for the October-June period when the Moore show itself is on; the network prices out the summer replacement.

Though Moore and packager Bob Banner dropped the right to program his own replacement this year (CBS hopes to use "Playhouse 90" reruns), they've recaptured replacement rights for 1962 as part of their new deal on the show. That doesn't mean they'll necessarily use them, but have the option if they so desire.

Web had hoped to persuade Moore to move his entire show to the Coast next fall in order to make better use of its Television City studio facilities, but the idea was quickly dropped when both Moore and Banner indicated they wanted to remain in N.Y.

Fedderson 'Tramp Ship'

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

ABC-TV has firmed a deal with Don Fedderson for development of "Tramp Ship," hourlong adventure series starring Neville Brand.

Fedderson personally is producing the pilot for the series on which Fred Henry is exec producer.

'Operation 666' (Ted Bates Buys) Linked to ABC-TV's Ascendancy —On Other Madison Ave. Fronts

By BILL GREELEY

After the gross billings have been toted, Madison Ave.'s major contribution to the rapid growth of ABC-TV can be narrowed to a programming and buying strategy labeled "Operation 666."

Named after the Fifth Ave., address of the aluminum skyscraper that is the home of the Ted Bates Agency, "Operation 666" pioneered the participation prinple (scatter buy) in network prime time, and was an important factor in establishing the hour adventure series as a video staple—the two elements that have provided ABC's bread and butter and meat and potatoes during the climb from dogpatch to hilltop.

Same time, the plan germinated Bates' spectacular climb into the first rank of network billers. Always a leader in spot tv placements, the agency three years ago had $47,000,000 in market-by-market buys and only $10,000,000 in network. This year, for the first time, network billings will exceed spot with an estimated $58,000,000 against a spot total of slightly more than $50,000,000.

But when it was dreamed up three years ago, "Operation 666" had more cliff-hanging elements for the agency's program head, Richard A. R. Pinkham, and staff than the show it involved, "77 Sunset Strip."

The strategy behind the first "Op. 666" buy was to find a web time slot where the competition was rough, where the network was having difficulty finding a sponsor—and where the agency saw a vulnerability in the competition.

The Bates' proposal to ABC was, "give us the time at a sufficiently dramatic discount (reportedly 60%) so that 25% share of audience will produce an efficient buy. Give us a big say in the selection of a program. We will, from our point, get it 75% sold."

And from the agency's point, the catch in the plan was the violation of an old agency rule: "Never put more than one egg in one basket. Bates put three in "77 Sunset Strip." Bankrolling involved clients Whitehall, Chickle and Carter.

There was another catch. "Sunset" was a series proposal based on a 90-minute feature, "Girl on the Run." It had made the agency circuit with no takers. In the majority judgment of Madison Ave.'s hot stove league that second-guesses viewer taste, you couldn't make a hero out of a foreign type with a name like Efrem Zimbalist Jr.

You could, of course, along with All-American types with Anglo-Saxon handles like Edward Byrnes. "Sunset" got a 40 share of audience. ABC got a selling plan. Pinkham got a raise.

"Op. 666" was expanded the next year to "Hawaiian Eye," a "Sunset"-gone galley west, and it now includes "Adventures in Paradise," "Naked City," "Roaring Twenties," "Untouchables," "Surfside Six," "The Islanders" and so on into the primetime night.

As a Bates spokesman put it, "The hour action show sold in participation made possible the adaption of our theory of diversification of ad message." In other words, the agency's hard but memorable copy technique is particularly suited to the scatter buy. "We only have to reach the viewer once to make the message stick."

Incidentally, Rosser Reeves, the man who built Bates into the copy agency that is the joy of clients, astounder of fellow practitioners and despair of FTC, will soon reveal the technique to all. His book, "Reality in Advertising," originally written for client and agency edification, is scheduled for April publication under the Knopf imprint.

With the Station Reps

Indication of the recession's effects on media was given this week by Gordon McLendon, prexy of the McLendon radio group, who was in New York for the Radio & Television Executive Society luncheon session on new radio techniques.

McLendon said spot billings for his station are off 6¾% in January this year compared to the same month a year ago.

And, he said, "According to what I hear from the others, I'm lucky." Although the totals haven't been analyized, McLendon says the big part of the dip is due to the slide in national spot billings.

For radio, it's probably the worst first quarter since the mid-fifties.

Broadcasters have company in their economic miseries, however. Current Gallagher Report newsletter going to ad and publishing execs, calls the first quarter of '61 the worst in 10 years for magazines. Volume to date indicates that Time mag is off 28%; Newsweek, 20%; Life, 16%; and the Saturday Evening Post, 15%.

Gallagher attributes the magazine slump not only to the general advertiser cutback, but also to the increased competition from raido, tv and newspapers.

Briefs: NBC Spot Sales is distributing another Timebuyer Opinion Panel questionnaire, dealing with "creativity in timebuying" . . . J. Walter Thompson is placing a national radio spot campaign for Rahway, maker of automotive filters. Slated for March 6 start, the campaign will total of 50,000 spots aired by March 20.

WLW 'Grads' Turn Out As Cincy Station Wins B'cast Pioneer Laurels

WLW "cradle of stars" laurels echoed in New York Sunday night when the Cincinnati station received the first gold mike award by the Broadcast Pioneers. Thirty-eight grads, now scattered in all branches of the industry, were among 600 celebrants at the testimonial banquet in the Latin Quarter.

Proceeds of the $25 a plate affair started a foundation to promote the welfare of "pioneers who are down on their luck," as voiced by H. V. Kaltenborn, BP president. He saluted WLW operations for their many firsts in radio and television. The fund was swelled by several $1,000 donations.

Acceptance of the ancient ribbon mike replica was by James D. Shouse, board chairman of the Crosley Broadcasting Corp. He filled in for Robert E. Dunville, CBC president, who was taken ill the day before and remained in his Manhattan hotel.

Before taking to the stage for intros the ex-Crosley celebs and personalities saw themselves on a screening of old stills and heard clips of early recordings.

ABC's Radio West

An ABC Radio West, a regional network serving 10 western states, has been started by Bob Pauley, boss of ABC Radio. A total of 104 stations of the ABC Pacific Network, the Arizona Network and the Intermountain Network will make up Radio West.

Jack Mann will serve as director of the new regional setup and Harry Woodworth as its sales manager. Mann will work out of N.Y. and Woodworth out of Hollywood. New regional will cover California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Arizona, Montana, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming and Colorado.

Industry Rallies to Clem McCarthy

The Clem McCarthy Fund, to care for the indigent, 79-year-old sportscaster, is seemingly assured of enough contributions to take care of him for several months in the Manhattan nursing home where he has been for several years. Newspaper columnists, radio-tv programs, sportscasters and sports personalities combined to stimulate donations to the Fund, care of Chemical Bank—N. Y. Trust Co., 10 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N. Y.

Ed Sullivan gave it national impetus Sunday night (26) by saluting Jack O'Brien's N. Y. Journal American column but, in the midst of the program, he added that his own paper's tv-radio editor, Ben Gross (N. Y. Daily News), also had been plugging for the McCarthy Fund, as indeed have a number of other columnists and dailies.

Saturday night (25) over WABC, N. Y., "Big Joe" Rosenfield devoted the entire post-midnight broadcast to plugging the Clem McCarthy Fund. As of Monday (27) he estimated between $8,000 and $10,000 in pledges ("how much will actually be collected we can't tell right now," says he), but Adah and Ted Lewis and May Singhi Breen were among the pitchmen.

Countless newspapers and newspapermen collaborated on plugging the veteran "r-r-racing fans, they're off in Jamaica!" sportscaster's financial plight because of his longtime illness.

The Sullivan nod to O'Brien, incidentally, was unique in intra-trade circles in light of the J-A columnist's longtime ribbing of Sullivan as "stoneface," etc.

Toward a Brotherhood of Understanding

By LEONARD H. GOLDENSON
(Pres., AB-PT)

If some day you should happen to be in front of a television set in Argentina or El Salvador, you might very well find yourself watching "Pero Es Mama Quien Manda" or "Un Paso Al Mas Alla."

The language might be unfamiliar to you, but you would quickly recognize the programs as "The Donna Reed Show" and "One Step Beyond." These two programs, between them, are dubbed not only in Spanish but in Japanese, French and German as well, and are seen in many parts of the world.

This phenomenon not only is typical of the kind of U.S. television fare that is popular in other countries, but also is indicative of the fact that our tv industry is currently the major source of programming for the world tv audience.

But it is not enough that a Spanish-speaking truck farmer outside Caracas can see "Pero Es Mama Quien Manda" or that a French-speaking truck driver in Montreal can see Robert Young in "Papa A Raison." We in the U.S. television industry have a responsibility, not only to viewers in the U.S. but to viewers around the world, and to the cause of freedom and democracy. Television is the most effective medium of communication mankind has yet developed. It has the power to bring the peoples of the world closer together, to acquaint them with each other's way of life, their problems and aspirations.

Imagine the impact it would have on a family behind the Iron Curtain if they could have seen the vigor and excitement of our political conventions, or the face-to-face meetings between Richard M. Nixon and John F. Kennedy. Or if this family could see the wholesome picture of American family life offered by shows such as "Leave It To Beaver," "My Three Sons," or "The Donna Reed Show," with their moral vitality and joy of living. And, incidentally, the sheer physical abundance and high high standard of living taken for granted by the average, middle-class American families depicted in these shows would be certain to make a profound impression on an Iron Curtain viewer.

Of course, just as viewers in other nations can learn, through television, the true picture of the democratic way of life in the United States, so can we learn more about the problems, aspirations and way of life of our neighbors in other lands. The interchange of culture and knowledge between countries that international television affords will not be a one-way street. Ideally, the flow will be free and unimpeded in all directions between all nations, uniting the world in a brotherhood of understanding.

Global Expansion

The world-wide television audience is growing by leaps and bounds. The U.S. now has five television receivers for every three in the rest of the world, but the balance will be overturned completely within the next decade. The 39 million sets outside this country are expected to grow to 50 million by 1965, and by 1970 there will be more sets abroad than in the U.S. It is up to us to reach this audience and to show them democracy in action, so that they can choose their path on the basis of knowledge, not propaganda.

The Soviet Union is engaged in a crash program to provide transmitters, receivers and programs to its own satellites and the uncommitted nations of the world. The free world's answer must be quick and sure.

In Cuba we have seen how the battle for democracy can be lost. We are in grave danger of losing it in many countries of Latin America, Asia and Africa. We must get our message of democracy to the uncommitted countries as soon as possible, and let them see us as we are, not as the Russians paint us to be.

ABC has gone into international television at full throttle. We, together with the Central American tv stations, have pioneered in the development of the world's first international commercial television network, the Central American Television Network, which is now successfully telecasting network programs in Guatemala, El Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras and Nicaragua. These network programs are sponsored by international advertisers.

In Venezuela, ABC International has devoted considerable effort and capital to helping establish a new Venezuelan network which has just begun telecast operations within the last two weeks. This network will cover all the major markets of Venezuela.

In Ecuador, a new ABC affiliate in Guayaquil began operations approximately last December. In Lebanon, ABC International is now helping a new station get on the air later this year.

In Australia, we have joined with News, Ltd., in the operation of several television stations in this rapidly growing land.

The future of international television is global. We are on the threshold of a fabulous age of world-wide communication via television. Through satellite transmission, microwave relay, transoceanic coaxial cable, and scatter transmission, within a few years we will be able to send and receive tv programs instantly to and from the major cities of the world.

From Ike To Mike (& Camera)

[Some Tentative Precepts]

By JAMES C. HAGERTY
(ABC V.P. News, Special Events, Public Affairs)

The television and film camera must be utilized fully before the presentation of television news is to realize its greatest potential.

The camera is as much the basic tool of the tv newsman's trade as the microphone is to the radio newsman and the pad and pencil to the newspaper reporter.

For a number of reasons, not least among them television's youth, we have, as a general rule, borrowed techniques from our older brothers—the newsreel, newspaper and radio media. What we need to do now is strike out boldly on our own.

Sight and sound separates tv from radio and newspapers, intimacy separates it from newsreels. The tv news camera must capture both of these qualities, becoming the "eyes" of the viewer, taking him to the news event and placing him in a position where he can receive a better understanding of the cause, meaning and development of that event.

Finding and training these tv reporter personnel demands time—it will not be accomplished overnight.

At ABC News we are moving ahead with a major departmental expansion—in personnel, facilities and programming. While we are not attempting any sudden miracles, we do expect in the not too distant future to be fully competitive in all ways with other broadcasting news departments. (And if that is a "race"—and that's your word gentlemen!—it's a good thing because it will benefit the tv viewer as much as it does our industry).

When we achieve that goal we will begin devoting a not inconsiderable amount of time to training new promising personnel, developing new techniques, researching new projects and experimenting with new ideas.

Television news, as is true of the entire tv industry, is on the brink of scientific progress so startling it will pale by comparison with most advancements to date. In about five years, earth encircling communication satellites will bring world-wide television into reality. On tv newscasts we will be able to switch for direct live reports to all parts of the globe. New portable wireless cameras will transmit live pictures from almost any location and under almost any set of conditions. Many other pieces of new equipment and many newly developed techniques will compliment these particular advancements.

Viewed in this light, tv news is in the early stages of development. We have made great strides and we have but scratched the surface.

This new scientific development will present us with great opportunities; but it will be that old fashioned machine, man, who must do the thinking and must seize the initiative. And the major part of the progress we hope to make in tv news presentation must come from the ideas and work yet to be done by newsmen with fresh ideas to supplement their sound news judgment.

The television news reporter and photographer of tomorrow—along with news writers, the news staff, and, yes, news executives, too— must break this fresh ground. I am confident that it will be done.

Of All People, Broadcasters Lacking In Communication

By JULIUS BARNATHAN
(ABC V.P. for Affiliated TV Stations)

One of the most glaring inconsistencies in the communications industry to me has been the almost negligent way in which various sectors of the industry communicate with each other.

Although able to communicate with people in some 98% of the nation's homes through television, broadcasting and advertising people still have not mastered personal communication.

And communication is the one vital step to understanding.

It may sound like a far-fetched analogy but I think you can compare the oft-repeated misunderstandings that occur between advertisers and networks and networks and affiliates and other inter-industry factions with the lack of understanding that exists between the United States and many areas of the world.

We have lost valuable ground abroad because we have not been able to properly communicate with the peoples of the world. We have not made sure they know and understand the motives and desires of the United States.

Politically, morally and financially, it has been most unprofitable.

In broadcasting too, a lack of communication, a lack of understanding can be most unprofitable.

In station relations the broadcaster is afforded, I believe, an exciting experience in communicating and understanding. It is difficult for an affiliate in Idaho or Indiana to be aware of the multitude of problems that are solved before a program goes out on the network line, or of the many functions involved in inserting a commercial into that program.

The affiliate only knows that he is transmitting a network program and he wants it to be the best possible for his viewers.

The network, on the other hand, on many occasions has trouble understanding the problems and complaints of its affiliated stations.

In both cases, the "ostrich approach" can have serious consequences. One of the reasons the problem occurs is "ivory tower" thinking. The man who says, "I've got enough problems of my own," and does not attempt to understand the other person's position usually winds up adding to his own burden.

To communicate you must get out of your shell, get to know the people you do business with and get to know their business. Advertising people must learn more about the network's problems and operations and about stations. Networks must pay closer attention to the attitudes of advertisers and affiliates. And individual stations must find new and wider avenues of communication with advertisers and networks.

To accomplish this some agencies and networks have set up teams of liaison men who work closer with, and learn more about, other areas of the industry.

In the ABC-TV Station Relations Department, several means have been developed to bring the network in closer contact with its affiliates. Frequent closed circuit broadcasts advise them of both network plans and problems. The network continually tries to effect even better coordination with its Affiliates Advisory Association. And the Association brings its questions to the network with always improving understanding.

There Are Tribulations But There Are Joys, Too

By THOMAS W. MOORE
(ABC-TV V.P. in Charge of Programming)

If we could offer a prayer for the coming television season, it might go like this:

"Give us the tenacity to stay with a program when it has a chance to succeed, give us the courage to drop a program when it is doomed to fail, and give us the wisdom to distinguish between the two."

ABC-TV, in the eight years since the merger of the American Broadcasting Co. with United Paramount Theatres, has built fast—but it has built carefully and well. This is because we planned for the long pull. We have practiced the art of suspended judgment and have given each entry every chance to succeed before writing it off the books.

Television's storage vaults are filled with good programs whose death knell was tolled by impatience. Except for uncommon faith, two recent hits, both on ABC-TV, might have been doomed. They are "Adventures In Paradise" and "Hawaiian Eye."

"Adventures in Paradise" was launched in October, 1959, and played to 5,000,000 homes that month for an audience share of 21%. By dint of hard work, patience and faith it was built into a winner, and by March, 1960, was reaching 8,000,000 homes and a 29.5 share. In January, 1961, it reached 9,000,000 homes and had 35.4% of the total audience.

"Hawaiian Eye" was another slow starter, but by January, 1961, had nearly doubled its original audience and topped Perry Como, its "invincible" competitor.

Both shows owe their lives to patience on the part of advertisers, agencies, producers and ABC-TV.

"The Real McCoys" reached 5,000,000 homes for a 19.5 share of audience when it first went on the air in October, 1957; last January it played to 14 million homes and had 46.2% of the audience.

"The Donna Reed Show," now in its third season, is another classic example of how patience and faith can pay off. Since October, 1958, it has increased its share of audience from 21.7 to 34.9%, and the number of homes reached from five and a half to 10 and a half million.

The obvious hits and flops are easy to deal with. But the real joy of our business lies in seeing a show build slowly into a hit. And the show that has a slow build is the hardest to dislodge. Its following is the most faithful. We at ABC-TV, when we have faith in a program that is not an immediate hit, will work to improve it, will go all out in its promotion and publicity, will give it every chance to achieve the success we feel it deserves. Only after every effort has failed will we write it off.

We know our program producers have come to appreciate this attitude. We hope that there will be increasing appreciation of the need for patience on the part of advertisers and agencies

Equally urgent is the need for early decisions on their part. The greatest enemy of creativity is lack of time. Any product, whether it is a piece of cabinetwork or a television program, cannot be as good when it is produced under pressure as it would be if time were allowed for painstaking, thoughtful, careful craftmanship.

In the next few weeks many of the creators of the 1960-61 television fare will go on vacation, returning in May and June. They should be hard at work now on next fall's offerings, but their hands are tied by the indecisiveness of renewals and late decisions on new programs, so they are using this artificially created "slack" season to get away while they can. Because they know that by July, when their new programs should be well under way and they would normally take their vacations, hastily imposed deadlines will be at their throats. Had these renewals and new purchases come by January or February at the latest, much time that was lost waiting for decisions could have been used creatively.

ABC-TV is making definite moves this year to give its talent as much notice as possible for the shows they must deliver for the 1961-62 season. "The Flintstones," "My Three Sons," Surfside 6," "Adventures In Paradise" and many other shows have had their "go-aheads" for weeks. There will be no need to break stride in production. Long-range planning will enable the creative people involved in these shows to work under far less pressure than last-minute orders would have necessitated. We will continue to do everything we can to give the program makers enough time to do a good job.

So that is our plea and our prayer this season. First, patience—not panic—patience to give a good show a chance to find its place in the sun. And second, early planning—not last-minute decisions.

First and most important, the television audience will reap the benefits. And so too will networks, sponsors and agencies—in better programs, better ratings and better costs per thousand.

The Care & Feeding of a Series

ABC-TV's slotting of "The Corrupters" next season is an example of indie packagers making their way in network vidfilming.

Co-producers Leonard Ackerman and John Burrows took their "Corrupters" project to the web. Neither had done any vidfilming before. Burrows had been a producer in feature production and Ackerman is a lawyer. ABC-TV's program topper Tom Moore suggested that they tie up with Four Star Productions, a tie which would offer them savvy and under-the-line production know-how. Four Star Productions and the coproduction team of Ackerman and Burrows reached an agreement for the hour vidfilm series, with the web financing the pilot.

It's Quality That Makes The Quantity Important

By BERT BRILLER
(V.P., ABC-TV Sales Development)

In one of our cartoons, the moose invents a new explosive. But he can't give it to the Defense Department because the recipe was torn in half. "I know how much," he complains, "but not what of."

"Two cupfuls, three jiggers and a dash of" may be either potable or poisonous, depending on the ingredients. In television, too, 8,000,000 or 11,000,000 are important not in themselves, but what they signify.

Television's numbers are getting bigger, and at the same time they are being refined in qualitative terms. Who views, Where, Why, When, and How? These are questions as important as How Many.

In ABC Television's growth, the numbers have been of great significance. More coverage, more programs, bigger audiences and lower cost have been central to ABC's planned growth. But we have given equal attention to qualitative factors, because our circulation depends first of all on the quality of the product on the screen. And also because certain families are more valuable than others.

Three Senses of Quality

We can speak of quality in three senses: (1) the kind, rather than the size of the audience; (2) the kind of program, e.g., a documentary; and 3) the professional or artistic level of production. For example, "The Real McCoys" and "Untouchables" are quality shows under the first and third meanings, even though they have mass appeal. As a matter of principal, ABC rejects the undemocratic concept that to have quality a program must be a bore.

Very early in the game we studied audience quality. The younger, post-war families — homes with more viewers — are more important for most advertisers, and for television as an industry because they do more viewing. We programmed with special emphasis on these homes, and in them ABC today has the lion's share of the audience.

Nielsen did a tabulation in the first half of December. In all homes, ABC was a hair behind Columbia, 19.6 vs. 20.1, and well in front of NBC's 17.3.

But in the younger-family homes, ABC handily beat the competition. And the score in the bigger-family homes — with five or more members — was truly one-sided: ABC 27.2 . . . Columbia, 20.0 . . . NBC, 17.1. ABC was 36% higher-rated than CBS and 59% higher than NBC.

Of course, some of our shows include a higher proportion of older viewers. Lawrence Welk, for instance, does a fine job for J. B. Williams products such as Geritol, Sominex and Zarumin. But for Aqua Velve and Electric Shave, JBW uses "Adventures in Paradise" to reach more younger families.

Strength in Metropolitan Counties

More and more advertisers find ABC-TV giving them the kind of household they want. In the populous metropolitan "A" counties, ABC is well out in front, and does better than average in the "B" counties — key marketing areas where purchasing power is concentrated and competition is strong.

Another important aspect of quality is a program's "climate." Obviously, climate isn't readily translated into a number. However, a relatively new rating that bears on a show's aura is TV-Q. When viewers call a show "one of my favorite programs," the designation carries with it an element of preference, of active choice, emotional involvement. Some agency researchers have used TV-Q scores as one factor in evaluating a program's effectiveness as a showcase for their client's products.

It's interesting that of all the mentions of evening favorites, TV-Q reported in January, ABC has 36%, leading CBS with 35% and NBC with 31%. Worth noting, too, is that TV-Q has some predictive value—and that leadership in TV-Q points to continued growth in ABC audience levels.

But there are many other aspects of quality that are not susceptible to easy measurement by the tape-measure, yardstick or scale—although they are readily spotted by the naked eye. "Winston Churchill: The Valiant Years" has qualities which stem from its special blending of drama, music and historic values. It has special appeal for doctors and pharmacists (because of their war service) and for other groups of interest to its sponsor, Metrecal.

Bell & Howell has gained tremendous audience response from its "Close-Up!" series with documentaries such as "Yanki No!," "Cast the First Stone," "The Children Were Watching." Ralston has scored impressively with its "Expedition" program, which is assigned for study in some 90,000 classrooms. With these programs —plus public affairs series such as "Directions '61," "Meet the Professor," and "Issues and Answers," ABC Television is improving its qualitative delivery. Its forward surge in sports, with events like the NCAA football games, and its acquisition of such attractions as the Oscar awards, are indicative of the new emphasis on quality. And, of prime importance, is the stress that will be placed on news, underlined by the recent hiring of Jim Hagerty. Leonard Goldenson is giving Hagerty the wherewithall to make ABC news second to none.

WMAL's Assignment— Programming For President of U.S.

By FRED S. HOUWINK
(Gen. Mgr., WMAL AM & TV)

Washington, Feb. 21.

How would you plan and maintain your local programming to best serve an audience so diversified that it included: The President of the United States, Federal Civil Service Workers hailing from such scattered points as Coral Gables, Tacoma, Butte and Syracuse, the foreign diplomatic corp, and members of the Federal Communications Commission?

Here is how we at WMAL, radio and television meet this challenge:

There is one common denominator for all of these people. Washington is the news capital of the world. These people make the news and they are the news. They must be kept the best informed people in the country. Therefore, our major emphasis in local programming is in the field of news and public affairs.

Our stations program news in five-minute segments throughout the day and throughout the week. We telecast an early evening 30-minute news program Monday through Friday and a 30-minute late evening news program Sunday through Friday. On radio, we supplement ABC newscasts with hourly local newscasts at the half-hour and special reports every morning and evening. Twice a day on television and eight times a day on radio we broadcast editorials and on Sunday night we simulcast a local public affairs program.

We utilize the talents of professional newsmen to deliver the news.

Reporting world news on tv is Joseph McCaffrey, a veteran commentator who has covered Washington for more than 20 years. Local news is reported on television by two of the most able men in the city, Del Malkie and Ed Meyer. The sports commentary is by Washington Daily News columnist Morrie Siegel and the weather forecasts and summaries are reported by professional weather consultant and meterologist Louis Allen. All of these men devote their entire day to their respective fields.

The programs and the talents are supervised by the WMAL news and public affairs department. This department, organized as a separate and independent operation, responsible directly to the general manager, is headed by Dick Riehmond. His department currently has six radio equipped mobile news units cruising the city day and night. Trained newsmen man these cars equipped with 35m still cameras, with 16m zoomar lens movies cameras and with miniature tape recorders. WMAL-TV telecasts more local news film than all of the other Washington stations combined.

Three men have been added recently to the local news staff, one to assist specifically with editorial and public affairs programs. Several Washington stations have editorialized on such topics as summit meetings and missle failures. We concentrate on local issues. To date this policy has met with enthusiastic response from the public and civic and political leaders.

ABC Taps Don Curran

Don B. Curran becomes the first director of publicity and promotion for ABC's owned & operated radio stations under press info veep Mike Foster.

Formerly with KTVI, St. Louis, as sales promotion manager, Curran begins with ABC on April 11.

Looking In From Outer Space ...A World's Eye View

HOWARD W. MASCHMEIER
(General Manager, WNHC-TV)

Let's throw it up at Tiros and see who receives the projected climate.

By 1965, mankind will have an eye on the world, and living rooms from Pole to Pole will be interconnected, live.

The experiences of many peoples and countless lifetimes will be sifted, seen and heard by the full range of billions of IQ's as the global eye makes its magic circle and interprets what it has seen. A telescoped world will thus become possible for all.

The mid-1960's will certainly see television's fulfillment under the firm and creative leadership of those who believe that a strong and free and meaningful industry is truly the best for all. If we do, no one will ever lead Americans astray.

Bouncing another signal in from outer space, we get the message that some critics deserve a "kudo" for their contributions. Constructive criticism can play a vital role in shaping the radio-television future. All the arts and sciences need interested and helpful observers and since we are a composite of varied creative arts, we may need the critics more than most. Long live the Goulds, VARIETY and similar genie. Our destructive critics never will understand that a successful broadcaster is deeply dedicated to community service. Somehow public approval in television never really comes to those who continually ignore the public interest, convenience and necessity. And why on earth (or even in space) the uninformed critical intellectuals can't get wih this simple message is beyond me. Brilliant they are, but without perspective.

Since in the eye of the beholder, all television is local, we inner spacemen must needs wear two heads (or at least two helmets): that of the local station staff and that of the network. Let your light so shine hat your intent is clear. As we say in the Triangle stations group, "You're here to serve . . . the public and the client."

It's not by chance that our Philadelphia flagship (WFIL-TV) consistently rates Number One with its vast public. The best of local programming, both commercial and public service, combined with the best of the networks, really adds up . . . and the public knows it. The same is true of the Triangle Stations' Connecticut "Sister-ship," WNHC-TV. Our approach in Connecticut and within the Triangle Stations is, and always has been, qualitative and not quantitative.

At this Eighth Anniversary point, our progress in Connecticut has been extremely gratifying, thanks to the ABC-TV team under Leonard Goldenson and the Triangle Stations Group under that acknowledged communications statesman, Roger W. Clipp.

A final bounce off that satellite and the computer prints this summation. Broadcasters, stations and today's television programs, and tomorrow's too, are like ice cream sodas. Casey Stengel and Democrats in season . . . "Nobody likes them but the public." And now, if you are still receiving, switch to another frequency and the next salute to AB-PT and thanks from Channel 8, Connecticut.

ABC Radio Also Has Its 'New Frontier'

By ROBT. R. PAULEY
(ABC V.P. in Charge of Radio)

When the ABC Radio Network paid some $300,000 for exclusive rights to the forthcoming third championship fight between Floyd Patterson and Ingemar Johansson, more than a few people in the broadcasting industry were shocked. No one else in radio was willing to spend this sum. Even television rights to such attractions are not that expensive.

The industry's reaction did not surprise us. ABC Radio caused amazement when it introduced "Flair" last October. We astounded people when we paid $200,000 for the second Patterson-Johansson fight last year.

It is becoming a habit. And one which we enjoy.

President Kennedy calls the sixties the "New Frontier." ABC Radio calls the sixties a "Magic Market." We believe in the growth of the country and are vitally aware of its ever increasing young adult population. ABC Radio has every intention of being the advertiser's best introduction to these new and imaginative consumers.

In 1960 the heavyweight championship fight attracted over 61 million listeners on ABC Radio—the largest audience in the history of advertising. And the fight was sold. This year we anticipate an even larger audience. And again there are advertisers who realize the value of this radio event.

I feel that sometimes many advertisers have a greater realization of radio's power than some broadcasters do. Too many people in radio undersell the medium.

We have refused to let that happen at ABC Radio and the results have been evident on the ledger page.

In every area, ABC Radio is experiencing its best first quarter in years. Sales on Don McNeill's "Breakfast Club" are well ahead of the 1960 first quarter and second quarter orders are sustaining the drive.

Both in sales and in clearances, ABC Radio News has shown marked improvement over last year and we are constantly improving the quality of the news.

"Flair"—which represented the only major radio programming breakthrough in 1960 on all four networks—has met with such success that even we at the network were a bit surprised. Affiliates from New Haven to South Bend to the West Coast have told us how, with the help of "Flair," they have moved from third or fourth in their market to first or second.

Many people have told us at ABC that our willingness to expand our programming services and willingness to increase expenditures to do it represent modern pioneering in the industry.

It takes money to achieve quality. And it takes hard work. Since quality has been our aim, we have given much of both. Happily, it has worked.

Quality has attracted larger audiences. It has aided affiliates. And it has brought more advertisers.

The "New Frontier" calls for a long and dedicated march to progress. In radio, ABC Radio intends to lead that march.

Is Youth Being Served?

By JOSEPH STAMLER
(Vice President-General Manager, WABC-TV)

It would be extremely difficult to find one aspect of television that has been subjected to more controversy than its effect on our young. And this is as it should be, for while far from meek, (our) youngsters shall certainly inherit the earth. There is a paradoxical relationship here somewhere, for television itself is in its own adolescent stage of development with only some 14 years under its belt. Nevertheless, because of its undisputed influence on our way of life, we expect, nay demand, that it perform as though Methuselah, not Milton Berle, was Mr. Television.

When television first appeared on the national scene, it was generally assumed it would be radio with pictures. Today, the role of television defies clear-cut definition. While it is still looked to primarily for entertainment and escape, its social forces are staggering. It is not only a news reporter but a news-maker; it is a clergyman, an educator, a politician, a musician, a labor reformer, a civic leader. It must serve in all these capacities while charged with the responsibility of being advertising's prime mover of goods and services to support the free enterprise system. But one capacity it can never, and should never serve, is that of the parent.

Unfortunately, too many parents "pass the buck" of rearing children to television. The electronic box is rapidly replacing the teacher as a very convenient scapegoat for faltering parents of wayward children. And conversely, there is evidence to indicate that many young delinquents apprehended in criminal activity defersively assert, . . . "Television is responsible for my crime. You adults are responsible for the contents of television, so you're responsible for my crime." The true motivator of an act against society may not necessarily be revealed in "confession."

The subject alone of the effect of violence in television on children has become enmeshed in a maze of contradictions and a myriad of opinions. Senator Kefauver says that ". . . Television is making our nation's youth insensitive to human suffering." The Foundation For Character Education in Boston says ". . . Much of the television fare offered to children is truly of excellent quality; most of the early fears expressed about television's impact on children have been laid to rest." A psychiatrist states, ". . . Television creates a just for violence in children." Professor Ithiel Pool, Social Psychologist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology contradicts, ". . . Violence on television may be good for children—seeing violence acted out in dramatic form which they understand may purge children of similar feelings."

TV as Stimulant

On the other hand, television is supposedly guilty of inducing passivity in youngsters. At the advent of television, reading was fere-doomed to a dying pasttime. Yet in the first six years of television, the national selling (not including lending libraries) of children's books increased 100% while the like population increase was 8%. Bennett Cerf, president of Random House, in recent remark to the New York Society of Security Analysts observed that the very act of watching television has made children 10 times as anxious as ever they were before to read books. "They see things on the television screen that stimulate their interest in current events, in history, in science, in wonders of the sea and the heavens and once they turn off their sets, they demand books that will furnish them with further details." He maintains that "Television is the greatest thing that has happened to children since the discovery of mother's milk."

And so it goes, the seesaw of complaint and praise by critics and supporters. As a young industry it is healthy that we have this give and take for the concern of the medium and it will be many years,

Modern Radio Comes To Chi

By RALPH W. BEAUDIN
(General Manager, WLS Radio)

Chicago.

To anyone who is familiar with the modern radio concept today, the idea is certainly not a new one nor is the installation of the "format" necessarily an impossible one in any market. But among the top 15 markets in the country, none has been less influenced by the modern radio concept than Chicago. There had, of course, been changes, but the competitive battles which were seen in Los Angeles, St. Louis, San Francisco, Cleveland and Minneapolis never reached the southern shores of Lake Michigan. The reasons were fairly obvious. Chicago is a "must" buy for most advertising schedules and often times three or four (sometimes five) stations were bought. Every station was showing a profit in Chicago and no one saw any reason to go through the pains of a fierce competitive battle to improve their ratings and ranking in audience.

When we came to Chicago last March 21, only three days after ABC officially acquired WLS, the station was a potential powerhouse with its 50,000 watts of clear channel power at 890 kc but rating-wise ranked seventh in a seven major station market. Its predominantly farm and religion programming together with country music and talk shows pegged it as a "rural" station which had little or no appeal to Chicago audiences. Our move: to bring modern radio to WLS and to Chicago.

What went on behind the scenes between March 21 and May 2 (when the new format debuted) was phenemonal. With expert knowledge of modern radio, Fred Zellner (chief engineer) and Sam Holman (production manager), who were responsible for the earlier success of KQV, came to Chicago and gave the physical properties of WLS a complete rejuvenation and modernization. Transmitter, control rooms, turntables, mikes, and virtually every piece of equipment were made ready for the perfection which is synonomous with modern radio.

On the talent and programming side of the coin we started with a "tabula rasa" or, as a trade paper put it, "the entire old programming was cleared out as though with a bulldozer." Trade ads for DJs loaded us with over 350 audition tapes from which we selected the cream to build the station. On May 2 the NEW WLS, "mid America's bright new sound," went on the air with a 24-hour-a-day music (pop), news, sports and featurette type format.

What's happened since then has been aptly described as an "Upheaval in Chicago." Chicago radio dials that hadn't been touched since Jack Benny switched from NBC to CBS in the '50s started to dial in 890. All across town, in newspapers, on tv, in movie houses (movie trailers), outdoor posters, the news spread: "There's a new sound —WLS Radio, 890 on the dial."

Today, less than a year since the new format bowed, the three rating services agree—WLS has hit the city big. Nielsen shows it running first in total homes reached in the last two surveys. Pulse finds us a bare 5% out of first place and Hooper also showing us No. 2 close on the heels of the frontrunner. Business is booming in 1961. Both local and national sales are pouring in at a record rate and interest in the station is at an alltime peak.

WLS and modern radio have finally "reached" the Chicago market. Probably for the first time in its 36 year history WLS has become a real part of the city. In our new studios and offices in the London Guarantee Building on Chicago's Boul Mich, ad agency people, advertisers, columnists, radio-tv writers and other visitors are now looking with both wonder and a new found respect at WLS. And from all indications, so are our competitors.

ABC's Man-Thin Setup Overshadowed By Its Stout Ambitions & Advances

By ART WOODSTONE

Apart from the absence of some affiliates for its daytime programming and its inability to achieve the gross billing status of either CBS-TV or NBC-TV, about the only other way ABC-TV is behind its rivals is in the size of its staff. And in this third respect, it doesn't appear as if ABC management is even anxious to overtake the other television networks.

It's difficult to be precise about how much smaller the ABC-TV operating and administrative staffs are than those at NBC-TV and CBS-TV, not without an exhaustive survey, but it's been reasonably bruited about that ABC operates with about half the manpower of each of the others.

Not all by design is ABC slim. A lot of luck (bad) and circumstance (unfortunate) made the web man-thin. It couldn't get the affiliated stations, it didn't have developmental money and, consequently, it didn't have much forefront programming, as recently. NBC and CBS have been fat in those areas since almost the beginning of commercial tv. Most of the time ABC was "the third network," and, if one believed the exhortations of the lately defunct DuMont web, ABC might even have been the "fourth network" back in 1953 and 1954.

ABC-TV has a program department in New York consisting of 10 executives, supported by three of four middle-level functionaries, plus the usual-sized network array of clerks and secretaries. There are seven ABC program execs in California, and perhaps a dozen men, counting everyone (but secretaries) in ABC sales service and client service. In Hollywood programming alone, either NBC-TV or CBS-TV could easily double the size of the entire two-coast ABC program department.

ABC-TV has 10 salesmen, but NBC has almost that number just in sales unit bosses. (not counting beat-pounding peddler). CBS-TV's sales staff (exact number presently unavailable) is thought to run up a mighty number of sales personnel, far larger than ABC has ever mustered in any given calendar year, especially the last. 1960

Six key men are in ABC-TV stations, and even there, the main guy, Jules Barnathan, still spends some of his time overseeing the general activities of his old haunt, the ABC research department.

One of the biggest of the little ABC-TV department is engineering. NABET union lists have the whole of ABC (radio and major market owned & operated stations) at something over 900 technicians and engineers. Here alone the CBS and NBC lists make ABC look, technically, like a piker.

Are their many faults in operating like an escapee from Vic Tanny's? ABC-TV's relatively small staff is easy to administrate, and at the other webs considerable money, time and energy are consumed just in seeing that large staffs jell—and also produce. Decision at ABC-TV rests in the hands of very few men — prexy Ollie Treyz, program chief Tom Moore, affiliates topper Barnathan, news boss Jim Hagerty, three men in sales and with Frank Marx, the engineering veep. Corporate topper Leonard Goldenson sits over them paternally, now and again participating in a big-money decision but most of the time leaving the decision-making and day-to-day labor to his relatively few major aides. Sy Siegel, ABC financial satchmo, is said to find it easy identifying areas of responsibility toward making out his budgets and also in finding the right man to talk to whenever a special financial situation arises. In brief, the chain of command at ABC-TV (there is one, like everywhere else) is short.

Agencies, who are sometimes dismayed at ABC-TV's "flexibility" in other directions, are nonetheless delighted at being able, most of the time, to reach an ABC executive who can make an a semi-immediate decision about some program or commercial of concern to the agency at the moment. It's true at NBC and CBS, but "not as true," one client rep observed last year.

Whether NBC and CBS will follow suit ("they're showing signs) and slim down to ABC's size is known only to CBS's James Aubrey and NBC's Bob Kirtner, but don't take bets these two webs will ever follow ABC all the way. First of all, their size relative to ABC is as the result of the same item, chance, that kept ABC small, but their size is also the result of some philosophical differences in approach to programming. Sure, CBS is on film now and, like ABC, is going outside for its programming. NBC is more on film now than ever before, but it still does some internal producing, which alone keeps its staff needs higher than ABC's.

The news area is where NBC and CBS really force staff budgets way up. Until now ABC has been tardy in that respect.

Who knows? It could be that ABC will presently have to undertake a vast staff expansion to accompany the drive by Hagerty for more news programming. "Wait until they start going outside for news," one rival networker warned last month. "That's where they're going to have to start using manpower; ABC doesn't have any idea what it's in for."

ABC-TV today is lean and by its own admission, still a mite hungry. While it doesn't register the gross billings of its rivals, CBS-TV's Aubrey, a former basketball player, and NBC's Kirtner, a man of the world, understand the sporting thing and also know the score. Having heard what can happen when an underfed kid like Jack Dempsey meets the Bull of the Pampas, they can appreciate, if not pursue, the virtue of dieting.

Remember what Caesar observed of a lean and hungry Cassius? 'Such men are dangerous," said he.

Oscar Primping For 'Biggest Yet' As TV Boffola

By JERRY ZIGMOND

Hollywood.

It may sound strange but a young, 33-year-old fellow named "Oscar" will this year attract more people than did the Presidential ballot boxes this past November.

He will be seen by more people than was any session of the 1960 Democratic or Republican nominating conventions.

The suspense he creates will affect a larger viewing audience than did Bill Mazeroski coming to bat for the Pirates in the last game of the 1960 World Series.

For among all of the stars in Hollywood, "Oscar" gets top billing Monday, April 17, when ABC-TV and Radio broadcasts the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Award show.

Some 65,000,000 people in the United States will be watching the Awards on television. More will listen to it on radio.

And it's guaranteed to be one of the biggest entertainment events of the year. It always is. Although the number of motion pictures produced and the number of theatres to exhibit them have decreased in recent years, the interest in the "Oscar" Awards has never let up for a moment.

I suppose one might describe the Awards presentation as a combination of pomp and circumstance, Hollywood glamour, stand-up humor and suspenseful drama.

All of the flashing gowns, the bright smiles and the searchlight atmosphere serve only as backgrounds for the spontaneous relieved smiles or the fleeting anguished expressions as the winners are announced.

This year's show will be produced by Arthur Freed. He and his staff have been planning an entertainment spectacular that will probably out-do anything on television this year. Bob Hope, himself an "Oscar" winner, will be master of ceremonies and Andre Previn will be musical director. A list of important stars who will participate will soon be announced.

The Board of Governors of the Academy—its President, Valentine Davies—General Chairman of the 1961 Awards, Steve Broidy—and the Executive Director of the Academy, Mrs. Margaret Herrick, have given ABC full cooperation and support through their efforts to produce the finest Academy Awards show ever telecast.

Having had a theatre background myself, I realize how important this event is to the motion picture industry and to motion picture theatres. An "Oscar" Award can add millions of dollars to the gross income of a film. The MPPA and the TOA have also given us their very finest help.

We're sure you will enjoy the show.

WABC-TV's Fashion Show

WABC-TV, the N. Y. flag for ABC-TV, will do a special "Paris Fashion Show" on Wednesday, March 15, at 7 p.m. Half-hour program, hosted by Maggi McNellis and showing spring fashions from France and Italy, is being fully sponsored by Ohrbach's, N. Y. department store.

WXYZ-TV's Bigtime Bid For Vidtape Commercial Laurels

By JOHN F. PIVAL
(President, WXYZ, Inc.)

Detroit.

The tremendous growth of ABC has not robbed the company of what is perhaps its greatest quality —the willingness to pioneer new concepts in entertainment and the business of broadcasting itself.

When broadcasting was a "voice without pictures," WXYZ and George Trendle created and inaugurated many new types of entertainment—most notably—the early evening adventure series. Broadcasting from a small rented studio in downtown Detroit, WXYZ originated such programs as "The Lone Ranger," "The Green Hornet" and "Sgt. Preston of the Yukon." For nearly 20 years, audiences throughout the nation thrilled to these programs which required a little imagination and an occasional boxtop to return to the thrilling days of yesteryear, to "Cato's" secret subterranean garage or to the frozen northwest.

It's fitting that as ABC celebrates an anniversary, WXYZ is beginning a new and challenging venture. The station is making a full scale entrance into a business which has been considered out of its domain—the creation and production of video tape commercials . . . particularly for network advertisers.

To a certain extent, WXYZ-TV was at first pursued by the idea rather than being the pursuer. Local advertisers had been availing themselves of the station's unique production facilities for some time, and the word began to spread. National accounts began to use the facilities—among them: Lincoln-Mercury, Massey-Ferguson, Reynolds Metals, Chrysler and others. In January of this year, the Tape Commercial Division was formed headed by Ralph Dawson. Creative personnel for the division will be drawn from the station's veteran "pros." It is a complete unit requiring no aid from outside sources. The unit includes writers, producers, directors, stage hands, engineers, lighting experts, carpenters, marketing specialists, and graphic artists.

The pro and con of video tape over film has been developed at length for some time now, and doesn't need repeating here. You save time and money only if you have the personnel, facilities, and the know how. We've licked one of the tape's irritating drawbacks —matching, to a great extent, the special optical effects available on celluloid—but doing it quickly and economically. WXYZ-TV solved the problem through the installation of a radically new special effects amplifier and a workshop experimentation to catalog the wide range of film effects. How many tape production centers are turning out reverse action? Matting effects, as well as electronically reducing the full raster to postage stamp size are simple jobs for our Tape Commercial Division. But, it's not enough to be able to duplicate the most difficult effects achieved in New York and Holly-

My Enchanted City

By DAVID M. SACKS
(V.P., KGO-TV)

San Francisco.

San Francisco is truly the Golden City of the West.

From the moment that he first hears the sound of the deep voiced foghorns mingled with the ringing of the cable car bells, a visitor to San Francisco is infused with the magical enchantment of this City. And this enchantment never fades, even if he becomes a resident of this "Baghdad by the Bay."

We who live and work within its charming borders regard San Francisco affectionately, and we can lovingly and minutely describe to a visitor all of her famous streets and landmark—Knob Hill, Market Street, Fisherman's Wharf, Telegraph Hill and Chinatown.

And, if we know the visitor well enough, we will introduce him to the alleys of North Beach, to the exclusive World Trade Club in the Ferry Building, to the glamorous "Admiral's Table at Trader Vic's," or sneak him into the "other room" at the Hungry I, or beg for him a sidewalk table at Enrico's Coffee House, or take him to sit on the dock at Sam's with our feet dangling in the Bay while we eat hamburgers on sour dough French bread, watching the sail boats act as canvas fence around Alcatraz.

But San Francisco is not just today. Its yesterday was rich and colorful and adventuresome, too. The history and beauty of this magnificent city has been thoroughly and lushly described in hundreds of exciting books. Herb Caen, the "poet laureate" of San Francisco, has written six books on it — all true labors of love on the part of this talented, creative writer who treats the city as a mistress and who expresses for us less eloquent residents of the joys of living in "My Enchanted City."

And station KGO-TV is a part, an integral part, of the Golden City. We are part of its story—we have contributed to its culture —and we are now wedded to its growth.

Our station's character is embodied in the men and things that truly express the city's greatness.

On KGO-TV, Herb Caen's "Baghdad by the Bay" is an hour and a half of compelling conversation, with our city's viewers intently eavesdropping, on Herb and his guest as they explore all of

People Talking to People —That's The KQV Story

By JOHN D. GIBBS
(General Manager, KQV)

Pittsburgh.

In three short years, following its acquisition by the American Broadcasting Co. KQV Radio revolutionized the industry in the Pittsburgh market.

Launching a drive to serve Pittsburgh and the Tri-State area in the public interest, KQV moved its entire operation into showcase studios at the busy intersection of Seventh Ave. and Smithfield Street. KQV took radio to the people. It was people talking to people. It became part of the community. And the community liked what it saw and heard. It received KQV. KQV became the byword in Pittsburgh Radio enjoying top community acceptance as adjudged by commendations from leading civic and business officials as well as leading rating services.

KQV, through constant planned programs of public education for the area's various educational, charitable, civic, religious and service organizations, serves the community in a manner second to none in Metropolitan Pittsburgh.

Each year, more than 125 different public agencies benefit to the extent of more than 13,000 announcements . . . a KQV service to Pittsburgh. This is in addition to the numerous program presentations and features scheduled throughout the year as special events.

To indicate the extent to which KQV devotes its interest to public service, there follows a brief summary of just a few of the outstanding ventures undertaken and completed by KQV Radio.

In August 1959, KQV conducted the world's first Polio Clinic to be held by a radio station. It was, at the same time, according to the National Foundation, the largest Polio Clinic ever held. KQV purchased polio vaccine; the Allegheny County Health Department provided nursing personnel, syringes and needles; and volunteer workers from the Red Cross and the Mothers March on Polio assumed various other duties. From opening day, Aug. 24, until Aug. 28, three hours per day, the Pittsburgh public jammed the Clinic to receive their polio shots. At the end of the 15-hour period, statistics showed that 10,000 Pittsburghers had received their polio shots at the KQV Polio Clinic.

A Day To Remember

"Million Dollar Monday" was another demonstration of what can happen when a radio station really gets behind a community project. In this case, the United Fund of Allegheny County. United Fund leaders knew that the Employee Fair Share Contribution program was in for rough sledding and were looking for an attention-getting device. They came to KQV with their problem. KQV proposed a dramatic, day-long promotion entitled "Million Dollar Monday." The attention-getting device was a staff of the highest priced talent ever heard on a radio station. The talent was recruited by the United Fund and KQV launched an extensive promotion campaign to alert the public of something special. Monday, Oct. 26, 1959, was a day long to be remembered by spectators who daily jam the Showcase Studio windows, as well as the audience in the home and on the road. This visible and unseen audience gaped . . . and listened in amazement and disbelief, as the KQV microphones were manned by disk jockeys and announcers, unknown to broadcasting, but extremely familiar in business and industry and the social register. The talent roster for the day included, among others, Fred C. Foy, President of Koppers Co.; Ralph Winslow, Vice President of Koppers; J. Stanley Purnell, Assistant to the President, T. Mellon & Sons; Glenn F. Kinckerbocker, Vice President, Kroger Co.; and John A. Feigel, President of Pittsburgh Central Labor Union. At the day's end, leaders expressed the view . . . "Million Dollar Monday was basic to the success of the United Fund Campaign."

The night of Nov. 8th, 1960, will go down as one of the most exciting election nights in the history of our country. KQV's tremendous "Get Out The Vote" campaign . . . probably the most extensive radio build-up in the history of Pittsburgh radio . . . played an important role in the record turnout at the Allegheny County polling places. Starting on Oct. 1, KQV engaged in an all-out effort to "Get Out The Vote." Messages urging people to vote were recorded by local citizens: President-Elect Kennedy and Vice Presidential Candidate Lodge taped spots urging KQV listeners to vote; grade school children, future citizens of America, asked their parents to vote and to encompass every group, KQV ran a "Get Out The Vote" poster contest in all the high schools with winners receiving Savings Bonds. Winning posters were publicly displayed. Climaxing the drive, KQV conducted its second annual Presidential Pulse Poll. Volunteers from the League of Women Voters, the Civic League and Chatham College manned a battery of phones in the KQV Studios. More than 22,000 listeners cast their straw votes. When the ballots were tabulated, President-Elect John F. Kennedy drew 55% of the votes, an accurate indication of the next day's election results in Allegheny County's vote.

Many other undertakings, in the public interest, too numerous to mention have established convincingly that KQV Radio was, is and will continue to be a vital force in the new Pittsburgh.

Changing Face Of Daytime TV

By JERRY CHESTER
(ABC V.P. in Charge of Daytime Programming)

Somewhat less than two and a half years ago, ABC Television introduced three-way network competition into daytime television by launching a full schedule of new, cross-the-board, daytime programming with a radically different pattern of sponsorship and a markedly reduced scale of prices for daytime advertisers.

The result has been impressive. There has been a transformation in daytime television that is both deep and permanent. The sheltered economy of limited two-network competition collapsed under the pressure of the new competition with benefits to the millions of viewers who now find their range of network program choice extended by 50% and to the many advertisers who now find the cost of network daytime advertising within their means.

What has been good for the advertisers and viewers, however, has produced enormous competitive pressure among the three networks.

When ABC-TV went into daytime, we realistically priced our time charges at "D" rates instead of our competitors' "C" rates—one-third of nighttime charge instead of one-half—because daytime sets-in-use were closer to one-third rather than one-half of nighttime. In addition, we provided for a pattern of dispersion and rotation of a sponsor's commercial throughout our daytime schedule. This was a departure from the conventional quarter-hour weekly or alternate weekly purchase with commercial limited to a single program. ABC-TV advertisers liked the idea of this "balanced portfolio" and spread their commercial minutes in different shows on different days of the week. Our sponsorship pattern not only provided more predictable circulation but also increased the total circulation reached by these commercials.

Our network competitors have not failed to react to these innovations. Through a variety of devices they, too, are now permitting advertisers to achieve greater commercial dispersion and, through bonus plans and special discounts, they also have reduced time charges in order to cope with the new realities of network daytime television.

In programming, the changes have been no less marked.

In daytime, with a homogeneous, habit-bound housewife audience, we were forced to compete mainly within the established program forms — audience participation game and human-interest shows, dramas with a continuing form or set of characters, personalities, and reruns of half-hour nighttime film successes. Within these forms we have seen the usual result of effective competition—survival of the fittest and most satisfying to the public. It would probably be illuminating, as well as embarrassing, to set forth the roll call of lumbering, poor quality daytime programs that managed to survive a two-network economy, but which disappeared from the schedule under three-way competition. In the past two years, in a single half-hour time period, six different program series have appeared on the other networks to compete against our program—in another time period, another network has had five different shows during the same interval. All this turnover in an area of programming where successful shows are telecast for five, eight and 10 years without replacement; after all, "The Price is Right" is now in its fifth year and "Search for Tomorrow" is in its 12th.

This is not to say that we have not had our own share of program failures. That we have had. Failure and change are part of growth, and we have learned much in the prosess. We will continue to experiment and to change until we hit the winning combination

It's Not 'Where Are We Going' But 'Where Have We Been?'

ELTON H. RULE
(ABC VP-Gen. Mgr. KABC-TV)

Los Angeles.

"Where have we been?" has now replaced the question asked by all of us 10 years ago. At that time the great unknown was expressed by the question "Where are we going?"

It is very difficult to be completely objective in reviewing the series of circumstances which have contributed to the present position of KABC-TV in Los Angeles, particularly when our destinies are so unalterably entwined with those of the ABC Television Network. It has often been said that an owned and operated station is nothing more than a vehicle or "mirror" of the network. Certainly this is true to a degree, but there is a great deal more responsibility and creative effort involved than is apparent at first glance.

Originally, in the early crawling stages of the network, there was no network service during daytime hours and very little during nighttime. We were therefore forced to program and operate as an independent station. There actually was no awareness on the part of the viewing public that there was such a thing as the American Broadcasting Co. as far as television was concerned. As time went on ABC matured and began to blossom. After the merger with Paramount Theatres in early 1953, more and better network programming increased the stature of Channel 7.

1954 produced "Disneyland" and the excitement of Walt Disney . . . 1955 the "Mickey Mouse Club," "Wyatt Earp," Wednesday Night Fights and Lawrence Welk. 1957 brought ABC-TV network service into daytime programming, along with "Maverick," "Real McCoys," "Cheyenne," and Frank Sinatra. And so the story of success has been told and retold by many, in and out of the broadcasting industry.

Where have we been? . . . KABC-TV has kept pace with the strides of the network and the growth of the market. We pioneered the "court" show format, first as a local production and then as a producer for the network. We have developed the most popular local tv children's personality in Los Angeles and in recent years have acquired topflight syndicated properties to augment our live programming.

Coast Flagship

As the network's flagship station in the West, KABC-TV's facilities have become the finest, offering the best in equipment and personnel. KABC-TV enjoys an unusual

(Gen. Manager, KGO Radio)

San Francisco.

From Chihuahua, Mexico to Clam Gulch, Alaska, the golden sounds of KGO's 50,000-watt clear channel signal provide a maximum of entertainment, information and education to listeners all along the Pacific Coast. New personalities are featured over this 38-year-old ABC owned station and are fast becoming favorites of the radio listeners within the reach of KGO's mighty voice.

KGO, like other ABC owned stations, presents a solid news format of ABC Network newscasts—"live at :55"—with news of national and international developments. Along with the ABC Network lineup of newscasters, KGO also broadcasts the solid and popular lineup of ABC-Pacific feature news personalities. Local news is presented at 25 minutes past the hour. However—whenever news breaks out, KGO breaks in—with news in bulletin style. This impressive news format is the reason behind KGO's fast-growing reputation for complete and frequent news coverage.

KGO's music format of album and popular single tunes which supplement KGO's adult news image, includes a great number of the memorable golden disk numbers which racked up history-making popularity and sales.

The golden sound of KGO at 810 keeps its listeners informed on the San Francisco-Northern California weather, traffic and road conditions, snow and ski reports from Northern California's heralded winter resorts, along with news of the beaches, tides, swimming and fishing conditions.

Active participation and promotion of San Francisco's cultural, civic enterprises and public affairs make up an important and integral part of KGO's daily broadcast schedule.

Northern Californians are discovering daily that KGO, once called the "sleeping giant," is sleeping no more. KGO is awake and aware!

Now, KGO at eight-one-o is on the go and striding forward on every front, becoming more important every day as a source of entertainment, information and education.

KABC: The Kilocycle That Went Thataway

By BEN HOBERMAN
(ABC V.P. General Mgr., KABC-Radio)

Los Angeles.

After taking a long, objective look at itself and the community it serves, KABC Radio under my guidance added a new dimension to radio in Los Angeles on Aug. 1, 1960.

Surveying stations in the area, we had noted a deadly sameness in the output of the over 30 AM and 24 FM stations which make up our opposition, with the music and news formula being followed almost exclusively.

Recognizing the needs of mature listeners, KABC decided to go the other way, and offer something entirely different—to present conversational-type programming, featuring a lineup of strong, stimulating personalities. The program format demands attentive listening. People tune to KABC not to hear it, but to listen to it.

The basic hourly format is comprised of 15 minutes of news in depth, followed by 45 minutes of stimulating conversation. There is a minimum of music on the air, during peak "traffic time" morning and afternoon, and these time periods are loaded with services and information features.

The reaction of press and public was immediate, and very gratifying. For example, Don Page of the Los Angeles Times in his year-end nominations for "Best of 1960" picked KABC as "the most improved station" and as one of "the most progressive stations" in Los Angeles.

For its daily opener, KABC selected Red McIlvaine whose whimsical humor and warm personality have quickly endeared him to early rising Los Angeles radio listeners, and he is in constant demand as an entertainer at civic and fraternal gatherings.

Also added were the audience participation show, "Open Line," on which listeners are invited to phone and give their answers to preselected questions; Myron J. Bennett, a well known philosopher-type of conversationalist; the wise and witty Pamela Mason, wife of actor James Mason, who talks about everything under the sun; and Wendell Noble with a program of hand-picked highlights from the world of magazine and books.

Also on KABC's stimulating bill-of-fare are features such as the controversial "Candid Session" with Pat Michaels as moderator, interviewing outstanding authorities on a wide range of subjects and allowing listeners to also question the guest; nutrition consultant Carlton Fredericks, and "Night Line" with Reed Browning as host, a show on which people are invited to phone and express their thoughts on any subject, and Angelenos are kept abreast of events which take place around our town, by Browning's outgoing phone calls.

Always a leader in the promotion of charitable and cultural community activities, KABC strengthened its position in this area by inaugurating its "Public Service Project of the Month" in September, 1960, with a specific charity designed to receive a month-long saturation campaign participated in by all of the station's star personalities. Aided through the project have been the non-sectarian Sunair Home and Hospital for Asthmatic Children; "New Eyes for the Needy," and special campaigns for Community Chest, St. Vincent de Paul Society, "Blind Men of Vision," and the Los Angeles County Heart Association. These are examples of the aggressive means which the station has used to make KABC synonymous with Los Angeles.

ABC's $75,000,000 TV Commitments On '61-'62 Season

Directly after Procter & Gamble returned to ABC-TV its annual $22,000,000 investment, Brown & Williamson, Ralston-Purina and American Tobacco came home to roost with the first of their heavy ABC investments for '61-'62.

One of the key buys was Ralston's pindown of Fridays-at-8 for the new Peggy Cass (working with chimps) situationer. Sponsor also renewed "Leave It to Beaver."

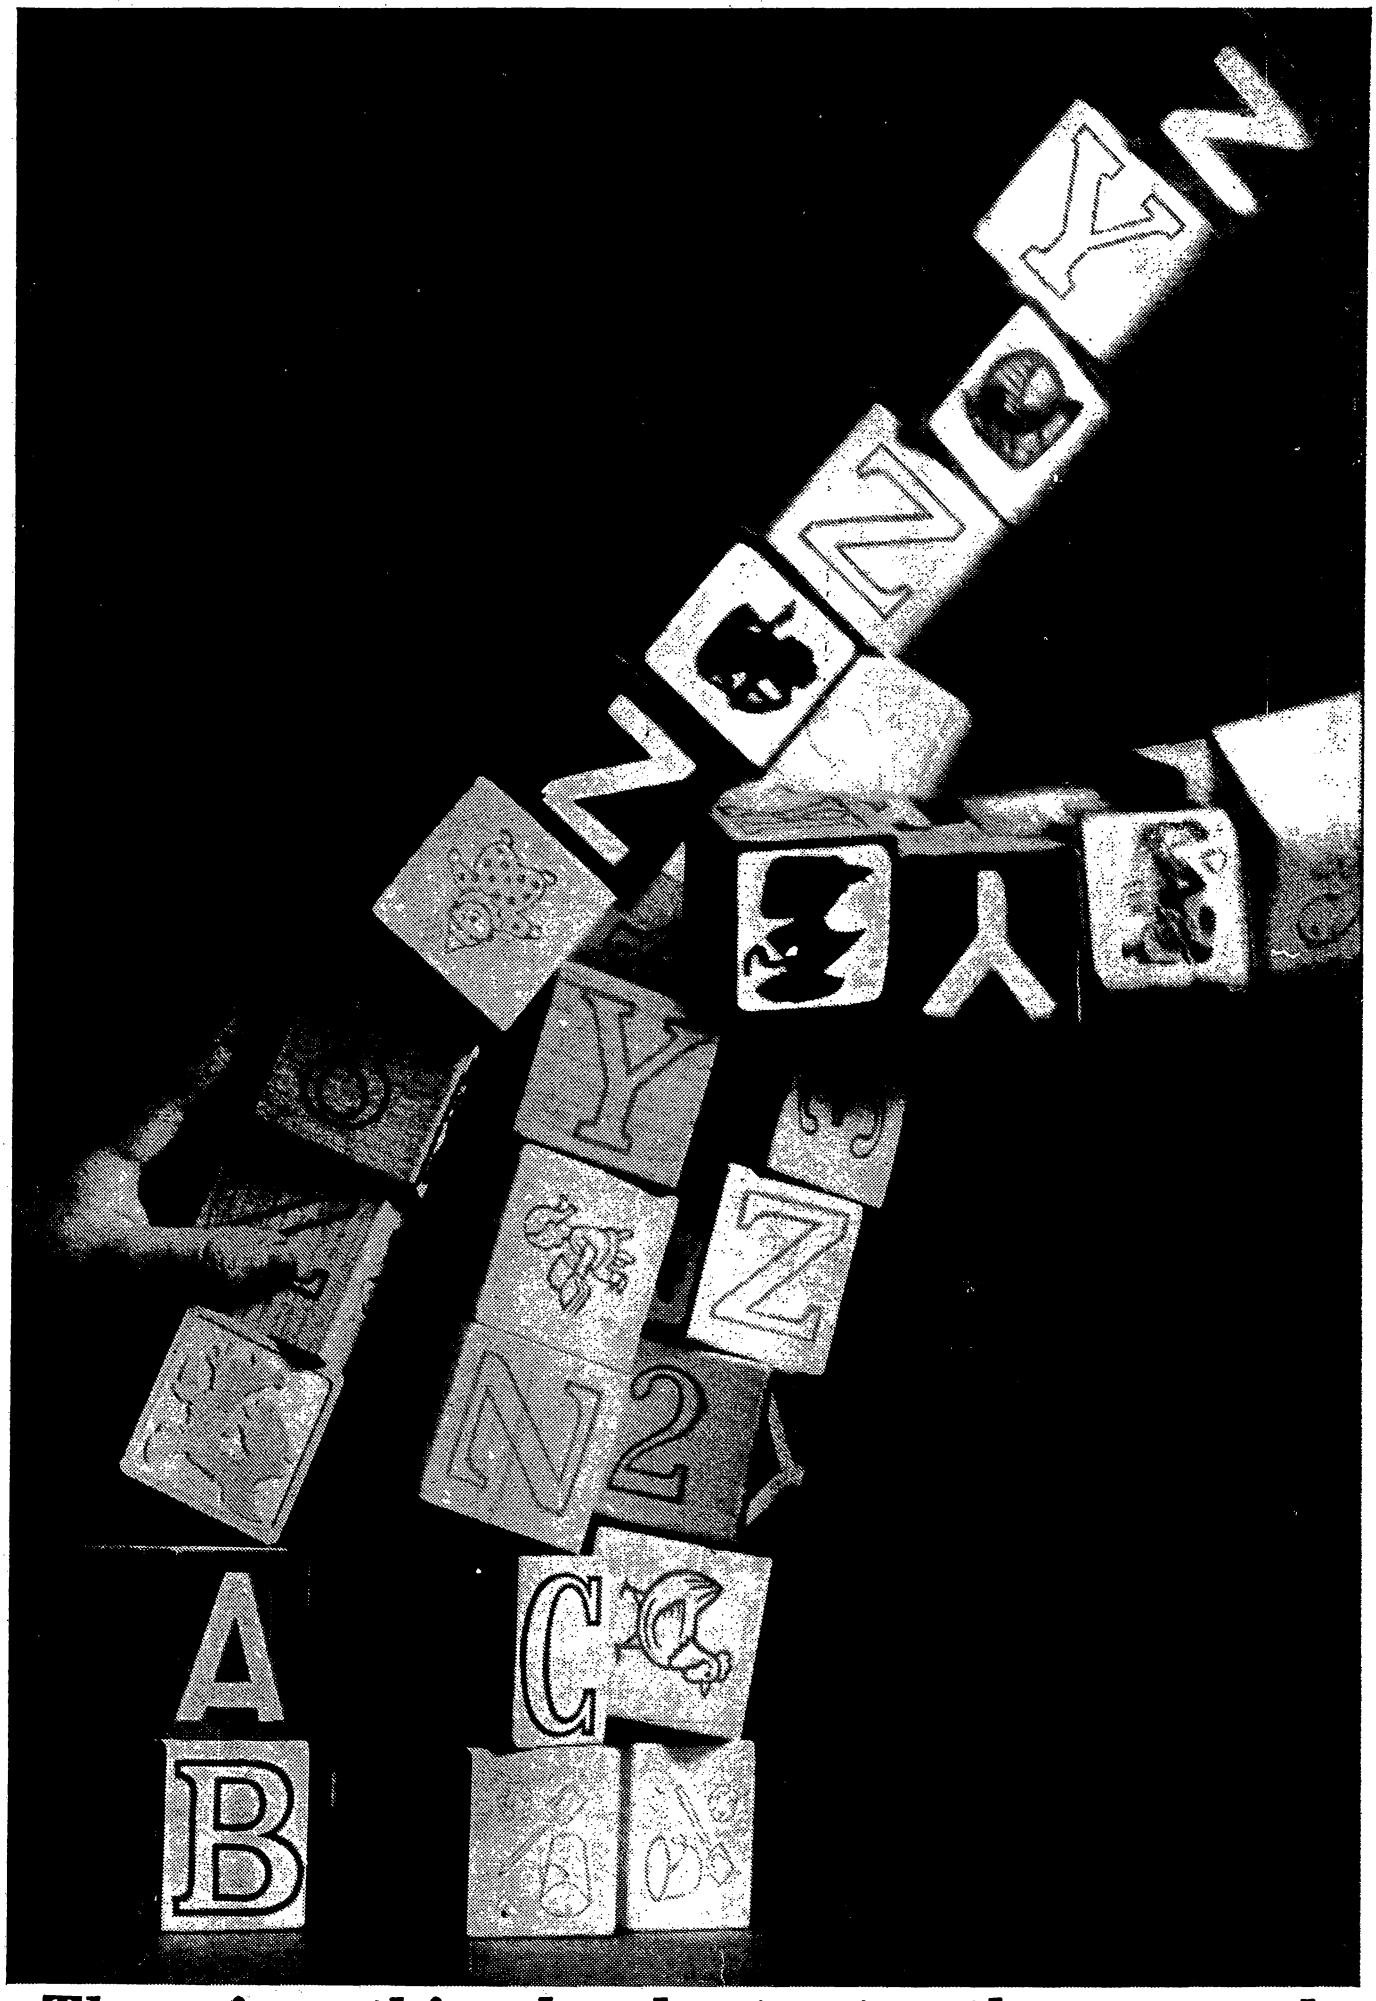
Brown & Williamson bought alternate half-hours in the new "Las Vegas" skein, a like amount of time once more in "Surfside 6," and a full third in next season's "Naked City." American Tobacco took a third of "Cheyenne."

This and other business floating around last week at ABC-TV caused the networks to announce $73,000,000 in fall business. Within two hours after the announcement on Thursday (23), the network had another $2,000,000 (Bristol-Myers for "Top Cat." Previously, Kelloggs had signed for half of the animated skein.)

B-M's 'Top Cat' Coin

Bristol-Myers has decided on a half-sponsorship next season of the new Hanna-Barbera animated situationer, "Top Cat." They joined Kelloggs.

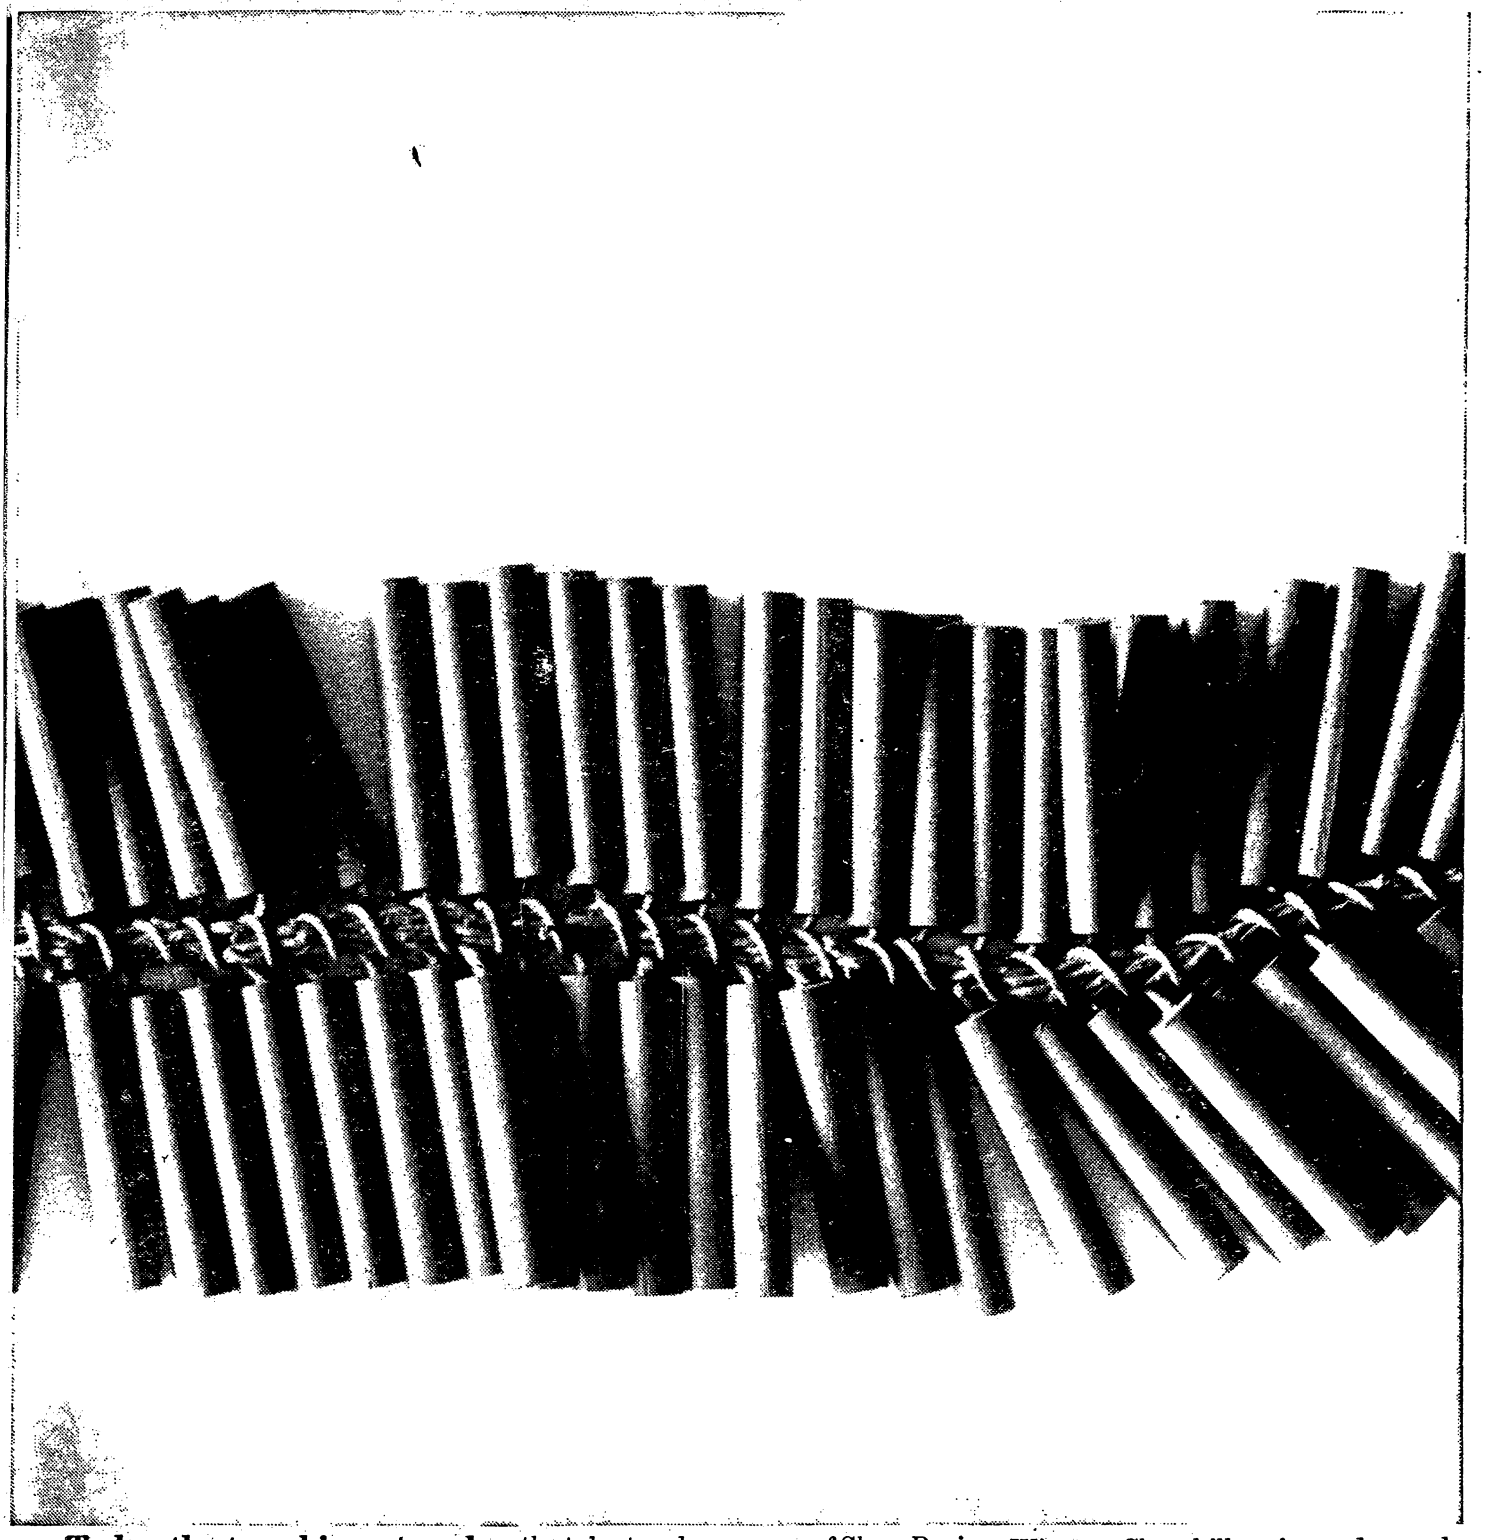
ABC-TV, which underwrote "Cat," has slotted in Wednesdays from 8:30 to 9 p.m.



There is nothing harder to stop than a trend.

(Consider, specifically, this 8-year trend...)

There is nothing harder to stop than a trend.



Today the trend in network programming is to ABC-TV.

Eight years and many Nielsens ago, a medium-sized dream called ABC and a large-sized company called Paramount Theatres pooled their resources and mutual interests—and became the force called AB-PT.

The day after the pooling, something happened. A trend started getting born.

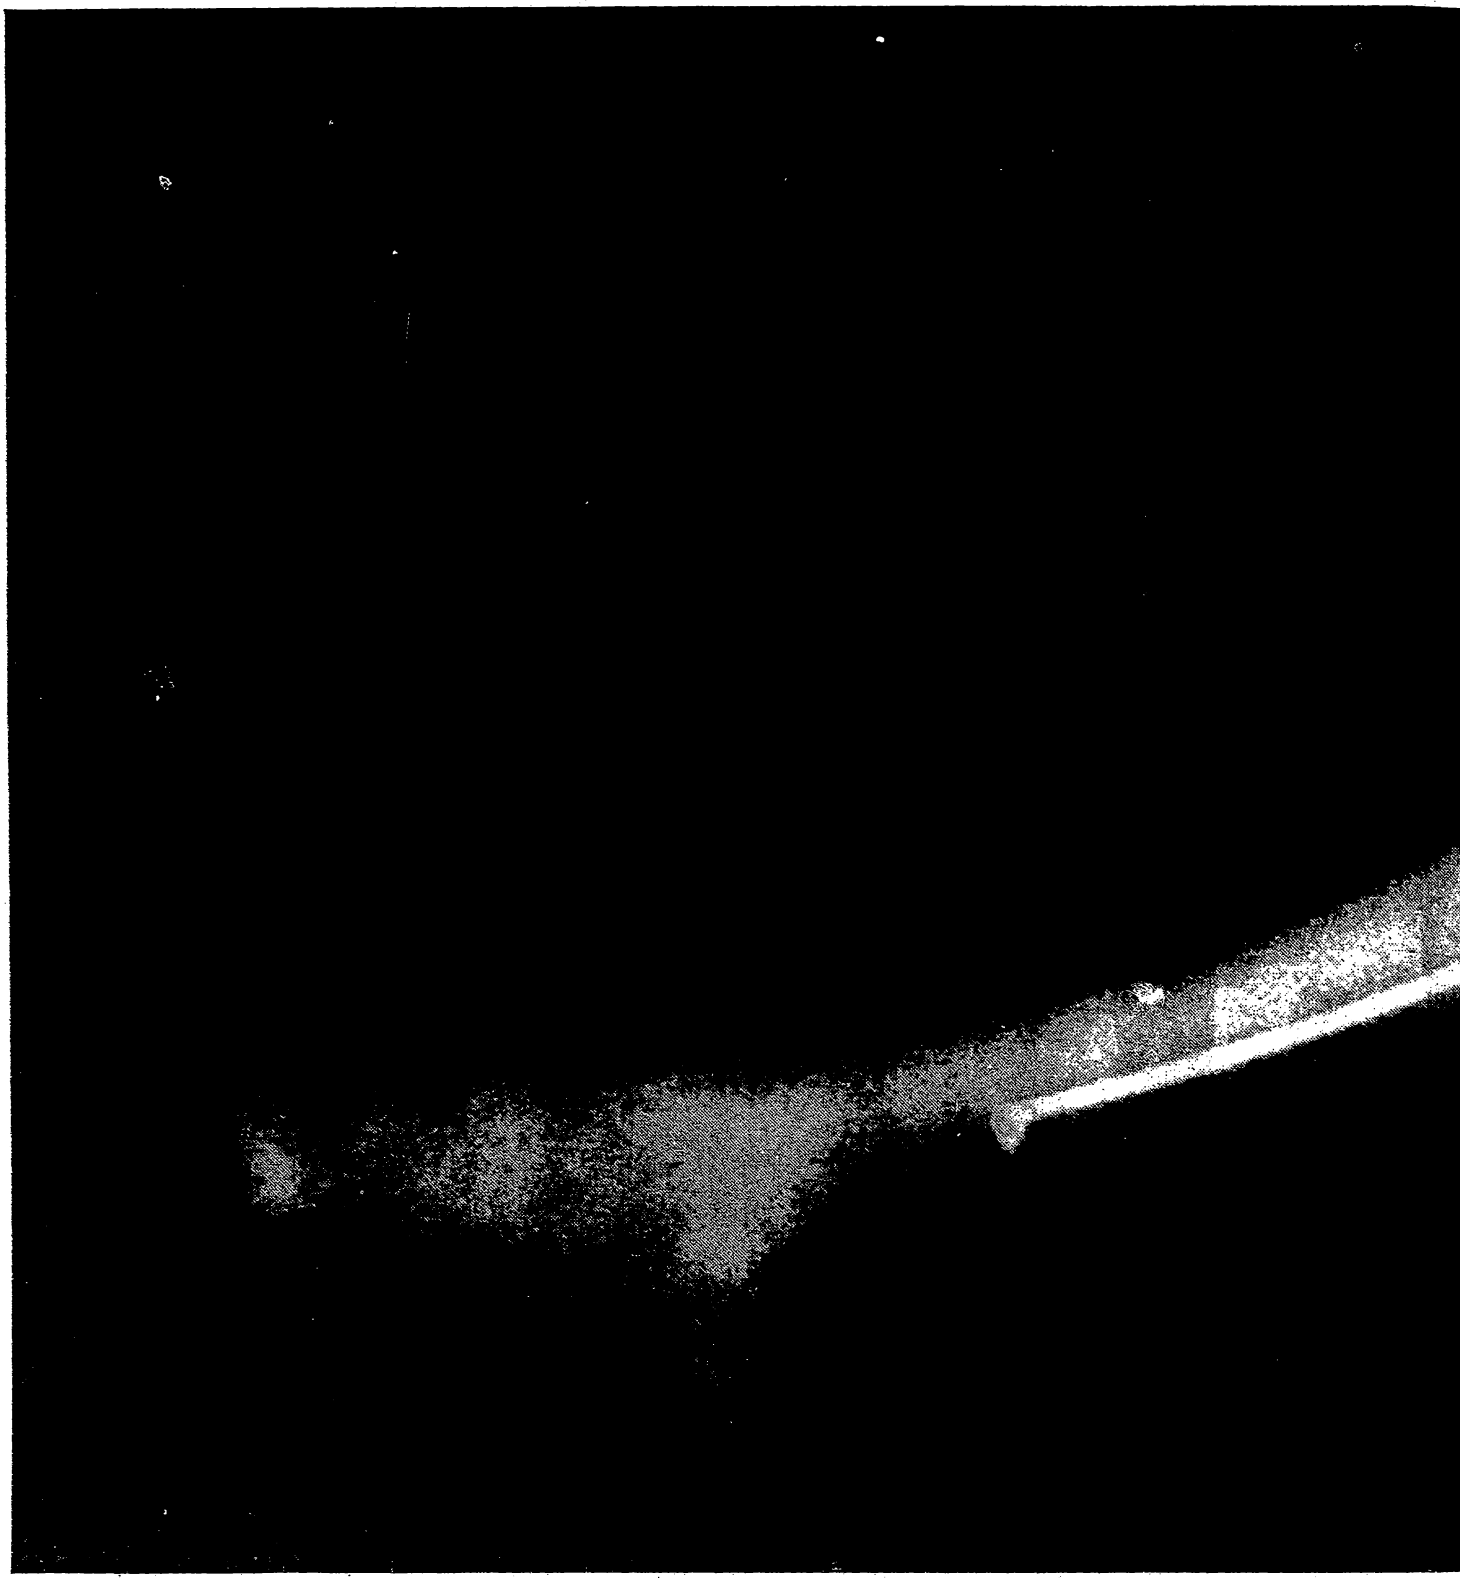
It was a trend in everybody's favorite direction—up. ABC Television started making its mark in the market place with its own programming strength. The extra dimension was added—Hollywood. For the first time, the talent and resources of Show Businessland (from N.Y. and L.A.) took on the business of entertaining television's hungry eyers.

History has it that this merger came on strong in such ABC-TV shows as: Maverick. 77 Sunset Strip. The Untouchables. Nor was the trend to be confined to off-beat westerns, private eyes with a switch, a new twist in cops 'n' robbers. As the network grew in programming strengths, new strengths came into being. ABC was to assemble the greatest spectator sports panoply in TV. ABC was to push ahead with numerous programs in the public interest including such grand-scale adventures as the 26-part Winston Churchill series and award-winning documentaries like Cast the First Stone.

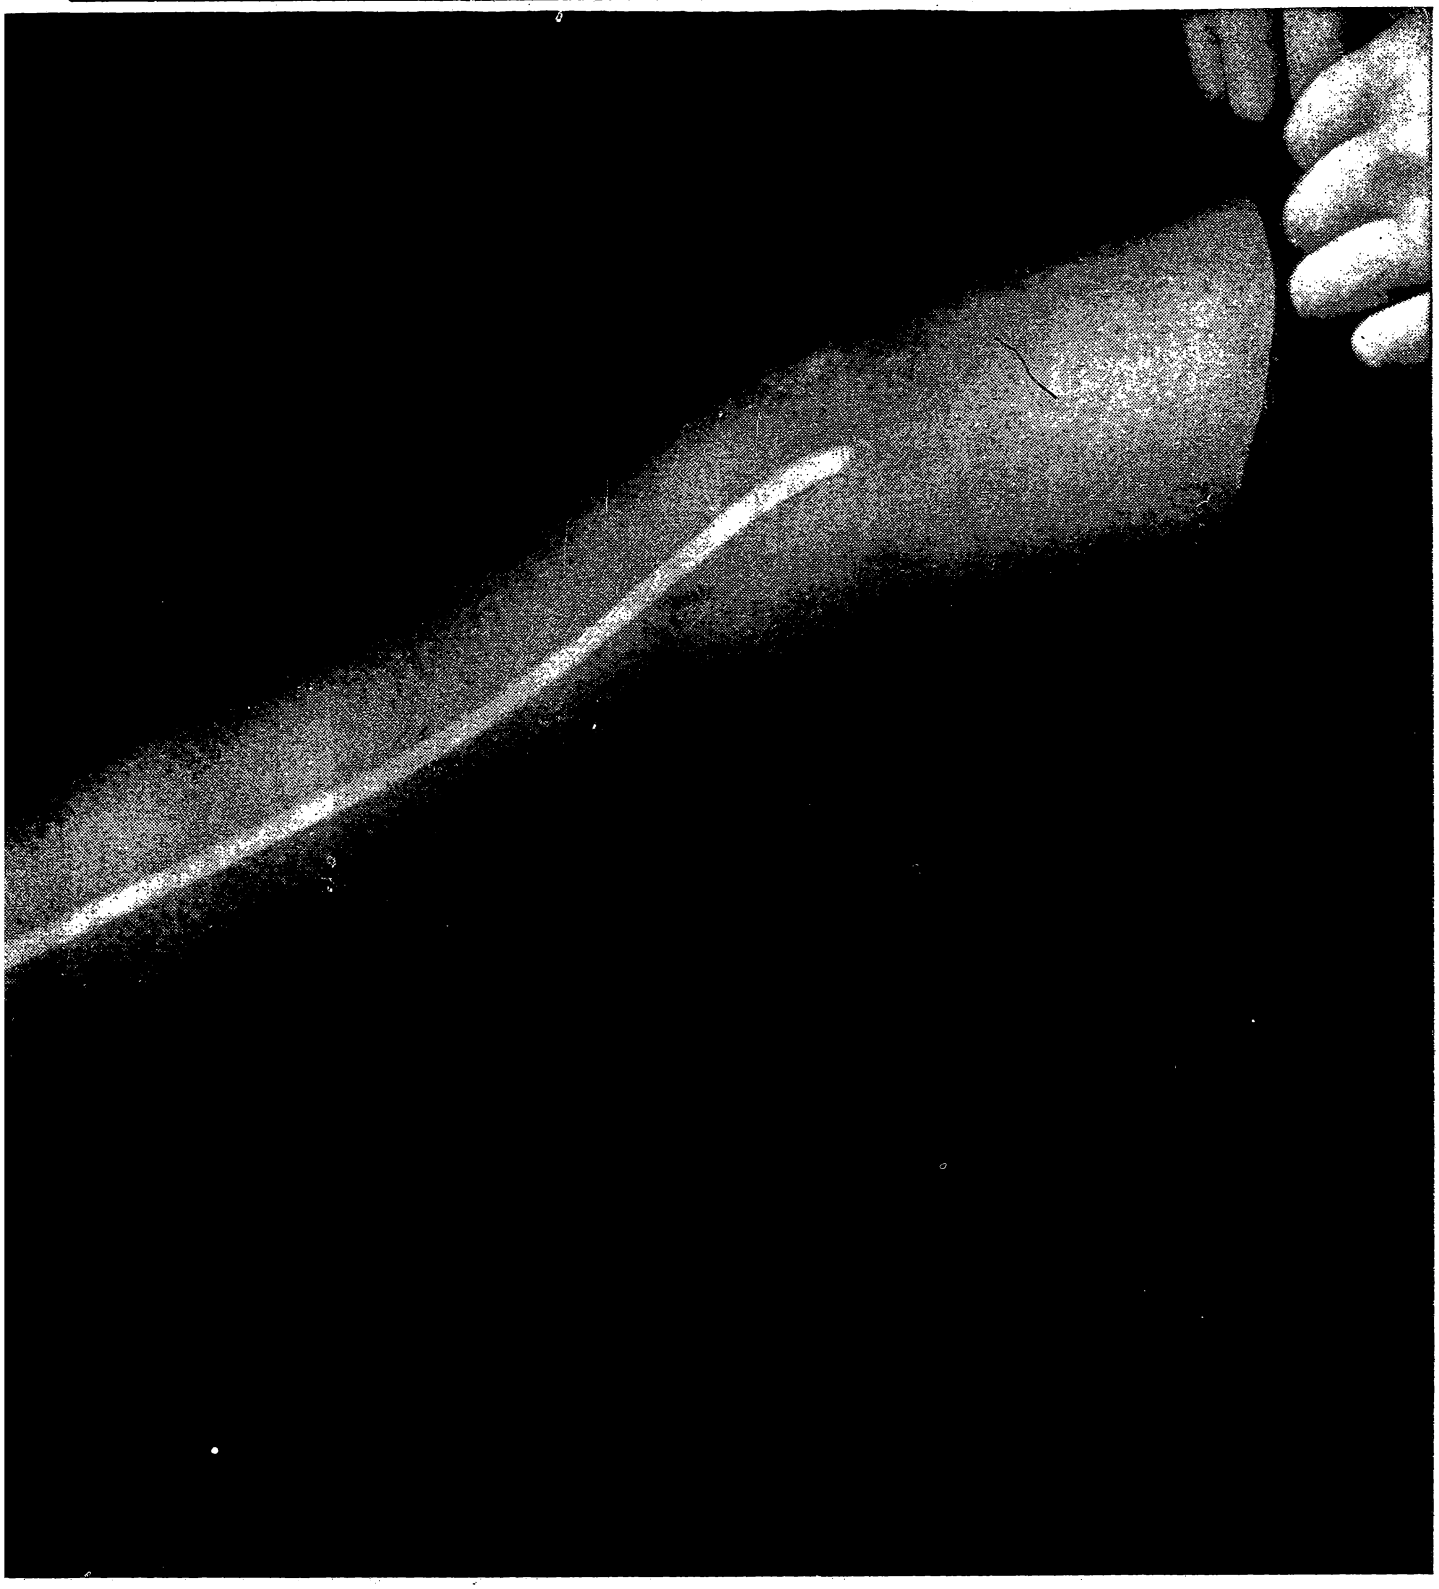
And ABC was to continue to pioneer in pure entertainment. Witness The Flintstones, My Three Sons—currently the only two brand new shows to show up in the top ten.* (In this top ten, the Select Circle, ABC, incidentally, has copped five.)

The future trend, we can rest assured, will continue and will be abetted by such upcoming newcomers as: The Corrupters, The Hunters, Bus Stop, Top Cat (animated series by the producers of The Flintstones), The Chimps, Calvin and the Colonel, Doctor Kate, Stage '61.

*Source: 50 Market Nielsen TV Reports, Average Audience Jan. I & II. Feb. I, 1961



There is nothing harder to stop than a trend.



Today the trend in Sponsor Enthusiasm is to ABC-TV.

Eight years ago, when ABC and Paramount Theatres merged imaginations, we had a fair bunch of far-thinking sponsors. To be exact, 16 sponsors.

Today, there are 140 sponsors. A number quite literally too numerous to enumerate.

Suffice it, ABC-TV billings for 1960 were up 30%—far outstripping the industry's rate of gain.

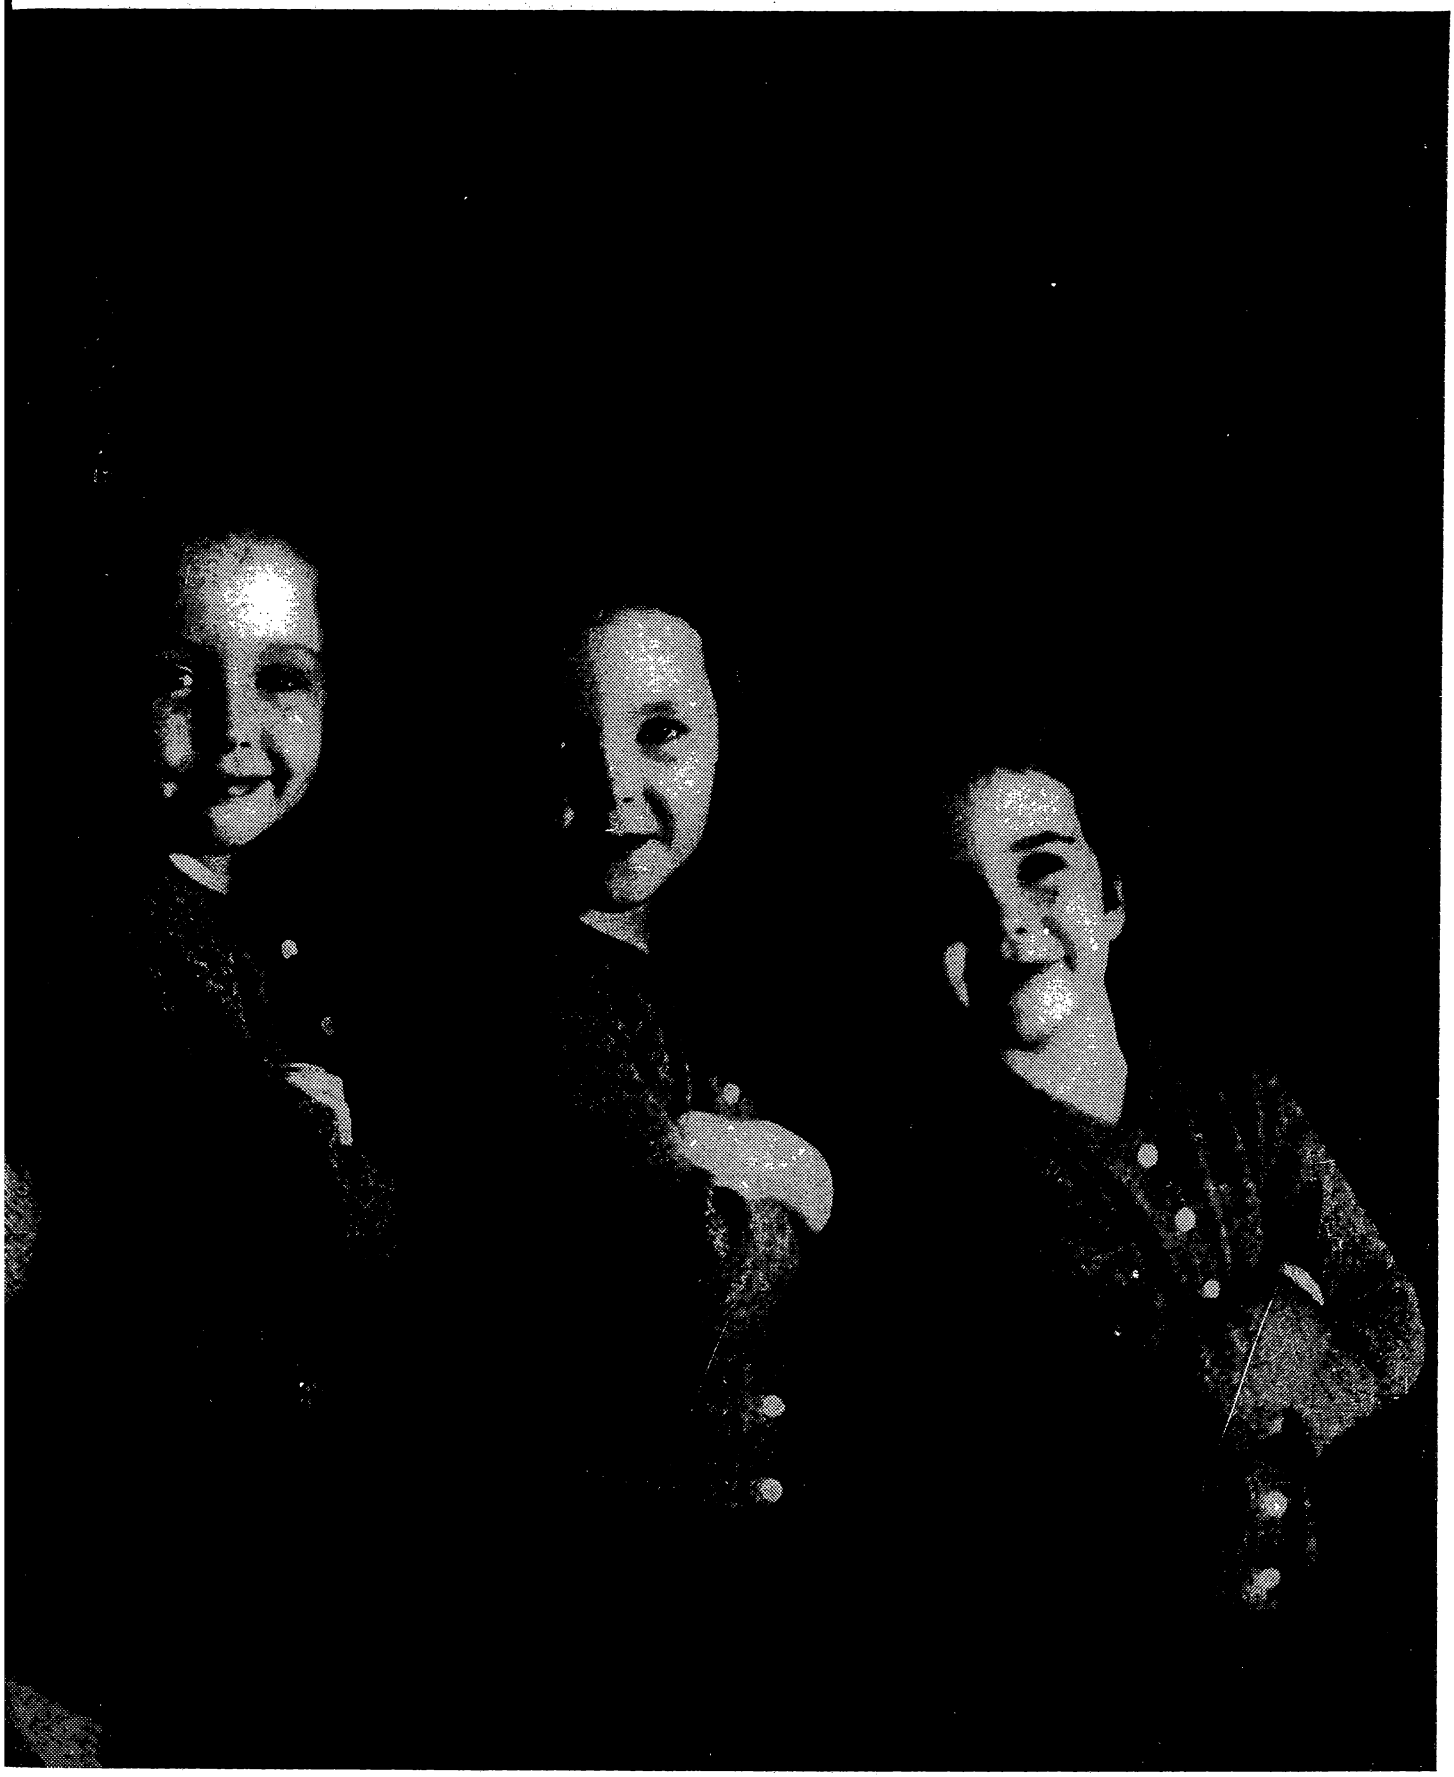
The sponsors helped us achieve this gain, of course. By their good dollars. By their good-sense recognition of ABC-TV's efficiency. (An average evening program's CPM/CM, for instance, is from 18% to 24% more efficient than networks Y or Z as reported in the current Nielsen November-December 1960 CPM Report.)

This lively dollar enthusiasm among sponsors waxed apace, naturally, with the lengthening reach of the network. Where a typical evening lineup in 1953 might include some 35 stations, the total for a similar evening in 1961 would come to some 149 stations. Virtually 95% coverage of the nation's TV homes.

This station trend to ABC-TV affiliating is easy to understand. Cases in point: Seattle-Tacoma, Portland, Ore., Richmond, Va., Salt Lake City, and most recently, Boston. In each of these markets, the affiliate switch to ABC from another network had immediate and gratifying results. Average evening weekly share of audience jumped from 28% to 52%. Each of the stations is now first in its market. Two-channel markets that have just recently joined ABC-TV as primary affiliates (in happy salute to The Trend) are: Birmingham, Toledo, Erie, Charleston, S.C., Kearney, Neb., Rockford, Ill., Lexington, Ky., Redding-Chico, Calif.

Sponsors and stations, we feel, will continue to benefit by the trend.

There is nothing harder to stop than a trend



Today the big audience trend is to ABC-TV.

Eight years ago, when ABC and Paramount Theatres joined futures, the new network's ratings were relatively non-existent.

Hardly a month went by, from then till now, that did not usher in some new gratifying ratings leap.

The trend in '61 continues (How else could it be a trend?) to be very ABC-TV. Each of the 8 Nielsen TV Reports* so far in '61 tells precisely the same success story: ABC-TV is the strong network week nights, the strongest network all week.

Consistently, where viewers have a choice of all three, they choose ABC-TV most.

It's a trend. Right?

ABC RADIO
With the new "Flair" program leading the way, everything is upbeat at ABC Radio. "Breakfast Club" sales up! "News" sales up!
"Sports" sales up! "Programming" up! (25 hours and 50 minutes per week of new programming added in the last six months.)
Just look up and you'll see it for yourself — the vital, new image of ABC Radio.

Here's stirring news about a syndicated series with many of the most successful ingredients ever brewed. Help yourself to big new audience interest, powerful new sales values, with a brand new series from ABC Films—"Consult Dr. Brothers." This one has everything—proven adult appeal of psychologically oriented adult subjects... a proven personality with a national reputation... proven track record, critical acclaim, sponsor acceptance.

Prove it all to yourself—ask your ABC Films, Inc. salesman about "Consult Dr. Brothers"—195 five-minute segments or 65 quarter-hours—ideal for stripping. It's the perfect prestige vehicle with popularity plus. It's the series that was sold at first sight when it was pretested before a hard-to-please panel of top station executives.

KGO-TV, the New KGO-TV, is capturing the flavor, the fascination, the fun of San Francisco in a flurry of television shows that echo the charm of this Queen City of the Pacific:
● "Baghdad By The Bay", a 90-minute conversation show as stimulating and refreshing as a Pacific breeze over the Golden Gate Bridge
● "Expedition — California", a compelling history series as nostalgic as a tintype of yesterday's ferry boats
● "Headline Edition", a daily news show as lively as a ride on the Powell street cable car

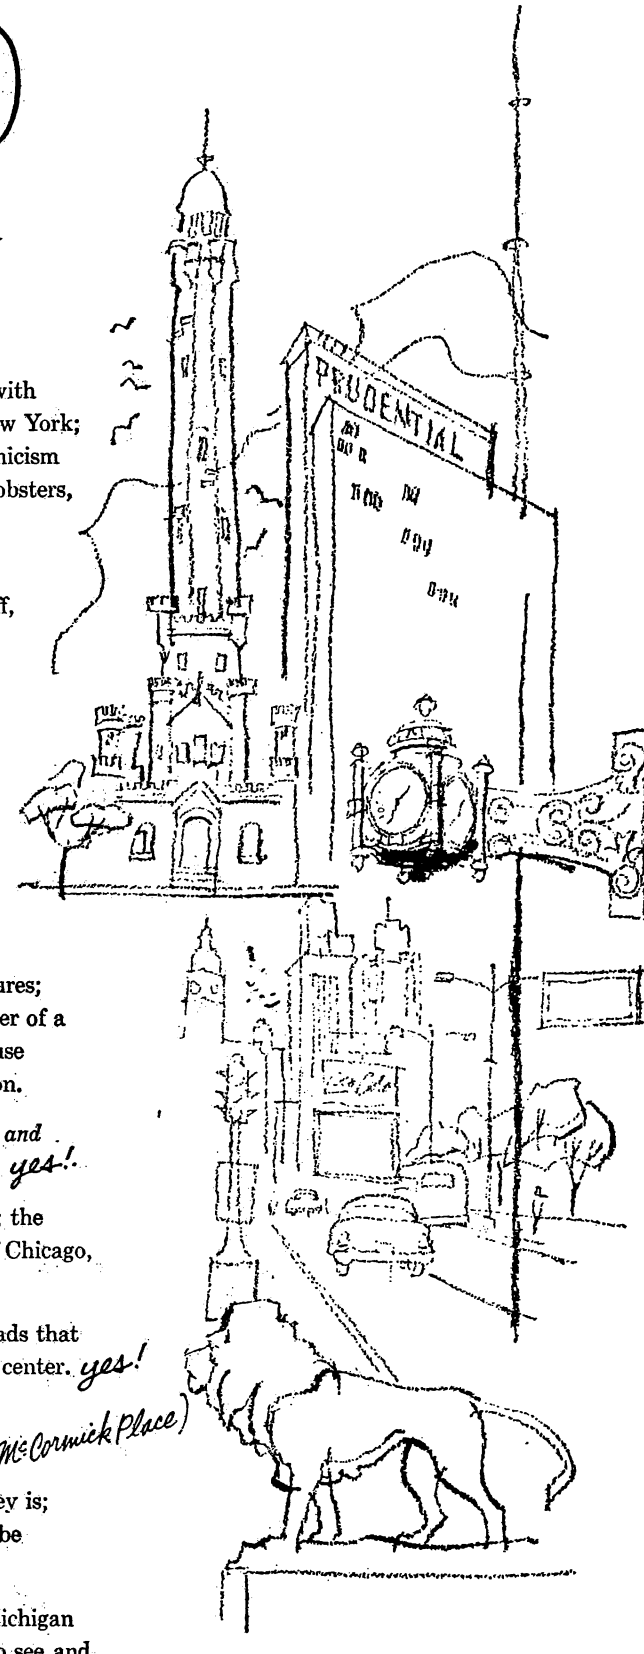
CHICAGO

The following words are from a speech delivered by the well-known advertising executive and Chairman of the 1960 Crusade of Mercy, Fairfax M. Cone, to the Chicago Press Club on January 28th, 1961. We quote:



I didn't grow up in this city.
I haven't had all my life to get used to it. I came here with thirty-eight years of experience in San Francisco and New York; and I had some misgivings about Chicago; about the cynicism that had developed in the era of the high and mighty mobsters, and about the isolation of an inland, self-sufficient city.

I found Chicago with a chip on its shoulder;
And I had a sneaking suspicion that if you knocked it off, Chicago wouldn't fight.

I thought it really had a huge inferiority complex.
And I think it did.

But that was nineteen years ago.

Today there is no doubt at all, in my mind, that Chicago is America's most vital, most promising city. yes!

New York is bigger. San Francisco is more beautiful.
Los Angeles is growing much faster.

But each of these is a city with only three human exposures; the fourth is to the sea; while Chicago stands in the center of a stretchless land, peopled by growing millions, who, because people do, look to the center for leadership and inspiration.

And, a little more slowly than I wish, perhaps, but steadily and more and more surely, Chicago is accepting its leading role. yes!

You can see this in business. You can see it in education; the coming of George Wells Beadle, to head the University of Chicago, is not to have a place to rest his Nobel Prize.

You can see it in new buildings; And in the matchless roads that now lead from north and west and south and east, into the center. yes!

You can see it in slum clearance. And new street lights.
And O'Hare Airport. And this convention hall. yes! (McCormick Place)

You can see it in politics; in the kind of man Mayor Daley is;
And the kind of man Chicago has sent to Springfield, to be Governor of Illinois. yes!

You can see it in the eager-eyed young people crossing Michigan Avenue, at Adams Street, any day at almost any hour, to see and know and understand and love the wonders of the Art Institute. yes!

You can see it in a newly inspired, square-jawed police force. yes!
You can feel it in the air! yes!
Four hard-fighting newspapers and four TV stations, and a dozen radio broadcasters are fighting...for Chicago and especially

"Not since Lewis and Clark stopped here on their way West early last century have Kansas City's possibilities been so glowing. Some forecasters feel that this metropolitan area offers the strongest growth potential in America."

—PRINTERS' INK ADVERTISERS' GUIDE TO MARKETING FOR 1961

Don't monkey around with the facts about the KMBC-TV 4-billion dollar market!

The latest national surveys* show KMBC-TV leads the Kansas City market in:

★TOTAL COVERAGE AREA ★TV SATURATION ★HOMES DELIVERED ★POPULATION ★RETAIL SALES

The 2,089,800 population of the KMBC-TV coverage area had a spendable income of $4,008,422,000 last year (that's four billion dollars, brother!). And KMBC-TV advertisers will tell you they enjoyed a big share of the almost three billion dollars ($2,726,166,000) retail sales. The fact that KMBC-TV is your best TV buy here is demonstrated by the fact that more local advertisers (who know the Kansas City market best) invest more dollars in KMBC-TV advertising than on any other Kansas City TV station!

Don't monkey around with the ratings! KMBC-TV is first when most people view the most!

KMBC-TV reaches a larger audience during the heavy viewing hours, 3 p.m. to 9 p.m., than any other Kansas City television station, according to the latest Nielsen report (November-December 1960 two-month report).

With nationally top-rated network shows from ABC-TV and the finest local programming in Kansas City, KMBC-TV has consistently ranked first during the heaviest viewing hours of the 1960-61 season.

KMBC-TV is proud to be a part of the ABC-TV trend. That trend is to the top . . . the top of the rating surveys . . . the top of the advertiser's list. Congratulations to the ABC-TV network organization on a job well done in '60-'61!

Don't monkey around about plus factors! You get 'em for your KMBC-TV buy!

The award-winningest television promotion and merchandising department in Kansas City is at your disposal for that extra selling factor. Services include personal calls on key chain store and other buyers; direct mail to dealers and others in the Channel 9 coverage area; in-store displays; imaginative exploitation; program listings and publicity stories in local and regional press; TV Guide advertising; weekly television highlights and story lines serviced to 68 newspapers in the KMBC-TV coverage area. These and other merchandising and promotion services are individually tailored to strengthen your "buy" on KMBC-TV.

DON'T MONKEY AROUND! Participation available in top local shows!

KMBC-TV broadcasts more than 57 hours of locally produced and syndicated shows each week! Local shows with selling impact include: Popeye Playhouse, with MC Torey Southwick and his puppet-partner Ol' Gus; Happy Home, Kansas City's popular women's show hosted by McCall Magazine award-winner Bea Johnson; Whizzo's Wonderland with Whizzo the Clown; Romper Room; The Ten O'Clock News; Sam Molen's Sports; Junior Bowling Champs; Bowlin' with Molen; Let's Go See (travel feature); Man from Cochise; and Feature Movies on The Big Show, Shock and Movie of the Week.

† We're pleased but not surprised. We like to think that with ABC-TV and imaginative local programming we started the trend four and a half years ago. In the words of Leonard Goldenson and Ollie Treyz, KAKE-TV "... was the first ABC affiliate to become number one in its market and has never lost that honor." The community looks to KAKE-TV: Golden K Network for leadership now, as in the past, as a result of such outstanding local programs as this season's...

Again in the election of 1960, as we have in every election since signing on the air, KAKE-TV — winner of The American Heritage Foundation Award for Outstanding Public Service in The National Non-Partisan Register, Inform Yourself and Vote Program — presented the fastest, most accurate returns of any media in the state. On election night, over a quarter of a million dollars of electronic equipment was installed in the studio. More than 200 volunteers picked up returns at the precincts. KAKE-TV captured all the excitement and dynamic importance of a free election.

if ever, before we have all the answers. The most important consideration is, ARE broadcasters aware of the program and are they taking positive action now to uphold the best program standards from youthful viewing? I would say the record proves they are.

N. Y. City Schedule

An appraisal of the New York City television schedule of all seven channels in the world's largest market, reveals an abundance of programming recommended for youngsters by leaders in educating, government and the church. This was not necessarily true some five or 10 years ago. As just one example of New York City television's contribution to our junior citizens, WABC-TV has committed itself to a specific youth project incepted two years ago, for the improvement of the mental, moral and physical climate for the youth of the community. During a period of 30 weeks each year an average of two hours each Saturday is devoted to high school sports coverage of football and basketball games at public and parochial schools throughout the Metropolitan New York area. They are telecast with the same qualitative attention that is given to collegiate and professional games. While depicting the virtues of teenage physical fitness, emphasis is placed on the academic achievement of the athlete. Half-time periods are used to highlight accomplishments of non-athletes in the study of science, literature, music, etc. The end result has been to give recognition, stature, and importance to the younger set for both those on and off camera. For a change, they feel they're being complimented, not criticized. If emulation of their peers is still a childhood emotional tendency, then many a border-line child must have been properly guided by these telecasts.

Other programs in our Youth Project in which WABC-TV invests $250,000 yearly have been "The Magic Eye," a science-education program series; "Salute to Youth Week," in conjunction with the New York City Commerce Department; "Youth: A Summer Crisis?," a documentary produced in cooperation with the Youth Welfare Board, and a "Jobs For Youth" campaign under the auspices of the New York State Employment Service to combat summer time juvenile delinquency; "Expedition — New York," a series launched with the endorsement of the New York City Board of Education and the Metropolitan Study Council group for the encouragement of English and social studies.

These are just a few of the samplings of what one station in one market is doing in its concern for the welfare of its young. Multiply it by 550, add the great advantages rendered by the three television networks in public service telecasts, compare it with the program schedules of five or 10 years ago, and you have a graphic picture of the progress that has been made by the industry in behalf of children.

The problems confronting television in its interrelationship with the young cannot be over-simplified; it is a weighty burden that requires never-ending vigilance. But the responsibility rests not only with television; only when everyone, parent, educator, business man, elective official, accepts his share of the responsibility, will our youth be properly served.

our town's facets. KGO-TV's "Expedition - California" has done more to examine San Francisco's emergence as a great city of the world than has any other program in the history of Bay area Television. We are proud to claim William Winter, whose news analysis on radio and tv (out of San Francisco) has stamped him as the West's leading commentator. A real Golden Gate country citizen, Bill lives in Marin County's highest hill, from where he can drink in the panorama of the city across the bay.

In a fresh new concept of news programming KGO-TV new employs "electronic columnists" who are members of local newspaper staffs and who contribute daily stories in their own styles to our "headline edition" of living news.

Completing our orientation with our enchanted city is the fact that KGO-TV executives are mainly San Franciscans and Californians whose pride in their heritage is reflected through their station.

Yes, San Francisco is "My Enchanted City," and when you think of our lovely and gracious "Baghdad by the Bay," remember the American Broadcasting Co stations are there, superimposed on its world of charm.

$6,000,000 Alcoa Billings to ABC

Alcoa has bought over $6,000,000 in Tuesday time and talent on ABC-TV. Deal to begin next fall has unusual aspects for commercial programming.

Sponsor has decided to slot 15 hourlong Revue anthology films between 10 and 11 p.m. for 15 half-hour Revue-produced anthology dramas. Matching off with Alcoa on these alternate-weeks will be the Bell & Howell-sponsored "Close-Up" pubaffairs skein from 10:30 to 11 p.m.

ABC-TV Mulls 'Hunters' For 'Maverick' Slot

ABC-TV is playing around with the idea of slotting 20th's "The Hunters" (formerly "Tanganyika") into "Maverick's" current time period. It's not definite yet, according to the web.

Reason why it's not is that the network hasn't completely given up the idea of retaining 7:30-8:30 p.m. Sundays for the present Kaiser-sponsored western entry.

"Hunters" is being overseen at 20th by Roy Huggins, man instrumental in starting Warner's "Maverick."

position in that network studios, production facilities and personnel are available for local use. The executives on KABC-TV's management team have been with the company an average of six years with many having been in the industry from its beginning.

All of this has produced a phenomenal rise in market position that has kept our customers happy and competitors harassed.

Where are we now? Ask any citizen of Los Angeles and he will tell you that Channel 7, KABC-TV is enjoying the spotlight . . . a spotlight focused on community service and public endeavor . . . a spotlight reflecting the ABC "image" in the Southern California market.

KABC-TV has been making best use of local time in worthwhile programming for all ages. Special shows "in the public interest" have been designed so they are most entertaining as well as of real interest to the public. Of these "Traffic Court"—dramatic recreations of actual court cases which point up driver-education—is the most honored. It has been cited by the Los Angeles City Council and is a fourtime winner of the National Safety Public Interest Award. "Target Alcoholism," a well-received series under the auspices of the Church Federation of Los Angeles, has sparked "Target Youth," which is projected for the near future.

Another ambitious and worthwhile endeavor this season is the introduction of "Expedition Los Angeles," a program which delves into the life of our city, the needs of its citizens and the future it holds. This show is being telecast with the advice of the Regional Educational Television Advisory Committee, and the station produces approximately 10,000 Teachers Guides per show which are distributed to the Social Studies teachers of Los Angeles city and county high schools.

KABC-TV's "off-the-air" activities in terms of community projects and services are many and continuing, and play a very important part in the total station effort.

As a final point, 1960 proved to be our best year for ratings. According to Nielsen, we began the year in February and March tied for first place (in a seven-station market), 6 to 9 p.m., Sunday thru Saturday. We closed the year tied for second, 9 p.m. to midnight, Sunday thru Saturday.

Where have we been? We've been busy about the business of making television a better word in the American vocabulary . . . a better way to relieve the tensions of our time and a better method for selling goods and services. And we feel that television is the greatest medium of expression yet devised by man.

Our aim for the future? . . . First, all ways!

wood. What is important is to do it without unnecessary delay and at an attractive cost. This is the key to turning out successful tape commercials. We not only have the key but we've got the house. The setting of the WXYZ-TV studios hints that nature expressly tailored it for the creation of 60-second "odes" to automobiles, filter tips and soda pop. The 110-acre land parcel features a regulation golf green—built for taping half-hour golf shows for Drewry's—an ice skating rink, open fields, hills, valleys, a natural stream, wooded area, and several colonial structures including Broadcast House itself.

Bold and imaginative ideas are at the heart of ABC's spectacular growth. This lusty child in the Motor City is proud to salute its parent company, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, not only on the occasion of its anniversary but also for having the foresight to give WXYZ, Inc. the greenlight to proceed in this challenging new area.

SYNDIE 1ST RUNS AT LOW EBB

Ziv's Zipped-up Syndie Optimism

Despite the heralded tight local time situation next season, Ziv-UA is of the opinion that regional, local and national spot advertisers will find sponsored syndie shows getting station berths.

Ziv-UA is backing its opinion with a hefty release schedule of shows, all of which could be aired for a fall start. Some of the shows may be introed a little earlier, in late spring or summer, but each could be keyed for that fall push.

Ziv-UA, as noted in the accompanying wrapup of fall product plans, has blueprinted three new, first-run series for the syndie market at this time. Additionally, it plans to have new production on at least two, and possibly three, series.

The upbeat stance taken by Ziv-UA in a soft market, in general, is in keeping with its zestful year-round activity. Ziv-UA acknowledges that because of web inroads on local option time, syndie houses have to dig for berths. But the important thing is that they're available if a sponsor is clinched, according to Ziv-UA's viewpoint, and, it's added, that networks and affils realize that the local, regional and national spot advertiser has a right to be served as well as the national sponsors.

Ziv-UA, which has been consistent in its supply of fresh, first-run product in the syndie field, doesn't plan any curtailment of its activities. On the contrary, current plans as outlined by an exec, call for an expansion in the fall. It's felt that Ziv-UA's savvy in merchandising, marketing, and exploting shows, warrants the continued upbeat theme for that house.

Metro Clearing Titles on Post-'48s For TV Release in Next Few Months

Metro is expected to release its first group of post-'48s within the next three or four months, thus joining the post-'48 parade of the major studios.

Present thinking at Metro is to release comparatively small groups of post-'48 pix on a one group per year basis. Size of the first and subsequent group of pix hasn't been determined as yet. Metro execs currently are busy clearing titles for tv release, following an intensive study of the post-'48 library.

As stated by Metro prexy Joseph R. Vogel at the recent Loew's stockholders meeting, there will be a "significant gap between the time a major feature is presented in theatres and the date when released for television." Vogel didn't state how many years will elapse between theatrical and tv engagements, but it's considered likely at least five years, or perhaps seven years, will be allowed to elapse before tv engagements.

Metro, in moving on the post-'48 field, thus joins 20th-Fox, Columbia and Warner Bros. among the majors. Still unaccounted for among the big studios in the post-'48 scramble are Paramount and Universal. Paramount may be waiting for its pay-tv system, Telemeter, before making a post-'48

Policy of producing less than 39 episodes in a first-run syndie series will be continued by at least one house next season, and probably more before full season plans are jelled.

ITC's "Whiplash," starring Peter Graves, one of the fall entries, will have 34 episodes. Series is the first to be produced in Australia. Reason for the less than traditional 39 episodes is for budgetary reasons, as well as offering stations and sponsors the same flexibility as offered by network series. Web skeins, because of various preemptions, for the past few seasons have fewer than 39 episodes telecast, before going into the regular summer repeat schedule.

Specials, Cartoons An ITC Spreadout

Diversification moves of Independent Television Corp. (ITC) now range from specials to cartoons, with representation still heavy in the traditional half-hour vidfilm field.

ITC, now completely owned by Associated TeleVision of Britain, plans a series of 13 hour vidtaped Jo Stafford specials, budgeted in the neighborhood of $100,000 each. They will be taped in London, and elsewhere in Europe for fall selling in the U.S.

ITC, now selling the off-network "Broken Arrow" series, will be represented in the fall syndie selling season with "Whiplash" and a possible other series. Outfit also has sold "Danger Man" to CBS-TV for a midseason start, marking the first British series sold this season to a web.

Additnonally, ITC has made a deal with Hal Tunis in production and distribution of the "Diver Dan" series, partially animated.

To fill out its diverse catalog, ITC has acquired Javelin Productions, which now is a division in the organization. Javelin sales unit is out selling two five-minute sports shows, "Golf Tip of the Day," and "Magic Moments in Sports." "Tip" is sold in about 46 markets and "Magic" in 39 markets.

Syndie Economy Cited in Decline Of Desilu Income

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

The speculative and "uneconomical" nature of the syndication market was blamed as a major factor in a sharp decline in gross income and profits for Desilu Productions during the nine-month period ended Jan. 28. Company grossed $14,432,798 for the period, as against $17,553,899 for the comparable period last year, and netted $264,949 or 23c a share compared with $708,121 or 61c a share in the first nine months last year.

Prexy, Desi Arnaz blamed the writers strike in Hollywood for a late start in production as the other factor in the decline in the company's position. As to syndication, he said the company is currently producing no shows for syndication because the market has become so

Mike Wallace Tapped To Narrate Space Show

Mike Wallace has been signed to narrate and conduct the interviews for "Project: Man Into Space," documentary tv special dealing with the astronaut and manned spacecraft programs in the U.S. and Russia. Jack Haley Jr., is producing and directing the full-hour project for Wolper-Sterling Productions.

Wallace, who narrated David L. Wolper's "The Race for Space," also has been engaged for the commentator-interviewing job on Wolper-Sterling's "Biography of a Rookie." Latter telementary now is being filmed in Florida.

MAJOR RELIANCE ON OFF-NETWORK

Fall product outlook in syndication is marked by a dearth of new, first-run properties. Prospects may change before the selling season sets in, but it's considered unlikely that the number of new, first-runners will reach last year's diminished pool.

There will be off-network properties and fresh production on established syndie properties, series which will swell the available number of series in syndication. Nevertheless, the new, first-runners, which always have served as a bellwether of the biz, looks low in numbers indeed.

At this point only five new first-runners definitely are slated for fall debut. Last season, which already saw the syndie star declining, there were some eight fall new, first-run properties.

Ziv-UA, Independent Television Corp., and Screen Gems are the only houses now definitely slating a new, first-runner. The other houses fall in the possible classification, mainly dependent at this point of time on a major regional to uncork fresh properties.

Syndie subsides of the webs, CBS Films, California National Productions and ABC Films will surely have off-network properties for the syndie run.

National Telefilm Associates, in the half-hour vidfilm field, will have second year production on "Assignment Underwater" and "Third Man."

Here's a firm-by-firm wrapup of the outlook, as seen currently:

ABC Films: Vidtaped "Consult Dr. Brothers" series ushered in the syndie market, with 65 15-minute segments in the spring. Show can serve as a five-minute strip also. Off-network series slated for this house.

CNP: Only a major regional, or a group of significant regionals, will likely put a fresh, first-runner in syndication. Six pilots, five highlighting action adventure and the sixth an animated cartoon, have been made for next season. All are being pitched on the network level.

CBS Films: "Hawk" and "Turnpike" are possible syndie pilots made by this house. Four pilots were made for network sale for the fall season. Again a big regional, or a group of regionals, might be the lever of introing a fresh first-runner, but nothing is committed for the syndie hopper as of now. Decision, too, has to be reached on whether to go for a second year on "Brothers Brannigan."

ITC: Now out talking about "Whiplash" for a fall or earlier start. ITC may have another fresh first-runner, in addition to "Whiplash." In the specials field, there will be the Jo Stafford vidtaped hour shows, which might land in syndication failing a network deal. Off-network properties also could be on ITC's agenda.

Boston, Feb. 28.

One of the biggest buys of post-'48 films, and first major Boston breakthrough in acquisition of updated pictures, has been scored by WBZ-TV at a price of somewhere between $250,000-$300,000.

The package includes 80 20th-Fox films, 61 of which were produced in the post-'48 era. Westinghouse station intends putting them on home screens as "specials" beginning in March.

While the big titles will be shown in "specials," plans are to showcase the other films on the station's existing slots for films.

All Chi in a Furore Over Mitchell Film Produced for BBC; WBKB Has U.S. Rights But May Never Show It

By LES BROWN

Chicago, Feb. 28.

A video documentary which no one in the Windy City has seen yet has caused an outbreak of something resembling lynch fever. It's a case of naming the culprit and the "crime" without having the corpus delecti.

The show that has caused the astonishing furore is an hourlong film produced for the BBC by Denis Mitchell, titled, "Chicago — First Impressions of a Great City." U.S. rights are held by WBKB, the ABC o&o here, by virtue of a financial partnership entered into when the footage was being shot last fall.

BBC televised it last Tuesday (21), and since then the local press has been riding it like a murder story, with frontpage updating and outraged editorials. Two papers in particular, the sisters Tribune and American, appear to be making a cause of it—and so far, all they're working from are reports from London. WBKB won't be getting a print of it until later this week. Whether it'll go on the air appears problematical.

The reports initially were of two sorts, (1) those hailing the film as a work of art, and (2) those alleging that it presents a distorted picture of the Windy City, showing too much of the seamy side. (It needs to be said that Chicago has always been sensitive about its dirty feet; it likes a "portrait" to be a headshot, with the hair combed.)

To appearances, all considerations of the Mitchell opus as a work of art (supposedly the London Times and Manchester Guardian called it that) are being ignored. What's got the Windy City rankled is the opinion from abroad that the town has been slandered through Mitchell's focus on such details (as cited by L. Marsland Gander in the London Daily Telegraph) as "drunks, wastepaper, junk heaps, neon signs, cheap night clubs, crooks and swarming cars, ugly buildings and door to door salesmen." Gander referred to it as "almost a horror film."

This and similar reports have the civic, spiritual and cultural leaders standing in line to voice their indignation, even though none have seen the actual film. Mayor Richard J. Daley called it, "another example of the constant . . . exaggeration of what the city is." He announced that he would make his own film, if he had to, to show England a "more representative" portrait of Chicago. Immediately, WGN-TV general manager Ward L. Quaal offered to aid the mayor's cause with footage of Queen Elizabeth's visit to Chicago, and other

London, Feb. 28.

"Chicago — First Impressions of a City," a filmed BBC-TV program due to be shown in U. S. shortly, caused an outcry among visitors when it was screened (22). The BBC switchboard and those of newspapers were kept busy with calls from viewers disgusted at scenes of brutality in this documentary film of one man's impressions of Chicago.

Main cause of viewer reaction were shots of the stockyards showing cattle being slaughtered. Others objected to the realistic sequences showing junk heaps, drunks, dirty streets, dope addicts, cheap night clubs and gaudy neon signs. Viewers complained that the BBC should have warned the public in advance that the program was raw meat.

Jaffe, SG Settle Suit; 'Beauty' To Theatres O'seas

Henry Jaffe Enterprises plans a theatrical release in overseas markets of three of its "Shirley Temple Storybook" stanzas, including "Beauty and the Beast," which starred Charlton Heston, Claire Bloom and Miss Temple. Trio of shows will also be sold for rerun use on tv domestically.

Decision stems from a settlement of Jaffe's lawsuit against Screen Gems, which had coproduced the "Storybook" series with him. Settlement terms, agreed upon last week, were not disclosed, but did include reversion to Jaffe of all rights to the three live shows in the series, of which "Beauty" was one.

Other two shows were "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," with Boris Karloff and Jules Munshin, plus Miss Temple, and "Rumplestiltskin," with John Raitt, Phyllis Love and Shai K. Ophir. All three were live colorcasts, and transfers from the tape to 35m color prints has been effected.

DESILU ENTERS 3D SUIT AGAINST NTA

Desilu Productions filed a third complaint yesterday (27) in Superior Court against National Telefilm Associates, the latest involving 78 "U. S. Marshal" half-hour shows. Complaint seeks $105,956 in alleged damages, breach of contract and seeks an injunction against further showing of the series.

Suit also charges because of delinquent payments by the defendant that Screen Actors Guild, Writers Guild of America and Screen Directors Guild have threatened action against Desilu to collect re-run fees reportedly due. Desilu is said to own 43% and the defendant the balance of the series, and it alleges that its pact with NTA is ended, which the latter denies.

'Fun-O-Rama' Cartoons

Pat Sullivan's Felix the Cat Productions has prepared the pilot of a new half-hour animated cartoon series, tentatively titled "Fun-O-Rama."

Sole selling agent for the new series is Weston Merchandising Associates. "Felix" is distributed by Trans-Lux Television.

KHJ's 800G For Post-'50 WB Pix

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Hot on the heels of disclosure by NBC of purchasing 50 post-'50 20th-Fox films for network airing, local KHJ-TV revealed that it has acquired 40 post-'50 Warner Bros. films from Eliot Hyman's Seven Arts Associated Corp. for approximately $800,000. KHJ's deal, according to station veepee and general manager Malcom C. Klein, boosts outlet's total coin investment in motion pictures during the past year to $3,000,000.

The Warners block of post-'50's was known to be the most sought-after package of films by Los Angeles stations. Among the package are some of Warners' biggest all-time hits including the late James Dean starrer, "Rebel Without A Cause," "The High and the Mighty" starring John Wayne, and the Judy Garland starrer, "A Star Is Born."

Radio's New Techniques Replace 'Hoopla & Hotrod,' 'Sham & Scream'

With virtually all the vanguard radio programming techniques these days emenating from below and beyond the Hudson, the Radio & Television Executives Society of New York last week called together a trio of successful innovators from out yonder to lay the new sounds on Gotham ears.

At a RTES luncheon, the trio presented capsule tapes of their stations' programming, then discussed the techniques behind it.

McLendon Stations prexy Gordon McLendon described the formula of "music plus news and news and news"; Robert Hyland, veepee and GM of KMOX, St. Louis, talked about the CBS affil's "block talk programming" (seven-hour daily chatter strip); and Frank Gaither, GM of WSB, Atlanta, discussed the modus operandi behind the "right friendly radio station we're running down there."

McLendon and Hyland had the crix needle out for the "rock and roll, rip and read" operations, and editorial stances by broadcasters that knock sin and little else. The southern gentleman from Atlanta desisted.

McLendon, who said his station KLIF in Dallas last year broadcast 1,200 news remotes (averaging about two an hour) told the execs that the station's famed formula of music and news plus razzle-dazzle promotion had been junked for concentrated news.

"We told Dallas, and correctly, that if you lived in Dallas, you dared not turn off KLIF if you wanted to know what was going on. We advertised ourselves as tomorrow's newspaper now, and we were and are. Our managing editor's job is in jeopardy if there is any story in the newspapers which hasn't been on KLIF hours, or a full day before."

The beat-the-papers formula, he said, had kept the station No. 1 in the nation in ratings for share of audience. "We are the only radio station in all of America actively competing with our city's newspapers."

Departmentalized

Station, he said, will strengthen its position against newspapers soon with an 11-man news staff (there are now eight), broken down to coverage categories—managing editor, three other deskmen, a crime and violence editor, a sports editor, business and political

United Vintners In 1,310 WCBS Spots

Biggest single order of 10-second commercials in remembrance was wrapped up this week by WCBS-TV, N. Y., a deal with United Vintners for a total of 1,310 spots to run over a period of only 19 weeks. Actually, 1,206 are of the ID variety and 108 are 60-second blurbs, but even the 1,296 constitutes a record

Blurbs are for three of United's brands, Petri and Italian Swiss Colony Wines and G&D Vermouth. They'll run in the station's "Early Show," "Late Show" and "Late Late Show" primarily, though branching into other local programming on weekends. Money wasn't disclosed, and though it may run less than other ID campaigns in network adjacencies, for sheer size and impact, the order is unsurpassed.

Indication of the frequency used is the high point of the campaign, the six weeks between March 1 and April 11, when the station will run a total of 110 spots a week or 660 for the full period. Station toted up the rating points in the periods involved and came up with the staggering total of 895 per week for those time periods. Balance of the campaign, which ends July 11, will run 50 a week for a 650 total

Deal was set via the Honig-Cooper-Harrington & Miner agency for United. Though it's a San Francisco agency, WCBS-TV sales manager Norman Walt wrapped up the deal personally, even though the normal course of events would have called for the CBS-TV Spot Sales Frisco office to handle the deal.

International Harvester High on AM 'Showcase'

Chicago, Feb. 28.

International Harvester has commissioned WGN Radio to produce a 15-minute syndicated series which it is urging its regional dealers to buy in their respective markets. Chi station to date has produced 40 installments.

Titled "International Showcase," series stars Wally Phillips, one of WGN's top personalities, in a solo comedy stint with pre-recorded trick voices. It's available only to IH dealers.

Rep. Earl Wilson Warns TV, Pix To 'Clean Up or Else'

Washington, Feb. 28.

Wielding the threat of federal censorship, an Indiana Congressman has issued one of the strongest Capitol Hill blasts at film and television content in recent years.

Rep. Earl Wilson (R-Ind.) sounded off as he introduced a resolution calling on the film and broadcasting industries to do a better self-policing job.

In a statement accompanying the resolution, Wilson declared that if they fail to clean up on their own, "the federal government should step in and exercise some sort of control over the products of the industries." He didn't elaborate on the ways and means of such censorship.

Wilson, who said his mail has been full of similar sentiments, assailed the quality of tv and films in these words:

"Sexpots, beat generations, sex kittens, muggings, throat slittings, tommygun murders have reached the saturation point on the nation's screens. The motion picture and television companies should be warned to take action to police themselves more stringently.

"There has been a growing trend toward less control of the moral content of tv and motion pictures. It cannot but help have an adverse effect on the development of the character of youth . . .

"The times a family can go to a movie together are becoming few and far between. The few outstanding pictures like "Ben-Hur" and "Swiss Family Robinson" are counterbalanced by displays of nudity, promiscuity, perversion and adultery that masquerades as everything from comedy to tragedy. Movies are not better than ever despite what the producers say . . .

"With television, violence in all shapes and sizes is the thing. Murder, pillages, muggings, sluggings, whippings and other forms of brutality are paraded before tv audiences night after night. It's time the industry took a long look at itself."

WNBC Radio in New Sound of Music in Bid For That Indie Audience

WNBC Radio is changing its sound. The web kev in N.Y. has started shifting from its 18-month-old "wall-to-wall" music policy posh, heavily stringed music) to a wider variety of pop offerings—which would seem to put it back in direct competition with Gotham indie WNEW.

Shunning an out-and-out top 40 or top 20 pattern, WNBC Radio will nonetheless try to pick from as broad a range of top pop vocals and instrumentals as it can. If an occasional "worthy" rock 'n' roll record comes along, it'll get an airing too.

Full shift in sound is not expected to come all at once. Station started fiddling with the alteration last week, but there was some of that romantic backgrounding of the Montovanis, Percy Faiths and Frank Chacksfields.

Station is headed by George Dietrich, who has been in the post about four months.

WFAA's $3,500,000 Center Planning Major Dedication Hoopla

Dallas, Feb. 28.

A "Texas-size" opening is planned for the Texas-size new facilities of WFAA-AM-FM-TV, located next to the Dallas Morning News building, owners and operators of the stations here.

Mike Shapiro, general manager of the broadcast properties of The News, announced that week long activities have been outlined for the formal opening, dedication and public tours at the new $3,500,000 "Communications Center."

The special ceremonies, beginning April 5, will include visits by top network, Federal Communications Commission and station representatives as well as leading ABC-TV stars.

Upwards of 100 ABC-TV, FCC and Edward Petry (national representatives for WFAA) top echelon and ABC-TV stars will begin arriving Monday evening, April 4, and early Tuesday, April 5, to join leading state and local officials for dedication ceremonies at 4:15 p.m. in front of the Communications Center.

Rokeach's 60G For Passover Specials

In a unique deal aimed at securing maximum penetration of the Metropolitan New York market, Rokeach's has signed a deal with WNTA-TV for a series of specials keyed to the Passover holidays.

Food company, via Smith Greenland, will spend an estimated $60,000 for the week-long splurge, starting March 19.

Outing of specials will be kicked off on the Newark-N. Y. indie's Sunday "Open End" show, which for the March 19 edition will deal with some aspect of Jewish life. Following days these specials will be telecast: an Israel folk tune outing rendered by Theodore Bikel; a "Catskill Summit Meeting," featuring comics now playing the Borscht Belt; a filmed documentary on Israel narrated by Mike Wallace; a Sam Levinson reading from his book, "Meet the Folks"; and an hour show on the film, "Exodus," utilizing footage showing how the feature was shot and guests drawn from the producing company.

Rokeach's specials will be telecast from 7 to 8 p.m., preempting the station's "New Movie" for that week.

In addition, station will have a 15-minute stripped show 5:45 p.m. Monday through Friday, each show consisting of a report of a Jewish organization. Lined up to date are such organizations as Hadassah, B'nai B'rith, and Jewish Board of Rabbis.

Nehru, McGuire Sisters As Godfrey's Guestars On May Bulova Special

Arthur Godfrey will feature an interview with India's Prime Minister Nehru and will reunite with the McGuire Sisters on his May 19 CBS-TV special for Bulova. The interview was filmed a year ago during a Godfrey trip through India, but has never been shown on the air.

Besides the Nehru interview and the gettogether with the McGuires, who started with Godfrey, he plans to use singer Johnny Nash, a regular on his radio show, and filmed or taped sequences from Florida and Lake Placid.

Plans to shoot the Lake Placid sequence, which was to feature Godfrey on a bobsled ride, were washed out last week by the combination of the rain and warm weather. Another CBS show, "The Sunday Sports Spectacular," was similarly affected, but managed to get in one day's shooting before the snow disappeared completely.

Indianapolis—Tom Atkins, who's been with radio and tv stations in Knoxville and Ft. Wayne, Ind., has joined WLW-I-TV here as news director. He starts news air shots for the station this week.

WNEW-TV's 'Egghead Nite'

Sunday nights seem to be assuming the status of "egghead night" on Metropolitan Broadcasting's WNEW-TV, N. Y. Latest addition to a schedule that already includes the John Crosby show and the BBC-TV Shakespearean cycle, "An Age of Kings," is the station's political analyst, Dr. Walter Burke, with his half-hour "A Way of Thinking."

Dr. Burke moved over from Wednesdays into the Sunday 8:30 slot over the weekend. Crosby follows with his hour at 9, with the Shakespeare running from 10 until conclusion, anywhere from 11 to 11:30. Beyond this, station runs the National Educational Television series, "Prospects of Mankind," with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, once a month in the 8-9 period.

The 8-9 slot is also reserved for the outlet's periodic pubaffairs specials. Next one up is the entry on "Birth" in the Ted Yates-created medical series, "A Question of Life," which airs in that time period March 26.

Behind-the-Scenes Power Play As Bid to 'Televise House' Fails

Washington, Feb. 28.

Proposition to bring television to the House proved abortive. But there's consolation in fact it was a live cause for a while and had its closest brush with success in recent years. There was plenty of beneficial publicity to boot.

A resolution to permit—at discretion of the individual committees—radio and tv coverage, live or recorded, of House hearings was killed in a power play that had no relation to the merits of the issue. The pros and cons of the case had nothing to do with fact the matter was brought up for consideration in the first place.

House Rules Committee nixed the resolution by Rep. George Meader (R.-Mich.) in an 8-6 vote. This action doomed two more far-reaching resolutions by Rep. Martha Griffiths (D-Mich.), which would have given broadcasters the right to move in on both House Committee hearings and sessions of the House itself.

The vote reflected the Committee's new conservative-liberal alignment, with the former voting for and the latter against the Meader resolution, irrespective of their convictions on the actual proposition.

Rules Chairman Howard Smith (D-Va.), who had ignored similar proposals in the past, brought the tv issue up solely to irk House Speaker Sam Rayburn, whose opposition to microphones and tv cameras in his domain is legend. Behind the move lay an effort by

Irish Airlines Sponsor Of WPIX St. Pat Parade

WPIX's, N.Y., telecast of the St. Patrick's Day parade has secured a natural as sponsor. Irish International Airlines, via Geyer, Morey, Madden & Ballard, has picked up full sponsorship of the 13th annual event, this year set for March 17, from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Hibernians from WPIX participating will be commentator Jack McCarthy, Keven Kennedy, commercial annonucer, Jack Murphy, producer-director, and associate director Don Carney. Herb Homes is exec producer. Plans are now in the works for additional line feeds of the parade to WBZ, Boston, a city which always has a strong Irish contingent in the Parade, and to a Philadelphia outlet.

Picking up the parade tab is a departure for Irish International Airlines which heretofore has put most of its coin in radio.

'Scarecasting' On KDKA-TV Weather Still a Pitt Issue

Pittsburgh, Feb. 28.

The battle of the weather forecasters here continues unabated although KDKA-TV has clarified its position by issuing a terse warning to all its weather reporters to read the weather news as it is handed to them and not to add anything of their own.

Peter Thornton, publicity director of the station, said this order was issued after the story in VARIETY on Jan. 11 which pointed out the many complaints from theatres and night clubs. The Pittsburgh Press had editorialized against the practice of scare forecasting but Arnold Zeitlin, tv writer on the Post-Gazette, wound up with egg on his face when he took potshots at the KDKA-TV private weather service with a column headed with "Weather Is Frightful, But Hassle Delightful." The column made the service look ridiculous, as the station had predicted six inches of snow and at six o'clock when Zeitlin finished his column there was no sign of snow so he wound up his piece with "By press time last night—no snow."

His prediction held up until 4 a.m. when six inches of snow fell in accordance with the station's prediction and all the Post-Gazette subscribers in the morning read his column and then went out to battle the heavy snow.

WWSW has been announcing that it uses the official U. S. Weather Bureau service "without qualifications." KDKA-TV is now doing this but not saying it. It is also still using the wider readings of its own private service which is based on facts taken from the U. S. Weather Bureau.

In his statement, Thornton said: "The basic problem would seem to be that we should restrict our service to the immediate future rather than taking the broad public service approach by informing our viewers of impending weather difficulties."

"Since the VARIETY story, the weather staff has been strongly reminded of the station's policy not to ad lib around forecasts."

Godfrey Ankling 'Candid Camera'

Arthur Godfrey and "Candid Camera" will part company at the end of the season, much to the relief of "Camera" creator Allen Funt, packager Bob Banner, assorted CBS executives and probably Godfrey himself. The Redhead is looking at properties with a weekly series of his own in mind, and additionally will do specials and continue his radio stanza next fall.

That Godfrey and Funt have been feuding on "Camera" all season has hardly been a secret. But contrary to current opinion, it wasn't Funt's "Godfrey's gotta go" remarks in San Francisco last week that cued his decision to exit the show. Godfrey took the assignment on a one-year basis, and as of two weeks ago had just about made up his mind to drop out at the end of the season.

Not that he was entirely happy about Funt's blowoff in Frisco. But last week he checked the agencies on the show, and they assured him they had spoken to Funt who said he'd been misquoted in his Frisco press conference. Godfrey chose to accept that explanation, rather than get in another dogfight over a situation he regarded as settled anyway.

That he was still a little rankled was apparent from his announcement that he was leaving the show, in which he qualified his enthusiastic regard for the series. ". . . Overall, I've enjoyed doing the show . . . and it has been fun for the most part."

Meanwhile, he's got a pair of CBS-TV specials coming up in the April 20 Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey circus telecast, of which he's emcee, and an hour special May 19 for Bulova.

Tele Follow-Up Comment

Play of the Week

A rare piece of dramaturgy is occuring this week on WNTA-TV's "Play of the Week." In a magical translation by Paul Bowles, Jean-Paul Sartre's "No Exit" is being presented.

The purely existential theme of the short play (about 74 minutes) is conveyed in readily understandable human terms by a remarkable Colleen Dewhurst and two other able performers, Dane Clark and Diana Hyland. Evening is rounded out with a 10-minute production, Jean Cocteau's "The Indifferent Lover," in which the experienced Miriam Hopkins does all the talking and does it well.

Sartre's hell is a hotel room where three persons, a coward shot for collaboration and military evasion, a vain sensualist and a cruel lesbian, make each other suffer eternally. There are no exits. "Something is supposed to happen to me, because of you two," says one of the prisoners early in their incarceration. "Each one of us is the torturer for the other two," it turns out. True to his pessimistic the dislikes that adjective philosophy where man most usually is incapable of helping himself and when he can it is only through a relatively innetectual compromise, Sartre allows here that hell is just other people.

As a leering dyke, who died in a double-suicide, Miss Dewhurst is incredibly strong. An actress in full command of all her faculties from the tips of her toes to the scraggily ends of her loose black hair, she owns the stage. Clark, as Cadeau the executed journalist who seeks vainly to establish his vi.ility, even in hell, is a vigorous counterpoint to Miss Dewhurst, and as the lascivious broad, who has murdered her child, cheated her husband and driven her lover to suicide, Miss Hyland is as beautiful, slinky and neurotic as Sartre meant her to be.

Silvio Narizzano, who directed both ends of "Play of the Week" this time, never let excitement or interest flag, not once. The director's tight hand was recognizable everywhere. The three actors, representing a world of lost and frustrated Sartre souls, were played off each other excellently, so that three persons were never too few. Paul Sylbert's modernistic hotel room was as good as anything else about this stellar production. So was his apartment for the brief "Indifferent Lover," in which Miss Hopkins prattled on for her faithless gigolo while he blithely ignored her. So strong was her role and her acting that Misha Ferman, as her lover spoke not one word and who for all of it need not have been there, seemed like the biggest cad who ever flung himself into a lady's pocketbook. Art.

Leonard Bernstein and the N. Y. Philharmonic

The tv season of Leonard Bernstein and the N.Y. Philharmonic wound up on a striking high note Sunday (26). Rendered was a fascinating comparison of the "Oedipus Rex" of Sophocles and its operatic adaptation by Igor Stravinsky.

For the 90-minutes, sponsor Ford, and CBS-TV can take a well deserved bow, along with all the dramatic and musical talent arrayed for the excursion. The outing started at 4 p.m. and before the curtain came down, the viewer had a brush with masters of music and drama which will long be remembered.

Conductor Bernstein on and off podium, as music master and as explainer, was in top form. The neo classicism of Stravinsky was punctuated, elucidated and exemplified. Bernstein, as ever, found himself caught up in what he was doing, singing snatches of arias, illustrating on the piano, etc. His enthusiasm was catching and his articulate delivery, a rare gift, is especially suited for the tv medium which encompasses musical sophisticates as well as illiterates.

Illustrating the Sophocles' drama were Keith Mitchell as Oedipus and Irene Worth as Jocasta. It was amazing that they were able to convey such force and feeling in what were really brief snatches of the work. Their operatic counterparts were David Lloyd and Inge Borkin. The language of the latter was Latin, but their rich voices had a vitality that belied that ancient tongue, and the music had a universality not confined to any language.

Others in the very able cast included Morley Meredith, Kenneth Smith, Paul Huddleston, Liam Redmond, Paul Stevens and Bramwell Fletcher.

David Greene directed with precision. There were many trick shots and at times the screen became too cluttered, a minor reservation, though. This Robert Saudek series deserves to return next season and many more seasons to come. Horo.

Jack Paar Show

When Jack Paar stands in awe of someone (as he did last Thursday night when Noel Coward guested on his late night NBC-TV show), it's something to behold. Paar literally freezes up when idolatry is spread all over his face, and when that happens he's not only at a loss for words, but what he does say comes out garbled and even as tongue-twisters. It's all the more amazing from a guy who, over the long course, has taken most of the show biz heavyweights in stride and can give tit for tat. But with Coward it was an out-and-out case of obvious hero worship, which didn't help the show or its audience, for in retaliation for his own ill-at-ease feeling Paar only succeeded in taking it out on the gallerytes upon whom was inflicted a heavy dosage of rude comment. (Even the sponsors, particularly the shoe client, bore the brunt of the under-Paar stance.)

In sharp contrast, Coward's self-possession, casualness and sophisticated glibness was a dandy show biz dillio. Fortunately he wasn't either perturbed or deterred by the strange Paar behavior pattern. He was just Coward, and that's a big asset.

During the last half-hour Alexander King and his talented, charming wife came on. Paar was still awed by Coward, but things were much more normal. Rose.

Sunday Sports Spectacular

This 90-minute Sunday afternoon sports anthology, which is one of the events that makes the Sabbath a godsend to viewers, this week (27) showed off the amazing sporting skills of comedian Jackie Gleason.

In the opening hour, Gleason took on pro golfer Arnold Palmer in match play filmed at the Shawnee Country Club, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa. Final half hour saw the comedian in a deft exhibition of pocket billiards with world champion Willie Mosconi.

Viewers were no doubt surprised to find Gleason as expert a golfer as funny man on the links. Working with a one-stroke handicap, he held his own with Palmer in the opening round, and, in fact, was two holes up at one point. He sunk two sensational puts on successive holes, one of 65 feet and the other 45, and between off-hand quips and general bufoonery, managed some unconscious humor with a shot that landed in the fork of a tree. And he surprised himself as well as the gallery by sinking a one-hand, back-hand put of about five feet.

Palmer made his contribution to the excitement, especially off the tee with some spectacular power drives of 300 yards plus.

But it was with the cue that Gleason settled down to serious competition. He gave the impeccable Mosconi a run in the early stages of their 50-point match, at one time two points down at 37.

It was an absorbing 90-minutes, and a good example of the thinking that gives this show creative variety. Show was filmed for CBS by Idees-Grands. Gleason's production company. Frank Chirkinian produced and directed and Jack Philbin was producer for Gleason. Bud Palmer's commentary was, as usual, first rate. Bill.

The Twentieth Century

Perhaps it was the fact that a half-hour is hardly commensurate with the depth of the subject, or maybe the topic of "France in Ferment" was itself too elusive for television documentarizing, but whatever the reason, this "Twentieth Century" stanza was a frustrating one which did justice

AFRICA—FIVE MINUTES TO 12
With Frank McGee, George Clay, Irving R. Levine, Edwin Newman, Pauline Frederick, Joseph C. Harsch, John Chancellor, others

60 Mins., Tues. (21), 10 p.m.

NBC-TV (live & film)

(Young & Rubicam)

The notable Eric Severaid has competition from another excellent tv news writer-commentator (emphasis, in this case, on writer). Last week NBC-TV displaced "Cry Vengeance," a drama for Purex scheduled for Tuesday, 10 p.m., for a competent, if uninspired wrapup on the blossoming revolutions which pockmark Africa. But there was one highlight—the words of George Clay, a white African with a distinct English accent, whose analyses of several South African nations were cogent, clear and, for any respectable historical text, highly quotable.

Later, someone observed, "Clay can say in 200 words what takes most competent reporters 2,000 to say." It's true. The bearded Anglo-Saxon, whom NBC News imported all the way from the Dark Continent to join with other web correspondents in this all-nation wrapup, had a modest delivery on the air to accompany his writing. Yet if he never appears on the air again, it would be no sensational loss, but NBC and the audience would be losing a golden quantity if his words are not again used.

The newsreel footage used by NBC, particularly in coverage of Algeria and the UAR, was graphic. Irving R. Levine on the Congo, Edwin Newman on West Africa, Pauline Frederick on the African members of the UN and various others also did segments of this program. Each part was okay, but the transitions from one to the next (it was not host Frank McGee's fault) were choppy. Art.

THERE OUGHT TO BE A LAW
With Dave Moore
Producer: Carl Ruhle
Director: Clarence Anderson
Writer Jim Dooley
30 Mins.: Thurs., 9:30 p.m.
TWIN CITY FEDERAL SAVINGS & LOAN
WCCO-TV, Mp's.

As its name implied, "There Ought to Be a Law" was a plea for legislation to curb Minnesota's alarming highway traffic slaughter. More than that, however, it was a lefty swipe at namby-pamby state legislators who dilute strict bills to the point of ineffectiveness. As such, this was the hardest-hitting offering to date in this periodic series of current affairs documentaries.

Divided into two 15-minute segments, the program first described the state's highway carnage which last year claimed 721 lives and injured 32,000 and the resulting public clamor for "get tough" legislation. Next it followed two legislative bills, one permitting seizure of chronic violators' cars and the

ACCENT
(Robert Frost: An American Poet)
With James Fleming, host; President John F. Kennedy
Producer: Don Kellerman
Director: Martin Carr
Music: John Sebastian
25 Mins.; Sun. 12:30 p.m.

"Accent," CBS-TV's new pubaffairs series exploring main streams of American culture, got off to rousing start. Seldom on tv has there been a more enriching 25 minutes, when all the artistry of the medium is brought into focus to sing a poet and his work.

President John F. Kennedy's appreciation of poet Robert Frost is of long standing, resulting as it did in Kennedy's invitation to Frost to play a prominent role in the Inauguration ceremonies. Producer Don Kellerman was fortunate, indeed to have Kennedy participate in the program. In short, precise moving fashion, Kennedy spoke of the affinity of courage uniting the good politician and the good poet. The President also read Frost's "Choose Something Like A Star," the reading catching the sense and inspiration of the poet.

Frost, himself, declined to appear "live" on the show. He was interviewed, though, and recited a number of his poems. His voice was expertly interwoven with still pictures, photographed with insight and artistry by Marvin Lichtner. The pictures were underscored by an original musical score composed and performed by harmonica virtuoso John Sebastian. The music was a marvelous assist, accenting the mood of the pictures and poems.

Among the poems rendered were "Mending Wall," "Birches," and "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening."

To describe a 25-minute show telecast Sunday (26) at 12:30 p.m. as rousing may seem an incongruity. It's to the program's credit, though, that even at that hour it breathed inspirational excitement which washed many of the later hour sins clean. If other "Accent" episodes prove as good, John W. Kiermaier, director of public affairs, who has overall supervision of the series, has a winner to his credit. Horo.

Michael Joseph To ABC AS Program Consultant

Michael Joseph has joined ABC as program consultant for its owned & operated stations. He had been working similarly for just WABC, web's N.Y. station, last year.

From '52 through '55, Joseph, a former announcer in Cleveland, was program director of WJEF, Grand Rapids, and for the next three years as program boss for the Founders Group of stations in Flint, Syracuse, New Orleans and Honolulu. Then, in '58, he became program consultant to Avery-Knodel and then a veep over radio for Capital Cities Broadcasting.

Critics Criticize the Critics

The critics had a go at critics and the state of criticism (mostly theatre and television) on John Crosby's WNEW-TV talkfest Sunday night (26), the participants including John Mason Brown, Dick Watts of the N. Y. Post, Harriet Van Horne of the N. Y. World-Telegram and "anti-critic" David Susskind for the frosting. On the whole it was fairly stimulating repartee and if it wasn't particularly overwhelming in revelation or conclusions, there was sound, solid substance in the thinking apparatus of a group of erudite, knowledgable people who are known to take their work seriously.

Crosby's "casting" perception paid off midway through the program, for it was inevitable that Susskind and Miss Van Horne would tangle. Mr. S., running true to form in his umpteenth appraisal of tv criticism, again went through his repertoire of fancy and unfancy adjectives to spell out the conclusion that most tv criticism is beneath contempt. "Crashingly dull" got a big play this time out. Which, of course, was his perogative, particularly since it tied in with the general conclusion that, whether it's tv, movies, or drama, it's tough for any critic to rise above his subject matter and bad tv shows can destroy any enthusiasm a critic might have.

But when it looked like Susskind was about to embark on "spiteful footnotes" (to use Miss Van Horne's phrase) and name names (he had just started to talk about the N. Y. Herald-Tribune's Marie Torre, long a sore spot with DS) the World-Telly critic lit into him, accusing him of "pique and spite" and reminding him he'd command a lot more respect if he talked in generalities.

Susskind denied he was motivated by grudges over poor notices; but it merely brought the retort: "You behave as though you were bleeding." Eventually both struck a note of rapport and they all got back into the swim of "when is a reviewer a critic?", "how sensitive are critics to the requirements of their jobs?", "was George Jean Nathan more exciting 30 years ago than today's drama critics because there was more excitement in the theatre of Eugene O'Neill?"

Susskind's disdain for tv critics, incidentally was matched only by Crosby's continued disregard for periods or punctuation in his weekly preamble recital. Rose.

(Wm. Esty)

At times, NBC's program planning has a childlike, uncomplicated quality of simplicity. The straight-line logic of programming "Acapulco" in the place of "Klondike," complete with the latter's stars and production company, must have gone something like this: "The audience didn't like 'Klondike,' probably because this was a pretty rough winter and they had enough snow on the ground without looking at more on the tv set. So let's give 'em something really escapist—'Acapulco'."

That apparently was enough for NBC and for sponsor R. J. Reynolds. It's not for the audience, for "Acapulco" is not only the most perfunctory kind of potboiler, but it looks as if it was filmed on a couple of postage-sized beachfront plots at Malibu. James Coburn and Ralph Taeger convert from a pair of frozen adventurers to a pair of hotblooded beachcombers with nary a pause for breath or change of pace or plot. Telly Savalas, a good actor, is tramped into the incongruous role of a benevolent heavy, and Ziv plants a lot of other people at strategic points to aid the boys in their new criminology efforts.

SUBURBIA — UTOPIA OR MYOPIA
With Betty Adams, narrator
Executive Producer: Win Baker
Associate Producer: Mel Bernstein
Director: Stan Berk
Writer: Harry Durning
30 Mins., Fri. (24) 8 p.m.
SPERRY & HUTCHINSON
WBZ-TV, Boston

The cry of a baby, the sizzle of steak on outdoor grill, the rattle of a cocktail shaker. These suburban sounds, and sights, served as an intro to an excellent examination of the solit level set by WBZ-TV, Westinghouse's Hub outlet.

"Suburbia—Utopia or Myopia," second in the year-long, one-a-month "Complex Community" series of prime time pubaffairs specials, explored problems, pleasantries, politics, parties of metro-fringe communities 10-20 miles from downtown Boston.

As in the first program, exec producer Win Baker turned a fine professional hand to shaping this one into a provocative, penetrating study, drawing on the experience of a Brandeis sociologist, Harvard psychologist, M. I. T. economist, among others.

Appropriate modern jazz background music very nicely underscored Phil Galligan's forceful, imaginative camera work, particularly on opening shots, and closings which followed a typical rail-commuter to his little ranch nest in the west.

Script, well punctuated with impressive statistics by writer Harry Durning, tied the varied components of the show into a neat package, which was carried off smoothly by the skilled narration of newswoman, Betty Adams.

There were some caustic comments by experts about "inner chaos" of Suburbia, which was described by one as a "septic breeding ground for mental health." But generally, show was a plea for cooperation between mushrooming suburbs and core city.

Plaudits go to associate producer Mel Bernstein, director Stan Berk and last (but certainly not least) sponsor Sperry & Hutchinson Co., national distribs of S&H green stamps, whose commercials achieved the same high level of integrity as evidenced in first program. Guy.

McSherry's ABC Slot

William P. McSherry was named the first national tv news editor for ABC. He'll coordinate the tv web's expanding news activities under news-pubaffairs director John T. Madigan.

McSherry, with ABC since '43, transferred from ABC Radio to ABC-TV in 1952. He lately served as a news editor of ABC-TV newscasts.

VARIETY - ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top ten network shows on a local level and offers a rating study in depth of the top six syndicated shows in the same particular market. This week six different markets are covered.

In the syndicated program listings of the top ten shows, rating data such as the average share of audience, coupled with data as to time and day of telecasting competitive programming in the particular slot, etc., is furnished. Reason for detailing an exact picture of the rating performance of syndicated shows is to reflect the true rating strength of particular series. Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations and/or advertisers to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY. Coupled with the rating performance of the top ten network shows on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every tv market in the U. S.

(*) ARB's November, 1960 survey covered a two week period. Syndicated shows sharing one of the two weeks with an alternating or special program could not be properly judged for comparative performance. Therefore, November data will be limited to those syndicated shows which played both weeks.

56% Increase In Four Star's Gross

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Four Star television rolled up 56% increase in gross income for first half of current fiscal year over a corresponding period the previous year. Healthy rise in net income was also reported by Dick Powell, prexy, and Tom McDermott, exec veepee, in interim report to stockholders.

Gross income for six months ended Dec. 31, 1960 was $11,087,250 compared with $7,106,437 for previous like period. Net income after taxes amounted to $317,203 equal to 52 cents a share based on 600,000 common shares outstanding. For comparable period previous year net income was $160,858 equal to 26 cents a share.

Four Star's library of completed films as of last Dec. 31 comprised 873 half hours, 41 hours, with company's 12 shows now in prime network time. Two new shows have already been sold for next season —a Dick Powell hour series to NBC and Gertrude Berg's "Mother Was a Freshman" to General Foods. Company's wholly-owned subsidiary, Dayton Productions, has indirect interest in 38 episodes of Alcoa-Goodyear Theatre series.

WNTA-TV SKEDDING JERSEY 'DEBATES'

WNTA-TV, Newark-N.Y. indie, has offered to stage a "Great Debate" for the New Jersey gubernatorial candidates of the two major parties in the upcoming elections. The offer was extended to the state chairmen of the Republican and Democratic parties.

Unlike the Presidential debates, station hopes to stage the debates along classical lines, "unguided by newspapermen or tv commentators and unrestricted by questions supplied to the candidates." Under the proposed format, the two candidates will deliver their statements and rebuttals, with no time limit to the program. There will be no charge by the station to either candidate, according to the proposal.

State gubernatorial Election Day is Nov. 7.

Syndie Buys Factor In Auto Dealer Sales Spurt

Shreveport, La., Feb. 25.

Syndication can take a bow along with Holmes Pontiac Co. The Shreveport dealer emerged as the nation's leader in per capita auto sales in the medium-price class. Company attributed a good deal of its success to the use of syndicated tv in its advertising promotion.

Holmes Pontiac has conducted a sustained advertising campaign on KSLA-TV, Shreveport, since September, '54. In January, '59, Holmes began participating spots on Ziv-UA's "Sea Hunt," expanding to alternate sponsorship for the fourth year production in the series.

Holmes in 1960 sold $43.72% of the medium-priced cars in the Shreveport area to earn its present laurels.

ITC Ups Abe Mandell

Appointment of Abe Mandell as v.p. in charge of administration for Independent Television Corp., his area encompassing domestic as well as foreign sales, underscores the growing importance of overseas revenues to syndicators.

Mandell joined ITC two and a half years ago as foreign sales director. He was made a v.p. about a year ago. His division has experienced a whopping sales increase. With the bowout of Walter Kingsley as prez and the assumption of that post by Michael Nidorf, Mandell was put in charge of overall sales, domestic and foreign, as well as administrative policy at ITC. Mandell also will continue as v.p. in charge of international sales.

Nidorf remains board chairman as well as prez.

Birmingham—Charles Brunt, formerly general manager of WTOB, Winston-Salem, has been promoted to general manager of WSGN, Birmingham. He has been succeeded at WTOB by Robert Jones, formerly local sales manager.

VARIETY-ARB's weekly chart offers a day-by-day analysis of the top feature evening slots in a particular market. On Saturdays and Sundays, daytime feature slots compete with nighttime pix periods for designation as the top feature slot of the day. The analysis is confined to the top rated feature slots in the ARB measured period, broken down by days in the week. The ARB measured period usually covers three or four weeks. Other data such as the time slot and average share of audience is furnished. Top competition and competitive ratings also are highlighted.

Jerry Thorpe In New Desilu Post

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Jerry Thorpe has been named v.p. in charge of programming at Desilu Productions. It's a new post, created by prexy Desi Arnaz as part of the continuing reorganization of the studio he's instituted since the departure of Martin Leeds as exec v.p. some months ago. Thorpe will head program development and act as creative supervisor of the studio.

Thorpe, son of veteran Metro director Richard Thorpe, started with Desilu as an assistant director several years ago, moving up as a director and then a producer. He's currently exec producer of "The Untouchables," having replaced Quinn Martin in that post last year. He was also producer of the Desi-"Lucy" specials for Westinghouse and for several of the "Westinghouse Playhouse" films as well.

Until now, Arnaz has never had a v.p. in charge of programs, having undertaken the top creative decisions at the studio himself while having left the business decisions to Leeds. Under the new setup, however, authority will be spread more widely through the company, with Arnaz move active in several areas, so that a topper on the creative end was needed and Thorpe was tapped.

Qualitative Entries For Educ'l TV Stations Via Corporation 'Patrons'

Educational tv stations are getting access to some of the higher-browed syndication offerings via "contributions" from corporations in their areas who buy the shows and get merely an institutional credit for having contributed the programs to the stations.

Pattern is being set in San Francisco, where the educational KQED first got "Open End" and now has picked up CBS Films' "Robert Herridge Theatre" for local airing. "Open End" started it when Burgermeister Beer bought the NTA series and place it on the station. No Burgie commercials, of course, but the brewery gets a company trademark slide at beginning, middle and closing breaks with audio copy reading: "KQED wishes to thank San Francisco Brewing Corp., makers of Burgermeister Beer, for making it possible for us to bring you 'Open End'."

Public reaction to the idea was so favorable, via letters and even sales increases, that another corporation picked up the idea and bought the Herridge show. Second outfit is the Bank of America, which heretofore has been extremely gunshy of tv. Herridge series starts tomorrow (Thurs.).

Though "the contributor" or "patron" buys the show, it refrains from any control over content, letting the station pick the actual episodes. "Patron" merely participates as a community service.

KPRC's Post-'50 Bundle

Houston, Feb. 28.

An outstanding group of motion pictures produced after 1950, recently made available for television showing, has been acquired by KPRC-TV for showing.

The new group of features were all produced in the years 1950 through 1957. Previous Hollywood film features made available to tv were all produced before 1949.

The first film to be telecast from the new feature package will be "Hondo," a 1954 picture starring John Wayne, Geraldine Page, Ward Bond and James Arness. "The High and the Mighty" will be the second film.

Dozier Taps Jaffe

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Howard Jaffe has been named editorial assistant to William Dozier, v.p. in charge of Coast activities for Screen Gems.

Jaffe created the basic idea for the company's planned Joan Crawford series. In his new capacity, Jaffe, working directly with Dozier, will be responsible for recruiting and evaluating ideas for new program series.

'Net' Weight

On balance, the effectiveness of a network comes down to a matter of programs. Measured this way, the CBS Television Network presents more of the season's most popular programs than the other two networks combined (23 out of 40) and more top-rated new program series than the other two combined (4 out of 6).* The same network also broadcasts the season's most popular new program ("The Andy Griffith Show"); television's most popular single program for the past three years ("Gunsmoke"); and the program with the longest record of popularity ("The Ed Sullivan Show"). In fact, in 135 Nielsen reports issued since July 1955 this network has averaged 22 of the 40 top-rated programs. This corner on program popularity helps explain why the CBS Television Network continues to carry more weight with viewers than any other network and more weight with advertisers than any other advertising medium.

neither to the subject nor to its viewers.

Despite the authoritative David Schoenbrun as narrator and the overall excellence of the film footage garnered by the "Twentieth Century" crews, the show was superficial in its treatment. It laid bare all the symptoms of "France in Ferment" without a real diagnosis of the ailment. In other words, it posed more questions than it answered.

Program focussed primarily on French youth, showing their disaffection with the older generation, their break with many French traditions, their disgust with politics and Government policies. But Schoenbrun failed to indicate with any clarity what, if any, ideological patterns the youth is forming, what turns they may take for the future. That they presently participate in riots and sitdowns on Algeria is one thing, but if the break with the past is as severe as Schoenbrun indicated, where do they go from there?

Could be that's the great unanswered question for France—if so the show should have had as its goal an effort to get some estimates from the youths themselves. But there was no effort to ask where the wave of discontent will take French youth; in fact, Schoenbrun's interviews at times even failed to evoke the elementary causes of discontent from the kids, other than in generalities.

"France in Ferment" served the basic function of stating the facts implicit in its title, and doing so in vivid terms. But it failed to go much beyond this point. Chan.

Baghdad By the Bay (Frisco)

Columnist Herb Caen and his cohorts have gradually shaped a crackerjack show for KGO-TV, Frisco, and though the Feb. 19 stanza, in a 2-3:30 p.m. time slot, may have had primary appeal for eggheads, it nevertheless should have held viewers of talk shows all the way.

This particular show contained an extraordinary collection of personalities, which obviously was what host Caen, co-host William Winter and producer Jerry Bundsen were shooting for.

Show's title was "The Making of a Non-Conformist" and the four guests were Jassica Mitford Treuhaft, author of "Daughters and Rebels"; poet Lawrence Ferlinghetti; lawyer Vincent Hallinan, who was the defunct Independent Progressive Party's presidential candidate in 1952 and longtime defender of longshore leader Harry Bridges; and disk jockey Don Sherwood.

The talk focused on Castro, Communism, the House unAmerican Activities Committtee, Red China, the Beat movement, the communications media, capitalism and how one becomes a "non-conformist"—indeed, on the definitions of conformity and non-conformity.

Principal antagonists appeared to be Hallinan, with an all-out defense of Soviet tactics and strategy, and Sherwood, Winter and Caen, defending the U. S. capitalist version of freedom. Mrs. Treuhaft and Ferlinghetti fell somewhere in between, if the six personalities were to be ranged on the political spectrum from center to far left.

There was considerable agreement on some points—for instance, Ferlinghetti, who runs a bookstore in the heart of what used to be Frisco's beatnik area, noted "the beats are dead," and all concurred. All seemed to agree, too, that the unAmerican Activities Committee was a pretty useless appendage to U. S. society, while at least Hallinan, Ferlinghetti and Mrs. Treuhaft seemed to feel Castro was doing great things for Cuba. From there on, there was little conformity, with Caen, Winter and Sherwood defending their media, Mrs. Treuhaft beating U. S. book publishers over the head verbally, Hallinan advocating what Caen called U. S. "isolationism" (withdrawal of bases from around the Russian perimeter), and so on.

This might have gotten pretty hot—it DID get a bit heavy at times, though never unbearable—if it weren't for Caen, who has developed considerably as a tv personality since this show first went on the air at the tv season's start. Caen was relaxed and witty, tossing up such remarks as, "the Bridges (deportation) trial was my favorite trial because Bridges went free and the lawyers went to jail . . . (in this group) it's worse being called a square than being called a Red . . . everybody's looking for Utopia in this group." He also shoved the needle pretty deep into Hallinan—bringing out the fact that Hallinan has become rich under the capitalist society he derides—without being offensive.

All in all, it was a deft performance, vitally interesting and aided by good direction from Jim Baker and technical direction by Dave Seely. Certainly this show, at least, offered as much as much as many of David Susskind's "Open End" talkathons and KGO-TV could do worse than offer it to some of ABC's other o-and-o's in major metropolitan areas. With its network, station and sponsor disclaimers fore and aft, of course. Stef.

Roundup U. S A.

ABC-TV on "Roundup U. S. A." Sunday (26) explored the question of air safety, interviewing public officials and interested experts in the field. It was a competent, workmanlike half-hour on a public issue.

Net impression to the viewer was that it will take time and money before air travel can reach the optimum of safety allowed by technical advances. Question also was raised whether today's minimum standards for airports, where a good deal of air disasters take place, are adequate for the jet age. Another issue, left in the question area, was whether today's air control policies, set before the jet age, can meet today's needs. There were some diverse opinions expressed on these and other issues.

Bill Shadel was the anchorman for the outing, with ABC correspondents in Chicago, Washington and San Francisco reporting. Jules Bergman, science editor for the web, also played a principal role. Bergman, in his narration, spoke at too fast a pace although in a comparatively abstract field such as air safety, the unexpert layman digests better at a slower speed.

that's the one that counts in solidifying the Sabbath night structure. It's the same strategy that compelled Treyz to move "Rifleman" into Monday night 8:30 next season.

It's interesteing to note that, in the recent three-network battle for the three-show General Foods billings ($18,000,000 and including Danny Thomas, Andy Griffith and the new Gertrude Berg entry), it all focussed on "what are you putting in at 8:30?"

General Foods was cognizant of the fact that much of the future success of the 9 to 10 p.m. Thomas-Griffith programs, whatever the network, would hinge on the preceding 8:30 period. CBS recaptured the shows—by installing the new Robert Young half-hour series Monday 8:30.

Further 8:30 to 9 documentation: New Bob Cummings show goes in Thursdays on CBS-TV; new "Top Cat" animation series out of the Hanna-Barbera shop goes Wednesdays on ABC-TV.

combined with kids under 6, the highest. Of 1.33 male viewers per set, the 12-and-under group comprise .36 viewers per set; of 1.34 femmes, the 12-and-unders comprise .33 viweers. Add on the 13-17 category, and the figures become .48 viewers of 1.33 in the male group and .46 of 1.34 in the femme grouping.

Moreover, the Nielsens too have given some indication of the strength of the moppet control. Remarkably, "Bonanza" and "Perry Mason," its principal rival in the current Saturday 7:30-8:30 period, have been running neck and neck all season. Latest Nielsens (Feb. 1 report) put "Mason" in 18th place, with a 26.3, while "Bonanza" is right on its tail, in 19th position with a 26.0. Implication is clear—there's no question that the "Mason" audience is principally an adult one, and consequently "Bonanza" must draw much of its strength from the kids who are up at that hour.

move. Universal, enjoying bonanza profits, appears to be in no rush.

Television, Vogel told stockholders, continues to be the second major source of revenue for Metro, for the most part from the licensing of pre-'48 pix. Metro TV in addition, has two network series, "National Velvet" and "The Islanders" now on the air. "Islanders" will be replaced by "Asphalt Jungle" on April 2 on ABC-TV. Company hopes to add three more series next season, "Father of the Bride," "Dr. Kildare," and "Cain's 100," pilots of which already are committed either to an advertiser or network.

Inside Stuff—Radio-TV

CBS-TV has released Norman Jewison from his exclusive contract with the web, but according to N. Y. program v.p. Mike Dann, is already in negotiations for a new pact with the director to start in September.

Dann emphasized that Jewison was released at his own request, since he had no assignments on tap from CBS-TV for the balance of his contract, which ends in August, but has a crack at a pair of outside assignments in the April Pat Boone special and the possibility of the U. S. Brewers Foundation special in summer. Under terms of his CBS pact, he can't undertake assignments at other networks, and neither of the two is slated for CBS.

At the same time, Dann said, CBS has no intention of letting Jewison get loose and therefore has begun negotiating on a new contract. This would call for his exclusive services in tv but would free him for pix and legit assignments. Jewison's last entries for CBS were the Danny Kaye and Harry Belafonte specials in October and November of last year.

In Philco's annual report James M. Skinner Jr., president, declared "1960 was a disappointing and difficult year," and cited the industry-wide drop in consumer goods.

The firm reported 1960 sales of $400,587,000 and net income of $2,287,000, equal to 47c per common share after preferred dividends. The year's income included a special credit of $700,000 for tax provisions no longer required. In 1959, sales totaled $397,792,000 and earnings amounted to $7,176,000, or $1.67 a share.

Skinner said he was looking forward to an improved though not "exceptional" year for 1961, and "we are reasonably optimistic for the balance of the 1960s'."

Chicago Unlimited, a tv-radio trade organization which is prepping a salute this spring to the old days of Windy City radio, is hoping to recreate for the occasion a Chi organization of the 'Thirties known as "Beat the Band." The show had been hosted by Garry Moore and featured the Ted Weems Band, with vocalists Marilyn Maxwell and Perry Como. All have been invited to the taffypull, which will be held in conjunction with the opening of the new Sheraton-Chicago Hotel.

Among the others being asked to appear are Correll & Gosden (Amos 'n Andy), Dave Garroway, Don and Jim Ameche, George Gobel, Patti Page, Goodman Ace, Hugh Downs, and Durward Kirby, all of whom had had their start in Chicago in the days when radio was king of the airwaves.

Story in last week's VARIETY on possibility that ABC-TV's "All Star Golf" may be dropped after four years erratumed in naming Walter Schwimmer as distributor of the show. That had been the case until last year when Schwimmer traded his "Golf" contract to Henry Saperstein's Glen Films for the "Championship Bowling" syndie series.

WBKB competitors are understood to have also availed their prettier celluloid on the city.

As for WBKB, it can scarcely make a statement until the print arrives from England. Station had made its investment on the basis of Mitchell's reputation as an artist-documentarian (he's won several international prizes) and after being highly impressed by his earlier BBC film "Morning in the Streets," depicting life in Liverpool. In the agreement, the station gave Mitchell free artistic rein and may in no way interfere with the show's content.

Reached by trans-Atlantic hookup, Mitchell told the station he was surprised by all the ruckus and said, "The criticism is out of proportion to what the film actually depicts. It's not a travelog for the Chamber of Commerce, but that's not what we wanted." He said that apart from the shots of bleakness, he had also edited in long scenes of the beautiful aspects of Chicago and made ample acknowledgement of the city's cultural standing.

WBKB general manger Matt Vieracker, in the absence of ABC veep Sterling Quinlan, stated that the station can in no way censor the film but that it has the option to show it or not. He indicated that if the distortion of truth was as bad as some have made it out to be the station might elect not to show it. "But until a print arrives," he says, "we can't even defend it as a work of art."

The tremendous press coverage the film has received here augurs a huge audience, if and when it's ever shown in Chi. But on the other hand the notoriety virtually cancels the possibility of sponsorship. Considering the atmosphere, it's clearly not the stuff that product images are burnished on.

Furthermore, the show has been so prejudged, particularly by the Trib and the American, that favorable reviews when it's finally shown here are highly unlikely. They'd be only contradictions.

Robert Raphaelson's ABC-TV Program Slot

Robert Raphaelson has become manager of ABC-TV program development under veepee Dan Melnick. Raphaelson, who came from the Talent Associates production shop where he worked as script editor on "Witness," will understudy Melnick in all phases (acquisition, negotiation and script supervision) of program development.

Radio's New Techniques

news editor, society editor, an editorial writer, an entertainment editor and a local and civic events editor.

"We localize our news stories," he said. "We have a list of 500 top citizens in our cities. We subdivide that list into top oil leaders, top banking and industrial leaders, top society women, educators and so forth. When a wire story arrives about a development in the cotton market, we immediately call a top local cotton leader, record his comments and localize the national story around him. We get hundreds of these local names on the air each day."

"More and more," he declared, "independent radio will abandon the sham and the scream, the fever and the frantic, the jarring and the juvenile, the hoopla and the hotrod, to turn the tripod of history around again and foursquare our great antagonist—the newspaper. When other stations have done that, we will yet recapture some of that sunlight that was radio's yesterday."

KMOX's Hyland, describing his station's swing a year ago to the afternoon talk format, "At Your Service" which CBS recently put on the web under the same title for part of the daytime feed), told the execs that its "a program approach we believe is the spearhead of the current trend to talk programming in the radio industry."

He said the show, which features interviews, poetry, dramatic readings, advice from doctors and marriage counselors (via phone and mail query), worldwide news remotes, a job hunting guide, fashion tips, lively-arts criticism, add infinitum, has caused more talk about radio than ever before—"at the civic luncheon clubs, in the corridors of office buildings, among housewives, executives, working men. Salesmen have called me to say they plan their routes to be in their cars during 'At Your Service'. . . We've learned we can no longer underestimate the listening public, with its higher educational level and its growing demand for information and enlightenment."

The strips rating, he said, is 26% higher than previous music programming.

WSB's Gaither said his station's listeners had come to think of the station as a person, that "more than one listener has volunteered the opinion that he could identify the sound of WSB even if dialing his radio blindfolded."

Station execs feel, he said, that the concept of a closely-coordinated, easy-to-recognize radio is a vital new trend in broadcasting.

WSB's "distinctive" sound, he said, comes from "(1) a unified music policy controlling the quality and variety of all songs played; (2) a closely-coordinated news operation on a minute-by-minute basis, and a plan of procedure that allows integration of news reports into any program at any time; (3) a programming concept that requires every WSB program to be developed as a public service vehicle (every show must be more than mere entertainment); and (4) another WSB conviction that each program should involve a degree of audience participation." Latter includes phone, mail and remote interview features, prize contests and studio audience shows throughout the daily sked. And musically, he said, "our three B's are big, bright and beautiful."

". . . I can honestly say to you that I enjoy listening to my radio station," Gaither said. ". . . I feel comfortable listening to WSB. Not every radio station manager can make that statement."

Behind-the-Scenes

Smith to embarrass Rayburn, who led the recent fight to give the Rules unit a more liberal complexion as a means of thwarting its old practice of sitting on liberal legislation.

Brandishing an argument used by the liberals coalition which defeated Smith in the rules battle, Smith sought to turn it against those who voted to expand the Rules group. Smith repeatedly asserted the House should get a chance to vote on all matters. Rep. Clarence Brown (R-O.) said:

"I said on the floor of the House when the resolution to pack the Rules Committee came up that only one thing was sought, the power to control the committee's decisions. The correctness of that statement was demonstrated today."

The vote on Meader's resolution split the committee into four Republican conservatives aligned with Smith and fellow Dixiecrat William Colmer (R-Miss.) and eight remaining Democratic members. Rep. Carrol Reese (D-Tenn.) was absent.

The testimony on the Meader resolution changed no minds, but served to point up the case for and against House tv.

Brown offered the unseemly prediction that a "certain percentage of House members might be slaughtered in the rush to get in front of the cameras."

Meader, speaking for his resolution countered with the tongue-in-cheek statement: "If so, you better get a better makeup man than Dick Nixon had in the first Great Debate."

Some members argued that there was danger of biased film editing of tv newsreel film, but met Meader's contention that the Senate, whose functions are generally open to the Fifth Estate, has not encountered serious problems on this score.

Meader's cause was espoused by Rep. Arthur Younger (R-Cal.) who appeared before the Rules group.

Meader, candidly conceding he has little chance of success, is continuing to carry on his fight. He's switching to persuasion tactics—directed by Rayburn. In a House speech, he compiled some parliamentary arguments in support of his move in hope Rayburn might listen to reason. Only trouble was that Rayburn was off the floor at the time.

Collins' Appeal to B'casters: 'Give Full Measure of Talents'

Washington, Feb. 28.

Waxing inspirational, LeRoy Collins has called on broadcasters to shun the role of a "sharp operator in the market place" and "reach a pinnacle of responsibility we can all be proud of."

Speaking before the convention of State Broadcasting Assn. presidents here, the new head of National Assn. of Broadcasters likened the mission of the broadcaster to that of the "artist" with these words:

"The true artist feels an impelling desire to do the best work of which he is capable. Whatever his talent may be, he must give it completely to his work. If he holds back, if he is satisfied with anything less than his best, then he is not a real artist . . .

"So it should be with broadcasters. To deserve a professional status, the broadcaster must give a full measure of his talent. He must recognize that his greater and greater power in a free society carries with it greater and greater responsibility to serve."

Collins had this to say about his concept of NAB's purpose: "Our burning desire is to help make broadcasting a greater force in American life. To do this we are determined to help improve quality of broadcasting through efforts of broadcasters themselves and to shield the profession from those who would destroy any of its basic freedoms."

The former Florida Governor and Chairman of last summer's Democratic convention, served notice he was not out to ingratiate himself with Assn. members. He said:

"I find some conflict within our broadcasting family, but this is to be expected. I do not expect to please everybody. No president worth his salt would."

uneconomical that the company "would be obliged to invest money on a speculative basis." Desilu is unwilling to do this and "will wait until the market displays more economic stability."

Arnaz added that Desilu presently is negotiating for the sale or "residual usage" of its "full inventory," which he said will total 1,014 half-hours by April 30.

Company also reported declines for the third fiscal quarter, also ended Jan. 28. Gross income was $5,970,303 as against $9,091,404 for the third quarter last year, net profit was $144,032 or 13c a share, as compared with $587,204 or 51c a share in the same period in 1960.

CBS Radio's Art Hayes Sets Forth Credo For Programming a Network

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.

CBS Radio prexy Arthur Hull Hayes, in an address to the Annenberg School of Communications at the U. of Pennsylvania here last week, neatly summed up the function of network radio in today's television era. In a speech themed to the point that radio stations have a dual duty of "survival with stature, with conscience, with pride," Hayes summarized the role of the network in this situation thusly:

"A radio network's primary role is its ability to present programming which would be difficult or impossible for stations to present themselves. A network should furnish to its stations and through these stations to the radio audience, such programs as the stations cannot furnish . . . under any circumstances. I refer to the full concert season of the New York Philharmonic . . . there is only one New York Philharmonic. Or a personality like Arthur Godfrey or Don McNeil . . . there are many programs and stars that are one of a kind and can be presented only if a multitude of stations get them from a common source.

"A network should also furnish programs which can be produced at the local level, but are economically unfeasible," as well as shows which stations can produce economically but not as well. Finally, he declared, "network programming offers still another concrete benefit. It helps to earmark a station, to establish an identity when you have competitive stations like 30 AM and FM stations in N.Y., 20 in Philadelphia, 28 in Los Angeles and so on, the need to be genuinely different from one's neighbors on the radio dial is acute."

Miami—Deejay Jack McDermott has switched from WGBS to WINZ (both Miami and is handling an all-night disk show, using the moniker "Jerry Knight."

BBC-TV's $2,400,000 For Glasgow Studios

Glasgow, Feb. 28.

New BBC-TV studios costing $2,400,000 are to be built alongside the present radio-tv studios in the west side of the city.

Project will double the capacity of the present building, and will give a new entrance frontage. New building is being sited on a former private bowling green. Treasury cuts in 1958 held up the project, which is scheduled for completion in 1963.

Plans for the extension have been okayed by the city's Dean of Guild Court.

McPhail

chance, though MacPhail is far from sure, that CBS might reenter the bidding for the NCAA college games when ABC's rights expire a year from now.

To fill that 13-week gap between football and Saturday baseball, MacPhail's seriously considering a skiing show. Interest stems from the enthusiastic reception accorded CBS' coverage of last year's Winter Olympics in Squaw Valley, and from the impressive numbers afforded by the sporting goods companies, who reported a 22% gain this year in sale of ski and allied equipment, with the number of active skiers growing rapidly every year. Details of the show haven't been worked out — MacPhail envisions either tape or film at places like Squaw Valley, Aspen and Stowe, with competitions among skiiers.

MacPhail is quite pleased with the tansfer of his organization from the CBS News division to the tv network. For one thing, it's permitted him to integrate his department into a well-rounded unit, with his own technical operations chief (Bob Daley, ex-"Person to Person"), his own business affairs topper (Don Hamilton) and his own sales coordinator (Jack Purvis). Consequently, he can price out his own shows, move more quickly on the technical end and operate more closely with network sales. Moreover, since he now reports only to CBS-TV prexy Jim Aubrey, MacPhail feels he can get decisions and answers more quickly than under the news setup, and in a business like sports, he declares, that's essential.

7:30-8:30) and Thursday 7:30 to 8:30 and 9 to 10.

Otherwise, the web is locked in five nights of the week, Sundays, which remains the same; Mondays which finds Robert Young replacing "Bringing Up Buddy" and "I've Got a Secret" moving into 10:30-11; Tuesday, which is now firmed up with PG's buy of "Double Trouble" at 8-8:30 (see separate story); Friday, which will have "Twilight Zone" moving to 9:30 and "The Defenders" going in at 10-11; and Saturday, which remains the same except for the expansion of "Gunsmoke."

Another CBS program exec who Coasted over the weekend was daytime v.p. Larry White, who's set for a prolonged stay in order to install his new block of morning shows on March 13.

other providing for operation of unmarked highway patrol cars. It showed how the bills became bogged down in sub-committee hearings and had their teeth removed by carping solons. Show was particularly timely since a watered-down version of the latter measure had been passed by the state senate earlier in the day.

In essence, this documentary was a very pointed needling of state legislators to do something positive about the highway situation. It named names and showed faces of solons who proposed blunting amendments to safety measures, recording their comments in committee, house and senate hearings. In conclusion, it urged viewers to take a hand in the matter by letting their legislators know they backed "get tough" driving laws.

Narration by WCCO newscaster Dave Moore and Jim Dooley's scripting were extremely terse and dramatic. Clarence Anderson's direction was also first-rate. Entire show was a fine example of how a crusading tv station can stimulate public awareness in an area of vital concern to all. Sponsor, too, rates credit for giving the station a free hand in a somewhat ticklish situation. Rees.

THE SHRINE CIRCUS
With Randy Merriman
Producer-Director: Roger Miller
30 Mins.; Thurs., 8 p.m.
BONGARD'S CHEESE, HILLS BROS. COFFEE
WCCO-TV, Mpls.

Just enough of a teaser to whet smallfry viewers appetites for more, this half-hour remote pickup of the 43d annual Zuhrah Shrine circus' opening performance in the Minneapolis Auditorium had all the sounds and sights of the big show, everything, in fact, except the aromas.

Telecast presented opening parade together with views of many of the acts, 85 percent of which are appearing here for the first time. Latter included the debut of 18-year-old animal trainer Rebecca Apinay with an act involving tigers, leopards, Siberian wolf hounds, African zebras and a black panther. WCCO-TV personality Randy Merriman did a nifty job of describing the pageantry, spicing his narration with interviews with producer Hubert Castle, ringmaster Ernie MacLaine, equestrian director Carl Strong, and local promoter Al Sheehan who is grand potentate of the Zuhrah temple. Sheehan, who pooh-poohed effects of the recession on the circus and other show biz attractions, said he expected between 145,000 and 150,000 customers for the 18 performances.

Commercials, particularly one for Bongard's Cheese with Bozo the Clown handling the pitch, were integrated smoothly into the show. Rees.

sion has scored most of the big markets in selling the Paramount Pictures. But nothing definite as yet. For the past year, MCA TV has taken a hiatus in introing new first-runners in the market. Off-network properties also are seen as a good possibility.

NTA: Future of "The Play of The Week" is keyed to the disposition of o&o WNTA-TV, Newark-N.Y., now up for sale. Other syndied vidtape shows involved in WNTA-TV's future are "Mike Wallace Interviews" and "David Susskind's Open End." NTA says it will go ahead with vidfilm production, second year, on "Third Man" and "Assignment Underwater."

ZIV-UA: Three half-hour new vidfilm property slated (see separate story on Ziv-UA plans).

Official Films, following the profitable course established by its "Almanac" series, is prepping a telementary series for the fall. Official Films has concluded a deal with Paramount Pictures for exclusive use of its news library which runs from 1925 to 1958. Prepared to shoot fresh footage whenever necessary, Official is working on a series of hour and 30-minute shows utilizing the Paramount library. Official also has two telementary pilots in the works which may go into syndication, if regional money is available. Two pilots are "Biography," a David L. Wolper half-hour project dealing with famous people and narrated by Mike Wallace, and a half-hour travel show, helmed by syndicated travel columnist Dela Plane, and featuring celebs.

There also will be some product from minor syndie houses, cartoons, vidfilm series, shorts, etc.

'Barn Dance' Revived As WGN Radio Entry, May Go Syndication

Chicago, Feb. 28.

WGN is reviving the old "National Barn Dance" show that had been a fixture for 36 years on WLS until it was axed last May. There's possibility that if the radio show should catch on again, it'll be done also for tv syndication.

Program will run 90 minutes on Saturday nights at 8 p.m., starting March 11, and will be redubbed "The New WGN Barn Dance." As at WLS, the country-western show will have clear channel reach.

Program is being packaged by Dolph Hewitt, a 14-year veteran of the old "Barn Dance," with a cast of such other regulars as Bob Atcher, Arkie the Arkansas Woodchopper, Red Blanchard, and the Sage Riderrs. Only newcomers will be the Johnson Sisters and WGN farm director Orion Samuelson.

"Barn Dance," which was started in 1924, helped to develop such names as George Gobel (then a boy yodeler), Fibber McGee & Molly, Rex Allen, Gene Autry, Pat Buttram, Ruth Etting and Ford & Glenn. A half-hour tv version had been attempted in the early '50s but was short lived.

Show used to emanate from the stage of the old Eighth St. Theatre here and charged admission to its studio audience. Over the years it played to over 3,000,000 payees.

Zenith Goes Tint & It's Seen As A Major Boost in RCA Campaign

In terms of market psychology Radio Corp. of America may have gotten its greatest color boost yet by the announcement last week that rival Zenith Radio Corp. had decided to make color tv sets.

John L. Burns, RCA president, "welcomed" the Zenith move and indicated that Sylvania may also enter color set manufacturing later this year. Admiral, Emerson, Magnavox, Packard-Bell and Olympic are also in color, but few of them are in the merchandising position of Zenith.

For the longest time, it appeared to industry observers, RCA was fighting a losing battle in popularizing color. Apart from its subsidiary NBC-TV, the networks were charry about the cost of entering tint programming. CBS moved in that direction but pulled out. ABC is still holding off "until the price of sets is brought down low enough to make it feasible for us to address a color audience."

Actually, price of sets is still fairly high. RCA sets go generally at slightly under $500. Zenith's product will be priced at about $600.

But, expectation today is that a merchandising-advertising push by Zenith (in tandem with RCA's) will help spring a greater consumer demand. Largescale color set sales, RCA once commented, will bring into play mass production and the ensuing consumer savings from mass production.

NBC offers a daily sked of multichrome programming, and about 100 tv stations in the country are equipped to originate local tint programs.

Burns has said that 1960 saw color tv set manufacture pass the $100,000,000-a-year mark.

BRITISH PUSH PLANS FOR RUSS EXCHANGE

London, Feb. 28.

Peter Dimmock, BBC outside tv broadcasts chief, has left for Moscow with his engineer topper, T. H. Bridgewater, to discuss a possible exchange of programs with the Russian tv services.

Meanwhile, commercial tv has got an "in" with the Soviets. Bill Ward, production boss of Associated TeleVision, has come back from Russia with a mutual deal signed up. A series of programs from Moscow during the British Trade Fair from May 19 to June 4, will be reciprocated by televising of programs from U.K. during the Soviet State Fair in London from July 7 to July 29.

A performance of the Bolshoi Ballet and a documentary on Moscow life are also in the deal. The tv signal to Britain will come via Leningrad, Tallin, Helsinki and then through Eurovision.

'Kukla' Up for Sponsor Grabs; 7-Up Drops Option

Chicago, Feb. 28.

NBC-TV and CBS-TV have both given "definite upon sale" commitments to Burr Tillstrom for his new "Kukla & Ollie" five-minute strip, but since neither web has been able to offer a nighttime berth Tillstrom's prime prospect, 7-Up, has dropped its option. American Dairy Assn., whose agency, Campbell-Mithun, evinced interest during the preliminary solicitation, can't make a decision until its advertising committee meets again in March. So the property is being screened again for agencies in the east and midwest.

NBC has offered a five-minute daily segment of the Dave Garroway show if Tillstrom's organization can bring in a sponsor.

Atlanta—C. F. Daugherty, a 38-year veteran of WSB, has retired. He first came to station Sept. 20, 1922, in its swaddling clothes days. He was manager of facilities at the time of his retirement.

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By MIKE GROSS

Julius LaRosa (Kapp): "SEVENTEEN" (Peter Schaeffer*) gets across its juve angle with a breezy lyric and a happy vocal style for fair spinning results. "LET YOUR LIPS TELL ME" (B. F. Wood*) has a lilting ballad flavor that should draw deejay play.

Sylia Saint (Columbia): "IT'S SO WONDERFUL" (B. F. Wood*) has a big ballad pull that comes with a vocal force to attract spins. "YOU'VE GOT AN AWFUL LOT TO LEARN ABOUT LOVE" (Abilene*) builds a sprightly mood with an engaging swinging vocal.

Clyde Otis Orch (Mercury): "THE PEANUT VENDOR" (E. B. Marks†) features an infectious rhythmic attack that will attract spinners who go for instrumental programming. "JUNGLE DRUMS" (E. B. Marks*) beats out on a pulsating melodic line. The Mike Stewart Singers supply a good choral backing on both sides.

Johnny Walsh (Warner Bros.) "GIRL MACHINE" (Odin*) gives rocking instructions on how to build a girl and the kids may find something of interest in it. Don Ralke's orch backs. "BEAUTIFUL OBSESSION" (Aut*) is a fair vocal effort over a pretty melodic mood. Sir Chauncey's orch supplies the romantic backing.

Ray Bloch (Signature): "TWO LOVES" (Hollybrook*) plays with the romantic "Tristan and Isolde" theme in a way that builds into okay programming material. "PINE TOP BOOGIE WOOGIE" (Melrose) rolls with a good beat that could fit the bill for deejays on an ins[illegible] kick.

Marie [illegible] (Addit): "TO BE LOVED BY YOU" (Embassy†) has an intriguing beat and a vocal attack that should get lots of deejays on its side. "HOPE YOU WON'T HOLD IT AGAINST ME" (Dorsey Bros.*) has a smooth ballad form that can help a tasty programming schedule.

Carmella Rosella (Nancy): "WHERE" (Tad*) has an okay ballad flavor that's developed with a warm vocal. "OH! IT WAS ELVIS" (Tad*) fills out an ordinary rocking idea.

Lindy Curtis (Mala): "SWEET THING" (Wednesday†) pours out a nifty rocking beat in a breezy vocal manner that could make noise on the jockey circuit. "VALENTINE" (Aim†) is a belated ballad pitch for Valentine's Day that'll have trouble surviving.

Raymond LeFevre (Atlantic): "HAVAH NAGUILA" is the traditional Hebrew melody developed with a stirring orch treatment. "COME SOFTLY TO ME" (Cornerstone) has some lush instrumental touches that should get it on the turntables.

Ray Charles Orch (Impulse): "LET'S GO" (Tangerine) has a hot instrumental flavor that will appeal to the hipper jocks. "ONE MINT JULEP" (Progressive & Regent) is in a cool instrumental groove fashioned by arranger Quincy Jones.

Bobby D'Fano (Palette): "ROCK 'N' ROLL SKATERS' WALTZ" (Zodiac) rocks in a waltz vein that's quite attractive and could build a spinning following. "LITTLE LOST PUPPY" (Zodiac) waves a sophomoric tale that even the kids may find hard to take.

Mickey Roselli (Roulette): "I CAN'T STOP CRYING" (Village†) is built along big ballad lines with a strong vocal styling to help along the spinning trail. "YOU'RE IN LOVE WITH EVERYONE" (Mills*) sets up a soft ballad mood in a likable vocal manner.

*ASCAP. †BMI.

Best Bets

PAUL ANKA ..... I'M JUST A FOOL ANYWAY
(ABC-Paramount) ..... Tonight My Love, Tonight

Paul Anka's "I'm Just A Fool Anyway" (Spanka†) is another clicko display of the youngster's vocalizing and cleffing and is a natural for hefty jure approval. "Tonight My Love, Tonight" (Spanka†) gets a strong vocal spread on a Latino-styled ballad.

SONNY JAMES ..... APACHE
(RCA Victor) ..... Magnetism

Sonny James "Apache" (Regent†) puts an Indian legend into a clicko pop groove that's helped tremendously by the vocal approach. "Magnetism" (Sonny James Music†) has a gripping beat that will attract the spinners, too.

TENNESSEE ERNIE FORD ..... DARK AS A DUNGEON
(Capitol) ..... His Love

Tennessee Ernie Ford's "Dark As A Dungeon" (American†) is fashioned along the same lines that made "16 Tons" a hit for him several years ago. Similarity of flavor, beat and message give it a sure-fire commercial potential. "His Love" (Central Songs†) has a neat pop flair that should get it some spinning attention.

BUDDY KNOX ..... THE KISSES
(Liberty) ..... Ling-Ting-Tong

Buddy Knox's "The Kisses (They're All Mine)" (Glenda†) has a lively folk flavor that handled with a pop flair that guarantees a big payoff. "Ling-Ting-Tong" (St. Louis†) plays around with an Oriental motif for novel results.

THE KALIN TWINS .... YOU MEAN THE WORLD TO ME
(Decca) ..... Momma-Poppa

The Kalin Twins' "You Mean the World to Me" (Herb Reis†) will appeal a lot to the juve trade because of the bouncy beat and the sweet phrasing that has clicko qualities. "Momma-Poppa" (Aldon†) sets up a good rhythmic line but it doesn't go much further.

REX GARVIN & MIGHTY CRAVERS ..... EMULSIFIED
(Epic) ..... Go Little Willie

Rex Garvin & The Mighty Cravers' "Emulsified" (Regent†) is a wild rocker that will surely stir up a lot of enthusiasm for a spinning table. "Go Little Willie" (Regent†) has a rocking beat that will keep the jukes flipping.

CHARLY TABOR ..... HOLIDAY IN HEIDELBERG
(London) ..... Angel Blues

Charly Tabor's "Holiday in Heidelberg" (Gil-Rex†) plays up a slick [illegible] with a smooth trumpet lead that will carry it to a sizzling finish. "Angel Blues" (Peer†) shines as another [illegible] instrumental with more fine trumpeting displayed.

GENE VINCENT ..... MISTER LONELINESS
(Capitol) ..... If You Want My Lovin'

Gene Vincent's "Mister Loneliness" (Famous†) will find lots of fans for a solid spinning score because of the sharp blending of all the necessary rocking ingredients. "If You Want My Lovin'" (Robin Hood†) sells a rocking message in energetic vocal terms.

DEL SHANNON ..... RUNAWAY
(Big Top) ..... Jody

Del Shannon's "Runaway" (Vicki-McLaughlin†) runs with plenty of vocal gimmickry set in an unusual but highly interesting orch frame that will mean a strong spinning push. "Jody" (Vicki-McLaughlin†) is moderate ballad material.

Features FRANK SCOTT'S Harpsichord on a Great New Dot Album and "Single" "CALCUTTA" ...Following his Top-Hit "Last Date!"

Artist-Disk Deals

Victor: Sonny James

Sonny James, country & western singer who formerly recorded for Capitol Records, has moved over to the RCA Victor roster.

He cut a session for Victor in Nashville under Chet Atkins with the first release to be a coupling of "Apache" and "Magnetism." He had a smash hit in 1957 with "Young Love" for Capitol.

Strand: Jessel, Chandler

George Jessel will now record under the Strand banner. Last year, Jessel did two comedy albums for the Palette label. According to Sid Pastner, Jessel's initial release will be a "sound travelog" of Israel with Jessel doing the narration. This will be followed by an album of poetry readings.

Also inked to Strand last week was Karen Chandler. She'll debut with an album which was arranged and conducted by her husband Jack Pleis.

RCA Mexicana Three Kings

Mexico City, Feb. 28.

The Three Kings, popular trio made up of Hernando Aviles and brothers Gilberto and Raul Puente, have signed a new contract with RCA Victor Mexicana after cancelling their pact with Orfeon.

Mercury: Billy Craddock

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Billy (Crash) Craddock, country & western warbler, has signed on with Mercury Records.

Album Reviews

Bobby Darin & Johnny Mercer: "Two Of A Kind" (Atco). Johnny Mercer, who is 27 years older than Bobby Darin, has got a vocal verve that excellently complements the youngster's piping pyrotechnics. Together they bring an unusual bounce and delightful casual flavor to a snappy disk production. The mood is jovial and bright and the sock standard repertoire has appeal for adults as well as juves.

Felix Slatkin Orch: "The Magnificent XII" (Liberty). Al Bennett's Liberty label gets its new Premier stereo series off to fine start with the lush string work of Felix Slatkin's orch on a flock of melodies that are pegged mainly on pic themes. Slatkin delivers in a richly romantic style that will win over the mood music lovers. Enhanced by the stimulating strings are "Unchained Melody," "Tara's Theme," "Never On Sunday" and "The Song From Moulin Rouge," among others.

Cy Harrice: "Cartoons In Stereo" (Audio Fidelity). Even the most serious of stereo buffs will get a kick out of this sound concoction. Bob Prescott, a sound effects man, has devised an offbeat setting for audio pitches with series of sketches and "sound blackouts" that are unusual as well as funny. Cy Harrice plays second fiddle to the stereo noises but he does extremely well with his multi-faceted voice assignments.

Maury Laws Orch: "Percussion On Stage" (Time). The accent is on audio here. The sound has been a feature of the label's "2000" series and it's developed a knowhow that will build a strong following in the stereo set. Although the "Percussion" line is pushed in the title, Maury Lewis' instrumentation has a wide range and supplies a full-blown orch sound. The material, as indicated by the title, comes from the Broadway stage and selections from such as "South Pacific," "My Fair Lady," "Guys and Dolls," "Gypsy," "Kismet," "West Side Story" and "The King and I" among others give it a solid base.

Sir Malcolm Sergent: "Pirates of Penzance" (Angel). This is the sixth in Angel's recreation of Gilbert & Sullivan operettas with Sir Malcolm Sergent conducting the Pro Arte Orchestra & Glyndebourne Festival Chorus. It's a tuneful and bright sampling of one of G&S' best efforts and Sir Malcolm has seen to it that orch, chorus and soloists are on their toes throughout. The stereo sound is superior.

Al Hirt-Henri Rene Orch; "Al Hirt—The Greatest Horn In The World" (RCA Victor). Al Hirt, who is used to trumpeting to a combo backing, is put in a big band setting in first LP for Victor and he really blows up a storm. This could be one of the label's big sellers this year. On one side Hirt is in a big swinging band groove and he really let's go on such as "Sweet Sue" and "Begin the Beguine." Flip side puts him in a more romantic trumpeting vein with a lush string section added to the band and he warms up "Stella By Starlight" and "Georgia On My Mind," among others, in no uncertain terms.

Les Brown Band: "The Lerner & Loewe Bandbook" (Columbia). The lilting Frederick Loewe melodies out of "Camelot," "My Fair Lady," "Gigi" and "Brigadoon" are put into an attractive swinging setting by the Les Brown band. With arrangements by Jay Hill, Warren Barket and Frank Comstock, Brown has plenty of stimulating ideas to work with and with the aid of a flock of topflight sidemen lays down a beat that will attract a wide audience.

Carol Burnett: "Remember How They Stopped The Show" (Decca). Carol Burnett is a show-stopper in her own right and when she's matched with a dozen show-stopping tunes out of the past, she's hard to beat. Miss Burnett has a potent set of pipes and she can stir up lots of vocal excitement without losing any of the lyric values. Irwin Kostal, who leads the orch and did the arrangements, adds the musical meat to her workover of such nifties as "Johnny One Note," "Then Cents A Dance," "Adelaide's Lament," "The Trolley Song," "Blow Gabriel Blow" and the like.

Osborne Smith: "The Eyes of Love" (Argo). From the cast of "Irma La Douce," Osborne is an interesting, multi-faceted talent. In this package, he does a group of blues and folk numbers, mostly his own, and one long recitation after which the set is titled. He's a fine singer with a rangy voice that gets arresting effects, such as on "Jail House Blues" and "Barbara Allen." The long recitation frequently lapsed into pretentiousness and cliches, not saved by the exotic musical backing. Smith, however, has considerable promise as a vocalist.

The Pro Musica Erotica: "The Restoration Revisited or The Pursuit of Happiness" (Offbeat). The lyricists in Restoration England apparently had no inhibitions. They were a lusty bunch who made no bones about their interest in women. The accompanying melodies are of that period too, and serve a fine backing for the bawdy banter. Although the set has historical values as a showcasing of 17th century pops, it should come with a "For Adults Only" tag. Gros.

Longplay Shorts

LLOYD SETTLE NAMED TO CRDC EXEC POST

Lloyd D. Settle has been set as national merchandising manager for Capitol Records Distributing Corp. He succeeded Bill Mikels who was recently named album manager.

Before joining CRDC, Settle was an independent management consultant in the development of recreation centers and shows in the U.S., Canada, and Central America. Previously he had been promotion director for both Pacific Ocean Park and Disneyland.

Bill Frost, meantime, has been set as the director of the editorial department of CRDC. He replaces Jack Smothers who resigned from the company.

Frost, who will report to Marvin Schwartz, CRDC's graphic arts administrator, joined the company in July, 1958 and was assistant editorial director.

Marco Rizo Trio replaces Charles Holden's orch in The Columns of the Savoy-Plaza, N. Y., next Monday (6), with the Gunnar Hansen orch holding over.

DEEJAYS IN REVOLVING DOOR

AGAC Royalty Agency Switching To Mandatory Basis; Some Squawks

Armed with a strong mandate from the rank-and-file, the ruling council of the American Guild of Authors & Composers has decided to put participation in AGAC's royalty collection agency on a mandatory basis. Up to now, AGAC members had the option of joining the agency which, for a 5% fee, collects royalties due writers from publishers. Decision was made after a vote in which over 1,050 members approved of the mandatory requirement against the opposition of 254 writers. At least one writer, Al J. Neiburg, stated flatly that he is rescinding his membership in AGAC as result of the new policy.

Move to incorporate the AGAC royalty agency into the regular organizational structure was to simplify the collection procedure and to take the publisher heat off AGAC members working through the agency. With some AGAC members now not participating, publishers have occasionally expressed irritation at those writers who voluntarily signed up. Now the decision is out of the hands of AGAC members.

Neiburg blasted AGAC for making participation in the royalty agency compulsory. He said AGAC was intending to "cut in" on songs that were written years before it was organized. A vet cleffer of such hits as "Confessin'," "Talk of the Town" and "Blanket of Blue," among many others, Neiburg said a movement would arise for a new songwriters' organization. He also said that those writers who voted for the plan were not the "hard core" of songwriting talent.

AGAC execs expect that there will be some resignations from among the 254 writers who opposed the mandatory requirement. However, many of the nay voters indicated they would go along if the proposal were adopted.

Welk Moving To Palladium After 10 Yrs. at Aragon

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Lawrence Welk's band exits Aragon ballroom, where it has been a weekend fixture since May 23, 1950, sometime in May and on July 7 will open at the Palladium on an indef booking, also playing Friday-Saturday nights.

The Aragon stand long ago set a record for a ballroom roost by any name orch.

Shift of Welk follows purchase of controlling stock in Palladium operation by Don Fedderson, longtime Welk biz associate. It is understood Welk's Palladium deal will be on percentage of gate. At the Aragon, where he has been playing on month-to-month contracts, the band gets 60% of the gate and all concessions. For some years Welk's aggregation has been reaping between $4,000 and $5,000 weekly at Aragon.

Welk, after exiting the beach terpalace, will tour east on gigs starting June 4 and will remote ABC-TV shows during trek.

Replacement at Aragon is not set, but it is understood pitch has been made by Joe Glaser, who repts Red Nichols, to spot the Teagarden with an augmented orch.

Eichner Takes Over As Jubilee's A&R Topper

Michael Eichner has taken over as head of artists & repertoire for the Jubilee and Josie labels. He has been associated with the two labels for the past five years serving in sales, promotion and the A&R departments.

He's already cut an album with a college folk group from Washington, D. C., The Dearville Trio, and a single with Bobby Freeman.

Chappell Goes Off-B'way To Get 'Tiger Rag' Score

Chappell has picked up the publishing rights to the off-Broadway musical "Tiger Rag." Kenneth Gaburo wrote the music and Seyril Schochen wrote the book and lyrics.

The musical play is now running at the Cherry Lane Theatre in Greenwich Village, N. Y.

Sinatra to Stay With Cap Despite Own Disk Label

Although Frank Sinatra recently formed his own Reprise label, he'll continue to record for Capitol. According to Alan W. Livingston, diskery's veep for creative services, Sinatra will cut three new LP's for the label during 1961-62.

Meantime, Cap has scheduled another Sinatra LP for release in mid-March. The package, titled "All The Way," is made up of the singer's previous single clicks for the label. It'll be Sinatra's second Cap album this year. The other, "Sinatra's Swinging Session," has been one of the company's top sellers since its release in January.

J. K. Maitland, prez of Capitol Records Distributing Corp., is instituting a "Sinatra Bonus Plan" program. The plan will give dealers one bonus album with every 10 purchased. However, it only applies to the two newest Sinatra LPs, "All The Way" and "Swinging Session." The plan goes into effect March 6 and winds April 14.

Since 1952, when Sinatra joined the Cap roster, the diskery has released 20 Sinatra LPs, dozens of extended-play disks, and some 50 singles.

GORDON GRAY RETURNS TO MGM'S CUSTOM DIV.

Gordon Gray has returned to the MGM fold as director of customs sales for the diskery's Bloomfield, N. J., plant. He left MGM in 1959 to assist Morty Craft in the establishment of the Warwick-United Telefilm (now Seven Arts Productions) disk setup.

He first became associated with MGM in 1948 handling sales and promotion on the Coast. In his last three years with the label, he directed national sales and promotion from the field. The appointment of Gray is part of a buildup program blueprinted by Frank Cocchiaraley, general manager of the pressing plant.

Restmeyer to Direct Top Rank Label's Fold

Herbert V. Restmeyer, comptroller of Rank Records of America, is staying on with the org to wind up the operations of the Top Rank label. The label has discontinued production and distribution of disks after an 18-month try.

All Top Rank distributors have already been notified of the fold and contractual arrangements with individual artists are now in discussion.

RABINOWITZ JOINS EPIC

Sol Rabinowitz has joined Epic Records artists & repertoire department as a staff producer.

Before coming to Epic, Rabinowitz had been prez of Baton Records for seven years. Before that he was with Maverne Distributors and Young People's Records.

STATION POLICY CUES TURNOVER

Not only has the glamour gone out of disk jockeying, but so has the security. In the last year, the station scene has been marked by a tremendous turnover of deejays to the point where it has become difficult for the platter companies to keep their jockey files up to date.

The current here-today-gone-tomorrow nature of jockeying stems directly from the broadcasters' accent on formula radio, namely Top 40 and news. Under this setup, not only is there no room for the development of strong deejay personalities, but station managers tend to discourage it since the only personality they're interested in is that of the station itself.

While the disk companies have no choice but to concentrate on air exposure via the available disk jockeys, there are no longer any kingpins or surefire hit-makers in the jockey fraternity. The only excitement in the pop single picture, as far as deejays are concerned, is now centering on the Coast where Alan Freed and Peter Tripp, quondam New York jockeys before the payola probe, are now bringing some personality power to bear on the disk sales pictures.

Because there is no snigle, or even definably multiple key, to breaking a number through deejay plugs, the disk companies are being forced to again use the "buckshot" method of grinding out a tremendous number of sides with the hope

Eastman Buys Korwin Pub. Cos.

Attorney Lee Eastman further broadened his music publishing activities last week with the purchase of Korwin and Pauline Music from Mike Stewart and Robert Allen.

The purchase, at an undisclosed six-figure sum, was made in the name of the International Korwin Corp., which Eastman set up for himself and a "client" whose name he didn't reveal. It's been estimated that the Korwin and Pauline firms, both ASCAP, earn a little over $200,000 a year. In Korwin are such Allen compositions as "Chances Are," and "Everybody Loves a Lover" while Pauline has the "Sing Along With Mitch" theme.

Stewart will continue to operate his BMI and foreign firms while Allen plans to concentrate on Broadway and Hollywood production in addition to his regular pop activity.

UA LABEL BOOMING 300% OVER LAST YEAR

United Artists Records is now booming at a pace three times greater than last year. Gross billings for the picture company subsid for the first two months of this year have been sparked by the click Ferrante & Teicher "Exodus" theme single, which has gone over 1,000,000, and the LP, "Great Motion Picture Themes," which has sold over 300,000 copies.

Art Talmadge, v.p. and general manager of the UA label, said the foreign market upswing for his company's product is keeping pace with the domestic upbeat. Talmadge said the company is stepping up its output in coming weeks with new percussion soundtrack albums.

NEW COL LATIN-AM EXEC

Juan Manuel Villarreal has been appointed general manager for Discos Columbia de Mexico, S.A., a division of Columbia Records International's Latin and South American operations.

Since joining Col in 1947, Villarreal has served Discos Columbia de Mexico as accountant and assistant manager.

New Offensive for 'Anti-ASCAP' Laws Shaping Up on 'States Rights' Basis

A new offensive against the existing operation of all performing rights societies has been shaping up recently in the legislatures of some half-dozen states. On the firing line are such organizations as the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, Broadcast Music Inc. and Sesac. Whatever the differences among them, they see eye-to-eye in opposing legislation aimed at crippling their activities.

Although broadcasters are the chief customers of all the performing rights societies, they are not joining in supporting the so-called "anti-ASCAP" laws. The main support for this legislation is coming from taverns and hotels, which are irked by the payment of performance fees.

While the right to collect performance fees has been established firmly on a Federal basis, the states still retain the power to govern the manner of how these fees shall be collected. That has been established by U.S. Supreme Court decisions in this matter.

The most onerous bill facing the performing rights societies is now cooking in the Idaho legislature. Under this proposed legislation, ASCAP, BMI and Sesac would have to submit complete listings of all their compositions, plus the names and addresses of all writers, publishers, assignees involved in all tunes plus the date of copyright and renewal. In short, the bookkeeping job would be so immense as to make it virtually impossible to comply.

Such a law already is on the books in the state of Washington. The performing rights societies try to comply with it as much as possible, but have not been able to live up to the letter of the law. As

Golden 'So. Pacific'

RCA Victor's soundtrack album of the pic version of Rodgers & Hammerstein's "South Pacific" has now topped the 1,000,000 sales mark.

The package, released in March, 1958, has been a consistent bestseller ever since.

Doubleday Books Entering Disk Biz Via Project Link

Doubleday book publishers is entering into the LP disk business in a tieup with Project Records, Bing Crosby's producing firm operating under Si Rady. Latter has just completed cutting two packages of Academy Award songs which Doubleday will market via mail order similar to its various book club operations.

Initial two packages will be in the nature of a merchandising test for Doubleday, which plans to sell the LPs at a $2.49 tag. If the initial reaction warrants, additional disks will be produced by Rady, who has been making a series of album deals with various labels. The disks for Doubleday were done with a big orch with Stuart Foster and Jane Wilson.

Doubleday Bookstores packaged LPs under the Dolphin label a couple of years ago, but these were slanted for the chi-chi trade.

Rady is now in process of preparing two packages for Life mag in conjunction with the mag's marking of its 25th anni with its "Years of Change" supplement. The disk will be titled "Sound of Change." Another LP for Life will be titled "Folk Songs and Tales," a panorama of American folk music. Rady produced "How the West Was Won" for Life Mag last year, an album which RCA Victor releases.

Last year, Project Records made deals for three albums apiece with Atlantic, Warner Bros. and MGM, two with Capitol and one with Victor. Project expects to produce about the same amount of albums this year.

WINTERHALTER, 3 SUNS IN NEW VICTOR PACTS

Hugo Winterhalter, veteran conductor-arranger, who joined RCA Victor in 1950, has been repacted by the company for the fourth time. Along with the new deal, Robert L. Yorke, Victor v.p. over the commercial records creation department, is handing Winterhalter a gold disk for the latter's "Canadian Sunset," which, in fact, passed the 1,000,000 marker some time ago.

Victor also inked the Three Suns to a new pact. The combo, which has been with the label since 1949, have sold over 500,000 copies of four albums.

George Pincus Spreads Into Pic Score Field

George Pincus, head of Pincus-Gil Music Corp. is moving into the pic background music field. With the score from the upcoming "Hippodrome" film all wrapped up, Pincus is currently on the Coast huddling with film execs on additional music acquisitions.

Pincus is also concentrating on material from abroad for a U. S. push. Sparked by the click of "Calcutta" via Lawrence Welk's Dot slice, Pincus has now started a drive on "Holiday in Heidelberg," a London record by Charly Tabor and "Ring Of Gold Forever More" by Heidi Bruhl on Epic.

Columbia Cops 'Golden' Stakes In LP Market

Columbia Records led the field in "Gold Record Awards" for albums released last year. Of the 16 LPs certified by the Record Industry Assn. of America as qualifying for goldisks in 1960, Columbia copped seven awards, Capitol followed with five, RCA Victor with three and Dot with one.

This is the largest number of awards certified by the RIAA since it began auditing hit record sales in 1958. To qualify for a gold disk under the RIAA rules an album must have a minimum audited sales of 500,000 units.

Col's winners were Mitch Miller's "More Sing Along with Mitch," "Christmas Sing" and "Still More Sing Along," Johnny Mathis' "Heavenly," "Warm" and "Merry Christmas" and the original Broadway cast album of "Sound of Music."

Capitol's goldisks were the Kingston Trio's "Kingston Trio at Large," "Kingston Trio Here We Go Again," "From The Hungry I" and Nat King Cole's "Love Is the Thing."

RCA Victor came up with Elvis Presley's "Elvis," Mario Lanza's "Student Prince" and "60 Years of Music-Honoring 20 Great Artists."

Dot's entry was Pat Boone's "Pat's Great Hits."

Murray Deutch Exits Peer for Own Operation

Murray Deutch has pulled out of the Peer publishing combine. He's gone into partnership with Milt Sommerfield in the publishing and management fields.

The kickoff firm will be known as Starfire Music (BMI). Deutch had been general professional manager at Southern Peer for the past six-and-a-half years.

ASCAP Appeals Panel Affirms Old 'Availability' Payoff in 'Moonlight' Case

"Moonlight and Roses," a standard that had been involved in long litigation over ownership of its renewal rights between Miller Music (of the Big Three firm) and Charles N. Daniels Music (of the Aberbach combine), is now the key to an important ruling affecting past distributions to publishers made by the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers. Ruling was made last week by the ASCAP Panel on Appeal in a five-year dispute between Miller Music, owner of the original copyright term of "Moonlight," and the Daniels firm, which is now the sole owner of the oldie.

The Daniels firm, represented by attorney Lewis A. Dreyer, claimed all coin earned by "Moonlight" in ASCAP's old "availability" fund, which up to this year accounted for 30% of the total publishers' coin and which was calculated by averaging performances of a song over a five-year period. Dreyer claimed that the full availability on "Moonlight" accrued to Daniels immediately upon its acquisition of the new renewal copyright in 1953.

However, a lower ASCAP panel ruled that the original publisher of the song should share in the tune's availability over the next five years on a diminishing basis while Daniels' availability would be growing until it owned the song for the full five years. The ASCAP appeals board upheld this decision after some harsh exchanges between Dreyer and Julian T. Abeles, representing Miller Music.

Moot Point

The central question involved in the dispute was: Did the publisher or the song earn the availability credits? Abeles' contention was that the publisher earned the availability credits through his exploitation activities. Dreyer contended that the song accumulated all performance credits and that the availability rule of averaging performances over five years itself was merely a method of computing a song's value and did not affect the concept that performances are payable to the owner of the performance right.

Although ASCAP's new publisher payoff system has scrapped the five-year average, the "Moonlight" case is important since it affects numerous switchovers in the ownership of standards over the past decade. If the Daniels firm had won its demand, then conceivably all other publishers who acquired renewal copyrights could have demanded that the original publishers pay back the money earned under the "availability" category, during the years when they no longer owned the copyright.

ASCAP general counsel Herman Finkelstein stated to the appeals panel that ASCAP, as such, had no position on the dispute since it was a matter between two publishers. However, Finkelstein did say, according to a Dreyer communication, that a finding for Daniels would have some "disruptive" effect upon the Society. Dreyer said the only disruptive effect such a finding would have would be in the nature of the original publishers' "disgorging" of money to the new copyright owners. Dreyer said that, in future proceedings, ASCAP should take no position in disputes between two publishers.

The appeals panel consisted of an impartial chairman, Joseph A. McDonald, a Washington, D.C., lawyer; Dave Dreyer, the designee of the Daniels firms; and Jack J. Bregman, a designee of the publishers classification committee which handed down the original decision against Daniels.

Victor Accents Special Markets

RCA Victor has reorganized its special markets division under Irwin Tarr. Latter is broadening the department's activities into other areas under an expanded department.

New setup has W. H. O'Dell as manager of rack merchandise and syndicate sales. Paul Sklar, Charlie Boyd, Charlie Hall, Allen Clark and Bill Graham will report to O'Dell as regional representatives.

Ray Sacher has been named manager of educational sales with the aim of developing new product for the educational market. Anne O'Keefe will be his assistant. R. J. Clarkson takes over as manager of premium records with C. C. Crumpacker reporting to him as artists & repertoire director for special markets.

Tarr said that the reorganization move would be "a major step toward the development of new and vital areas in our industry." Pointing out that the disk business offers "tremendous growth and profit potential to manufacturers, distribs, dealers and retailers, he said: "Each has to develop his own method to meet the opportunities and challenges of today's market."

Launch Disk Collection For Soviet Jazz Buffs

Albuquerque, Feb. 28.

A campaign has been started on the U. of New Mexico campus in Albuquerque to collect jazz disks to send to young people in the Soviet Union. The sponsoring group is Las Campanas, junior women's honorary group at UNM, who started the effort last week after hearing a talk by Dr. Hugh Graham, modern and classical languages prof, who recently took a trip to Russia.

Graham said Russ students are particularly interested in jazz, which they hear only on "Voice of America" broadcasts. He said he felt the disks would help play a better part in cementing U.S.-USSR relations. Student group has so far collected 30 disks for shipment.

that one will hit somewhere and somehow. It's figured that from 200 to 300 records a week are hitting the stations at the present time. This is not only a peak, but it represents super-saturation for the stations which can only absorb a dozen disks a week, at the most.

In this predicament, cracking through with an unknown artist is a tremendous longshot. That is not preventing the diskeries from gambling on new names, but the economics of absorbing the cost of so many disks that never see the light of day is disturbing the industry, particularly when hit singles are not paying off with spectacular sales.

An additional problem facing the disk companies is getting the new disks into the stores. When they're lucky enough to get air exposure and develop some sales interest in a specific disk, the stores are frequently without stock. The retailers, like the stations, prefer to play it safe and stick with the hits, but the big turnover comes on the new numbers. One route being taken is guaranteeing the dealers 100% return privileges, but this represents an additional risk to companies who often press up substantial quantities of a disk that falls on its face.

a result, some broadcasters took advantage of this technical noncompliance to duck payment of performance fees. A settlement was recently worked out between ASCAP and the delinquent Washington broadcasters as part of a general rate deal.

In Texas, a bill has been proposed under which the various societies would have to undergo various filing requirements. The societies believe they can "live" with this law and are not opposing it, although they're not happy with it either. Similarly, Massachusetts and New Mexico have bills under consideration which would regulate the operation of the performing rights societies, without destroying their effectiveness South Dakota killed on "anti-ASCAP" bill in committee last week.

ASCAP general counsel Herman Finklestein has been speaking against such legislation recently. Edward M. Cramer has been retained to represent BMI in this matter and has testified before state legislature committees considering such restrictive bills.

Presley

from show biz, radio-tv and recording fields.

On hand in aiding and abetting Col. Parker's plush "red carpet treatment" to Elvis were George Jessel, who emceed the night show and planed in too late to handle the $100 plate luncheon held earlier in the day in the Claridge Hotel, Elvis and the Colonel's headquarters. George Marek, William Bullock and Jack Burgess Jr., RCA Victor execs, Abe Lastfogel, head man at the William Morris office and Jean Aberbach, music man who partners in a publishing firm with Presley. Parker buzzed Aberbach on the trans-oceanic phone in Rome, Italy and he jet-planed pronto to Memphis. Aberbach was hypoing Elvis' latest hit "Surrender" in Europe.

Tennessee Gov. Buford Ellington, who was unable to attend due to flying conditions, proclaimed the day "Elvis Presley Day" in the Volunteer State. Mayor Henry Loeb, longtime friend of show biz here, issued a similar proclamation on the home front. The Memphis Mayor also pitched in at the last minute to handle the luncheon emcee chores when word was received of Jessel's plane delay. Loeb turned in a masterful performance and held the 220 luncheon guests.

Everything from soup to nuts was on the cuff. And that's the way Parker okayed his big star to perform at the luncheon and two shows at the big City Auritorium. The plush luncheon at $4 per dish for 220 guests, plus waiter service and the trimmings, was also on the house through Scott Stewart, managing director and John (Shorty) Addison, exec assistant of the Claridge.

Presley was showered with beaucoup awards during the luncheon which included a plaque from RCA Victor's veepee and g.m. Marek for reaching the 76,000,000 mark in sales during his years under the RCA tent. It was also revealed by Marek that Elvis' recent record "Surrender" had topped the 1,000,000 mark. Dick Clark sent an award naming him "top male" vocalist.

Parker said "this affair cost me $14,000 personally out of my pocket and I was happy to do it for all these fine charities along with Elvis." Among the 27 charitable projects who will benefit out of the full b.o. included Variety Club Tent No. 20 and Danny Thomas' St. Jude Hospital.

The b.o. box score read as follows:

(1) The $100 plate luncheon netted $17,200 with Parker personally laying it on the line for 98 tickets.

(2) The matinee show at Ellis Auditorium drew 3,888 for a total of $11,580. All tickets priced at $3.

(3) The night stint attracted 5,323 at $5 each for a total of $19,622.

(4) Total receipts garnered from sales of programs and refreshments (all donated) swelled the grand total to $51,612.

Working on the bill and also strictly on the cuff with Elvis in the two shows were Dave Gardner, the Jordonaires, D. J. Fontana, Scotty Moore, Floyd Cramer, the Ashtons & Shirley, Boots Randolph, Nip Nelson, Larry Owens orch, Gene Austin and Jessel. Al Dvorin produced the entire show with Tom Diskin, Parker's chief aide directing.

Parker said that Elvis will do a similar 100% charity show for the U.S.S. Arizona Memorial Fund in Honolulu.

70 British Disk Jocks On 'Music Man' Junket

London, Feb. 28.

Harold Fielding is taking 70 disk jockeys to Bristol on Saturday (2) to give them a pre-hearing of the numbers from "The Music Man," which will be having a preliminary canter before opening at the Adelphi on March 18.

Joining up with Fielding on this junket is Frank Music, which is publishing Meredith Willson's score, and EMI which is issuing the LP's and singles from the show both in Britain and U.S. Trip, which will take place on a specially hired Pullman Diesel train, is expected to cost $5,600.

ROCK 'N' ROLL IS INT'L LANGUAGE FOR RIOTS

Paris, Feb. 28.

About 5,000 teenagers threw the Palais des Sports here into an uproar last Thursday (23) under the stimulation of the rock 'n' roll beat. It was town's first rocking rally.

The two-hour show was interrupted, but not stopped, when the frenzied teeners started to upend the rows of temporary chairs, flipping the seats over and lifting the rows of seats. Frankie Jordan, an Algerian r'n'r singer was performing when the disturbance began.

Playboy Takes Cleve. Alpine Village On 10-Year Lease in $250,000 Deal

By GLENN C. PULLEN

Cleveland, Feb. 28.

Herman Pirchner's Alpine Village winds up its 32-year career in June when Playboy International is scheduled to begin transforming the downtown nitery into a private membership club at an estimated cost of $175,000. Renamed the Playboy Key Club for men, the remodeled theatre-restaurant will become part of a national chain of similar enterprises financed and operated by Playboy Magazine's subsidiary.

Playboy reps closed deal with Realty Corp. of Cleveland, owners of four story building, last week. Lease is for 10 years, for a reported $250,000, with an option to buy building at 1640 Euclid Ave. within next three years.

It is not definite yet whether Pirchner, now managing director of the recently reorganized Alpine Village company, will be associated with the Playboy Club. Although forewarned about the prospect of losing his own lease, the vet impresario was stunned by the rapid progress of Playboy negotiations.

Eyes Another Site

If an appointment on key club's staff does not materialize, Pirchner said he may open another downtown theatre-restaurant with a different style of stage shows and operation.

Alpine Village, which has talent commitments running up to June, booked the current Irwin Corey followed by violinist-composer Emery Deutsch, March 6 for two weeks; Carmen Cavallaro, week of March 20; banjoist Eddie Peabody, March 27, and Helen Traubel starting April 6.

During last 32 years this three-roomed club, founded by Pirchner, has been one of Cleveland's brightest entertainment landmarks. Name acts he played ranged from Jimmy Durante to

'Spell Out Pact' Before Coming to Japan, Warns Earl Grant's Manager

Tokyo, Feb. 28.

"Have the contract spelled out before coming here," cautioned Chuck Wright, manager for the Earl Grant unit after untangling a situation of overbooking and "surprise" tv and radio dates during Grant's boff Japan tour.

Part of the problem stemmed from the booking of Grant on a seven-day instead of a six-day week. These extra dates were skedded for U.S. military clubs, although there was no such mention in Grant's pact with pro wrestler Rikidozan, who brought the Grant unit here with aid of Mainichi Newspaper.

Result was five additional military dates (two had already been filled) on slate for same time as return to New Latin Quarter, this city. Although it brought reduced revenue to his promoters here, Grant chose to make the military shows out of goodwill, because tickets had been sold.

At concert dates, Grant was often surprised to find tv cameras and radio mikes set up for broadcasts above and beyond requirements of his pact. Manager Wright, moaning over the series of experiences, told VARIETY, "Performers coming here should have everything itemized, even if the contract becomes a book.

La Dietrich's P.R. Stint

Marlene Dietrich has been signed for El San Juan Intercontinental, San Juan, P.R., starting March 20 for nine days following run of Johnny Mathis.

This will be Miss Dietrich's last nitery stand for a while, at least until completing work on Stanley Kramer's "Judgment at Nuremburg." She starts the film following the San Juan date.

Judy Garland Settles Hotel Bill in Dallas; Draws 3,500 in 1-Niter

Dallas, Feb. 28.

Judy Garland, here for a one-night stint at State Fair Music Hall Feb. 21, settled for $750 a local hotel's $1,050 bill outstanding since 1957, when the star was here.

Payoff came two hours after a lawsuit was filed against Miss Garland by a local attorney in the name of the Stoneleigh Hotel. Hotel alleged that $800 of the $3,200 bill run up by Miss Garland and her husband, Sid Luft, from June 7-July 3, 1957, was still unpaid. Also asked was $250 in attorney's fees. A "spokesman" for Miss Garland (who stayed at another hostel this trip) said it was a "misunderstanding."

Miss Garland, backed by Shep Fields orch, augmented to 30 men, drew 3,500 auditors into State Fair Music Hall here Feb. 21, with ducats scaled $2.90 to $6.90 top.

Al Daff May Go Into Aussie Hotel Realty

Sydney, Feb. 21.

Al Daff, former Universal sales chief and veepee, is understood to be interested in a multi-million dollar project here covering real estate, with hotels and motels the ultimate goal.

Project is still in the blueprint stage, but it's learned that several top-bracket business execs are behind Daff in the mooted project. Daff owns a large slice of real estate in both Sydney and Melbourne. He has made several quick trips to his homeland from abroad in recent months.

Judy Garland Grosses Pot o' Gold Over Dallas, Houston B.O. Rainbows

Houston, Feb. 28.

Judy Garland, playing one-night concerts at Dallas and Houston within three days (21 and 23), drew more than 8,000 persons and received three standing ovations at each spot. She grossed a mighty $20,000 for the appearances, with J. David Nichols, who booked the concerts, paying cost of Shep Fields orch, augmented to 30 pieces by strings and other instruments from the Dallas Symphony Orchestra.

Miss Garland, easy and gracious onstage and with pipes that were never better, was greeted by her first ovation when she came onstage after overture medley of her more famous tunes by Fields' orchestra. The two shows were first in which she presented full repertoire of arrangements, mostly by Gordon Jenkins. She did shorter shows in two hotel engagements.

Playing to more-than-capacity house in Houston's City Auditorium, Miss Garland set stage for the 4,400 here with opening "Smiling." About a third of the way through show, thrush called out nine-piece jazz combo for four jazz tunes, and later took a turn at the blues with only 88s accompanying.

Miss Garland is now only slightly plump, is free and easy on stage, telling a few humorous stories—mostly about herself—and throwing in an occasional dance step. Altogether she presents more than 30 tunes in the more than two hours she's onstage, not counting a 20-minute intermission.

Nostalgia is all over the place when she presents such w.k Garland songs as "Rock-a-Bye," "You Made Me Love You," "Somewhere Over The Rainbow," "Clang, Clang, Clang Went the Trolley," and perhaps her best this night "Zing Went the Strings of My Heart."

Couldn't Beg Off

Songstress was not allowed to beg off. Auditors remained in a standing ovation after the curtain closed, and she had to come back for more. "I'm leveling, I only have three more orchestrations," she said. So she did those, ending with "Chicago" while she toured the footlights, shaking hands with auditors who jammed the stageside.

This reviewer did not catch her w.k. Palace show, but this had to be it all over again. Miss Garland is one of the all-time greats, joining Jolson, Tucker et al. in creating a spark that establishes rapport across the footlights. From whisper to crescendo, the Fields orchestra was great in its backing.

Next Nichols shows due here are Harry James, March 9; Guy Lombardo, April 7; Louis Armstrong, May 3, and Bop Hope, tentatively, May 19. Skip.

Anticipated OK of Sun. Shows in Toronto May Even Include Strippers

Toronto, Feb. 28.

From a shut-tight Sunday (except for sports, which sneaked in a couple of years ago) to Sabbath striptease? That's the gamut this "City of Churches" may have run, now that Sunday films, legit and concerts are in for virtually sure.

With Ontario amendment to the Lord's Day Act expected to be passed around the end of March, question of peelers at Casino and Lux Theatres here arose in City Council last week. Most were against allowing them to prance on Sunday, but two legislators pointed out that it would be discrimination against one type of "theatrical performance," which the amendment okays.

"I guess striptease is inconsistent with a wholesome Sunday," said Alderman Philip Givens. "But then, if you start defining what constitutes a wholesome Sunday, you get into the realm of censorship. It's a dilemma."

Oregonian, After Dark
by Arnold Marks

"Also headlining on that Bali Hai show is an East coast import, the clever Slappy White, comedian with a fine sense of timing and audience reaction.

"This is White's first Northwest visit as a single and for a rapid 25 minutes the other night he demonstrated beautifully his prowess with clever, yet clean lines.

"This smart entertainer is another show man who follows the reasoning that it isn't necessary to be dirty to be funny. His humor isn't of the 'sick' variety either. Most of it is topical and has a touch of fact. Top entertainment."

Agencies Ask Singers to Cut Extra Musicians in Try to Pare Payrolls

The agencies seem serious about cutting down the overhead for nitery owners as an important step in conservation of employment centres for talent. A new form of attack, aside from persuading headliners to be more reasonable in their salary requirements, is the campaign to eliminate the hordes of musicians generally asked for by the topliner.

Of late, the streams of stringed instruments, plus additions to the brass and reeds have been overcrowding bandstands in many cafes. Today, many singers seek, among other accountrements, a bongo player, their own drummer, guitraist, pianist and conductor, or any combination thereof.

The result is an expensive addition to the costs of floorshows. In each instance, the cost is generally borne by the operator, and in many instances, at least half of the extra crew is silent during many numbers.

The agency men have taken the stance whether it's in the contract that cost must be borne by the operator, or not, the ultimate payment comes from the boniface, which makes the bill for attractions just as heavy.

The percenters frequently note that the demand for the constantly growing orchestras comes from the arrangers. Some will introduce novelty via an organ, or a celeste or a vocal quartet and if the singer is sold sufficiently on the idea, it's put into the act.

Aside from the cost factors, there are other angles involved in the hiring of extra musicians. In many cases bandstands aren't large enough, there's overcrowding and discomfort among the tooters, which impede efficiency of those upon the bulk of the work falls.

Another item is the long time in setting up. In some cases, it's so long that the warmup effects of the show previous to the headliner are dissipated, and the singer must start from scratch.

There is also the problem of obtaining musicians good enough to pass muster. In some cities, a contractor of the AFM local may send men around who don't suit requirements. In other cases, some towns cannot supply on a rental basis the instruments needed. Often the trick arrangements must therefore be jettisoned.

PROPOSE CASINO FOR BRITAIN'S ISLE OF MAN

Isle of Man, Eng., Feb. 28.

A bill to enable a casino to operate in the Isle of Man, islet off the northwest coast of England, is to come before the governmental House of Keys in the near future. Question of the principle of the bill has been discussed by the Home Office in London.

The Isle of Man, which has its own government, is a popular holiday haunt with the British. Main center is Douglas, where summer stage revues and Sunday concerts are coin-spinners each year. Dance bands play to large holiday crowds nightly.

Chi Crackdown on Lounge Fees Hits Acts, Tooters

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Rather indirectly, the recession is causing unexpected grief for Chi musicians and cafe operators, mainly nabe lounge spots.

Seems the town is putting enforcement teeth into a wartime law requiring a $700 per annum license from lounges employing four or more entertainers, i.e. instrumentalists and singers. Otherwise the fee is a mere $75.

City had been lax getting bonifaces to comply in past years, but sudden critical need for fresh revenue (hampered by the economic slowdown) for relief and works projects, hiked police payroll, etc., apparently inspired the crackdown.

Bonifaces have been ultra reluctant to meet the stiff license impost, hence a cutback in talent —chiefly AFM, but some acts, too.

Name Johnny Hayden AGVA's New Dallas Mgr.

Dallas, Feb. 28.

Johnny Hayden, of American Guild of Variety Artists' Hollywood office, is new branch manager of the local office. He replaces James H. Dolan, who resigned three weeks ago after apprehension by FBI agents on a charge of interstate flight to avoid prosecution for armed robbery in Louisiana.

Irving Mazzei, coast regional director of AGVA, came here to induct Hayden into the new post.

Unions May Fight NLRB Kayoing Of Stork Club Pickets

The two New York waiters and chefs unions which had been picketing Sherman Billingsley's Stork Club for four years—since Jan. 9, 1957—are still at it despite a sweeping decision favoring the famed East 53d St. nitery last week by the National Labor Relations Board. At that time it held that the day-and-night picketing was an attempt to force Billingsley to recognize a union, a practice forbidden by the Landrum-Griffin Act of 1959.

Despite the NLRB decision, Jerome B. Lurie, attorney for Local 89 of the Chefs, Cooks, Pastry Cooks & Assistants Union, said that the "informational" picketing did not violate any law; that the purpose of the continued picketing was to "inform the public about union conditions" at the Stork Club (meaning non-union); that the NLRB order "was not self-enforcing."

The unions have until this week to notify the NLRB of their intentions to appeal the order. If they fail to file a notice, the Stork Club can seek enforcement of the order through the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Billingsley's famed bistro has suffered because the show biz personalities the Stork Club attracts have oft expressed themselves concerned about crossing a picket line in light of their own amusement industry guilds and unions.

Billingsley still has a multimillion dollar damage suit pending against Actors' Equity because of a last-minute cancellation of a "Tony" Awards cocktallery last spring although Equity exec sec Angus Duncan has since stated Equity "has no objection" to its members patrorizing the Stork.

Femme Aerialist Hurt In Milw. Arena Mishap

Milwaukee, Feb. 28.

Bettina, an aerialist with the Hamid-Morton Tripoli Shrine Circus, is in "satisfactory condition" at a local hospital after suffering head injuries during a matinee performance Thursday (23) at the Milwaukee Arena. The mishap occurred when the braking device on her equipment failed during the climax of her act.

Billed as "Slide for Life," the turn has Bettina ambling down from atop a sway pole 60 feet above floor level to a platform some 30 feet over the floor. She then slides the rest of the way on a wire. When the brake failed, her head hit the arena's concrete floor.

Davis' B.A. Stints

Buenos Aires, Feb. 28.

Sammy Davis Jr. is slated to appear here sometime in May for theatre and tv dates.

Impresario E. Kotllarenco, who said that he had signed the star, added that Davis will probably open at the Avenida Theatre. Dickerings are also in progress for him to appear on one of the city's four tv channels.

A Weighty Decision

Since the death of Velma Middleton recently while on tour in Africa with Louis Armstrong, Joe Glaser, president of Associated Booking Corp., who handles the Armstrong orch, has been besieged by nearly 100 applications from femme singers seeking the post.

All applicants auditioned by Glasser thus far have one feature in common. All of them he said, weigh about 300 lbs., which is somewhat more than the avoirdupois registered by Miss Middleton.

Niteries Hit Hard By Plane Strike

The six-day strike of flight engineers of the airlines which ended last week was probably the most costly in the history of aviation and had tremendous effects on the entertainment and resort industries. In New York, the absence of out-of-town trade was evident in the niteries. After a period which included the heaviest snowfall and longest coldwave in the city's history, the normal upbeat expected by bonifaces was dissipated tremendously by the curtailment of plane service.

The effect was felt in niteries especially. To some extent, the failure of planes to take off and deposit travelers nearly evened itself out in the hotels. Where a prospective airline passenger could not get out, he was obliged to retain his hotel room until other forms of transit were booked. Niteries also missed the absence of the big parties, and bus tours were especially lean during the strike period. The walkout, moreover, coincided with the beginning of Lent.

Florida, which hasn't had a brilliant season this year, was faced with increased taxes because of the blight in tourist trade. However, the strike's settlement has delayed the proposed legislation, and the state is hopeful that an upbeat in tourism will obviate the necessity for new imposts.

Reports of losses come in from the entire Caribbean area, although San Juan hotels were still booked to capacity. The only effect there was lack of a turnover in guests. However, other Caribe areas were hurt by the strike.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 28.

The second company of "Ice Capades" drew $101,644, a local record, in its week's engagement at the Pershing Municipal Auditorium here. Paid attendance set a new mark at 44,805. The gross represented an increase of 23% over the previous year's $82,942. Both seasons the show gave 10 performances.

The Pershing Aud is one of the few municipal operations which is permitted to do its own promotion. Most of the other city-owned halls must leave the promotion to outsiders.

License Dept. Wants 'References' From Talent Buyers; ARA to Fight

Artists Representatives Assn. called an emergency session for yesterday afternoon (Tues.) to discuss the new demand of the N.Y. City Licensing Dept., which is demanding strict enforcement of a provision of the 1910 General Business Law requiring agencies to submit affidavits from all firms and individuals it does business with.

Section 180 of the GBL, calls for a statement from any employer that they have never failed to meet a payroll in which performers were involved, or stranded anyone. It also seeks a financial statement, names of all officers and two references to be submitted for each outfit to whom the percenter submits acts.

The agency reaction was quick to brand the new move as "ridiculous." A spokesman declared that he would hardly think it proper to ask such questions of such firms and individuals as Waldorf Astoria, NBC, CBS, ABC, David Merrick, Loew's 20th-Fox, MGM, RCA Victor, Roosevelt Hotel and others which have had long and honorable dealings with the theatrical industry as a whole.

The spokesman also declared that this provision of the law was enacted at a time when there was only legit and vaudeville, and when no strong unions existed in the entertainment field. It hasn't been enforced in many years and theatrical agencies had long felt that they were immune from that provision not only because of its non-enforcement, but from the character of the long list of firms connected with show business who have had no complaints lodged against them.

Strategy in dealing with this problem hadn't been adopted by the meeting by press time.

Recently, ARA was instrumental in repealing the section of the General Business Law which forbade more than 5% commissions for more than 10 weeks. New schedule permits up to 20% for certain fields, namely concerts and one-nighters.

Jazz Bash to Bow Chi's McCormick Pl. Theatre

Chicago, Feb. 28.

McCormick Place Theatre, Chi's newest and largest showplace, a 5,000-seater in the recently opened McCormick expo centre on the lakefront, will have its show biz baptism March 18 with a one-performance jazz concert produced by agent Johnny King. Initially it was believed that the Met Opera, not due till May 12, would launch the house.

Concert, which is to be a benefit for the North Shore Congregation Israel, will headline Anita O'Day, the Woody Herman orch and the Ahmad Jamal trio.

Group to Appeal Court OK of N.Y. Cabaret Permits

The N.Y. Supreme Court yesterday (Tues.) upheld the constitutionality of a New York City law which makes it mandatory for all cabaret employees working in New York City to be fingerprinted by the Police Dept. Justice Sidney A. Fine ruled that the police regulations are valid and constitutional, not only in their identity card requirements, but also in respect to charging a $2 fee which has been going to the Police Dept. Pension fund.

Attorney Maxwell T. Cohen, attorney for the Citizen's Emergency Committee, at whose instigation the suit was brought, stated that he would appeal Justice Fine's decision. Cohen said he would ask permission to bypass the Supreme Court's Appellate Division and go directly to the Court of Appeals. He also declared that he was seeking the help of all unions affected by the ruling in contributing to the expense of the appeal.

Plaintiffs in the case were singer Nina Simone, who said she was filing suit on her behalf as well as all performers who work in New York; Art D'Lugoff, operator of the Village Gate, who asserted that this law deprives him of his right to hire performers and musicians of his choice; musicians Sam Magazine and Alfred Nano, among others.

Plan Hawaii 'Disneyland'

Tokyo, Feb. 28.

Returning from a U. S. visit, Shochiku director Shiro Kido revealed plans for a huge Disneyland-type amusement center, possibly on Oahu Island, Hawaii.

Center would be a joint U. S.-Japan venture.

HUB'S BRADFORD ROOF TURNING TO LEGITERS

Boston, Feb. 28.

Bradford Roof, long a stronghold of typical nitery format, which switched to revues last two seasons, pulls another switch and goes legit April 4 with "Where's Charley?" musical with cast of 40 produced by Sawyer-Scanga-McHugh Productions of New York.

Sked includes "Where's Charley?" through April 23; "Can-Can," April 25-May 14; "Boy Friend," May 16-June 11. The 400-seat roof boite will be set up as a theatre, and the musicals will be presented without drinks being served, except before the show, during intermission and after the show.

Betty Hutton's Maestro In Brit. Union Stymie

London, Feb. 28.

The Musicians Union here and Betty Hutton are still trying to iron out the problem of who will conduct for Miss Hutton when she opens Monday (6) at the Pigalle. No disposition has been made yet, but it has been decided that the regular bandleader will baton the rehearsals.

Miss Hutton's conductor, Pete Candoli, however, appears in three production numbers and will work with Miss Hutton as a performer. It's not known whether he will cue the band as well.

The Musicians Union rules of both England and the U.S. forbid foreign tooters to replace native members.

Too Many Waikiki Rms., Sez Western Hotels Prez

Honolulu, Feb. 28.

Western Hotels, which lost its Hawaii operation when Henry J. Kaiser sold his Hawaiian Village hotel to the Hilton chain, has no immediate plans for operating any hotel in Hawaii, according to Edward E. Carlson, president.

Carlson says Waikiki has too many rooms for anyone to invest in a major property right now.

State's OK Nips Frisco D.A.'s Move To Close Black Hawk's 'Kid Corner'

San Francisco, Feb. 28.

District Attorney Thomas C. Lynch and Police Chief Thomas Cahill have called off prosecution of the Black Hawk, a jazz club, for operating a "kiddie corner." Club's owners, Guido Cacienti and Max and George Weiss, were to have come up for jury trial Thursday (23) on charge of admitting minors to a bar.

Ostensible reason for dropping charge was "discovery" of a Nov. 29, 1959, letter in State Alcoholic Beverage Control Department's files giving State blessing to the "kiddie corner," which has separate entrance, separate restrooms, soft-drinks-only policy and a partition separating it from main body of nightclub.

Operated 14 Months

Juvenile area operated unmolested 14 months until Frisco cops heard about it, "raided" it and closed it under orders of Mayor George Christopher. At time of "raid" owners said they had State okay.

An assistant district attorney this week dug up the 1959 letter in which Black Hawk asked to switch from status of restaurant and specifically asked exemption from no-minors rule for its "kiddie corner." State liquor agent James R. Johnson inspected the place and made this notation, "11/20—Complies."

Johnson's letter to his superior followed, and in it he approved of arrangement.

District attorney dropped prosecution on eve of trial, saying letter precluded prosecution. He claimed neither he nor police chief had known of letter previously. He added that they both think "kiddie corner" illegal, even though they can't prosecute.

State Attorney General Stanley Mosk had been asked for ruling but ducked issue until criminal charges were settled one way or another. Now, presumably he'll come up with a formal opinion.

ing Germans who were gypped in the evening dollar-a-dance centre, with reports of such prices as $2.50 for a 15c bottle of German beer, $5 for a "mocc-special" consisting of a miniature cup of coffee lightly laced with a single shot of liqueur, and a compulsory $10 bottle of domestic champagne.

The strip parlors, dance palaces and "girl-chooses-boy" locales used to count on the heavy Scandinavian traffic to tote up their cash registers. Overnight buses used to bring hundreds of Copenhagen visitors to the Reeperbahn, with the guests making the ferry and bus jaunt during the day, all nighting in the clubs, and then sleeping on the bus and ferry on the return of two-day jaunt from Denmark.

Similarly, the Swedes and Norwegians were important visitors. American servicemen stationed in Germany and France used to consider Hamburg as the No. 1 German vacation spa, because of easy access to sin and gin.

Tourist Biz Nosedived

But so many reports of the clips and gyps have been circulated that the tourist trade has fallen seriously. The city fathers considered closing the tenement-lined area, but the club owners have vigorously protested this death blow aimed in their direction.

Instead, the drive is on to clean up the section. The 19 club owners who have joined the new group —which suspicious residents note formed shortly after the disastrous Swiss protest—have promised to protect the customers and hold the prices to a fair line. Bars like the Erotic Night Club, the Ekstase and the Piratene Diele (Pirate's Chamber) have promised to keep the B-girls from forcing over-priced and watered drinks on the customers.

Bartenders and waiters who have been caught pocketing the take are being banned, and a list of offenders is being circulated to the clubs. The club owners are enlisting the help of the St. Pauli Residents' Assn., the police, city industrialists and the travellers' association to proclaim that their members are honest and tourists can count on a good time at a reasonable tab from now on.

AUSSIE TALENT EXEC OFF ON WORLD PROWL

Melbourne, Feb. 21.

Leaving here on a worldwide search for stars and theatrical attractions for presenting in Aussie and Kiwi during 1961 and 1962 is Kenn Brodziak, managing director of Aztec Services Pty. Ltd. Brodziak will be visiting Manila, Hong Kong, Bangkok, London and Paris, and then expects to arrive in N. Y. May 1. In the U. S., he will visit Miami, New Orleans, Las Vegas and Los Angeles.

He is expected back in Melbourne early in July. As well as normal theatrical attractions. Brodziak will be searching for shows capable of playing outdoors and in festival halls and stadiums. Currently Brodziak is presenting West Indian pianist Winifred Atwell in the revue, "Strike a New Note," at the Princess here, which is tentatively scheduled for N. Y. showing.

less-restrained neighbors surrendered to hilarity.

Others on the program could do no wrong either. Ralph Bellamy did a clever routine in his "Sunrise" FDR characterization. Jerome Hines was in good form with "Old Man River" and "Without a Song." The Peiro Bros. (2) demonstrated adroit juggling and acrobatics mixed with comic relief.

Julie London looked lovely and sang some pop ballads. Dorothy Provine did some flapper song-and-dance numbers in keeping with her tv role that were well received. Mischa Elman made a cute entrance and received an ovation after each number.

U.S. Navy Band played with its usual proficiency. So did Eddie Pierce Orch and Route 50 Symphonette. Joel Margolis, of Loew's here, produced and directed. ASCAP and AFM assisted in getting the talent.

Inside Stuff—Vaude

Report of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission declares present state law against discrimination ineffective, mainly because the complainant must pay the court costs and secure a jury trial. Commercial recreation such as bowling alleys, skating rinks, picnic grounds, and golf courses were the most frequently reported places of violation.

A visitor to Montreal last week, after a year's absence, met some melancholy sights, like Cafe Montmartre (where Mistinguett showed her million-dollar gams a few years ago) shuttered. Sign: "The Management Has Decided to Close Their Premises." It's in the main gang-warfare area. Blue Sky Cafe, nearby, closed. La Cave, where Peaches paraded three years ago, dark. Midtown Chez Paree, a few months ago a continuous 3½-hour peelery but recently victim of an ax-and-crowbar smashup by a gang of 30, shuttered but still marqueeing Joy Dasher ("The Loretta Young of Burlesque"). Sign still proclaims, "Most Extraordinary Spectacle in the World. No Cover, No Minimum, No Admission."

A mobile film service to provide free entertainment for children in orphanages, homes and residential schools in Scotland has been inaugurated here by the Variety Club of Great Britain. The Lord Provost of Glasgow, Mrs. Jean Roberts, accepted the film unit on behalf of the city from Kenneth McKellar, a top Scot singer. Unit was provided from a gift of $6,000 to the Variety Club from the Emile Wertheimer Fund.

Agencies ought to concentrate more on the selling of $200 acts if not for the sake of talent development, but to meet the needs of a large number of night spots, according to personal manager Roy Duke, who recently returned to New York from a trip that took him to many parts of the country.

Duke says that the talent offices have long ago discouraged bookings of lower priced acts, but it's totally wrong, he avers. Many of the acts need these dates if only to be encouraged to stay in the business. The consequences of failure to take this step, he says, will be the drying up of all development grounds and a further shrinkage in the nitery field.

Actors' Union Settlement Paves Way for 'Folies Bergere' Mexico Preem

Mexico City, Feb. 28.

The Folies Bergere" will appear in Mexico after all. Producer Olallo Rubio Jr., along with Las Vegas hotelmen Kell Houssele and William Sparks, have cleared the way by agreeing to pay ANDA (National Assn. of Actors) full scale for displacement of Mexican elements. Negotiations foundered some months back because of an ANDA ruling insisting that half the company of 62 persons be made up of Mexican dancers, showgirls al et,

Show is scheduled to hit here in March and will premiere at the Palace of Fine Arts, with a benefit performance also for the actor's clinic. Run at the Palace will be brief because of incoming attractions.

Rubio hopes federal and city authorities will okay a $4.80 box-office top at the Palace. When company transfers to the Blanquita Theatre, the scale will automatically have to drop to the b.o. price freeze in this city set at 96c. top.

Rubio indicated that if show chalks up profits here these will be reinvested in other "spectacles" to be imported from the U. S. and Europe.

Sparks, in commenting on possibilities of criticism or Church censure because of risque quality of the nude show, said "the Folies will not offend the most timid of persons for it is our desire to incorporate all changes dictated by Mexican censors." Officials have refused to state whether they will ask for a cover-up of too lavishly displayed French charms.

As for prospects of a film featuring the "Folies Bergere," Sparks said this was still in negotiation stages with Rubio, but nothing definite has been decided or any contract signed.

Unit Reviews

Sports Show, Omaha

Omaha, Feb. 23.

Agostinos (2), Orin Benson & His Retrievers, Vernon, Bumpy & Co. (8) Lamplighters (6), Dandy Bros. (2), Jimmy & Norma Risk, Jimmy Running, Ed Ludwikoski, Step-N-Checks (8), Dean Sherman, Chief White Eagle, Gil Torres Combo (3). At City Aud Arena, Feb. 21-26. $1 top.

This marks the fourth straight year vet promoter Nick Kahler has included Omaha on his Sports Show tour and, judging by exhibit space sold and early turnouts, this should be his most successful.

Nonetheless, current show lacks a socko punch. The 90-minute show contains some good acts. But a weak finale consisting of an Indian paddling a girl around the tank in a canoe to a vocal background leaves one let down.

Probably the strongest offering is the Agostinos, under New Acts, who come in the early stages of the show. Next is the always-strong Vernon, Bumpy & Co., acrobats featuring six kids from six to 14, pop and mom. Three of the lads now are doing a three-high, but it's the little six-year-old gal who steals the show. Group retains its gum-chewing trademark.

Lamplighters are three guys and femmes who sing and dance very well—considering the inept backing of the show trio. Given good music, they could easily be showstoppers. Guys are in tuxes, and gals come on as cute flappers. Act is well staged, with "Sweet Georgia Brown" and charleston numbers particularly good.

Dandy Bros. are clever comics but not suited for arena attractions inasmuch as most of their top material depends upon facial gestures. Step-N-Checks are eight local square dancing youths who get show off to a zippy start.

In the sports vein, Orin Benson has two innings with his retrieving dogs, Jimmy Rick lifts eyebrows with expert horse shoe pitching, Jimmy Running and Ed Ludwikoski get the expected dunkings in log rolling, and Chief White Eagle sings National Anthem with strong voice. Dean Sherman is excellent as emcee.

Performance times of 3:30 p.m and 9:30 p.m. caused considerable comment since show is angled at entire family. Mats start too early on schooldays for kids and evening shows gets out too late (11:03) at night. Trump.

Boat Show Revue

(MUNICIPAL AUD., ATLANTA)

Atlanta, Feb. 25.

Bill Brown, Willie Keo, the Amadis (5), Ginny Tiu, Alexander Tiu, Viki Tiu, Elizabeth Tiu, Bill Tiu; Keith Killinger Orch (10).

Despite torrents and a tornado alert, some 2,500 persons ventured out Friday (24) for opening of fourth annual Southeast Boat, Sports & Vacation show and, it was a little Chinese girl, piano prodigy Ginny Tiu, age 7, who packed 'em in.

All the Tius who surrounded Ginny are her dad, Bill, also a pianist; brother, 8, and sisters, Viki, 4, and Elizabeth, 3. All are cute as buttons and brim with talent. This is especially true of Ginny, who plays piano (Mozart, "Third Man Theme," "12th Street Rag"), sings, does a bouncy tap to "Sidewalks of New York," tells stories and does an impersonation of Jimmy Durante singing "Inka, Dinka Do." Every one of her numbers is a show stopper.

With a poise that some performers never attain, Ginny brings on her brother and sisters and they do some quartet harmonizing that is unusual in view of the fact that, other than Ginny, kids can't speak English. They march on to "River Kwai" theme and harmonize "Working on the Railroad," "She'll Be Coming 'Round the Mountain" and encore with "Do Re Mi" from "Sound of Music," complete with gestures.

Ginny Tiu winds up with "America the Beautiful" and has to beg off.

Managing director Martin P. Kelly has surrounded Ginny and her gang with an excellent show, kicking off with Willie Keo, the diving clown, who, in addition to his knockabout comedics and antics on the diving board, proves to be a competent trampoline performer. He gets a big hand in the opening spot.

A five-man teeterboard troupe, the Amadis, three men and two girls, present a swift act, climaxing with an 18-foot triple somersault toss that sends the flier almost into the overhead lights.

Bill Brown, veteran boat show announcer, keeps show moving and Keith Killinger backs up acts in fine style. Lucc.

Cliff Richard Show

(Green's Playhouse, Glasgow)

Glasgow, Feb. 16.

Arthur Howes' presentation, with Cliff Richard, The Shadows (4), Cherry Wainer & Don Storer, Chas, McDevitt & Shirley Douglas, The Hunters (4), Norman Vaughan; $1.30 top.

Still the No. 1 teenage fave in the U.K., Cliff Richard, a 20-year-old who can do no wrong in the eyes of Britain's younger customers, played to SRO biz here in Britain's largest cinema, Green's Playhouse.

With many seats closed off in the huge auditorium, he clicked before 3,000 and more customers at two performances, the juves screaming and yelling as Richard, garbed in white suit and black shirt, gave out with his pop hits and disclicks. Indeed, for much of the time, his songalog was impossible to make out over the teenage shrieks.

Backed by The Shadows, a useful recording turn in their own right, Richard offers an act in the current "rock" tradition showing obvious signs of longtime association with his musical group. He garners warmest mitting with his medley of hits, ranging from "Living Doll" to "Travelling Light," "Fall In Love," and "Voice in Wilderness."

Rest of layout included the intro by emcee-comedian Norman Vaughan of Dave Sampson, a young warbler not unlike Richard and the latter's own "discovery." He gives out with "Sweet Dreams" and "Why the Chicken" latter by Lionel Bart, for a swingy reaction, and shows potential for future grooming.

Charles McDevitt, partnered by Shirley Douglas, is guitarist who merits special nod for act's contribution to the musical fare. Pair offer "Save the Last Dance for Me," "Kansas City" and, for risibility impact, "Mummy, Put Out the Light." They wind with medley of rock 'n' roll for good results.

The Shadows, in their pre-interval offering, show confident musicianship despite interruptions from Cliff-hungry fans, but gain some silence for the number "That's My Desire." Also register with new tune, "F.B.I."

Cherry Wainer, chirpy rhythmic organist, and drummer-partner Don Storer, fill the featured spot after interval, distaffer having her feet lit up at illuminated pedals. Act's best number is a novelty item conjuring up thoughts of summer, with male half using whistles and bird noises for sound effects. Duo winds with spirited contribution on the drums.

The Hunters, a rock 'n' roll foursome, provide useful backing but require attention to their wardrobe. Norman Vaughan is the standard compere, filling near-impossible job of keeping the peepers happy before their idol makes entrance; he has necessary ebullience for such a chore but isn't seen to advantage. Gord.

House Reviews

Bobino, Paris

Paris, Feb. 14.

Felix Marten, Maurice Horgues, Jacques Ary, Alcarsons (4), Alcetty, Barbara, Mismoune, Marchitas (4), Durios (2); $1.50 top.

Felix Marten is a lanky singer with craggy good looks. He has managed to give quavery voice a lower register and wraps it around little songs on love and aspiration with a macabre twist from time to time.

But Marten still lacks a solid projection and the ability to build his songs into a personal pattern. He also still lacks star calibre and looms mainly a local bet. More work and a savvier songalog would help him.

Maurice Horgues is a chansonnier patter comic with expert delivery and biting takeoffs on governmental figures and sundry subjects. Jacques Ary also gets yocks with expertly developed mime gag sequences to records.

Ary gets involved with an electric guitar that picks up radio stations, a telephone that spouts water or a seashell that brings the sea to him. It's expertly regulated, zany, slapstick humor that makes him a solid offbeater in this category with Yank tv and boite stints now easily within his ken.

Other acts are also well picked and deft to help parlay this into two good weeks' biz along with Marten's extra pull from film chores at this nabe house. Alcarsons give out okay Hispano songs with good chorale and presence a plus, while Alcetty spins plates and balances them precariously on long rods for a nifty filler. Barbara is a biting songstress whose know-how and delivery are reviewed under New Acts.

Mismoune puts a group of poodles through okay acro shenanigans with a hep ending in one playing a piano. Marchitas are an expert bike act with three women and a man raring up on bikes for dance interludes and with plenty of good comic trick riding. Durios, another fine filler, sing while engaging in sleek and solid hand-to-handing for opener mitts. Mosk.

Apollo, N. Y.

Sam Cooke, Little Anthony & the Imperials (6), Bunny Briggs, Ruth McFadden, Willie Lewis, Reuben Phillips Orch (14); "The Fly" (20th).

Harlem's vaudery is depending on the wax works of Sam Clarke and the Imperials to spin the wickets this week. Singer Cooke's disk followers who haven't caught him in the flesh before are in for a rewarding surprise, since the smooth r&r belter has a polish and inviting stage presence that doesn't come through on records.

Backed by the big Reuben Phillips house band, augmented by his own rhythm duo, Cliff White on guitar and June Gardner on drums, the high stylist puts across a string of his disk faves for solid returns.

Emcee-comedian Willie Lewis announces that Little Anthony and his quintet of Imperial backers have had $2,000 worth of arrangements heisted from their car the night before opening (keep an ear out for the sound of new r&r groups), but the loss doesn't seem to hinder the vocalizing or Phillips instrumental backing. Like Cooke, the group dispatches a turn of disclicks that hit the aud mark.

For an r&r group, Imperials have a rewarding discipline in the terping and harmonizing that underscores the wails. They've toned down some of the woolier numbers, like the orgiastic "I'm All Right" (which is a direct parody on a gosper gasper). Black tuxedo costuming, in contrast to the loud jackets, tone up the sight values (although the white gloves, worn for the opening number, have a minstrel connotation).

Emcee Lewis is a most happy hipster, and his beatnik burlesques are particularly sharp. He even manages some fresh, colorful phrasology, which is something else on the hip scene.

Foggy-piped r&r shouter Ruth McFadden exudes sex and verve and would have solid potential with some concentrated woodshedding in the vocal department. Longtime Apollo fave Bunny Briggs sets up the aud with a dazzling tap turn opener. Bill.

Segregation

an "orderly pattern" is worked out.

At a meeting between the mayor's new citizens committee, it developed that Negro leaders would use their influence to prevent additional demonstrations by Negro students in the downtown area pending talks.

Negroes demonstrated last week against segregated dining facilities in department stores and restaurants, as well as against film houses. A number of arrests resulted from the demonstrations, and Saturday's (25) severe snow storm apparently ended for the present demonstrations. No violence was reported, and private and city police were on hand to maintain order.

Civic leaders will meet with Negro leaders Monday (27), to work out a pattern for integration in the downtown area, which will probably includes stores, eating places, and film houses.

Desert Inn, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Feb. 20.

Benny Goodman Orch (10) with Red Norvo, Charlie Shavers, Zoot Sims, Jimmy Rushing, Maria Marshall; Paul Gilbert; Carlton Hayes Orch (14); choreography, Donn Arden; $4 minimum.

Some recording company would be wise if it waxed an on-the-spot album of the sounds which will be coming from the Painted Desert Room for the next two weeks. Benny Goodman, the hard-core exponent of righteous jazz, is on hand and has surrounded himself with nine of the best musicians, and two of the best singers in the biz.

Result is an honest echo of the pure, honest jazz impact which is historically identified with an era—the era of Benny Goodman. Perfectionist Goodman, on clarinet, has the high lama of vibes aboard, Red Norvo; on piano there's John Bunch; Red Wootten, bass; Buddy Lowell, drums; Zoot Sims, tenor sax; Jerry Dodgion, alto sax; Carl Fontana, trombone; Charlie Shavers, trumpet, and Jim Wyble, guitar.

Backboned by the flawless rhythm section, group tosses with fine shades of animation such evergreens as "Savoy," "Moonglow," "Please Don't Be That Way," "Poor Butterfly," "After You've Gone," "But Not for Me," "September Song," and of course "Sing, Sing, Sing." The variations are generous, and the party moves. The solos are vibrant, controlled, and each pulled hefty mitt action from first-nighters.

Big Jimmy Rushing, one of the all-time solid blues shouters, drives "There'll Be Some Changes Made," "Every Day Blues" and "Sent for You Yesterday" to stomping effect.

Maria Marshall, a true jazz singer with a full rich, and happy sound, gets cheers with "Get Happy," "I Can't Believe You're In Love With Me" and "Bill Bailey."

Wrapped up, the Goodman package is one of those memorable events which regretfully does not settle down to an indefinite run in Las Vegas.

Paul Gilbert, and a holdover Donn Arden production number are the bill-balancers, making the show a strong entry. Comedy star Gilbert brings in many new gags, revives some of his classics (including the "Medic" skit) and bows off to booming yocks.

Le Cabaret, Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 21.

Judy Lee, Frank Manzell Trio; $1.75 cover.

Red-headed Judy Lee is back at the plush Le Cabaret, this time with greater aplomb in her stage presence but still with that magnificent voice and pert personality in which she enjoys what she is singing and gives meaning to the lyrics.

Clad in a vivid yellow evening gown—when caught on opening night—Miss Lee has a bouncy introduction in "From This Moment On," segues into "Love Is a Simple Thing" and "What Good is a Guy Without a Girl?" There's a tempo-switch to "Happiness" in whisper style, a poignant "Me and My Shadow" and a begoff to a bouncier "Just One of Those Things."

She was on 25 minutes with all arrangements by Harry Cohen. Just back from an engagement in Puerto Rico, the soprano got instant attention of a near-capacity audience with her singing ability; and that expressive face doesn't hurt. Miss Lee also has glamor and knows how to act. McStay.

Trade Winds, Chi

Chicago, Feb. 22.

Julius La Rosa (with Joe Massimino), Gary Morton, Joe Parnello Trio (7); $2.50 cover.

It has taken Julius La Rosa quite a spell to shake off trading as an Arthur Godfrey alumnus. The old boy-next-door diffidence suited as an airwave image under Godfrey's paternalism, but against the hot disk-and-personality dynamics of the songstering trade, the La Rosa qualities got sloughed in the postgraduate interim.

If actuarially he's still a youngster, the further truth is his welcome maturity as a belt-and-croon exponent. Vocally, for one thing; but he's also lost much of that awkward boyishness, and overall cuts it with vastly more savvy.

He has a better sense now of stageiness, which is fine at present and for as long as he doesn't let the poise get out of hand. He still projects, in short, that wholesome sincerity, only more showmanly—and it's an act that bids for firm stapling in the clubs.

What La Rosa is flashing during his fortnight in this smallery is essentially the new image unwrapped at his recent Syracuse, N.Y., nitery date, and underpinned with a solid take-your-pick ASCAP potpourri.

These romantics are nicely balanced with comicalities as he ribs virtue in one special number, then dittoes with a neat rock 'n' roll satire that's almost too close for comfort. His "Carousel" soliloquy lacks the stage-borne drama, yet succeeds very much anyhow on La Rosa's own terms.

For backing, singer has some five pickup AFMers augmenting Joe Parnello's house trio (sans Parnello) with Joe Massimino, star's conductor-88er in charge. Effect at times is a bit reverberant in this spot, but never really too strident.

Gary Morton's show-opening japery is dependably expert, albeit some of the material can use retreading by now, tabler audit attesting. He's plenty adept at the mimicry, per the Florida sun-taning and related slants, and coaxes nice reaction with a coupla standbys—the famous paintings talking back, and the voices that don't fit their occupations. His Chi exposure stands to gain, however, by splicing in some updated sharpies.

Irwin Corey and Adam Wade open March 8. Pit.

Viennese Lantern, N. Y.

Vicky Autier, Marguerite Baxter & John Modinas, Ernst Schoen Orch; $3.50 minimum.

Vicky Autier, who annually has been making the run between midtown St. Regis hotel and Max Loew's Viennese Lantern, is generally the signal for uptempoed business at this Continental spot. She's at home in this room as any performer can possibly be, knows its denizens, its quirks and how to spoonfeed the habituees into attendance several times during the run and with it to maximum response.

Miss Autier, who comes annually from Monte Carlo to make her tour of the nation's bistros and wax for Capitol, is coiffed and coutoured very much in the haute manner. Her catalog is again a mixture of new and old faves in several languages and her stint is done both from the keyboard and a standup position at the mike. She's effective from both positions.

This time there are several numbers new to her, including tunes in French, Italian and Greek and of course, en Anglais. Her imports from the Continent are varied enough both in language and in content to give variety to her turn, and of course, she's still there with some of the holdover faves to give her a solid base. Miss Autier is also effective pianistically with arrangements which show her digital dexterity.

Other act on this bill is Marguerite Baxter & John Modinas (New Acts) and the music is by the crew headed by singer Ernest Schoen with able assistance by Joe Troppi and the others in the Continental style orch. Jose.

Elmwood Casino, Windsor

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 23.

Jane Morgan, Leonard Sues, Bob Arlen Dancers (6), Nick Forrest; Jack Madden orch (9); $2 cover.

Jane Morgan scored a notable success at the opening of her two-week engagement at this posh spot across the river from Detroit. Her audience was 95% male conventioneers who filled Al Siegel's 750-capacity Ambassador Room. From the moment Miss Morgan sang the first few bars of "Fascination" off-stage to her signoff with the same signature song, after three encores, she held the audience's rapt attention. Musically and visually she was exactly what this audience showed it appreciated.

Miss Morgan's act is a simple, stand-up, sans tricks, songalog with only a couple of brief excursions with the hand mike around the periphery of the stage to cozy up to the ringsiders. Her special material includes "It Took A Lot To Get Us Together," a Paris medley, a grouping of Academy Award songs and the French version of such songs as "Davy Crockett," "Sandman" and "Yellow Rose of Texas." All of it comes across as something very special; a veritable tour de force. Miss Morgan has a great assist from her accompaniest Phil della Penna.

Leonard Sues' act is confused, faltering in the comedy, singing and dancing departments and but socko on the solid trumpeteering. Sues would do better if he stuck to his superlative trumpet blowing and forgot about being a song-and-dance comic.

Nick Forrest lacks warmth as the emcee. He seems to be more intent on being a singer, and is only fair. The Bob Arlen Dancers are unimpressive. Jack Madden's orch provide excellent backing. Tew.

Colonial Terrace, Atlanta

Atlanta, Feb. 20.

Rick-Racks (2), Danny Windsor; $2.50 minimum.

Chick Hedrick, operator of Domino Lounge in Imperial Hotel, who took over the Bayou Lounge and tried to make it go under the old Dixieland policy. It didn't work. So last week he changed name to Little Club and brought in Danny Windsor, billed as "Duke of Satire," a song and dance man and a fine pantomimist.

Plan is to transform spot into a place that will attract the after dinner and theatre clientele.

Windsor's present stint is overlong at 50 minutes. He mixes patter with patter with his song and mime offerings and gets friendly with customers, which has a tendency to slow down his turn.

He's assisted by Rick-Racks (pianist Jay Horton and electronic bassist Tommy Conrad, who also drums and they concertize as well as play for dancing. They sing, too. Lucc.

Club 76, Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 21.

Johnny (Crazy Otto) Maddox; 50c cover.

With Bob Cook, owner-operator of the Club 76, setting his trademark on his ability to get commercial ragtime piano-players, latest is Johnny (Crazy Otto) Maddox. Helped by his Dot albums' reception, he saw a steady lineup of ragtime devotees on opening night, with many turned away from the 98-seater.

Actually, Maddox plays a lot faster than the oldtime composers intended but that's what modern customers want in their nostalgic memory playing. Incidentally, Maddox filled the initial afternoon of his six-weeks' engagement at the Club 76 tuning the old upright to sound slightly off-key prior to his nightly pounding beat.

Tennessee-born Maddox got his first break on unique piano styling when Randy Wood, prexy of Dot Records, had him wax "Crazy Bone Rag," a fave of 1913, backed by "St. Louis Tickle," popular at the time of the St. Louis Fair in 1904. McStay.

Chi Chi, Palm Springs

Palm Spring, Feb. 18.

Joe E. Lewis, Ben Sherwin, Jay Lee & The Princess; Bill Alexander's Orch (7); $2 cover charge.

Though Las Vegas and Palm Springs are only an hour apart as the Old Crow flies, this is Joe E. Lewis' first time in the Chi Chi Starlite Room. That he picked the first week in Lent to air his ribald and wandering routine looked as if he was doing his best to promote what he calls his "losing streak." But actually the NAM was in convention assembled and they not only gave his risque gags plenty of laughs but helped fill the nitery to capacity, a novelty for this 750-seater.

A heckler who shouted "Post Time!" about every other minute seemed to throw the old trouper. Lewis doesn't need a prompter to tell him when to say "Post Time!" as the heists a drink from the audience, but this moujik thought he did. Lewis finally told him to shut up: "Imagine a man having a two-word vocabulary for 48 minutes!" Lewis' nifty about Lumumba eating a Belgian and "it didn't agree with him" and another about Neiman Marcus, the Dallas store with the slogan, "All the world's a stage, let's rob it," had all the old iconoclastic bounce.

Jay Lee, a Chinese magician with a dry line of gags and a gorgeously, gammed wife, open the bill. They're followed by Ben Sherwin, who sang his heart out to no purpose. The house was waiting for Joe E. (for Empathy) Lewis.

Bill Alexander's orchestra backstopped Lewis without a rehearsal, but, of course, Austin Mack was at the piano. Scul.

Soho, Paris

(FOLLOW-UP)

Paris, Feb. 18.

Crazy Horse Saloon proprietor Alain Bernardin may close his new boite, the Soho, in May and try again with a fresh show next September. He then hopes to bloom it into an international name and mecca as it happened with the Crazy Horse, which has been shoehorning them in for years.

Specialized clubs, eschewing star names, have to click on style or method that sit well with both local and foreign nightlifers. With a big overhead, that leaves out satirical revues, and headliners rarely play boites now.

Madcap vestpocket theatrics and moody songstresses provided the atmosphere in the late '40s and early '50s during the existentialist phase but that too is gone. A catch formula is the thing and Bernardin is still striving for it.

He poured a lot of the loot garnered from his Crazy Horse strippery into building this fancy Champs-Elysees cellar club. It's done like an amphitheatre with Japanese decorative motifs, and a stage equipped with all modern conveniences.

Bernardin decided he would make the elemental strip more inventive for those still wanting flesh in their nitery ogling but also desiring more fantasy. So he has four girls, Sohophisticated Ladies, dancing nude with lighting patterns playing over them. He has a sinuous frenetic exotic dancer in Sherry Young, more of same with wiry Sophie Teckel, an elegant nude dance in an Arabian Nights tableau, plus the scrubbed Baby Sisters (2) doing bright little terp and song interludes. Between the nudity are some classic music hall, theatrical and boite visual sight acts.

In short, it adds up to a more ambitious reworking of the Crazy Horse formula. Jacques Ary is a clever slapstick mime at odds with his furniture during a drunk. Gilles Segal & Leger do a clever mime bit using different hats to play several characters.

Jo, Jack & Jori are a vaude entry who do madcap things with instruments and Wilson, Keppel & Betty are also oldtime vaude in Arab dance takeoff. Conrad Pringle adds some wiry, electric terping to the show.

But it all hasn't quite struck the mixture of old, new and nude that will draw locals as well as tourists which is the life's blood of the fancier niteries here. Bernardin knows it takes time for material to click and has enough savvy and daring to go it once more.

He closed down last July and paid off performers when the policy didn't quite register and is doing it again since this hasn't jelled. Mosk.

New Acts

FRANK GORSHIN
Impressions, Comedy
25 Mins.
Copacabana, N. Y.

Frank Gorshin, with beaucoup screen and television credits, has come in for the big opportunity at the Copacabana at the request of Bobby Darin who is headlining the bill. Gorshin's Gotham advent is preceded by a record of having made it in the Las Vegas spots and elsewhere along the nitery fronts. Thus his failure to do at least as well as elsewhere is a keen disappointment to the Copa hipsters.

Gorshin is a mimic with a great flair for sounds and mannerisms. He has an ear for authenticity and a tremendous catalog of impersonations. There are some flaws in his turn for a sophisticated New York audience. For example, many of his top impersonations are tied to physical discomforts of the kind that aren't suitable subjects for the dinnertable. There are periods, also, when he neglects to infuse sufficient humor to go along with his portraits. He satirizes physically, but in some instances not verbally.

Yet despite the fact that Gorshin didn't hit a peak reception, he gives the feeling that it either wasn't his night or his room. There are adjustments he can make in his act to make him as big a hit in the eastern metropolis as he is in the west. Some stretches of rewriting and a lighter attitude toward his work seem to be a couple of the more obvious requirements before he can achieve real big-city plaudits. Jose.

AGOSTINOS (2)
Acrobats
10 Mins.
Sports Show, Omaha

Agostinos, husband and wife team from Italy, are one of the brighter acro turns to hit these shores in quite a spell. Broad-shouldered guy comes out in tramp costume with a big sack which he bounces around stage. Gal finally gets out, also as tramp, for routine work.

As gal is standing on hubby's head, both strip off outer clothing; he's in tux and she in abbreviated costume. Duo then engages in some skillful work to set up an amazing encore termed the "Roman Chair," in which he lifts wife over back of chair to floor, and then back up again. Fine act for any visual outlet. Trump.

BAXTER & MODINAS
Songs
15 Mins.
Viennese Lantern, N. Y.

Marguerite Baxter & John Modinas are good looking and well groomed singers with power and excellence to spare in the vocal department. Originally booked in the Max Loew winestube as singles, they are now teamed into purveyors of class offerings. Both have finely developed voices, which are projected with upbeat spirits and charm.

The pair are, coincidentally, both Greek, but it's evident only in one set of tunes, otherwise, they turn to pop offerings from the romance countries of Europe and from musical comedy. Their harmonics are excellent and their vocal blends are extremely applauseworthy. Pair are admirably suited for intimate class spots. Jose.

KAREN WILLIAMS & THE HI-BROWS
Music, Songs
45 Mins.
Holiday, Reno

Albeit the act has been together for more than six months, it's never been recorded under New Acts. Karen Williams and The Hi-Brows are a pro group despite the youth, and present a nice 45 minutes.

Accent seems to be on the uptempo things, with a mixture of the five members on both vocal and instrumental. Miss Williams, a red-tressed thrush with a chassis commanding much eye appeal, more than capably handles the femme chores in the vocal department. On sax and flute is Dave Scott, on bass is Dick Parker, on drums is Wyman Bower, and on piano-organ is Denny McReynolds.

Parker and Scott work well in tandem with Miss Williams on the vocal things (with the three at mike) and McReynolds fills in vocaling from the piano. Parker does an okay job on the comic routines, and Scott impresses with his sax work. Presentations are studied and neat, with staging not overplayed. Four males are nicely suited and Miss Williams' selection in gowning accents the well-proportioned measurements. Long.

GLORIA TRACY QUARTET
Music, Songs
30 Mins.
Mapes, Reno

The accent in the Gloria Tracy Quartet is definitely on Miss Tracy—and her harp. She's a blonde looker, and displays a keen jazz talent on the strings for much aud endorsement. She's backed by three talented musicians: Jerry Tracy (her husband) on drums, bass and vibes, Bob Winn on flute and bass, and Dave Brewer on guitar.

Miss Tracy is one of the few nitery acts using a harp to play the local boards and she gets good response with her brand of heavenly music. With a smooth presentation and a nicely selected catalog, she proves a pleasant departure from some of the other louder groups making the regular rounds. There's no attempt at comedy or novelty stuff; it's all played straight—and well. Long.

Deauville, Miami Beach

Ritz Bros., Julie Wilson, Henry Levine Orch; $5-$7.50 minimum.

The Ritz Bros., who set the Casanova Room of this biggery off to a winging start last year, are back on a later date-deal this winter, providing prexy Morris Lansburgh and booker Jack Young with their first look at the big-spender types who can wheel a hotel-cafe into the black ink side of the gross-ledger; and adding to the draw-values of the bill is sleek Julie Wilson.

It's been a long time since the 650-seater rocked with the sort of howls the zany trio set going in almost continuous pattern through their 50-minute stint. Per always, they work at break-'em-up pace, their routines revved up to yocking-rocking tempo by new lines, new bits of biz and shrewdly blended book of special material that hits every funnybone.

Per always, the basics of their free-wheeling antics are woven by Al and Jimmy around the guy in the middle, Harry, who in turn spins out original bits of business, of mugging, of ad libbing a weird and yocks-stirring set of dialects and double-talk foreign tongue.

Many of his inventions have been picked up by comedian confreres, but none can equal the laughs he earns. Such as in their lampoon on tv-Westerns, with his multi-costume changes that are topped by his salon-belle. It sparked an uproar among the first-nighters. So did the broad satirization of the Russian ballet-men. The Ritz freres have revived, happily for them, the "Snow White" spoof they introed some years ago, then dropped from their package. It peaks up the latter segment of their turn and laugh-wheels them into topping routines such as their standard "Continental Gentlemen of Song" with its "Don' holler" merriment raiser.

The spontaneous palm payoff by the tablers leads into their closer, the calypso-themed "Vitality" complete with costumes and new lyrics. Throughout there's the as-one hoofery breaks that are smooth as silk and begets the trio much mitting before routines are over with. There aren't many acts that work as hard as the brothers, who keep punching to top the yocks they garner from first wacky wolk-on bit. It pays off, in spades with a beg-off sum-up.

Julie Wilson is a classy plus to the Ritz wingding. The looker with the wow-whee figure, gowing and coif to match her sultry appeal, takes on the tough opening spot with aplomb. Normally the sophisticated chanteuse with the sly-lyric ideas, she sets up here a book of song to match the let-your-hair down Ritz routines, and in showmanly fashion belts out the upbeat, the musicomedy and the riding-high rhythmic evergreens, to capture the auditors fast. The delivery, easy of manner and inherent charm adds to Miss Wilson's big click.

Beverly Hills, Cincy

Cincinnati, Feb. 24.

Vivienne della Chiesa, Morty Gunty, Moro-Landis Dancers (9) with Bill Raymond, Gardner Benedict Orch (12), Jimmy Wilber Trio, Larry Vincent; $3-$4 minimum, $1-$1.50 cover.

One of those rare, relaxingly delightful floorshows unfolds in this Kentucky swankery's current two-framer. Biggest helping is by Vivienne della Chiesa over a 35-minute vocal route. Morty Gunty, nifty comic, ably fills a 22-minute spot. Spicing the 75-minute offering are the Moro-Landis delovelies in Manhattan and Haiti routines, featuring Rene de Haven, with Bill Raymond returned as production singer.

Gunty, in for his third date, warms up quickly with a "we'll have a real good time" opening song. Personable tuxed youngster entwines familiar and new gags with rousing impressions of Jerry Lewis, JFK, Huntley & Brinkley, Belafonte, Danny Kaye, tv commercials and flamenco dancers.

Miss della Chiesa, statuesque blonde beaut, is an equally charming rangy mezzo soprano. With background of concert, opera and radio, she puts siters at ease as if being entertained in their own living room. Every syllable is distinctive. Repertoire highlights include "September Song," "Scarlet Ribbon," "Little Serenade" in Italian and English, "Don't Forget Me," French, and a swingy "After You've Gone" closer. Class grooming is in black beaded evening gown and white sleeve gloves. Her only previous engagement here was 18 months ago and she merits early return.

Gardner Benedict crew is increased by guitar and accordion to meet the headliner's special arrangements.

Three of the four Ames Brothers return to headline the session opening March 10. Koll.

Dunes, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Feb. 23.

Tony Bennett, Ford & Reynolds, The Borjevas (2), Shelia Cass, Lester James, Sandra Dale Girl Dancers (9), Boy Dancers (4), Showgirls (5), Nudes (10), Bill Reddie Orch (20); produced by Harold Minsky. choreography by Ron Lewis, stage Direction by Eddie Lynch; $4 minimum.

Tony Bennett was such a hit with his opening night audience he did something unusual—after the house lights were up and half the crowd was well on the way to the casino, he came back and announced he would sing some more. After rounding up a few missing musicians, he continued his songalog of about 18 tunes which included "Taking a Chance on Love," "Put on a Happy Face," "It Amazes Me," "All of You," "Firefly," "Over the Rainbow," "Solitude," "Black Magic," and his platter click. Bennett's distinctive sounds, backed by the Ralph Sharon Trio foundationing the Bill Reddie orch (20) seem better every time he returns to Vegas.

Frankie Ford & Gary Reynolds are back for this one, and the sky-rocketing young comedy team shows again why it's a solid attraction for any room. Doubling as musicians (Ford on trumpet and drums, Reynolds on sax) they blend instrumental shenanigans into their very funny turn. Ford's repetitious "What're gonna do?" phrase is a good identifying gimmick.

The Borjevas make their Vegas bow in this—she hands him the dinner plates, and at the end of the act he has 32 spinning wobbly on the end of 32 spears and one on his finger with no breakage.

Rest of show holds over, with singers Shelia Cass and Lester James, exotic terp Sandra Dale, nine girl dancers, four boy dancers, five showgirls, and 10 nudes. The Ron Lewis choreography is top drawer. The Harold Minsky production is in for four weeks. Duke.

Hotel Monteleone, N. O.

New Orleans, Feb. 26.

Carla Alberghetti, Dick Curtis, Nick Stuart Orch (7); $2.50 weeknight minimum; $4 Sats.

Carla Alberghetti and Dick Curtis ran their maiden race at Billy Monteleone's plush Swan Room (22) and the double entry had thoroughbred form all the way.

Miss Alberghetti, sister of the more renowned Anna Maria, headlines. A near capacity house came to the young singer's opening. What they saw and heard they liked. She is 21, a looker with dark hair and eyes and a polished voice of lyric beauty that rings true throughout a turn which encompasses pop and classical songs.

The singer captivates with her varied selections that included "Speak Low," "I Could Have Danced All Night," "Get Out of Town," and a number of operatic arias and tunes of her native Italy such as "Sempre Libre" from "La Traviata" and "Un Bel Di" from "Madama Butterfly," "Arriverderci Roma" and others.

Miss Alberghetti narrowly escaped injury opening night when she stepped too close to the edge of the platform and fell. She immediately regained her poise and went on to generate more aud enthusiasm with her beautiful voice.

Dick Curtis, a young comedian, displayed a seemingly effortless and casual sort of style that put him on an intimate, friendly terms with table-holders.

His material is fresh and imaginative, and the laughs come fast. His top offerings are a couple of routines about a hillbilly deejay and a drunkard.

Nick Stuart's musical crew opens the show with a Dixieland "High Society" in memory of the late Alphonse Picou, and plays for the hoofers. His music is flavored with a variety of rhythms and tunes.

Show is in for two weeks. Liuz.

Harrah's, Tahoe

Lake Tahoe, Feb. 21.

"Holiday in Japan" (produced by Steve Parker), with Izumi Yukimura & Co., Jimmy Borges, Rie Tanuichi, Haru Tominaga, Nagata Kings (3), Rocky-Fellers (5), Kanda Beatniks, Leighton Noble Orch (13); no cover, no minimum.

"Holiday in Japan" show began its 88th week playing the U. S. with the opening frame at Tahoe Harrah's—and it retains the basic format presented when it debuted in Las Vegas, albeit nudity has not been one of its attractions since the show completed the long run in Vegas. There've been other nude acts playing northern Nevada in the past, but for this turn it's out of the question for the Japanese show, what with Harrah's having a strong house policy against such, and ditto any blue material.

Big change after 88 weeks before U. S. auditors comes in the pace of the presentation, and there's one complete new act—the Rocky-Fellers—who were not in the lineup at the Vegas opening. Many of the traditional Japanese routines have been shortened or dropped, and the accent is more Americanized than at the Vegas debut. Also more English titles are included in the complete catalog.

Narration and male vocal chores are handled expertly by Jimmy Borges. His appeal is also strong in tandem with Miss Yukimura, femme star of the production. Traditional dance takes the first spot with two sword handlers in duel to finale first offering.

Costuming for both male and female members of the cast of 60 is colorful and authentic. Likewise the coiffures and makeup.

Haru Tominaga follows opener with skillful work on the samisen, an oriental string instrument played from seated position. After a Japanese title she swings into uptempoed versions of "Cherry Pink" and "When The Saints Go Marching In." The Nagata Kings score with a baseball routine, with one member in a perfected slow motion bit. Rie Tanuichi is a fast moving femme terper with some good backing on the choreography by the Kanda Beatniks. Her offering shows imagination and design.

The Rocky-Fellers (four brothers and father) carbon the rock and roll set to perfection, with the younger freres, Eddie, 7, and Alberto, 9, commanding most attention with neat hip-swinging and vocal gyrations.

Miss Yukimura is a vocal artist, as proved by her interpretations of such as "It's Wonderful," "Love Is A Many Splendored Thing" and the "Trolley Song." Star is a looker and enhances the appeal with ultra smart gowning.

Direction and choreography is by Paul Godkin. Current bill marks first time such a lavish production has played northern Nevada, and Harrah's is the only club with facilities to properly stage such a show. Entertainment director Russ Hall is getting much endorsement for the presentation and b.o. is okay despite this being the slow season for Reno-Tahoe shows.

Sammy Davis Jr. is slated for March 9 opening. Long.

Riverside, Reno

Reno, Feb. 23.

Roberta Sherwood, Los Cherumbeles (10), Treniers (8), Frankie Brent Quintet, Riverside Orch (8); no cover or minimum.

There's been a four-year hiatus since Roberta Sherwood has played a Reno club—and a first-night audience at Bill Miller's Riverside indicated it's been too-long. This time around she has a new name working with her—Don Lanning, her 20-year-old, who shows much potential.

Miss Sherwood, working for the most part with traveling mike, proves her effectiveness on all tempoes, and varies the catalog for good effect. Range is from "Lazy River" to "Make Someone Happy." Presentation is authoritative but with apparent ease. Other titles she essays include "Best Things in Life Are Free," "Lonesome Road," and "Basin Street Blues." Format follows no straight line, and she's sensitive to tablers' reactions to set mood.

"Working in tandem with son, she gets good response to "Old Man River," then lets Lanning go it alone on such as "Slow Boat to China," and "Moonlight Becomes You." Youth shows well for limited exposure, and indicates self-confidence. Backing Miss Sherwood is Ernest DeLorenzo on piano and Eddie Graham on drums.

Los Cherumbeles, nine guys and a femme, present a well-rehearsed melange of Spanish and European numbers with the accent on strings and reeds. Choreography is minimized but highly effective, and discipline is obvious. Colorful costuming is impeccable and enhances the Latino flavor of the overall act. Femme member of the cost commands much attention with the heel-toe flamenco offerings.

The Frankie Brent Quintet, featuring Jay Price, mix it up with comedy and instrumental for good rapport. They're a live group, and exhibit much in individual talents. Group is in good contrat contrast to the Cherumbeles.

The Treniers are in a holdover slot from the last show, New acts due in March 9. Long.

Walker Hotel, Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 22.

Sandra de Kiraly; Jimmy Amaro's Quartet; no cover.

Tall, sexy and self-assured professionally, brunet and dark-eyed Sandra de Kiraly is just what George Schwab, operator of the lush Franz Joseph Room, wants in a Continental chanteuse in the European manner. She has written much of her own 30-minute program, which ranges from Gershwin to calypso.

With a full-throated contralto, she sings in English, German, Italian, Yiddish, French, Spanish and Czech. In language and singing style, she fits into the opulently-furnished cabaret where she jammed in the posh supper-club mob to begoffs—when caught.

Clad in sequined white sheath evening gown, with elbow-length white gloves, Miss de Kiraly exhibits confidence and timing from her opening waltz number from "Gigi" to the theme-song of "Never on Sunday" and a "Porgy and Bess" medley.

In between, she switches in tempo to her own writing of "Wax Marquise" and her "Astrology" number, plus finale of an international medley dubbed "Around the World," which brings in her language lyrics. Notable also is her own music and writing of a calypso melange, complete with table-hopping.

Statuesque femme has her eyes on the musicomedy stage and, with the breaks, could make it on looks, professional ability and appearance. Jimmy Amaro's quartet lends excellent backing to Miss Kiraly's singing stint and also plays for the dance sessions. Biz is big at this new Viennese cabaret. McStay.

Artie Shaw, George Gobel, Diosa Costello, Ilona Massey and Heidi Kral, originally a house singer who became a Met Opera star.

Designers for Playboy Key Club plan to build a new second floor at balcony level to raise seating capacity up to about 500. Expanded space on two floors will be used for four rooms, a large penthouse, a "Musical Living Room," a "Library of Fun" and a cocktail bar. It's understood that they will follow style of the Chicago Playboy Club in lavish decor and entertainment policy in two of largest rooms.

$25 Per Key

Charter lifetime memberships here, according to report, are starting at $25 per key for the first 2,000 members to drum up interest. Fees running from $50 up may be charged for latecomers after backers get the drive under way.

Cleveland's Playboy will find itself competing against another quasi-private key club only a few doors away. If a $300,000 stock-buying deal is successful, a local group plans to convert the nearby Pierre's restaurant into a Black Sheep Club.

Incorporators of this potential branch of national chain are Albert Caminati and Alfred Rancati, owners of Pierre's; Clint Noble, who operates a band-and-act booking agency; Jack Mills, prez of Clevco Corp., and Ellsworth Smith, v.p. of Milbar Corp. Project would be franchised by the Gaslight key clubs of Chicago, New York and Washington, D.C., with each man's membership costing $250 per share of stock.

Copacabana, N. Y.

Bobby Darin (Frank Behrke, conductor), Frank Gorshin, Douglas Clarke, Paul Shelley & Frank Marti Orchs, Doug Coudy Line; $5.50-$6 minimum.

Jules Podell has an embarrassment of riches this year. Drawing liberally from the younger segment of headliners, the Copacabana is putting in Bobby Darin at a time when he has to rely mainly on adult trade, and it seems that he can do the trick. He's a hip and swinging citizen, far out enough to keep the mature trade with him and still excite the younger elements.

It's likely Darin will overcome the handicap of Lent and the wrong time of the year for a performer of his particular appeal. He is paired with mimic Frank Gorshin (New Acts).

Darin is a performer of great instinct and few inhibitions. Highly stylistic, he gives an impression of enormous vitality along with a roistering and jazzy attitude. Yet with all this equipment appealing to the modern cats, he seems anchored in traditional music, at least as far as the nitery dates are concerned.

He rambles among the standards, and for a greater part of his act, seems not to be on a speaking acquaintance with a tune unless it has passed muster with at least one generation. Thus his regard for antiquity, together with his modern approach, give him a base which can appeal to all age groups. He is a surefooted performer who appears to know what he's doing every moment.

Following his encore, he spoke much too much and diffused his interest. The song medley starting with the year in which he said he was born had entirely too much gab, and seemed to generate uneasiness among the crowd. Yet when he starts singing the restlessness is dissipated. It's likely that he's corrected this defect in his turn. He stayed on for an hour in which he also exhibited skill at the vibes and drums. Once he gets down to elementals, he has a turn marked by solidity and top entertainment values.

There was another handicap to the layout at the hospice, which the house engineers will correct. There seems to be a lot of setting up to do for Darin, what with drums, vibes, extra musicians on a bandstand not equipped to handle that number. By the time the stage was ready for Darin, any warmup generated by the items preceeding the singer was dissipated.

The augmented orch gives a full bodied tone to Darin which is brought to fullbloom by Frank Behrke conducting the Paul Shelley Orch. Frank Marti does the Latino relief. The production dancing is by Douglas Clarke working with the excellently costumed Doug Coudy line. Jose.

New Frontier, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Feb. 13.

"Good Nudes of '61," Bobby Sargent, The Cables (4), Cathy Ryan, Jeff Gyle Dancers (9), Dick Rice Orch (10); produced by Bruce Davis, choreography by Jeff Gyle, $4 minimum.

"Good Nudes of '61" brings back after a two-year absence the delightful standup comedy of Bobby Sargent, and introduces a highly talented, handsome young male singing quartet of San Franciscans called The Cables.

Headliner Sargent has a generous supply of topical one-liners, and he has fresh gags for his rubber-faced characters. He's a fine dialectician, and his special material songs are very funny. First nighters tossed consistent yocks to Sargent's entire turn.

The Cables (Chris Cundall, Larry Dolgin, Jim Britt, Don McCarthy) are not only pleasant in the harmony department—they also sock across some solid comedy routines, sparkplugged by McCarthy. Group ignores the standards, concentrates on specialties which pull hefty applause. A spoof of cigarette commercials and one of rock 'n' rollers are outstanding. Cables show here they are a potent attraction for any nitery or theatre, and a natural for tv.

Cathy Ryan, a belter of the Kay Starr school, offers some stirring songology as a hill-balancer, and the Jeff Gyle Dancers are seen in some pleasant if familiar choreography. Four nudes give the show its title. Produced by Bruce Davis and backed by the Dick Rice orch, "Nudes" is booked for six weeks. Duke.

Come Blow Your Horn

William Hammerstein & Michael Ellis presentation of comedy in three acts by Neil Simon. Staged by Stanley Prager; setting and lighting, Ralph Alswang, costumes, Stanley Simmons. Features Hal March, Sarah Marshall, Pert Kelton, Lou Jacobi, Arlene Golonka, Warren Berlinger. Opened Feb. 22, '61, at the Brooks Atkinson Theatre, N.Y.; $7.50 top Friday-Saturday nights, $6.90 weeknights.

Alan Baker ..... Hal March
Peggy Evans ..... Arlene Golonka
Buddy Baker ..... Warren Berlinger
Mr Baker ..... Lou Jacobi
Connie Davton ..... Sarah Marshall
Mrs. Baker ..... Pert Kelton
Visitor ..... Carolyn Brenner

Since the movies took over the field, plays like "Come Blow Your Horn" have been scarce on Broadway. If memory serves, the last one with this theme of New York as a bachelor heaven was "The Tender Trap," six seasons ago. That was a boxoffice flop as a play, but Metro made it into a profitable picture, thanks to careful budgeting and potent casting, Frank Sinatra and Debbie Reynolds.

Before the current era of sordidlite drama, it used to be basic that popular success depended, at least in part, on someone an audience could root for. Perhaps that still applies in the case of comedy. If so, "Come Blow Your Horn" has a serious handicap, for it's hard to care much about, or even take seriously, the characters in this lightweight antic by Neil Simon.

Moreover, although the author obviously was aiming for mere amusement, without the slightest intention of dealing with anything important or even serious, the play goes overboard in that direction by lacking any tangible theme at all. The result is a story without a moral, a joke without a point. That, compounding the lack of characters without genuine appeal, adds up to a so-what evening.

On the other hand, "Come Blow Your Horn" has plenty of laughs, mostly of the sort that keep the spectators nudging each other in gleeful recognition of broad parallels to their own domestic, or at least least personal, complications. It's the sort of play in which the telephone and the doorbell keep creating comic situations, in the latter case the arrival usually involving a surprise.

Former tv quizmaster Hal March is top-featured (the program uses the word "starring," but he's billed below the title) as a 33-year-old playboy who's supposed to be a salesman for his father's wax fruit company, but spends his nights and weekend days (at hours playing the romantic field. To his old-fashioned parents, any unmarried man over 30 is a "bum," so when the younger son, on achieving the age of 21, leaves the restrictions of home and moves in with his brother, the old man disowns them both.

The ending is all too predictable. But in a drab Broadway season, with an especial dearth of broad comedy, "Come Blow Your Horn" may do reasonably well. It could supplement the available musicals for the expense account trade.

From the investment angle, the shows seems a moderate prospect, not only because of its pre-production film deal (Paramount is paying a minimum of $100,000, with bonuses for profitable legit weeks on Broadway to a ceiling of $250,000), but also as an item for stock and perhaps the road.

The show is shrewdly produced by William Hammerstein and Michael Ellis, the latter having tried it out last summer at his Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa. There's a single set, seemingly without complexities of lighting or other technicalities. The small cast probably requires a fairly modest payroll, presumably without percentages off the top.

Under Stanley Prager's busy, ingeniously broad direction, the actors maintain the impression of something going on all the time. Although his part is the straight man, March makes valuable use of the assurance and driving energy that was his special asset as a tv personality. Warren Berlinger is eager and plausible as the younger brother.

Sarah Marshall gives a professional touch to the ill-dimensioned role of the not-to-be-denied girl who really loves the roue older brother and keeps dropping in with no other motivation than to prove that the author knows it. Lou Jacobi gives a hoked-up vaudeville parent who, outraged that anyone should ever disagree with him, and Pert Kelton underlines the caricature part of the mother.

Arlene Golonka is passable in the stock role of one of the dopey girls in the galivanting bachelor's date book, and Carolyn Brenner has a curtain-laugh bit part. Ralph Alswang has designed a New York apartment living room spacious and ugly enough to serve as a rodeo arena, and Stanley Simons has provided the unattractive costumes.

Comedie Francaise

N. Y. City Center (in association with S. Hurok) presentation of Comedie Francaise dual bill of comedies by Moliere: "L'Impromptu de Versailles," in one act, with decor and costumes by Mme. Suzanne Lalique, and "Les Fourberies de Scapin," in three acts, directed by Jacques Charon, with decor and costumes by Robert Hirsch. Opened Feb. 21, '61, at the City Center Theatre, N.Y.; $3.95 top.

The two short Moliere comedies, "L'Impromptu de Versailles" and "Les Fourberies de Scapin," which launched this latest visit of the Comedie Francaise, serve principally to whet the appetite for the more substantial pieces to follow in the repertory. The essential mildness of the dual bill is, however, offset to some extent by the company's performing excellence and stylish physical production.

The highpoint of the program, at least in terms of flamboyance, is the lively farce-of-intrigue, "Les Fourberies de Scapin" ("The Rogueries of Scapin"), wherein a commedia dell'arte type of valet, a brazen and brilliant rascal, unravels classicly complicated love affairs. Robert Hirsch doesn't so much perform the title role as he choreographs it.

Hirsch has the nimbleness and vitality (as well as the postures) of a ballet dancer, giving a colorful performance that is often appealing, as well as occasionally grotesque. It also calls attention to the fact that this is, after all, opera comique without music.

Greater unity of style is evident in the lesser roles, handled with charm and grace particularly by Michel Aumont, Micheline Boudet and Jacques Charon. The latter doubled as director, while Hirsch also designed the costumes and the light and airy seaport setting.

Though, au fond, a conversation piece, "L'Impromptu de Versailles," the program's curtain-raiser, is in some ways more exciting than the rough-and-tumble "Scapin." Here, in the guise of a not very successful rehearsal for one of his new plays, Moliere takes stage center and delivers opinions on the meaning of comedy, playwriting and critics. It is parochial, but because of that, it seems just that much more pertinent, wise and witty.

The piece is performed in finely orchestrated fashion as a series of lovely tableaux, with a minimum of movement. George Descrieres is excellent as Moliere, receiving excellent support from the cast of the company. Suzanne Lalique designed the costumes and decor. No director is credited.

The running English translation, available to City Center patrons via transistor earpieces, is adequate. The lady who does the translating hasn't much time to explore the more subtle nuances, but she does provide basic information, never intruding herself on the visual show. In effect, she never makes the mistake of competing with the Comedie players.

Show Out of Town

Philadelphia, Feb. 28.

Lewis Allen & Ben Edwards (in association with Joseph I. Levine) presentation of two-act comedy by Hugh Wheeler. Staged by John Gielgud; settings and lighting, Edwards; costumes, Mary Grant. Stars Jason Robards Jr., Hume Cronyn; features George Grizzard, George Voskovec, Ruth White, Elizabeth Wilson, Martin Gabel. Opened Feb. 27, '61, at the Locust Theatre, Philadelphia.

Jimmie Luton ..... Hume Cronyn
William Baker ..... Jason Robards Jr.

Basil Smythe ..... Martin Gabel
Hilda Rose ..... Elizabeth Wilson

Paul Stumpfig ..... George Voskovec

"Big Fish, Little Fish," the comedy by new playwright Hugh Wheeler, pictures in amusing detail the sad plight of an intellectual who is running into age and letting himself go to pot in a sort of shabby, lower middleclass bohemianism. The fine playing results in sharply sketched characters, although neither big fish nor little fish romp too far below the surface. The dialogue is topical and arrestingly offbeat and there is a story line that doesn't telegraph developments.

Jason Robards Jr. has the role of the brooding, half amused, half quizzical former college professor who is vegetating with his own little coterie in an intellectual cul-de-sac in New York's east 30's. This modest apartment is taken over by his friends, who devour his days and nights while they bicker for his interest with Beethoven and books, bridge and bed.

The first act holds promise as we meet this assortment of oddballs, each skillfully portrayed. But it is not sustained in the second half, which tends to repetition, and the ending is vaguely unsatisfactory. There is an attempt at something Chekhovian in the lowkey portrait of the destruction of a man by his friends, but there are few emotional peaks and only occasional flashes of real conflict.

The professor is saddled, however, with a fascinating parcel of hangers-on. Hume Cronyn plays a schoolteacher with more than a yearning for the ways of ancient Greece; Ruth White acts a suburban middleaged housewife escaping her humdrum Connecticut life through adultery in Manhattan, and Martin Gabel portrays a puffy, domineering ex-publisher resembling a road company Alexander Woollcott.

Nemesis comes into this close and futile circle in the person of George Grizzard as a successful writer who hopes to rescue the professor before atrophy sets in. He brings the offer of a transatlantic job that will enable our hero to give up his grubby grind in a publishing house and go off to Geneva. The play's crisis hinges on the ex-professor's decision to accept this post, and the disaster that faces his school of little fish who will no longer find his weaknesses a feeding ground.

Gabel and Cronyn have the showier roles and outdo Robards for attention. Grizzard is excellent as the sardonic friend who brings the dubious hope of heaven. George Voskovec as the wholly teutonic Swiss publisher, and Elizabeth Wilson as a party guest, sustain the top level of the performances.

John Gielgud's direction of this notably conversational work manages to keep the stage occupants from ever becoming too stationary.

Inside Stuff—Legit

There's one American among the 31 students of the new National Theatre School of Canada, located in Montreal except for July and August when it moves to Stratford, Ont., during the run there of the annual Shakespearean Festival. The American is Martha Buhe, who's acted professionally in Toronto legit and tv for the last year or so. She's giving up pro employment to attend the school, which does not permit its students to work in the theatre outside the school during the three-year course, unless granted special permission.

Tuition at the school is $700 yearly and there are 17 English-speaking and 14 French-speaking students ranging in age from 17 to 24. French-born James de B. Domville, who co-authored and produced the longrun Canadian presentation, "My Fur Lady," is administrative director. Jean Gascon, of Le Theatre du Nouveau Monde, is executive director. Powys Thomas, formerly associated with the London Old Vic, is artistic director, and Michel St. Denis, founder of the Old Vic Theatre School, is artistic advisor.

Robert Downing's play, "The Limbo Kid," has been voted play-of-the-year by the Southeast Theatre Conference, an organization of nearly 100 tributary theatres, and will be performed in many of the group's theatres during the coming year. Downing, who is production stage manager of "Camelot," hopes to attend some of the premieres. Play was done last season by Albert McCleery on his CBS-TV Workshop.

With a cast of well over 60 the all-colored partly-amateur African musical, "King Kong," has reached London. Though by no means the sensation that advance publicity had suggested, it has enough rhythm and punch to rate as a hit. A longish run will be needed as Jack Hylton has had to invest a lot of coin in shipping the cast and production to London. Broadway may also be interested in "King Kong."

Jazz musical stems mainly from an amateur stable and though there are a handful of seasoned professionals in the cast the amateur influence still predominates and often shows through the skin of the production. It must not therefore be judged entirely from the standards of such slick Yank musicals as "West Side Story," to which it has some affinity. Its greatest asset is a bursting rhythmic vitality which makes sock impact from a cast that is childishly anxious to be liked.

The story is based on a true one and is a simple enough "meller." King Kong is the hero of a Johannesburg township, the fighter who becomes a champ, but falls on evil times and finally strangles the flighty Delilah who has double-crossed him with a local gangster. Storyline is often bogged down by an unnecessary device, whereby a small bunch of washerwomen on the side of the stage tell the narrative, which is then acted out. This produces a plodding atmosphere which wars with the visual liveliness. Harry Bloom's book very rarely touches on apartheid or political implications and if he has any "message" it is very heavily disguised. Actors are less at ease in delivering lines than when they go into song and dance which, happily, is often.

The concerted dancing is the most fascinating, though a knife dance from half a dozen "heavies" and a peculiar gumboot dance which stems from a Zulu tribal dance are both memorable. There are other scenes which stand out, notably the smooth way in which a wedding ceremony turns from gaiety to the horror of murder, a moment when a youngster (Lemmy "Special" Mabaso) plays a penny whistle and enchantingly pipes and dances his way into an ice cream barrow, and a beautifully produced scene at a bus queue.

The music and the songs veer from indigenous African to Tin Pan Alley influence. The lyrics are not so hot but the music of Todd Matshikiza has a vibrant throb that keeps the theatre constantly alive. "Tshotsholosa," a traditional road workers song, had little relevance to the plot but is a standout sequence and "The Earth Turns Over," "It's a Wedding," "Damn Him" and a rousing lusty song led by two of the principals and the chorus called "Back of the Moon" are tops.

Nathan Mdledle is a powerful, impressive figure as the dumb but likeable ox of a pug, who gets caught up in tragedy and he has a fair voice and Peggy Phango as the keeper of the local shabeen (speakeasy) who is his mistress scores with a couple of songs and has a striking personality. Joe Mogotsi plays the villain with evil aplomb and Stephen Moloi, Patience Gowabe, Sophia MgCina and Bennett Masango also score. Some of the other thesps are less skilled.

But despite stout work by several of the leading players, it is the chorus, exuberantly directed by Leon Gluckman, which wraps the show up into worthwhile entertainment. Stanley Glasser, the musical director, and Arnold Dover, responsible for the terping, can also take a bow with Arthur Goldreich, whose simple effective settings and gaily brash costumes help much towards the atmosphere.

"King Kong" is riddled with faults when closely examined, but it is a promising start for the native Africans and an evening that theatregoers will certainly remember long after more expert shows have pallidly faded from the theatrical scene. And it cries out zestfully as a potential film hit.

"The Connection," which, by its lengthy run off-Broadway, labels itself as one of the theatrical freaks of our age, will decidedly not repeat its success in the commercial theatre of London. It might prove more acceptable in an offbeat, experimental theatre-club, but, even so, its complete lack of dramatic form, its drab, downbeat theme and

DUSTY SCRIPTS INTO NOVELS

'Director May Cut for Staging Reasons, Army Not Censoring Plays'—Gen. Lee

Exception is taken by the U.S. Army to a recent story describing cuts made in legit plays produced at German posts for GI audiences. Major-General R. V. Lee, from Washington, expresses the fear that American playwrights, or the Dramatists Guild of the Authors League of America, or script agents may be reluctant to make leasing deals though "The U.S. Army is one of the largest theatrical producers in the world today."

A line in the original story (by Hazel Guild) from Frankfurt, "the plays are rewritten to give the soldiers 'pure' entertainment" is disputed. Quote, "Plays are not rewritten in U.S. Army, Europe. Minor cuts or alterations by the directors are made on the basis of practicability and necessity for the sake of the production, as accomplished by directors throughout the world."

It was not "Hellzapoppin" from the States with its title de-profaned to "Heckespoppin" but rather a calculated spoof of the old Olsen & Johnson roughhouse revue developed as a parody including the title. Latter was interpreted by the VARIETY correspondent as a "restrictive alteration."

The cancellation of "Mister Roberts" occurred 11 years ago and General Lee suggests that it was unfairly included in a roundup story purporting to give current facts. Nor is there a blanket ban of works by Tennessee Williams. Army records show five performances of "Portrait of a Madonna," 12 productions of "Glass Menagerie" for 57 performances total and, just this month, a performance of "Streetcar Named Desire."

(Many news reports over many years in various areas have reiterated the general point that material is banned at military posts for various reasons, justified by military, cultural and local susceptibility considerations. The hesitation to stage "Stalag 17" in Germany is admitted in the overseas comments to General Lee though this work was done in Berlin during 1959 and is scheduled for Bremerhaven in 1961—Ed.)

Judgment Faulty But See Gateway at Edinburgh Surviving Nonetheless

Edinburgh, Feb. 28.

Doubts about the future of the Gateway Theatre here have been squashed by the new chairman, Moultrie Kelsall, actor and producer. After a meeting of the company's directors, he declared: "Although our financial position is none too good, I have no fears for the company's future. We will carry on."

Gateway has been facing dwindling attendances and other losses. According to Kelsall, the cutting short of the 1959-60 season and an almost complete change of membership were "the greatest mistakes made by the company." The shuttering of the theatre after Christmas gave the erroneous impression that the theatre "was finished," he said.

He feels that another tactical error was in the clearing-out of the former acting company. "This change was too sudden. People became fond of actors and actresses in a company, and we must re-establish that link," he said.

Kelsall also believes that the Gateway Theatre here has failed to attract sufficient numbers of young, new theatregoers, and has lost its "hard core" of old supporters. Efforts will now be made to bring back some of the older customers and to attract more of the younger set.

Dave Willis, Scot comedian, opened here (20) in a new comedy about a vaude performer, "The Comic." Archie Duncan and Lennox Milne are pacted for "The Country Boy," Irish comedy by John Murphy, March 6.

Plan Stage Version Of 'Castle,' Novel by Kafka

A New York production of an English adaptation of Franz Kafka's novel, "Castle," is planned by actor Michael Shillo. The legit and television rights to the property have been acquired for the U.S., Canada and Britain. Shillo intends producing or co-producing the work, in which he'll appear with his actress-wife Aviva Gor. Both were in the cast of the Broadway production of "Rashomon."

Dr. Harry Zohn, of Brandeis Univ., is the English adaptor of the work, which was previously dramatized in German by Dr. Max Brod. Shillo hasn't decided whether to produce the drama on or off Broadway.

Cash to Foster Drama From Tax On P.D. Scripts

Buenos Aires, Feb. 21.

With the support of the National Art Fund, which disposes of the proceeds of a 10% tax on all works in the public domain produced in theatres and public spots in Argentina, "Argentores," the local ASCAP, will encourage and reward legit production in 1961.

A $400 award has been instituted for the best dramatic comedy and for the best comedy; $250 each for the best interpretations by an actor and an actress, for the best stage designs and the best direction. Another $400 award for the best two-act unpublished play, of any genre, with a $1,250 contribution towards the production costs. The five-man jury should also select up to five unpublished plays of any genre, of 2 or more acts, for which the Fund will grant production loans of up to $2,000 each, to be amortized over 5 years with 3% interest per annum.

The jury will also select three plays by authors who live in the Provinces, granting them loans of $625 for production purposes. The contest is open to native authors and others with at least 5 years residence in the country.

'MARRIAGE-GO-ROUND' CLICKS WITH MEXICO

Mexico City, Feb. 28.

Robert W. Lerner and Ernesto Alonso production of "Marriage-Go-Round" (known here as "Carrousel del Amor") at the Insurgents Theatre seems good for a run. Public and critical acceptance is high for the Leslie Stevens work which here has film actor Pedro Armendariz and legit actress Marga Lopez in the roles. Kitty de Hoyos as the Swede gives a better performance than most of her recent efforts.

Comedy has been given an effective translation by Bertha Maldonado and J. Luis Ibanez.

Elect Tom Kilpatrick Interim Veep of ATPAM

Thomas Kilpatrick, with 219 votes to 76 for his opponent George Banyai, has been elected vice-president of the Assn. of Theatrical Pressagents & Managers. Kilpatrick and Banyai were nominated when William Fields automatically advanced from that office to presidency of the union as successor to Harold Goldberg, who died last Dec. 24. A special election was held by the union and mail ballots returned by the membership were tabulated last week.

Fields and Kilpatrick are serving on an interim basis. Their terms expire next June 10.

'BELINDA' RE-DO AS SALVAGE TACTIC

By JESSE GROSS

The adaptation potential of literary properties appears endless. In that respect, a New York literary agency with a mountain of old original plays in its catalog is exploring the possibility of giving some of the works new life by converting them into novels.

The firm, American Play Co., is spearheading its play-into-novel project with Elmer Harris' "Johnny Belinda," a Broadway entry of the 1940-41 season. The drama, which had a New York run of 321 performances, was subsequently made into a film in 1948 and then adapted for television presentation 10 years later. It's now been novelized but, as yet, not in English.

The original novelization of the play is in German, having been adapted by Prof. Walter Firner, who obtained the rights two years ago to present a German-language production of the play in Germany. Sheldon Abend, who's been directing the business activities of the American Play Co. since the death last October of the firm's longtime president, John W. Rumsay, approached Firner with the idea of adapting the play into a novel, which he did. The book was published in Germany last November by Kurt Desch and, according to Abend, has since been translated into French.

As yet, there's been no deal made for the publication of the novel in London Gallery Hoots 'Connection'

London, Feb. 28.

Opening of "The Connection," long-run off-Broadway play, at the Duke of York's Theatre (22) created a violent rumpus which hit the newspapers front pages. The gallery, and some members of the audience in the stalls, took a pronounced dislike to this offbeat Jack Gelber play about "junkies." There was unrest almost from the beginning. It flared up after the interval, with the galleryites making frequent loud derisive interruptions and entering into slugging matches with other more polite patrons.

The curtain came down to a great deal of booing and the rumpus continued outside the theatre for over an hour, with strong arguments between theatregoers, some demanding their money back. There was even mild scuffling and fisticuffs among some of the outraged customers, for whom "The Connection" stank in the nostrils.

Impressive Peter Daubeney, with British reserve, deplored the audience's attitude and said: "I've put on 80 shows in the West End, but I've never seen such a disgusting exhibition. If it goes on I shouldn't be surprised to see every West End theatre close its gallery."

Seymour Hacker, American manager of the show, was more vociferous. He described the hecklers as "misbegotten creeps and filthy scavengers" and said that if the interruptions continued he'd contemplate stationing "hidden persuaders" to deal with the troublemakers. General attitude of the critics was one of coolness to the play, but everyone hit out at the behavior of the audience.

Living the Part

There's apparently no limit to method acting. Colleen Dewhurst, who's been playing a pregnant wife in the Broadway production of "All the Way Home" for several months, isn't kidding any more.

The actress, whose husband, George C. Scott, is appearing on Broadway in "The Wall," has notified her employers that she's an expectant mother.

Zeal Sold Tickets, But Scranton Wonders About 'Quality' of Shows

By SID BENJAMIN

Scranton, Feb. 28.

So how's the road doing?

"Wonderful," Ben Levy, president of the Broadway Theatre League of Scranton, will tell you. "We signed up 3,000 subscribers this season. We're going to make it 4,500 next year."

Other volunteers in the project, which brought back the legitimate stage to this area after a long absence, find it easier to restrain their enthusiasm.

"It all depends on what shows they give us," came from one unattributable source. "Lots of people didn't like what we got this year. Maybe they'll be happier with 'Fiorello'."

"Fiorello," prize package of the 1960-61 deal, will climax the first season at the Masonic Temple March 4 and 5. It was originally only a one-night booking. At that time, nobody expected show-starved Scrantonians to come up with $27 or $34 apiece for the four-show season in such numbers.

That created trouble, right off the bat. The sellout of the 1,800-seat Masonic Temple made it necessary to schedule additional 6 P.M. performances for "Once Upon a Mattress," "Andersonville Trial" and "Pleasure of His Company." The travel-weary performers, hardly thrilled over the additional burden, didn't exactly sparkle in either show. Some, of course, were more successful than others in coping with acoustics problems in the big hall.

Scheduling of "Mattress" as the opener was unfortunate. Many complained they couldn't hear Imogene Coca, who was hardly belting out the songs in the Carol Burnett manner. Others squirmed at the fantasy. Some were disappointed when the show failed to live up to its sexy title.

Then came "Andersonville Trial." Brian Donlevy showed up, and re-

Ragotzy, Louis Girard To Share Barn Staging

The Barn Theatre, Augusta, Mich., will have two directors during its upcoming summer season, scheduled to begin May 26. Barn operator Jack Ragotzy will stage most of the shows, but because of a Broadway commitment he'll be unable to finish out the season at the spot. Staging during the latter part of the summer, which will run until Labor Day, will be handled by Louis Girard.

Ragotzy has been set as director of Arthur Carter's comedy, "Hip Hip Hooray," scheduled to go into rehearsal in mid-August for an October opening on Broadway under the production auspicies of Lynn Loesser.

Detroit Choice: Guild or Fisher, But 'Reciprocal'

Detroit, Feb. 28.

Detroit theatre-goers will have their choice of two subscription plans next season. The Theatre Guild—American Theatre Society, which has been in operation here 22 years, will offer its subscribers a total of nine shows. The new Fisher Playgoers' plan also will offer nine shows, but not necessarily the same nine as the Guild.

Guild subscribers will see shows in whatever theatres are chosen by the producers. The Fisher subscribers will see all the shows at the new Fisher Theatre now being constructed.

A conference between Joseph Nederlander, representing the Fisher plan, and Hugh Southern, manager of the Guild group, worked out this agreement: Guild ticket holders will have choice of seats for the first week of a play's run in all theatres, except at the Fisher. Subscribers to the Fisher plan will have choice of seats at the Fisher at all times, while getting choice of seats in the second or third weeks of shows at other theatres.

MIKE KAVANAGH TO INDEPENDENT OFFICE

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Mike Kavanagh, midwest rep for Michael Todd Theatres and manager of the Todd and Cinestage houses in Chi, has been named to replace the late Harold Goldberg as head of the Independent Booking Office.

Kavanagh is winding up his affairs in Chicago and is expected in New York this week.

Symposium on Lighting, N.Y. Coliseum Next Week

A special symposium on theatre lighting will be a feature of the third National Lighting Exposition and World Lighting Forum opening next Sunday (5) and running through Wednesday (8) at the Coliseum, N.Y. Participating in a final day symposium on "Esthetics of Lighting Pertaining to Entertainment" will be Broadway lighting designer Jean Rosenthal, Century Lighting Co. consultant Rollo G. Williams and Dr. Joel E. Rubin, director of the theatrical lighting division of Kliegl Bros.

Robert W. Dowling, Broadway producer-realtor, will moderate the two-hour entertainment symposium. Abe Feder, another Broadway lighting designer, will represent the U.S. in a discussion of "World Lighting and its Effects."

Inadvertently omitted from the list of house managers in last week's VARIETY was Bill Blair of the Nixon Theatre, Pittsburgh.

Anzacs' National Theatre Acquires Film House As Future Flagship

Melbourne, Feb. 28.

A large film house, empty for some two years, has been saved from destruction and actually diverted to live entertainment by the prompt personal action of the Lord Mayor here, Councillor Bernard Evans.

Village Theatre, Toorak, which seats 1,750, has been purchased by the Lord Mayor for an undisclosed sum, prior to its scheduled auction. Later he is to resell it to the National Theatre Movement here, for whom he acted in the sale as guarantor.

The National Theatre Movement was founded 25 years ago by Gertrude Johnson, O.B.E., an ex-Covent Garden singer, who is the movement's honorary director. Its productions heretofore have been staged mainly in a small theatre, originally a church hall, which has borne name of National Theatre.

Casts have been largely amateur.

A highlight was last year's original musical called "Strike It Rich." Later this month the National Theatre Movement is staging a full-scale production of "The Student Prince" at the 3,000-seater St. Kilda Palais here, for which Sadler's Wells tenor John Larsen, who last year toured Australia as Danilo in "The Merry Widow," has been brought back.

Movement administers three training schools—for opera, ballet and drama—and for these receives annual subsidy from the State Government of £A.8,500.

Miss Johnson told VARIETY that extensive alterations will have to be made to the ex-film theatre. Present stage will be totally inadequate and dressing rooms are nonexistent. She said an appeal will shortly be launched for £A.150,000.

She anticipated it would be another six to eight months before new theatre was opened.

Play Saved, But Not Investment

'Miracle Of 44th Street' Despite Many Friendly Gestures Eats Into Remaining Capital

"All the Way Home" has been chipping away at its investment to hang on at the Belasco Theatre, N. Y. The play, which was reprieved following posted notice to close after its first five performances at the theatre, had used up $125,997 of its $150,000 capitalization as of the end of its ninth week on Broadway last Jan. 28.

During the nine-week period, the Tad Mosel adaptation of James Agee's novel, "A Death In the Family," registered operating losses on all but one of the frames. Running expenses were substantially reduced six of the nine stanzas as a result of certain salary cuts, royalty waivers and the elimination of the usual office fee. A reduction in theatre rental was also instituted in January.

Wage cuts included reductions in salary from $400 to $275 for the company and general manager and from $275 to $200 for the pressagent. The author royalty, less than 10% of the gross but slightly higher than the basic Dramatists Guild minimum of 5% of the first $5,000 gross, 7½% of the next $2,000 and 10% of the balance, was waived entirely five of the nine weeks.

Arthur Penn waived his director royalty of 3% of the gross six of the weeks when the management's fee of 1% of the gross and office expense of $300 weekly were also dropped. David Hays' royalty as set and lighting designer was also reduced those weeks from $75 to $50. There was also a hefty reduction in January in the rentals for electrical and sound equipment.

The Fred Coe-Arthur Cantor presentation, of which Cantor is also pressagent, cost $100,743 to produce. The play dropped $5,533 on a two-and-a-half-week out-of-town tryout, which brought the cost of opening it on Broadway to $106,276. The operating loss for the first nine weeks, after the deduction of a $1,503 operating profit for the frame ending Dec. 31, was $19,721. During the nine-week period grosses ranged from $14,352 to $26 045.

The financial condition of the production, currently in its 14th week at the Belasco, isn't figured to have improved much in February although with expenditures reduced substantially an operating profit may have been earned on some of the weeks.

'WEST SIDE STORY' SCORES IN ISRAEL

Tel Aviv, Feb. 28.

"West Side Story," re-produced here with an all-American cast, mostly participants of the Broadway show, is a success. Premiere tickets were up to $10, the highest ever paid in Israel. It was sold out in advance and so are the next 11 performances. This is most unusual here, where people buy theatre tickets mostly on a "pay and get in" basis.

Reviews were generally good, though some critics found the love scenes over-sentimental. The "America" song and dance, with Yvonne Othon playing Anita, brought the audience down.

Tony was played by Don Grilley, Maria—Jan Canada (who was the understudy of Carol Lawrence in New York), Riff, the leader of the Jets—Thomas Hasson and Bernardo, the leader of the Sharks—Jay Norman. Marlene Dell was Anybodys and Albert Ottenheimer was Doc.

Gerald Freedman did excellent on direction. Lee Becker supervised the choreography and Joseph Lewis conducted. Staged at the Habima Theatre, which is participating as impresario in the production.

After the premiere a reception was given to the entire cast at the Z.O.A. House, where the Jets and the Sharks danced "hora" into the early hours.

Producers of the show are Giora Godik of Tel Aviv and Pete Kameron of New York, who are later taking the whole troupe to Western Europe.

Minnesota Town Raising 45G To Build Strawhat

A 300-seat summer theatre is planned for Alexandria, in western Minnesota, providing the community can raise $45,000 for the purchase of porperty and construction of a playhouse. The St. Cloud (Minn.) State College is to be associated in the operation of the theatre, which is contemplated for erection on the Park Lane Country Club property on the shore of Lake Le Home Dieu, near Alexandria.

Certificates of indebtedness are being sold to obtain the funds necessary to purchase the desired plot. Dr. Arthur Houseman, theatre director at the State College, would supervise the productions at the Alexandria theatre, which would open next June.

Kerz Slaps Back At Ionesco For N.Y. 'Rhino' Rap

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

Your recent story from Paris, headlined "Ionesco Whacks Broadway 'Rhinoceros,'" is interesting in view of the following facts:

I spent two weeks in Paris in June 1960 translating the Broadway version of the play, which I edited back into French. Ionesco checked every line, on every page, to compare it with his favorite Dusseldorf version. His verdict was that it was better than the French version. It is important to know that Ionesco understands neither English or German, so he could not possibly have been misled by mine and director Joseph Anthony's interpretation.

Ionesco never saw even a preview of the Broadway production nor any complete runthrough. He left New York one week before "Rhinoceros" opened here, against my expressed wish and advice.

The reason he gave for leaving was that he could not work in New York. It is my impression that he was panicky since some of my "best friends" advised him that the production was in great "trouble" artistically and financially.

Shortly after the opening, Ionesco's agent handed me a cable saying, "Very surprised not to have received any thanks and congratulations for my Broadway success. Signed Ionesco."

My answer explaining this lack of courtesy on my part was, "Why did you leave the cast and director without saying goodbye or any display of encouragement, and why did you not send at least a formal cable of good wishes to the cast of 'Rhinoceros' for the opening."

"Congratulatory telegrams were sent to the cast and the producer by Jean-Louis Barrault, Karl Heinz Stroux and Laurence Olivier. I am also embarrassed that you have not so far acknowledged my own efforts to make your debut on Broadway a resounding success despite your lack of cooperation to help me with the promotion of the project."

Ionesco has not lent a sympathetic ear to my repeated pleas to reduce his royalties or even a deferment for the first few weeks, while the show is still young and growing.

Ionesco, it must be remembered, is the author of several articles and essays, saying that his work is greatly influenced by the Marx Brothers and Abbott and Costello and he learned more from them than from Ibsen or Chekov.

Ionesco has repeatedly stated in interviews that "Rhinoceros" is by no means to be regarded as a political play and that it is a play against the herd instinct, and that "the essence of drama is comedy." When asked by television interviewer Mike Wallace why he ridicules human tragedy, his answer was, "The lack of humor with which the theatre treats emotional conflicts has always amused me."

The Dusseldorf production was

246 Gifts Provide $4,435 at Williamstown

Williamstown, Mass., Feb. 28.

Williamstown Summer Theatre has raised more than half of the $8,000 it is seeking to assure reopening next summer, for the seventh season. Responding to a letter sent 4,600 persons, 246 gifts totaling $4,435 were received. The largest contribution was $50.

The strawhat, which operates in the Adams Memorial Theatre on the Williams College campus, finished the 1960 season with a deficit of some $7,000. It expects to open again this year.

'Miracle Worker' Net $208,470 On 125G Investment

"Miracle Worker" had netted $208,470 on its $125,000 investment as of last Jan. 28. Of that amount, $170,000 has been distributed, with 47.6% going to the backers and the balance to the management, director and author. Anne Bancroft, who withdrew from her costarring assignment opposite Patty Duke last Feb. 4, got 1% of the profits as a running expense, besides 6% of the gross.

Suzanne Pleshette is now costarring with Miss Duke. She's one of three actresses who debuted last month in the role originated by Miss Bancroft. The other two, Barbara Barrie and Anna Massey, are handling the assignment in separate productions. Miss Barrie is appearing with Rona Gale in the presentation the Theatre Guild American Repertory Co. is sending overseas for the State Dept., and Miss Massey is appearing with Janina Faye in the British production, which began a pre-London tryout Feb. 7.

The repertory presentation preemed last week at the Royal Poinciana Playhouse, Palm Beach, and plays one more performance tomorrow night (Thurs.) at the National Theatre, Washington, prior to embarking on its overseas trek. As for the Broadway production, the net profit includes income from the sale of the film rights to a United Artists-financed corporation formed by the play's producer, Fred Coe, author William Gibson and director Arthur Penn.

The picture deal involves a $150,000 down payment, plus a payoff equal to 10% of the gross on profitable weeks up to a maximum of $400,000. Of that amount, the production's cut, after the deduction of 10% commissions, will total $144,000. Business at the Playhouse, N.Y., where the drama is currently in its 71st week, has dropped substantially in recent weeks.

Off-Broadway Reviews

Two For Fun

Madison Productions, in association with Marshall Migatz, presentation of two-act revue conceived by Ruth Mata and Eugene Hari. Staged by Mata and Hari; music composed and arranged, Lothar Perl; costumes, Freddy Wittop; written material, Jack Woodford and Peter Goode; music for "Lady Takes a Shower" and "Have Gun, Get Gold" composed and arranged, Silvio Masciarelli. Stars Ruth Mata, Eugene Hari; features Lothar Perl. Opened Feb. 13, '61, at the Madison Avenue Playhouse, N.Y.; $4.75 top weekends, $3.90 weekdays.

In "Two for Fun," at the Madison Avenue Playhouse, N.Y., Ruth Mata and Eugene Hari have designed some inventive bits of colorful pantomime to comment comically on various aspects of modern life. Though their satire hasn't much sting, it seeks out its targets with skill and polish that is easy on the eye and fun to explore.

Most striking is the precision with which the old pro team performs. The routines, some by both and others as solos, have been conceived and staged by themselves. Special music was composed, arranged and played by Lothar Perl. Whether performing in a saga of western villainy, as musicians at Carnegie Hall, or singly as a Vic Tanny type health enthusiast, a lady going through her pre-sleep vanities or any number of other selections, Mata and Hari are smooth and accomplished performers.

Written material, which acts as background for some of the scenes, is by Jack Woodford and Peter Good and is spoken off-stage by Simon Sadoff. This verbal accompaniment adds little to the effort as it is not particularly clever and tends to distract from the performers, instead of setting the scenes as it is apparently designed to do. In most cases, explication is not required. Pieces speak for themselves.

With the exception of Freddy Wittop's clever and simple costumes, Mata and Hari perform with only an occasional prop and practically no scenery save the concert maskings. Although "Two for Fun" may be unornamented and not particularly enlightening, it is an imaginative and generally delightful presentation which children as well as adults can enjoy.

Walk-up

Eleanor Horn & William Holzman presentation of two-act drama by Gerald Sanford. Staged by Matt Cimber; settings, Horn Griner; music, Steve Gutstein. Martin James. Opened Feb. 23, '61, at the Provincetown Playhouse, N.Y.; $3.90 top Friday Saturday nights, $2.50 weeknights.

Jim Coffee	John A. Topa
Mrs. Perdente	Selma Oesthorpe
Mr. Perdente	James Eric
Frankie	Shelby Taylor
Johnnie	Carol Guilford
Boy	William Farrell
Mae Darland	Mary Tahmin
Charlie	Sam Matarasso
Vanessa	Joanna Miles
Joey	Matt Cimber
Aubrey	Don Phelps
Prostitute	Barbara Malin
Mother	Elizabeth McMillan
Eileen	Sheila Barry
Billy	Robin Narke
Donald Duck	James MacRostie

Loneliness, despair and pursuit of elusive happiness keynote Gerald Sanford's earnest cataloging of the levels of human condition in his new drama "Walk-up" at the Provincetown Playhouse. What ensues, however, is not a searching look into deep-felt emotions, but an all-shots-called melodrama in a Tenement House. Scene after scene yields examples of human misery, graphically, insensitively and superficially.

Each of its four scenes is devoted to the inhabitants of one of four apartments, and their visitors. Involved also are some off-stage voices, a flashback scene and a commentator-janitor a la "Our Town."

The cast, which is almost uniformly fine, at times manages to instill the commonplace and trite dialog with touching sincerity. In the first and least strident scene, Carol Guilford as the orphan, teen-age bride, longing for security and Shelby Taylor as her restless young husband who wistfully dreams of joining the Navy, are poignantly right.

In the second scene, Mary Tahmin scores as the girl in-the-family-way, despite some nervous mugging and eyerolling and Sam Matarasso is acceptable as the good guy who offers her salvation through marriage. In the third vignette, Joanna Miles makes a pathetic asthma sufferer, Matt Cimber, who also directed, and Don Phelps are okay as her brutish brother and dying lover, respectively. Sheila Barry, in the fourth scene, is effective as the girl-gone-bad after her fiancee died in an accident on their wedding day, and Robert Narke as her bumbling, inarticulate sailor-admirer gives an appealing performance. John A. Topa as the commentator-janitor is convincing.

Cimber's direction is often erratic and Horn Griner's sets are perfunctorily adequate.

A drama by the same title was written by Martin Jones, circa 1940, and apparently expired via summer tryout in 1941. Someone should have grounded this one too.

To Damascus

Angela Anderson, in association with Marta Byer, presentation of two-act drama by August Strindberg, translated by Sam E. Davidson, adapted by Martha Winston. Staged by Byer; settings and lighting, Peter E. Stone; costumes, F. Anthony Benko; music composition and arrangement, Coleridge T. Perginson; production associates, Marion and Judson Todd. Features George W. Jones, Dolores Dorn-Heft. Maria Cambarelli. Opened Feb. 14, '61, at Theatre East, N.Y.; $4.50 top weekends, $3.50 weekdays.

Confessor	Guy Sothern
Stranger	George W. Jones
Lady	Dolores Dorn-Heft
Beggar	Jack Waltzer
Doctor	Leigh Wharton
Caesar	Jack Waltzer
Woman Servant	Naomi Sherwood
Man Servant	Guy Sothern
Mother	Maria Gambarelli
Abbess	Naomi Sherwood

August Strindberg, a tormented man, pours out his agony in an expressionistic pattern that has the audience at Theatre East, N.Y., suffering right along with him. Never before produced, "To Damascus" is a ponderous collection of often-disjointed incidents, presented in a heavy-handed manner which provides no letup from its thesis that life is never-ending misery.

Many of the characteristic Strindberg symbols are involved. In fact, there is little to distinguish this one from several other dramas the playwright turned out during his extreme despair. Here is unhappy marriage, a wandering truth seeker, insanity, religious doubt.

The central character, intensely portrayed by George W. Jones, is a lost and miserable man who spends his days wandering in a self-created hell. His encounters are the substance of the play. There are several interesting characters. A beautiful and sympathetic woman, played expressively by Dolores Dorn-Heft; her tyrannical husband, corrosively etched by Leigh Wharton; a haunting beggar and strange madman, both rendered demonically by Jack Waltzer; the girl's pious mother, played to little advantage by former Roxy ballerina Maria Gambarelli. Guy Sothern is an eloquent Confessor. Naomi Sherwood ineffective as an Abbess.

Associate producer Marta Byer has directed with sporadic impact within one of the most difficult playing areas hereabouts. Peter E. Stone's lighting plays dimly and heavily on his sparse settings.

F. Anthony Benko's costumes serve. Coleridge T. Perkingson's music is mood-evoking though repetitious.

Concert Review

N.Y. Philharmonic

(With Thomas Schippers, Leon Fleisher)

A performance not worthy of the N.Y. Philharmonic and conductor Thomas Schippers was heard last weekend in Carnegie Hall. The orchestra played sloppily and aroused the impression of the members being tired from too much extracurricular activity. Schippers had very little exciting or outstanding to offer. His interpretation of the Bartok Concerto for Orchestra sounded dull and uninteresting. Wagner's Tannhaeuser ouverture lacked passionate expression built. Schippers seemed bent on stretching and pushing.

Soloist, pianist Leon Fleisher, chose Rachmaninoff's "Rhapsodie on a Theme of Paganini" as his vehicle and though his playing was neat and efficient, his tone was often too percussive and glassy to make the audience relax as has often been the case when he played Beethoven and Mozart concerti, in which he is a master.

B'way Building On Bargain Boom; Sellouts Limited to Five Musicals; 'Horn' $20,993 in 6, 'Rhino' $34,670

Broadway brightened last week as most shows registered increases for the second successive stanza. Over 30% of the 28 regular Main Stem entries were operating on a bargain basis. Eight had discount ducats in circulation and another reduced its overall b.o. scale.

The sellouts included "Camelot," "Do Re Mi," "Irma La Douce," "Sound of Music" and "Wildcat," the latter having laid off the previous fortnight. The "Camelot" gross was cut by $504, representing another partial deduction to cover an overall refund of about $5,000 to patrons unable to attend the Feb. 3-4 performances because of the snowstorm.

The longruning "My Fair Lady" was the latest to join the discount presentations with the price cut, exclusive of the first 10 rows, permitting the purchase only of $8.05 seats for $4.60 Monday-Thursday eves and $4.60 Wednesday matinee seats for $2.90.

Canadian Ballet $21,411 In 4th Week in Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 28.

The National Ballet of Canada grossed a good $21,411 last week, its fourth at the 1,525-seat Royal Alexandra Theatre here. The potential gross capacity was $29,000 at a $3 top weeknights and $3.50 weekend evenings.

The previous week's take was $19,707.

Puerto Rican Festival Beset by Labor Spats And Bankroll Troubles

By AL DINHOFER

San Juan, Feb. 28.

The survival of the annual San Juan Drama Festival current at the Tapia Theatre here, and other projects of the recently formed Theatre Development Corp. (TDC), is "still undetermined," according to producer Barry Yellen. Money and labor are the major problems. The labor difficulties involve five mainland and one Puerto Rican union. The financial hurdle requires the sale of more common stock in TDC, he says.

The continuation of the San Juan Drama Festival, plus the proposed program of year-round events including a series of musical comedies, opera, drama in Spanish and zarzuelas (traditional Spanish operettas depends, to begin with, on settlement of disputes between the Puerto Rico Asn. of Artists & Technicians and the Associated Actors & Artistes of America. "At this point we can't determine exactly where we stand," the producer explains.

"We don't know if we will be able to proceed with the the full year's program.

If Yellen continues with plans to present a musical comedy season at the Univ. of Puerto Rico auditorium (July 17-Aug. 12), he may face the same problems that arose between PRAAT and Actors Equity several weeks ago when his Festival opened with "Auntie Mame." He observes, "There is little reason to believe it will work this time without complete agreement between unions involved."

The opera season scheduled for Sept. 12-23 involves the American Guild of Musical Artists, also a member of the 4 A's, so the same problem exists. One of the complications, Yellen reveals, is that talent for musicals must be booked months in advance. Opera stars are currently being booked for their 1962-3 seasons. Delay of union settlements will mean delay of booking. And performers may not be available at a later date.

The second factor which will determine the fate of TDC, is the sale of the balance of about $30,000 in common stock, according to the producer. TDC must sell at least that amount of stock by March 30, to put into effect the first segment of a Commonwealth Government loan, amounting to $25,000. The second segment of the $50,000 loan would be received by TDC in August.

If the common stock is not sold, the loan will not be forthcoming, and TDC will be unable to finance its annual program of stage events. Unfortunately, Yellen points out, the strike at the Tapia Theatre that accompanied the opening of "Auntie Mame" may influence the sale of common stock. The Gypsy Rose Lee-starrer closed in the red. Still another deterrent to the financing of the projects was that clearance to sell common stock was not granted by the Securities & Exchange Commission until Jan. 20.

"When we started this season," Yellen declares, "We were counting on a profit from the current Drama Festival. But we will take a loss instead. Profits from the Festival were to be applied toward the opera season, and opera always loses money."

In essence, if the stock is not sold by March 30, or the unions do not reach a settlement by next May, when contractual agreements are expected to be completed, "We will have to dissolve our organization completely," Yellen concludes.

Road Fair; 'Hostage' $24,968, Chi; 'Majority' Record $49,759, in St. L.; 'Girl' 50G, N.H.; 'Raisin' $33,918, St. P.

The road was satisfactory again last week. "Fiorello," in the bow-out stanza of a fortnight's run at the O'Keefe Centre, Toronto, was the top grosser for the second straight week. "Happiest Girl in the World" made a fast start in its New Haven break-in.

The American Shakespeare Festival Theatre's production of "Midsummer Night's Dream" ended its tour last Saturday (25) in Washington.

Information Agency Activates Presentation O'Seas—'Abe Lincoln In Illinois' a Taipei Wow

Washington, Feb. 28.

United States Information Agency is sending its overseas libraries published editions of American plays, and assisting local amateur theatre groups in obtaining performance rights. Last year, USIA obtained rights for 65 play performances. (Royalty terms to American dramatists undisclosed.)

Performances range from play readings in USIA centers to full stage productions in local theatres. The Taipei Drama Club presented Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" on his birthday. Production was hailed by the China News as a "triumph" for the Club.

Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" was presented in Taipei, directed by a USIA officer, and in Tripoli, where a Libyan viewer commented: 'You could hardly have made a better choice than 'Our Town.' It shows American life in a healthy and favorable light."

In Dacca, Pakistan, a cast of Pakistani and Americans presented Wilder's one-act play, "The Happy Journey to Trenton" as part of a special drama workshop.

American exchange professors and specialists sometimes direct local amateur groups in play productions. Robert E. Gard, director of the Idea Theatre of U. of Wisconsin, supervised Finnish students in a reading of O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night," presented in the USIA Center in Helsinki.

Other plays presented with USIA help include: "The Skin of Our Teeth," "The Grass Harp," "Come Back, Little Sheba," "Picnic," "Summer and Smoke," "The Rainmaker," and "Mister Roberts."

Performance rights for amateur, English language productions are obtained by USIA through special arrangements with Samuel French and Dramatists Play Service of New York. The Agency anticipates increasing interest in American plays abroad following the tours of the Theatre Guild American Repertory Company which are scheduled to begin in Europe next spring.

W. German Paper Slaps American Theatre Week

Kaiserslautern, Feb. 21.

The Pfalzischer Volkszeitung, a respected local newspaper, has just published an attack on the American Theatre Week in Saarbruecken. It questions who plans these projects and how they're organized. The project, partly sponsored by the U.S. State Dept., closed with a dull thud because of lack of organization and poor picking, according to the Kaiserslautern paper.

The opening play was "Moon Over Steinbeck," a relatively unknown drama by U.S. author James Leo Herlihy. The German public didn't take to the fantasy about the girl who commits suicide because her lover jilts her, but comes back via a clairvoyant and finds true love. The paper objected to the choice of this rather than some more outstanding American dramas.

Other productions gave a more interesting viewpoint of the dramatic techniques from the U.S. the newspaper commented, with performances of Barry Conners "Patsy," John Patrick's "The Hasty Heart," two Tennessee Williams one-acters, "The Last of My Real Gold Watches" and "Mooney's Kids Don't Cry," plus "The Paris Comedy or Lily Dafon," by William Saroyan; John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men," and Eugene O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into the Night." Leonid Massine also spoke and demonstrated the Indian dance.

The paper criticized the speech of Berlin critic Friedrich Luft, whose topic was announced as "the modern American dramatists and the German theatre," claiming he gave merely a subjective impression of his trip to the U.S. years ago and an impression of what was playing on Broadway and several other American cities at that time.

'LOCK UP DAUGHTERS' DUE IN MELBOURNE

Melbourne, Feb. 21.

Restoration musical "Lock Up Your Daughters" starts here on April 1, presented at the Princess by Garnet H. Carroll.

It will be interesting to see reactions here to it as "The Hostage," "A Taste of Honey" and stage production of "La Ronde" in recent months have been panned on morality grounds.

The two leads from the London Mermaid production of "Daughters" — Hy Hazel and Richard Wordsworth—are repeating here, with Wordsworth doing staging.

After its Melbourne run "Daughters" will proceed to Sydney's Palace Theatre, which was recently taken on two year lease by Carroll. He's sub-letting to Australian Elizabethan Theatre Trust for 30 weeks of year.

Palm Beach Tent Opens

Six shows, each to run one week, are scheduled for presentation at the Palm Beach (Fla.) Musicarnival, which began its fourth season last night (Tues.) with "Can-Can." John Price is producer.

Plays Into Novels

this country. Abend states, though, that Harris has agreed to do an English translation. Thus, the author of the original play property is in the unusual position of translating a German novelization of his own American work. As a play, "Belinda" has never toured nationally and has never been released for stock in the U.S. However, a John Hanau adaptation of the play, which is not permitted in this country, is licensed by Samuel French for production in Britain.

Done Before

Novelization of "Belinda" is not the first time a play has undergone such reverse treatment. Last year, for instance, Ann Pinchot novelized the Pyramid paperback publication of "Once More With Feeling" from Harry Kurnitz's original legit comedy and subsequent film scenario. But, in the case of "Belinda" the process involves a firm, which is analyzing its catalog of over 1,500 plays for properties considered suitable for conversion into novels.

Besides having been novelized, "Belinda" is also to be the subject of a musical composition, which conductor-arranger Jay Blackton is writing. Anent the holdback in the play's stock release in this country, Abend claims a factor contributing to that was the complexity of the sets. That, he asserts, has now been rectified in a revised version of the script, which American Play Co. intends licensing itself for U.S. stock and other productions. The rights to the revised property are being licensed on the Coast by Jo Ann Meredith, of Beverly Hills, who's working in conjunction with American Play Co.

Return to Scene

The licensing of "Belinda" by American Play Co. represents a return to that field by the firm, which at one time did license properties. That activity was eventually dropped and the licensing rights to the outfit's catalog was turned over to Samuel French (straight plays) and Tams-Witmark (musicals). Now, according to Abend, the firm plans handling the licensing of properties wherever possible.

Abend is head of Authors Research Co., which prior to Rumsay's death merged with American Play Co., which functions as the former organization's marketing arm. Authors Research protects the literary rights of authors' heirs. Abend directs the business operation of the combined setup and Edith Borell, who was secretary-treasurer of American Play Co., is Rumsay's successor as the firm's president.

"Belinda" author Elmer Harris, 83 years old and a temporary resident of Prince Edward Island, has co-authored a new play with Harry Flannery titled "Upon These Ashes."

Opera Review

Turandot

(Met Opera House, N. Y.)

Puccini's last opera was presented three years ago at the N. Y. City Opera but is returned to repertory at the Met this season after a 30-year lapse. As is characteristic of new productions, the Met lined up a private donor, John S. Newberry, to pay the tab for costumes and scenery, moderately effective save for the lack of grandeur in the Chinese Imperial Palace, the roof of which was reminiscent of a West Side Manhattan brownstone block.

The production suffered from the substitution of one stager, Nathaniel Merrill, carrying out the concept of another, the indisposed Yoshio Aoyama. Merrill apparently gave most attention to, or got more response from, the comic trio Ping, Pang and Pong, admirably if stereotypically impersonated by three excellent singers, Frank Guarrara, Robert Nagy and Charles Anthony. The stager failed to direct (or at least influence) the tenor, Franco Corelli, whose disinterested arm gestures, and unawareness of what he was in the plot (a love-sick worldling) were in the worst, not the best, traditions of opera.

The premiere on Friday (24) raised $46,000 for the Metropolitan Opera Guild and was marked by the presence of Leopold Stokowski in the pit. Special aspects were these: nearing 80, Stokie was only then making his Met debut, though he's conducted at the City Opera; he came to his task on crutches due to a fractured hip. Seldom has a Met audience been so warm-hearted and generous to a conductor. Each entrance provoked a complete ovation. The more the pity he conducted rather raggedly.

The triumph of the evening belonged to the Swedish soprano Birgit Nilsson as Princess Turandot. Her powerhouse domination of the Puccini music, which could easily wreck a lesser artist, was stunning in its force. Of many great nights at the Met, this may have been her greatest. Add that she was loaded down (the right phrase) with Cecil Beaton's Chu Chin Chow parade costume, a conspiracy to promote orthopedic surgery, considering that flight of stairs. The haughty princess in her bulk regalia made her first appearance on that brownstone roof coming out of a tiny opening like a large dowager emerging from a small taxicab. But Mme. Nilsson rose splendidly above all beatnik hazards.

Coreolli's tenoring was more impressive than on his debut in "Il Trovatore" and he may yet establish his usefulness in Met repertory, though he carries his anti-Method attitude in the acting department to extremes.

The slave girl was well sung by Anna Moffo. Land.

The Agent As Star

"Your Career in the Theatre" by Bruce Savan (Doubleday; $3.95), is a handbook for the aspiring dramatic tyro written by an experienced Broadway talent agent. Such books, especially when they seek to cover the entire professional field, must be examined with jaundiced eye. In Savan's favor, it may be said that he purveys a wealth of information for the amateur with a high degree of honesty.

There is always the danger that works of this nature quickly become dated. Hence, Savan's reference to various "names" in show biz, to certain productions and to specific street addresses, as well as to contractual conditions in trade unions are likely to alter or diminish in importance before the current season concludes. However, it would be virtually impossible to pen a handbook on acting that would not be transient.

Savan, understandably, is inclined to lionize the agent, and some of his "instructions" to others in the business are a bit gratuitous and slanted in favor of the "client"; but these are captious criticisms of a generally sound undertaking. Rodo.

Bird-and-Bottle Operas

Zurich, Feb. 28.

Owner of restaurant across the street from the Zurich Opera House (Stadttheatre) has his own set of values as to the business potential of theatre's various repertory operas and operettas. He judges them by after-the-show cuisine-and-cave demands.

According to him, "Flying Dutchman" is very bad for business because people are so downbeat after the three-hour-plus Wagnerian treat as to head straight for home.

"Merry Widow" is excellent because the show's constant champagne-toasting and merry-making has a highly stimulating effect.

Contemporary opera is sheer poison. People can hardly wait to regain the cozy homeground after the final curtain (or, sometimes, before).

"Traviata" is just dandy. The girls long to wash down the tears after Violetta's last sigh.

He now hopes they'll soon put on "Falstaff." That should bring roast chicken sales up to a new high.

Shows Abroad

its layabout characters hardly measure up to English standards of legit entertainment. With one or two exceptions it received an unfavorable press and raised the ire of a large section of the first night audience. (See separate story).

It is difficult to decide at what Jack Gelber is aiming in this two-acter. Is it a documentary? If so, once it is accepted that certain people in New York (and elsewhere) do behave like that, what's the point? Is there a message? If so, it is surely that heroin is not very good for a person and that's hardly news. Is it merely an attempt to give the Method players a run out? Imagination does its best to cope with Gelber's purpose.

The first act in which the junkies mope around in a "pad," waiting for a "fix" certainly sets some sort of atmosphere, but it is a fairly dreary one and none of the characters has anything pertinent or particularly witty to say. Things liven up slightly after the interval, with the arrival of "The Connection," but even so, the high spot, a "do-it-yourself" lesson on how to take a "fix," is a fairly sick climax. The conversation grows no more sparkling. The device of trying to bring on a fake producer and author to try and suggest that a bunch of dope addicts are improvising the play fails dismally of conviction in the smart Duke of York's Theatre.

Quite the best thing of the evening is some sharp, cool jazz played by Freddie Redd, Jackie McLean, Malcolm Cecil and Tony Mann, but too often the play interfered with these musical interludes. Actors Garry Goodrow, Warren Finnerty, James Anderson, Jerome Raphael and Carl Lee give the impression of doing what they are supposed to do very well, but it's doubtful whether its worth doing. Eight members of the cast, including some from the original Living Theatre company, have come over specially for this production but it is unlikely to be a profitable journey. Malcolm Young's decor is suitably drab and Nick Garland's staging suitably untidy. Rich.

The Antiphon

Stockholm, Feb. 21.

Royal Dramatic Theatre presentation of drama in three acts by Djuna Barnes. Translated by Dag Hammarskjoeld & Karl Ragnar Gierow. Staged by Olof Molandor; settings and costumes by Georg Magnusson. Stars Sif Ruud, Birgitta Valberg, Olof Widgren. Opened Feb. 17, '61, at the Stora Seen, Stockholm. Top prices, $2.30.

Augusta Burley Hobbs	Sif Ruud
Jonathan Burley	Olle Hilding
Miranda	Birgitta Valberg
Dudley	Bjorn Gustafson
Elisha	Allan Edwall
'Jack,' 'coachman'	Olof Widgren

Djuna Barnes is an American author who published a novel "Nightwood" more than 20 years ago, carrying an introduction by T. S. Eliot. After a number of short stories thereafter her blank verse drama "The Antiphon" was published in 1956 but the current Stockholm production of the work marks its first actual staging. The Swedish translation was by UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjoeld and Karl Ragnar Gierow, head of the Royal Dramatic Theatre.

"The Antiphon" is set in the ruins of the Burley family estate "in the township of Beewick, formerly a college of priests, in the Burley family since the late 17th century." A morbid drama play is about the lives (1939) of an English-American family: Mrs. Augusta Hobbs, her brother Jonathan, her daughter Miranda, who has made a name for herself in Europe as a writer, two crude and evil sons (Dudley & Elisha) and her "lost" son who appears disguised as a coachman.

The horrors and evils of the family are revealed during the three act play, which took three hours to perform. Augusta Hobbs had married an American and in his mansion she gave birth to three sons and a daughter while Titus Hobbs brought a number of mistresses into the home. Titus beat his sons with little cause and gave his daughter to be raped by an elderly visitor. Dudley and Elisha feel only hate for their mother and a desire for revenge as they feel she should have intervened. They have come to the family reunion with hopes for the mother's death.

Play contains a good deal of violence which reaches a high-point when sons attack their mother and sister, and when Augusta, realizing that she cannot regain her daughter's affection, murders her in the closing moments of the play.

Filled with intellectual associations and allusions, work does not come off successfully on the stage. Imagery and associations move too quickly for audiences to understand the true meanings. The work can be read to better interest.

Le Cardinal D'Espagne

(The Spanish Cardinal)

Paris, Feb. 21.

Comedie-Francaise presentation of three act drama by Henry De Montherlant. Direction, Jean Mercure. Sets and costumes, Jacques Le Marquet. Features, Henri Rollan, Andre Falcon, Louise Conte, Francois Chaumette. Opened Dec. 21, '60, at Salle Richilieu, Paris; $2 top.

Cardinal Cisneros	Henri Rollan
Cardona	Andre Falcon
Queen of Castille	Louise Conte
Duke Estibel	Francois Chaumette

Henry De Montherlant is the novelist-turned-playwright who has had most of his plays since 1942 mounted immediately at the staid, nationalized Comedie-Francaise which is otherwise mainly a conservatory for classics. His plays actually resemble revived classics in their stress on elegant rhetoric. This one deals with interior struggles. Interest must survive long tirades and discussions.

Somewhat stilted and pompous, story tells of a Cardinal of Spain who rules as regent while his king is in exile. He is torn between a need to retire to a life of prayer and his belief that it is his duty to pave the way for the return of the king. When Majesty returns and then refuses to see him and sends him off to a monastery the Cardinal, an old man, dies of chagrin.

Ideas are expressed in long verbal bouts. Doubtful if there is much feeling for 17th century Spain. One electric scene is between the supposedly mad Queen, a recluse since her husband's death and her son's exile, which sums up the differences between a world of love and dutiful nihilism. Mosk.

Smart Seeks Channing

Honolulu, Feb. 28.

Richard Smart, one of the wealthiest singers in show business, plans to turn producer this summer, bringing Carol Channing to Honolulu for a four-night run of "Show Girl" in the Waikiki Shell.

Smart, owner of the Parker Ranch on Hawaii island, one of the nation's biggest cattle ranches, said actual dates will depend upon Miss Channing's schedule once the musical closes in New York in June.

Sheila Copelan, who's in the off-Broadway production of "Five Posts in the Market Place," was unable to go on for the first two previews of the show at the Gate Theatre, N. Y., last Saturday-Sunday (25-26) as the result of having burned her right hand and forearm in a gas-stove mishap in her home last week. Her understudy, Joyce West, subbed.

Bill Butler, who was to direct "Madame Aphrodite" for producers Cynthia Baer, Howard Barker and Robert Chambers has withdrawn due to previous commitments resulting from the sponsors' decision to delay off-Broadway opening until the fall.

Preminger Screen Rights Angles Affect Share For 'Advise & Consent'

"Advise and Consent" is figured to have netted about $20,000 thus far on its $150,000 investment. That, however, represents the show's situation on paper since its includes around $60,000 due the production to date as its share of income from the sale of the film rights to Otto Preminger, who made the purchase via United Artists.

It's estimated that approximately $110.000 has actually been recouped thus far by the Loring Mandel adaptation of Allen Drury's Pulitzer-prize novel, which Robert Fryer and Lawrence Carr are presenting, in association with John Herman. Because of a special picture income management, the production gets $41.143 instead of the usual 40%, less 10% commissions, cut of a $200,000 down payment.

The setup, however, gives the venture 40% of a maximum $450,000 payment, with the difference between the down payment and the maximum to be paid on a staggered basis on profitable weeks. The drama, costarring Ed Begley, Richard Kiley, Chester Morris, Henry Jones and Kevin McCarthy, is currently in its 16th week at the Cort Theatre, N.Y., where it has been clearing from around $2,500 to about $5.500 weekly.

5 O'Clock Invite Shows At Julius Monk Nitery

Upstairs at the Downstairs, N.Y., Julius Monk's nitery, is going in for non-commercial legit with a Five O'Clock Theatre invitational program. The project was launched at the Upstairs a week ago by Harry Eno, who hopes to do a new presentation at the club every month. The initial offering, presented for two afternoon performances, Feb. 20-21 was "The United Family," a one-act comedy by Jacques Prevert.

"Family," with incidental music by Stephen Richards, was directed by Mike Kellin, currently appearing on Broadway in "Rhinoceros." Eno is one of the understudies for "Dressed to the Nines," the regular evening offering at the Upstairs.

New Orleans Guild Again In AFM Tiff Which Keeps Musicals Out of Burg

New Orleans, Feb. 28.

The fourth circuit court of appeals on Thurs. (23) upheld the dismissal of a suit brought by the New Orleans Opera Guild Inc., against two musicians' unions. Management group had sought to enjoin Local 174, Musicians Mutual Protective Union and the American Federation of Musicians from practices they contended were driving the guild out of business.

The action was previously dismissed in civil district court.

Guild alleged the unions conspired to force it to sign agreements which would require that it employ unnecessary musicians for productions staged here.

The union argued that the case was a labor dispute over the refusal of musicians to work in the absence of a labor agreement. Issue created a cultural blackout in New Orleans owing to the inability of musicals to play here. Broadway Theatre Alliance, when first under the founder-ownership of Columbia Concerts tried unsuccessfully to mediate between management and musicians. It has never been established what personality frictions were operating in background which prevented a compromise, though the AFM apparently wanted one very much.

BUDAPEST TRAGEDY AN ITALIAN SMASH

Milan, Feb. 28.

Indro Montanelli, an Italian journalist, has turned playwright-director of "Dreams End at Dawn," based on his observations in Budapest when the Russians ruthlessly exterminated the revolt of 1955. Almost documentary in style, play shows reactions of five Italian newspapermen, two of them Communists holed up in a hotel.

Work opened in November at the Santa Erasmo, Milan's theatre in round, and has been a sellout there, pushing back several pending productions.

Play takes to the small towns of Italy in spring. Meantime a film version is in the planning. Montanelli is currently in Israel doing a film but continues to file copy with Corriere della Sera.

tire to do some writing. On the other hand, Cohen & Kay insist that Behan will be here as per contract, arriving in the U.S. around March 6. The Blue Angel deal was finalized in an exchange of telegrams with N.Y. Post's syndicated columnist Leonard Lyons, while Behan made the deal for the jazzery during his recent visit in New York.

Joe Glaser, president of Associated Booking Corp. which books Behan, put another aspect on the story with the observation that Behan said that he would perform only on St. Patrick's Day at the Blue Angel, and had not been committed for two weeks. On the other hand, the Angel insists it has a firm deal. In the meantime, the Blue Angel is looking for a substitute headliner to come in with Dick Gregory, the Negro comic who will be making his debut March 17.

The jazz show entrepreneurs will know if Behan will be around only if he arrives in the U.S.

Corporation Vs. Legit Partnership

But Off-Broadway Protective Angles Not Legally Tested Yet

In an unusual move for a legit production, the forthcoming off-Broadway presentation of Lonny Chapman's "Cry of the Raindrop" has been set up as a small business corporation. As such the show's producers are insulated against personal liability which would not be the case if the venture had been financed on the standard-for-legit limited partnership basis.

The insurance against liability represents the management's interpretation of the Internal Revenue code covering small business corporations. However, as yet, there has been no legal test of the code in relation to legit. As a small business venture, the production, which Kelsey Marechal and Seymour Litvinoff are presenting for the Cry Corp., had the right to elect to be taxed as a limited partnership, which it did.

In order to qualify for corporate status, the capitalization had to be secured from no more than 10 stockholders. Those with shares in the venture have been issued corporate notes guaranteeing them repayment for their investment before any split of the profits as is the case in a limited partnership.

The arrangement regarding profits, according to Litvinoff, who's also attorney for the venture, works out to a split of about 50-50 between the stockholders and the management. An equal divvy of the profits between the management and backers is standard for a limited partnership. The code covering small business corporations has been in effect since 1958 to provide a situation whereby operating profits may be taxed as a limited partnership rather than a corporation.

Arthur Greene, of the accounting firm of Goldberg, Gardner & Greene, is auditor for the production, which is scheduled to open next Tuesday night (7) at the St. Marks Playhouse, N. Y.

COMPLETE RUSSIAN PLAY

Prince & Griffith May Produce This Season

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Robert E. Lee and Jerome Lawrence have completed the script for "Kuprin," story of modern-day Russia, and have sent it off to Hal Prince and Robert Griffith, who plan to produce it for Broadway. Play is from a novel, "A Call on Kuprin," by Maurice Edelman, and is both serious and humorous in its treatment of the Soviet.

Prince and Griffith, in Israel with "West Side Story," will start casting upon their return to Gotham for possible staging this season.

Merrick's Promotional Tactics for 'La Douce' Tapping Profit Account

Producer David Merrick, noted for his promotion acumen, recently tapped the profits of his click Broadway production of "Irma La Douce" for $22,197 to cover special advertising of the musical import. That's in addition to the presentation's weekly ad expense, which has been ranging from around $2,000 to about $4,000.

Business for the offering, which had been sellout for some time, began slipping early last month, but was back to capacity last week. The operating profit has still been substantial, and it's figured the production has thus far netted about $55,000 on its $190,000 investment. That, incidentally, is after the deduction of the special advertising expenditure and additional production costs of $4,981 above the $175,994 previously recorded by the venture.

Revenue earned by the show, produced by Merrick, in association with Donald Alberry and H. M. Tennent, Ltd., by arrangement with Henry Hall, includes income from the pre-production sale of the film rights to Billy Wilder and the Mirisch Bros. The musical, currently in its 23d week at the Plymouth Theatre, N.Y., costars Elizabeth Seal and Keith Michell.

Witherspoon-Grimes In Bankruptcy Plea, Denver; Future Bookings Stand

Denver, Feb. 28.

Witherspoon-Grimes Enterprises, Inc., a principal Denver theatrical management since 1954, filed a petition for voluntary bankruptcy last Thursday (23) in the U. S. Bankruptcy Court. Debts of $66,658 and assets of $1,273 were listed.

Directors of the corporation at a special meeting Feb. 13 authorized Polly Grimes, vice-president, to file the bankruptcy petition, an accompanying exhibit revealed. The resolution, passed by the firm's directors, said "the corporation is in extremely poor financial condition," and noted that the company president, Mrs. Blanche Witherspoon, who normally handles all financial affairs is ill and unable to assist in the corporation management.

Mrs. Witherspoon, also secretary of the firm, suffered a stroke recently, while visiting her sister in California, and is now recuperating there. While her condition has been reported as "satisfactory," a long period of rest is indicated.

Debts of the corporation include printing and advertising costs, promissory notes and loans, taxes and contingent contracts for stage attractions the firm had booked for the next few months. Largest item under unsecured claims was $25.666 in notes, for which Joseph I. Grimes, a brother of Miss Grimes, was listed as creditor.

The petition also showed that Miss Grimes had loaned the firm $3,700. She was authorized by the directors to cancel any contracts for performances where tickets have not been delivered. Attorney representing Witherspoon-Grimes in the petition is Richard Bernick, of Denver. Bulk of the assets consists of equipment at the firm's offices.

Among future offerings booked by the agency is "Fiorello," and the Theatre-Guild-American Theatre Society production, "A Majority of One." Both will reportedly play Denver as scheduled, under arrangements being made by another booking agency.

CASTING NEWS

Following are available parts in upcoming Broadway, off-Broadway, and touring shows, as well as ballet, films, industrial and television shows. All information has been obtained directly by the VARIETY Casting Department by telephone calls, and has been rechecked as of noon yesterday (Tues.).

The available roles will be repeated weekly until filled, and additions to the list will be made only when information is secured from responsible parties. The intention is to service performers with leads provided by the managements of the shows involved rather than to run a wild goose marathon. This information is published without charge.

In addition to the available parts listed, the tabulation includes productions announced for later this season, but, for which, the managements, as yet, aren't holding open casting calls. Parenthetical designations are as follows: (C) Comedy, (D) Drama, (MC) Musical Comedy, (MD) Musical Drama, (R) Revue, (Rep) Repertory, (DR) Dramatic Reading.

mained, much the worse for attitude. Absence of feminine allure irked the tired businessmen. The talky court martial proceedings put at least one burgher audibly to sleep, with consequent complaints from those obliged to sit near him.

There's little doubt "Pleasure of His Company" was the first show to register. And this was a tribute to Joan Bennett and Donald Cook, who went all out to please despite day-long sessions under respirators for virus conditions. Discounting a few dedicated gripers, most of the folks went home happy.

There may be a moral in this for the Alliance. The fact a show is a Broadway hit does not insure its popularity in the "provinces." The very offbeat quality regarded necessary to please sophisticated New Yorkers is no boon to the show-starved hinterlanders pining for something more in the traditional format, and inclined to feel cheated when they don't get it.

Which brings up the doubts expressed here in Scranton about what shows will be forthcoming for 1961-62? The paucity of suitable fare, indicated by what's been on tap on Broadway, hardly figures to inspire the same enthusiasm seen for the initial venture.

It was a good trick, at that. Theatre men here had refused to believe some $70,000 could be collected in advance. But the hepped-up volunteers not only reached the goal of 1,200 subscribers, but came close to doubling

Will it happen again? Will the volunteers have the same kind of enthusiasm? Can the dropouts certain to develop be replaced?

"Absolutely," says the irrepressible Levy. "We'll be bigger than ever."

Kerz vs. Ionesco

not entirely done as a tragedy either, and the reviews complained that the last act was too sudden a change from burlesque to an anti-Nazi drama. The play had some 20 performances there. The Paris production had less than 30 performances and none is scheduled this year. Leo Kerz.

P.S.—Ionesco, who has never been done on Broadway before, demands and gets 5%, 7½%, and 10% of the gross of this production which he does not approve of. He will probably receive more royalties on this run than he received from all of his plays ever before.

What the Story Said

(The writer of the above letter is the producer of the Broadway edition of "Rhinoceros," currently in its eighth week at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre, N. Y. The VARIETY story to which he refers reported from Paris that the play's author, Eugene Ionesco, had written an article in the magazine, Arts, criticizing the Broadway production and asserting that he was misled about the treatment it involves.

(According to the VARIETY report, Ionesco also conceded that "perhaps the American version was acceptable, since it pointed to other things that could bring on forms of rhinoceritis." The story also stated that Ionesco had concluded that "he is resigned to his play being interpreted differently in various productions." — Ed.).

'Sex' Mag Raids

In a surprise raid on three Albuquerque newsstands last week city police seized about a ton of "girlie" and nudist magazines and paperback books, under an ordinance banning the sale of indecent literature.

The very next day the State Legislature, meeting in Sante Fe, killed two proposals which would have prohibited traffic in pornography, introed at the suggestion of Catholic Church officials. The legislative action, however, did not stem from the Albuquerque police raid, but rather on adverse reports from the judiciary committee.

The three newsstand operators and the wholesaler of magazines in Albuquerque were all charged with disorderly conduct charges. All four pleaded innocent and were released after posting bonds of $30 each.

Magazines seized in the raid included Playboy, Gent, Tonight, Show Place, Adam, Taboo, After Dark, Sunshine & Health, Sun, Gymnos, Tip Top, Naturalist, Hawaii and Nudist Leader.

Among the titles of the paperbacks seized were "Sex Kitten," "Hot Jazz," "Devil's Virgin," "Oriental Orgy," "Carnal Orgy," "Twisted Affair," "Wild Women" and "Brute Madness."

By accident, a number of innocent paperbacks were also snatched up in the surprise raid, and police reported they intended immediately to return them to the dealers. At least one of the titles should have left the officers with red faces. It was Art Linkletter's "Kids Say The Darndest Things."

Others grabbed by mistake included A. J. Cronin's "The Northern Light," Groucho Marx's autobiog, an Agatha Christie mystery, and James T. Farrell's "Studs Lonigan."

The Associated Press reportedly told the Albuquerque Journal they contacted Robert Preuss at Playboy offices in Chicago (he's business manager and circulation director) who said, "This action is extralegal and certainly unconstitutional. We just don't believe a small body can dictate the reading tastes of a large group like the citizens of Albuquerque." Playboy official said the magazine would take legal action if needed.

Manfred Carpenter, manager of the Beck News Agency (only wholesaler in Albuquerque)—which was charged in raid—said that the firm handles only publications which have a second class mailing permit. Some dealers, he noted, apparently obtain some of the magazines and books direct from publishers.

Bobbs-Merrill's Appointments

New appointments at Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis publishers, are Dr. Leo Gans, director of the education division; Lucius Lamar, sales manager of the education division; Fred Stam, director of advertising and sales promotion of all divisions of the firm.

Stam was previously in charge of sales, advertising, and promotion for the education division, but now assumes these responsibilities for the test, law, trade, and college divisions. Lamar, formerly sales manager of Charles Scribner's Sons, was before that assistant to the president of Bobbs-Merrill.

John Gunther Explicates

John Gunther tells in the March issue of Harper's mag about the writing of his six "Inside" books. Despite their success, all being yet in print, and the stupendous expenditure of energy, travel and research (entirely his own) what stands out is that he was never, or at least not most of the time, prosperous enough to escape the onerous task of writing special articles for magazines while on safari for his books. His best financial break was when the Reader's Digest contracted for a series of personality profiles which were derived from, but had to be written in advance of, "Inside Asia."

Gunther's energy will render guilty the average professional writer, or would-he-were chap. One shudders to hear that at one point he developed cataracts in both eyes and could not spare time off for surgery. He endured, too, the torment of his son's long, pathetic and fatal illness about which he wrote a separate volume.

Almost until publication date in February 1936 the incipient series lacked a pungent title. Gunther speaks of his working out "Inside Europe" and only learning afterwards that VARIETY had long published Inside Stuff in each of its main news sections. He also was surprised that Herbert Bayard Swope during the first World War wrote "Inside The German Empire." As to the title, though acknowledging its vitality and aptness, Gunther tells of the hard-to-bear puns which have ever since afflicted him on his travels.

There is one more in his series, "Inside Europe Today," coming off the presses later in 1961. Land.

Memoirs and Biogs

"Joan Crawford" is the title of her autobiography, as told to Jane Ardmore, who collaborated on Eddie Cantor's autobiog, "Take My Life," and which Doubleday will publish next July.

Gracie Fields titles her personal memoirs, "Sing As We Go," also via Doubleday, due in May. British comedienne was born Grace Stanfield.

Sports writer James Breslin's life story of Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, "grand old man of horseracing," is merely titled "Sunny Jim," another Doubleday publication next August.

In capsule biog form, Bob Considine's "It's The Irish" (Doubleday in July) treats with personalities such as James Farley, John B. Kelly, Gene Tunney, James Cagney and others. Memoir of still another sort is titled "Boyhoods," edited by Martin Levin of Saturday Review, wherein Howard Lindsay writes of his boyhood in the first decade of the 20th century; Harry Golden of the second decade; Walt Kelly of the 1920s; William Zinnser of the 1930s; and John Updike of his Pennsylvania boyhood in the 1940s.

Rap 50-50 on Paperbacks

Authors League of America keeps up its criticism of contract practices under which hardbook publishers collect 50% on paperbacks and book clubs. Guild bulletin just out lambastes the unfairness of a publisher continuing to rake in 50% on paper edition when the company is its own subsidiary. This is "selling" to one's self. "The practice is so patently unfair that the pressure to alter it is becoming irresistible," per Paul R. Reynolds.

Agent, whose sympathies are with the authors, hoots at idea that publishers perform a service for the author who rates a paperback edition. Recently the paperback rights to Jack Paar's "I Kid You Not" were sold on a $160,000 advance. Though the deal clearly reflected Paar's television popularity the original publisher got $80,000 of the paperback advance, just for existing and having a grabby contract.

N. Y. Times' Coast Edition?

The New York Times, which recently started a European edition, is studying the possibility of establishing a Coast edition. Arthur Hays Sulzberger, the paper's publisher and board chairman, disclosed last week that a group of Times reps is surveying production, circulation, advertising and distribution potentialities in the western states.

Sulzberger, however, stressed that "we must, of course, first satisfy ourselves that the reader demand and advertising opportunity are sufficient to make such an enterprise soundly self-supporting." Presumably the mechanical aspects of the new venture would be similar to the Paris operation where type is set by means of tape transmitted from New York.

French Censorship Outcry

Two French newspaper publishing groups, the French National Press Federation and the French Press Confederation, repping most of the daily and weekly papers of almost all viewpoints, protested against the growing press censorship in France. Most of it has stemmed from governmental pressures on any critiques of its handling of the touchy Algerian crises. Though steps are being taken to end it, papers are still being seized when giving too candid views on national projects and steps. Pub groups ask for a bill outlawing paper seizures and, in the meanwhile, insist that only a token 10 copies be taken rather than a whole output.

They also demand quick legal proceedings to fight unauthorized holdups of papers or magazines.

ceivable that Loew's Theatres, of which he is a key stockholder, will increase in size to about 150 houses in five years. This would entail an expansion of perhaps 50%.

Shutterings Off?

In light of this it should be recalled that theatre closings were the order of the day almost every day a relatively short time ago. The spate of shutterings obviously had a depressing effect upon the survivors in all branches of the trade. Now the candle is going out only once in a while and this in areas where changing local conditions render the theatre uneconomic.

Stanley Warner is now prowling new exhibition outlets on the Coast. Idea is to expand so long as the Department of Justice approves.

A prominent circuit operator in New York this week said the business was belted bad by the recent storm conditions around the country. But this was a temporary condition. He related that the fair-to-middlin' pictures die at the boxoffice but heartening to him and others in exhibition is the fact that the "A" productions are coming along in sufficient quantity.

Most large exhibs and film corporations attuned to a new kind of surer economy via diversification of interests, reductions in capitalization, and so on. But the acquisition of outside interests is not only the reason behind the strengthened position of picture companies and exhibs.

Sol A. Schwartz has specifically expressed himself with regard to sources of revenue for the diversifying film corporations: "Every picture company knows, and this is a thought I'd like to lean on, the big money comes from successful pictures."

Television has been a factor not to be overlooked. Theatremen buttonholed at recent industry meetings almost unanimously say that tv has lost its competitive sting. "Tv and us, we're two different enterprises," said one circuit leader.

Interestingly, a number of exhibs made the same point about tv. They said they might just as well have closed during the nights of the big money giveaway shows such as "$64 Question." As these programs got the boot, theatrical exhibition picked up.

The major studios, with their vast overheads, have ceased as the big migraine they used to be. M-G's mammoth Culver City lot, for example, doesn't have an idle sound stage for any protracted period. Vogel reported that theatrical production is bolstered by tv production; the two keep the studio busy and absorb the overhead nicely.

Jerry Wald

stimulating writers to write does not inhibit the author in any way," according to Joseph. "We either devise our own publishable novel ideas, or we confer with writers who come forward with notions and projects or their own. We work with the writers and the publishing firms only in the initial stages. Once an author has signed his contract with the publisher and received his advance our participation ends, until after the work has been completed and published."

Joseph referred to the Richard Friede novel, "The Internes," as an example. Initial concept for the novel was worked up by Jerry Wald Productions, with Random House accepting hardcover commitment and Bantam the soft cover reprint rights. Wald had nothing to do with assignment of the story idea to Friede and, in point of fact, film rights went to Robert Cohn and Columbia after Wald's studio, 20th-Fox, decided against the book. Friede deal for screen rights, Joseph said, was $75,000, plus 15% of the profits.

Although not sponsored under the Wald advance royalty plan, the producer claims credit for having fostered publication of Sheila Graham's "Beloved Infidel" and Rona Jaffe's "The Best of Everything," both of which he filmed for 20th release, and also Miss Jaffe's "Away From Home," which was bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Wald says his agreement with both publishers and authors calls for an "iron curtain of silence" regarding identity of writers until after books have been completed and are actually published. Hence his refusal to even hint at the names of the 14 books which he says are to hit the stands shortly, or the identities of writers now developing other stories.

Actors' Careers

formers of screen, theatre, radio, television, etc., have had special care in development of what, in essence, is a small personal museum of each star.

Film sets shooting actual scenes before public are also highly popular, with crowds making no noise as they gape. Same technique is used in transmitting live television programs, and remote control radio broadcasts, as well as recording, etc.

The Theatre in the Wood is exclusively presenting works by Mexican playwrights, with initial premiere Feb. 19 being "The Time and Place" by Antonio Magana Esquival, a comedy directed by Jose de J. Aceves, featuring Carlos Lopez Moctezuma, Josefina Escobedo, Hector Gomez, Antonio Brillas, Angle Merino, and Maria Eugenia Rios in principal roles.

Today Rodolfo Usigli's "El Gesticulador" (The Gesticulator), which has had a successful run for several seasons in this capital, opens and will alternate with the Esquival comedy. This one features Jose Elias Moreno, Xavier Masse, Amanda del Llano, Mario Garcia Gonzalez, and Carlos Becerril, under direction of Luis Aragon.

Fair is scheduled to run until March 12, after which it will pack up and go on an extended Latin American tour, hitting principal cities.

West Side Story

sometime ago detected the trend, and hied from the east to the west side.

Also on the west side will be the new Lanai, a $500,000 restaurant being opened by producer Joe Kipness & Monte Proser. Until now, the more expensive eateries have generally declined to go west. However, this is no longer the case with quite a few spots with higher priced menus now making good toward the setting sun.

The biggest impetus in removing the west side stigma is the expansion of Rockefeller Center. In this area, the New York Hilton will be completed. The Time & Life Building and the Equitable Life Building, latter nearing completion, are recent additions to the area. CBS is also moving into that orbit.

The construction of the 2,000 room Americana by the Tisch hotel interests west of Rockefeller Center is also figured to be a tremendous aid to that part of the city.

In the past few years, it has been proven that society will make the trek in the direction suggested by Horace Greeley. Claude C. Philippe, who was executive head of the banquet department of the Waldorf-Astoria, served a term with the Zeckendorf interests during which period he and his colleague, Col. Serge Obolensky, took virtually every top social function to that section of town. Philippe is now with the Loew hotels and he is expected to decorate the new westside inn with some of the 400's top soirees.

The fact that the two new west side hotels are being built back to back, each with a designation of luxury hotels, will cause a greater than usual influx to this section. They figure to get a lot of the trade that has been accruing to the more staid section of town for many years, and the competition for more luxurious accommodations is likely to entice more of the monied crowds and carriage trade. In contrast, only one hotel is now being constructed on the east side, the Summit, by the Loew chain of hotels.

The Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts will be another magnet for the west side. Containing, among other things, a new Metropolitan Opera House, luxury theatres, and other lures for the culturally elite, it's expected that eastsiders will have another reason for the trek westward.

The possibilities of the west side have just started. There are many neighborhoods ripe for development along class lines. Many of the substandard buildings can provide sites for class residential projects and it's likely a formerly neglected section of realty will get some costly attention in the near future.

OBITUARIES

HARRY BANNISTER

Harry Bannister, 72, legit-television actor, died Feb. 26 in New York after an illness of several weeks.

In the late 1920's, he played numerous small roles in films and then married actress Ann Harding, whom he later divorced. He played important roles in the first touring company of Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" and in a Broadway revival of "The Bat."

In the mid-1930s, Bannister founded the American Music Hall, an establishment that took over an abandoned church on the East Side of N.Y. to present a series of melodrama revivals. The first of these, "The Drunkard," ran for almost a year. Later, he was one of the series of "fathers" in the Broadway production of "Life With Father." His legit credits also include "Affairs of State" and most recently appeared in the off-Broadway production of Sean O'Casey's "Purple Dust." He also was seen on numerous tele programs.

His second wife, and two daughters survive.

Forever in My Heart

MARQUIS DE CUEVAS

Marquis George de Cuevas, 75, of Spanish nobility, born in Santiago, Chile, naturalized (1940) U.S. citizen, husband of Margaret Strong, granddaughter of the first John D. Rockefeller, died Feb. 22 in Cannes, France. He was connected with show business through his long interest in the classic ballet.

He founded his Marquis de Cuevas Ballet International in 1944, first in the U.S., giving performances in the old Cosmopolitan Theatre, N.Y., since demolished, at Columbus Circle. Company was an outgrowth of the old Ballet de Monte Carlo. Thereafter it was identified mostly with Europe. Undisclosed, but probably vast, sums of Rockefeller funds were poured into keeping company alive.

A year or two ago Cuevas conceded that the ballet was too great a luxury. There was then some challenging of the U.S. State Dept. and the ANTA Dance Panel to arrange touring dates under the President's Program. None was offered.

During his terminal illness, Cuevas last October was permitted to attend the elaborate ballet restaging of "The Sleeping Beauty" in Paris. He took a bow after the performance in a wheel chair.

An incident of more chi-chi than hazard was the Marquis' cable-and-headline "duel" in 1958 with Serge Lifar, retired choreographer of the Paris Opera ballet. Cuevas had made unauthorized alterations in Lifar's "Black and White" ballet. Resultantly he and Lifar, 20 years his junior, acted out the old tradition with swords. Some 50 reporters and photographers were present in the suburbs of Paris. Cuevas "pinked" the dancer on the right forearm, whereupon the two antagonists wept and embraced.

In his younger period while dividing his time between Florence, Paris, New York and Lakewood, N.J., the Marquis and his Rockefeller heiress entertained lavishly, some of the parties in costumes. He was the eighth in succession to the Spanish title, Marquis de Piedrablanca de Guana Cuevas, which, under American law, he renounced upon being naturalized, but continued to use professionally.

Surviving are his wife, son and a daughter.

NICK LA ROCCA

Nick La Rocca, 71, veteran New Orleans cornetist and leader of the first white Dixieland band, died in New Orleans Feb. 22 after a long illness. La Rocca's place in jazz history is secured by his organization in 1914 of the Original Dixieland Jass Band which became the first jazz group to make recordings. RCA Victor resurrected the Jazz Band's earliest disks a few years ago in their Label X series of historical sides culled from the Victor archives.

In Memoriam

Sid Grauman

(The Little Giant of Show Biz)

You'll never be forgotten, Sid

Arthur S. Wenzel

La Rocca, who composed numerous Dixieland standards, first played in the Reliance Brass Band of George (Papa) Laine, one of the early ragtime combos out of New Orleans. Around 1914, he formed the Original Dixieland Jass Band which went up the Mississippi to Chicago and then moved to New York around 1916. The combo, which had Larry Shields on clarinet, Eddie Edwards on trombone, Henry Ragas on piano, and Tony Spargo on drums, played at Reisenweber's Restaurant in New York and launched a Dixieland vogue.

The band broke up in 1925, but La Rocca organized another group in the mid-1930s to record again for Victor. He exited the music biz in 1937 to enter the construction field from which he retired in 1958. He had been suffering from a heart ailment in recent years.

Among the Dixieland numbers in La Rocca's catalog are such jazz standards as "Tiger Rag," "Fidgety Feet," "Jazz Band Ball" and "Dixieland One Step." He also wrote "Lazzy Daddy," "Skeleton Jangle," "Some Rainy Nights," "Toddlin' Blues," "Ramblin' Blues" and "Ostrich Walk."

He is survived by his wife, four sons, three daughters, two brothers and two sisters.

"You'll Never Know"

SIDNEY SATENSTEIN

Sidney Satenstein, 60, president and board chairman of American Book-Stratford Press Inc., died of a heart attack Feb. 22 in Boca Raton, Fla., where he was vacationing. Famed for his promotions and ad campaigns in the publishing field, he was credited with starting Alexander Woollcott as "The Early Bookworm" on CBS in the early 1930s.

A native of New York, Satenstein joined American Book-Stratford Press in 1932, and became its head 10 years later. He also was a former president of the Book Manufacturers Institute Inc. and headed its Book Industry Committee. In 1945 he supervised the first survey on book reading habits which was published in 1946 as "People and Books: A Study of Book Reading Habits."

Satenstein, who also introduced Clifton Fadiman to radio as an NBC critic, was a literary agent in addition to his many other chores. Among his clients were Nadine Gordimer and Keith Wheeler. In recent years he was particularly noted for his efforts in promoting volume purchases of books as Christmas presents by large corporations. He was regarded as a staunch foe of censorship.

Satenstein, who was a member of a show biz family, is survived by his wife Isabel; two brothers, Edward and Frank, and two sisters, Mrs. Helen Brandt and Mrs. Emanuel Burr. Frank Satenstein is a tv producer while Mrs. Brandt is the wife of Harry Brandt, president of Brandt Theatres.

EDUARD VERKADE

Eduard Verkade, 82, Dutch actor-director, died Feb. 11 in Amsterdam. Best known for his interpretation of "Hamlet," he acted the title role more than 400 times. He studied chemistry as a youth, but switched to the theatre after seeing performances of Ellen Terry and Sir Henry Irving in London.

Verkade, who made his stage debut in 1904 with a "one-man show" of "Macbeth," started his own legit company in 1913. It existed under various names until he quit the stage at the beginning of World War II. He was principally associated with production of Shakespearean works.

He retired from the Dutch theatrical scene in 1947, but returned a year later to direct a new version of "Hamlet" at the Haagse Comedie, with Paul van Steenbergen. He also wrote two books based on the Bard's works, "Horatio's Diary" and "Shakespeare's Hamlet as Closet-Play." At the time of his death he was working on his memoirs.

His wife survives.

ORLAN BRYANT

Orlan Bryant, 55, former vaude performer who teamed with his wife and another femme partner in the dance act billed as Bryant, Rains & Young, died recently near his home in Crowley, Colo. He was found dead, apparently a victim of a heart attack.

Born in Indian Territory, Okla., Bryant used his athletic physique to advantage in a variety of acrobatic and adagio routines employed by the act. He worked with Oma Young, who later became Mrs. Bryant, and another girl. A standard turn in the 1930s, the trio played the Loew's circuit and the London Palladium, among other dates.

Reviewed by VARIETY, at Loew's Orpheum, N.Y., in 1933, the act won praise for its adagio work. "Manner in which Bryant handles one, then the other girl," the critic noted, "and finally both, is a tribute to his skill and sturdiness."

Surviving besides his wife are three sisters and three brothers.

GEORGE W. FUERST

George W. Fuerst, 48, former general manager of KNBC, San Francisco, died Feb. 18 during heart surgery in Rochester, Minn. A native San Franciscan, he attended Santa Clara U. and the U. of California. He joined KNBC as a page boy in the early 1930s.

Fuerst later moved to NBC engineering and traffic, becoming traffic manager from 1936 to 1941 for NBC's Red and Blue Pacific networks and its two Frisco stations. He served in World War II with the OWI and was then western manager of NBC-TV spot sales. In 1956 he was named KNBC general manager. He resigned last November because of ill health.

Wife, three sons and three daughters survive.

LEE LAWRENCE

Lee Lawrence, 31, English singer, died Feb. 25 in Aruba, the Dutch West Indies. He was appearing at a nitery there, and died of a sudden heart attack immediately following his performance.

In England, he had his own tv show for 18 months called "Lee Lawrence's Scrapbook of Songs." He appeared at all of the major vaude houses including the London Paladium. In the U.S., Lawrence appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show and a number of niteries including the Celebrity Room in Palm Beach, Florida, the Elegante in Brooklyn and at Grossinger's and the Concord Hotel in upstate N.Y.

His wife, daughter and brother survive.

J. H. ROBERTS

J. H. Roberts, 76, actor, died Feb. 1 in London. Originally a shipping clerk, he made his first stage appearance in 1909. He appeared with Miss Horniman's Players at Manchester and was one of the first members of the Liverpool Stock Company.

Roberts made his London debut at the Court in 1913, in "A Conversation at the Styx." After further seasons in stock he returned to the West End in a long series of successful performances, notably in "A Kiss for Cinderella," "Mary Rose," "A Murder Has Been Arranged," "A Sleeping Clergyman," "Heartbreak House" and "Fly Away Peter," which he also staged.

VIOLA McNEIL

Mrs. Fred J. Kneeland, 77, who as the former Viola McNeil was a child actress of the 1890s, died in Medford, Mass., Feb. 23. One of her first dramatic roles was in "Margaret Fleming," by James A. Herne. She was cast by Herne in another of his hits, "Shore Acres." In 1893, she played Phoebe in "Giles Corey, Yeoman."

Mrs. Kneeland also appeared in Clyde Fitch's "A Poor Relation" and "April Weather." For three years she toured with the Catherine Rober stock company.

Surviving are her husband, and son, Paul F. Boston Globe real estate editor and former theatre news writer.

RICHARD BAGLEY

Richard Bagley, 41, film director and cameraman, died Feb. 25 in New York, after a long illness.

He directed numerous films including "The Quiet One" and "On the Bowery," two feature-length films which were U. S. Academy Award nominees and which won awards in major European film festivals. Short subjects he directed include "Given Moment" and "Textures and Finishes." He also collaborated with Louis Lippa on the film script of Lippa's play, "The Breaking Wall," which was scheduled for filming in the near future with Bagley directing.

His wife, daughter and mother survive.

BLANCHE E. FOOTE

Blanche E. Foote, 88, actress, playwright, director and promoter of ballet and Little Theatre, died Feb. 22 in Washington. With actor Frederick Ward as her mentor, she began her dramatic career in Minneapolis before going to New York where she did costuming and lighting at the Greenwich Village Theatre.

She helped in the founding of the now defunct National American Ballet in 1922 as well as the Little Theatre movement in Arlington, Va. Mrs. Foote also served as manager for her daughter, performing as Mme. Lubovska, a former interpretative classical dancer, who survives.

F. HARRIS DEANS

F. Harris Deans, 76, critic, playwright and author, died Feb. 12 in Richmond, Eng. Through the years he had written drama and film criticism at various times for London Opinion, Sunday Graphic, Sunday Dispatch, Illustrated Sporting & Dramatic News and the Belfast Telegraph.

Deans wrote over a dozen plays, notably "The Rose and the Ring," "The Call of Youth" and "Husbands Are So Jealous," in which he also appeared. He also wrote novels, light verse and humorous articles.

Survived by a daughter.

HARRY DORSEY

Harry Dorsey, 83, pioneer film theatre owner in Santa Maria, Calif., died Feb. 22 at the Broadview Sanatorium, Pasadena, after a year's illness. Dorsey and a partner, Frank Montgomery, presented vaudeville turns along with silent pictures in many areas of the south, Ohio and New York in addition to Santa Maria and San Francisco.

At the time of his death he was operator of the Studio and Santa Maria Theatres in Santa Maria. His widow, Ethel Mae, and a son and a daughter survive.

KATHLEEN M. KIDD

Kathleen Maud Kidd, 62, dramatic actress of stage and tv, died Feb. 23 in Toronto. English-born, she came to Broadway after World War I. She continued her theatrical background gained in London by singing lead roles in musical comedy roles in New York and on the road.

In more recent years, she played tv dramatic roles with the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. and in summer stock. During World War II, she travelled to the Far East playing for overseas troops.

Survived by son.

WALTER S. DRYBURGH SR.

Walter S. Dryburgh Sr., 78, pianist and onetime band leader, died Feb. 12 in Milwaukee. His dance band, started in 1910, was a familiar combo in the Milwaukee area during the 1920s. It was one of the first outfits to play on WTMJ when the station went on the air in 1927.

His wife, two sons and a sister survive.

SIR RICHARD MOON

Sir Richard Moon, 59, owner-operator of Robinson Plays and Costumes Ltd., Toronto, died Feb. 23 in that city. A grandson of Richard Moon (created a baronet in 1887 when heading the London & North Western Railway of England), he succeeded to the title in 1951.

Survived by wife and two daughters.

MICHAEL STEINORE

Michael Steinore, 59, former head of Metro sound effects, died of a heart attack Feb. 19 in Hollywood. Starting as a prop man with the old Goldwyn studios in 1922, he later headed Metro's sound effects until a heart attack in 1952, thereafter working on a part-time basis.

Wife and two daughters survive.

Richard L. Johnston, 68, vet production manager associated with Paramount for 35 years, died in Hollywood Feb. 18.

His wife and two daughters survive.

MARRIAGES

Mary Kay McKinney to Harry D. Norviel, Albuquerque, recently. He's production manager, she's operations assistant, both with KOB-TV in that city.

Mavis Wilding to Sir Harry Pilkington, St. Helen's, Eng., Feb. 17. He is a director of Bank of England and chairman of the Government committee looking into the future of tv and sound broadcasting.

Marjorie Ward to Alan Rothwell, London, Feb. 25. Bride is a Sadler's Wells singer; he's a tv actor.

Barbara Mahoney, to Louis C. Harbsmeier Jr., Louisville, Feb. 17. Bride is a choreographer; he's a newswriter for radio station WHAS there.

Frances Gomel to David Levy, Philadelphia, Feb. 26. Bride is former Dick Clark secretary, now on staff of Bobby Rydell; he's an MGM Records promotion man.

'Spy Mania' Sweeps U.S. Video, Says Soviet Izvestia in Blast at CBS Hour

VARIETY figures it's pretty alert to tv programming trends, but strictly bows to the Soviet newspaper Izvestia this time—or maybe one swallow doth a summer make for Moscow's ink-stained set.

An article in Izvestia's Feb. 24 issue (translated in the U. S. at the American Committee for Liberation), concerns American video's new program genre "The Spy Mania."

Says Izvestia, "An American is sitting in front of his television set, and if a murderer is not aiming at him, a spy is creeping up on him. What kind of spy? a 'Communist' spy, of course, a 'Soviet' spy, and always with a knife between his teeth and an atomic bomb in his hand."

It appears that the vantage point of Russia's distance lends a prespective of American viewers that has escaped the ARBs, the Nielsens and the other too deep in the local mix. "Not so long ago," says Izvestia, "Americans were entertaining the feeble hope that all these vapid spy stories they were so throughly sick of would disappear from the television screens."

Focal for the blast, however, is not all those spy yarns, but the recent CBS-TV "The Spy Next Door," a swallow that was nearly winged before its air flight.

Izvestia interprets the CBS cancellation and reinstatement of "Spy" thusly: "The American press

U.S. Okays Televising Of Canaveral 'Man Shoot'; 3-Web Pool Coverage

America's attempt to shoot a man into space—now scheduled for the latter part of April—will be televised by all three networks live from Cape Canaveral. The actual "man shoot," as it's termed, will be followed by live and filmed footage of the subsequent recovery of the capsule and ceremonies at the White House—assuming of course the "shoot" is successful.

The extensive and complex arrangements for the coverage are being worked out between reps of the three tv networks and the NASA. NBC-TV will handle pool arrangements, covering both audio and video, with its missile expert, Roy Neal, as pool producer.

Cameras will be located at key points at Canaveral. However, no camera will be located within the missile (except for the Government's own top-secret film cameras), nor will certain aspects of the shot be televised, such as the procedure of strapping the Astronaut into the capsule.

As for audio, NBC will cover the pool audio. Other networks will have their own correspondents on

Hackies Turn Producers

Toronto, March 7.

To convince the public that cab drivers are not "a group of uncivilized oafs or morons," three hackies have organized "Theatre 61" and open at the Borochov Theatre here tomorrow (8). Driver Robert McHeady is organizer; his financial partners are Bob Levine and Norbert Schmidtke. Former is professional actor in his time off and other two have had parts in the tv series of "Cannonball" and "Tugboat Annie."

Their opening play, in which the trio will participate: "See How They Run."

Usher Cooperates For New 'Stand-In'

Dallas, March 7.

About 40 Negro youths resumed queue stand-ins at the Majestic Theatre Sunday (5) but the demonstration for desegregation could almost be termed "cooperative." Instead of lining up at the boxoffice, the Negroes formed a line on the sidewalk where an usher had placed two stanchions and a velvet rope.

When there were no whites at the boxoffice, the usher lowered the ropes, allowing several Negroes to go to the window. When they were refused admission, they returned to the end of their line. When whites approached to buy tickets, the usher would raise the velvet rope and the Negroes waited until the window was clear again and the rope again lowered.

The demonstration attracted only passing interest.

Two weeks ago approximately 80 white and Negro youths staged demonstrations at the Majestic and Palace, both owned by the Interstate Theatres Inc.

The Majestic's balcony is reserved for Negroes, but the lower floor, where the Negroes were seek-

Kathy Grant's Pop Runs

West Columbia, Tex., March 7.

Delbert E. Grandstaff, a local highschool teacher and father of actress Kathy Grant, wife of singer Bing Crosby, is one of the more than 60 candidates in the special April 4 Senate election.

This is to fill vacancy of Vice President Lyndon Johnson, the post in the Senate he resigned to become Vice President.

'GROWTH' VALUES LURE INVESTORS

By GENE ARNEEL

The rise in film stock values of the past couple of months has been the most spectacular in the modern history of the picture business. The paper increases have been in terms of hundreds of millions of dollars.

An executive of the film trade lit up this way: "Money is looking for a place to go."

Wall Street sources ditto this and add that pic company issues for long have been under-valued as concerning the stock price-earnings ratios.

The interest in film companies also has been bolstered by many other factors, perhaps most notably the increase in boxoffice pictures and the television residuals. The unloading of backlogs to video is a genuine item to enhance any company's fiscal potential.

Take Allied Artists for example. This is low on totem-pole of producer-distributors and listed on the American Exchange. Yet AA has

ASCAP Planning 'Action' Vs. BMI

The American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers is planning an action, as yet unspecified, against Broadcast Music Inc., the licensing organization set up by the broadcast industry 20 years ago in competition with ASCAP. Arthur Dean, of Sullivan & Cromwell, has been retained. Dean was special counsel for ASCAP in negotiations with the Justice Dept. for the new consent decree which went into effect early last year. Exact nature of the proposed move against BMI is deliberately ambiguous as this stage.

ASCAP's move against BMI has no formal relation to the suit brought against BMI and the broadcast industry by 33 ASCAP songwriters. It is no secret, however, that many top ASCAP officials are in sympathy with the songwriters' allegations.

Zen Buddhist-Hebrew Musical (It Says Here)

Montreal, March 7.

What's described as a Zen Buddhist-Hebrew musical, "The Wise Judge," has had its libretto completed by Montreal-born playwright Ted Allan. Foreign Origin Helps, Hence Hunch Melina Mercouri Hot for Oscar There's nothing like a foreign-born, comparatively unknown (to U.S. audiences) dame to win the best actress Oscar in the annual Academy Awards sweepstakes. In the last nine years, five of the top female Oscars have gone to dolls from overseas.

If you're betting on this year's contest, and basing your choice solely on how earlier Oscar contests were decided, then Greek-born Melina Mercouri ("Never on Sunday") is the 1960 odds-on favorite, followed (in alphabetical order) by three British-born actresses, Greer Garson ("Sunrise at Campobello"), Deborah Kerr ("The Sundowners") and Elizabeth Taylor ("Butterfield 8"). Shirley MacLaine, nominated for "The Apartment," would seem to have an uphill battle. Girl was born in Richmond, Va. about 70 years after the Old Dominion rejoined the Union.

The non-American beauties who have walked off with Oscars since 1951 include Vivien Leigh (1951), Audrey Hepburn (1953), Anna Magnani (1955), Ingrid Bergman (1956) and Simone Signoret (1959). In addition, six of the last nine winners were actresses either making their U.S. screen debuts, or playing their first star roles: Shirley Booth (1952), Miss Hepburn, Grace Kelly (1954), Miss Magnani, Joanne Woodward (1957) and Miss Signoret. Of this group, however, only one, Miss Signoret, has copped the award with a non-American pic, the British-made "Room at The Top."

This latter fact prompted yet Hollywood syndicated columnist

See $3-Mil B.O. On Closed TV Fite

A record melon looms for Tele-Prompter from next Monday's (13) closed-circuiting of the Patterson-Johansson title bout in Miami. As of this date, the post-tax net is projected at close to $3,000,000—almost $1,000,000 more than the take from the previous set-to of same pair.

While the actual number of theatres participating won't be altered much, capacity afforded by theatres and other locations will be up considerably—roughly 750,000 contrasted to some 625,000 last time. Additionally, ancillary rights are pulling more revenue for the Monday fight. Domestic radio rights (to ABC) will fetch $300,000, plus another $50,000 from the BBC for foreign airing. (Theatrical film replays go to United Artists domestically, and 20th-Fox overseas.)

At VARIETY deadline, Tele-Prompter counted 207 locations to receive the bout—197 in this country and 10 in Canada, including a paysee record of 30,000 Montreal homes set to take it off a community antenna. Another "first" will be the $11 top in Los Angeles theatres.

There's another precedent, too, in the deal made for all locations by Irving Kahn, prexy of Tele-Prompter. Of the first 1,500 top seats, the split with local promoters is 50-50, but after that 60-40 in Kahn's favor.

Incidentally, top price anywhere is the block of $100 seats at New York's Madison Square Garden—but that's at benefit scale for the Heart Assn.

Tain't Logical

Warsaw, March 7.

Brendan Behan's "Hostage" has been banned here because it "might be offensive to Catholics."

Which is a curious reason for banning a play in a Communist state.

Will Kennedy Welcome Warners' Exploitation Of His Naval Career?

Hollywood, March 7.

Will an incumbent President of the United States grant permission to a commercial motion picture company to glorify his own wartime heroics? Warner Bros. is testing the idea of a biopic about exploits of John F. Kennedy while a skipper of a Navy vessel cut in two by a Japanese destroyer in World War II. WB has registered "P-T Boat 109" with Motion Picture Assn. Title Bureau as a first step.

Whether company has approached White House, has any private encouragement to proceed, or is only trial-ballooning is not known. Studio is assuming there would be no objections from Kennedy.

Naval exploits are in Kennedy's case a youthful episode, not the military renown factor which, in Eisenhower's case, was rewarded with the Presidency.

Carnival Season, 'Immoral' Platter Provoke Wrath of German Clergy

By HAZEL GUILF

Frankfurt, March 7.

This year, for the first time in history, the West German Protestant and Catholic churches loudly cried "cut the comedy"—and cut into the rich receipts of the nightclubs, restaurants, gasthauses and spas which usually enjoy the heaviest returns of the year as free-spending crowds throng out for costume balls, parades, and hearty eating and drinking at the Fasching season.

West Germany is one of the few lands that goes all out for carnival, the pre-Lenten celebration that is likewise a hilarious event in New Orleans and in some South American lands.

Generally it's the feeling that "anything goes," and the hi-jinks know no bounds as the Germans, hiding their usually sombre ways behind a mask, go about celebrating all night and all day. The event continues with Rose Monday parades, all night dancing and drinking and living it up in every direction until Ash Wednesday rolls around.

The pub and club owners generally consider this silly season as the top business of the year. Special costume balls are planned night after night, and prices reach sky peaks, for Germany, as the entry fees of $5 and $6 to the more fashionable balls like Frankfurt's famed Timbuctoo and those set at the elegant Wiesbaden Kurhaus.

The church this year protested even before the fun reached its height. At Mannheim, the Protestant Church paid for poster space on milboards mounted at

New Hampshire Reacts To 'Operation Abolition'

Durham, N. H., March 7.

Fulton Lewis 3d's special documentary film, "Operation Abolition," which has been widely sold at $100 a print to pressure groups around the country, created some hubbub here in New Hampshire where it is circulating under the approval of the Manchester Times-Union. This is the film which has been denounced by the National Council of Churches, Episcopol Bishop James Pike and others as a distortion of the events in San Francisco some time ago when students demonstrated against a meeting there of the House Un-American Activities Committee. Film was put together privately out of newsreel footage which the committee secured by subpoena.

After being unreeled at the U. of New Hampshire here, questions from students angered Joseph T. Jalbert, now a Dover businessman but once an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He blasted students and faculty for what he called their "shocking indifference to Communism."

Added Jalbert: "The cancer of Communism is invading this university under the guise of academic freedom."

Vet Negro Comics Query Buildup of Dick Gregory As 'Unique' by Chi Press

Chicago, March 7.

Local veteran Negro comedians are doing a mild "take" that borders on a real burnup at the Windy City columnists and local press accept portrayal of suddenly hot-sy Dick Gregory as coming out of a colored talent vacuum. 'Tain't so is the wail—or where has Sammy Davis Jr. been all the time, naming only one. (Obviously Lena Horne, Harry Belafonte, Ella Fitzgerald et al. are dominantly in the thrushing orbit.)

The recent Time magazine splash on Gregory, showcased in the local Playboy Club, a "private" key operation, however did catapult the erstwhile house emcee of the black-and-tan Roberts Show Club here into unusual national prominence. This was quickly followed by a "comedy" seminar on the David Susskind show, plus Jack Paar NBC-TV exposure.

Plum bookings into New York's Blue Angel, Frisco's hungry i and Freddie's, Minneapolis, resulted from the allegation that Gregory was the first to use topical integration material, regarded by some of the lay press as being "avant-garde."

Realistically, from the local

TAX CHANGE REQUEST WOULD AID SHOWFOLK

Washington, March 7.

Entertainers and others with fluctuating incomes would benefit from a recommendation to Congress by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

In a report to the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, the organization's committee on federal taxation urged that individuals be allowed to compute their income tax on the basis of their average income over a specified span of years.

This would eliminate unfair treatment of performers, writers, commission salesmen and others whose income may be subject to annual ups and downs.

Under the present Internal Revenue Code, the report explained, the individual with a stable income will shell out less income tax than one with widely fluctuating earnings even though their aggregate income for a specific period of years is the same.

Zukor 'Milestoned'; Sentiment High, But Quips, Too

Hollywood, March 7.

"If I measured up to half of what's been said here tonight, I'm sure I would be seated in the front row of Paradise. Long live motion pictures! God bless America!"

With these words Adolph Zukor accepted Screen Producers Guild's Milestone Award Sunday night (5) at Beverly Hilton Hotel. Who's who of film biz turned out 1,000-strong to pack the house in tribute to 88-year-old film pioneer.

Jack L. Warner, refraining from quips, described occasion as "most sentimental evening I've ever attended." Besides filmites such figures as former Vice President Richard Nixon, Calif. Gov. Pat Brown and many civic and religious figures attended.

James Stewart, making presentation, said, "here is a remarkable, vital man at eighty-eight. At the studio every day, he reads scripts. If he likes one, he tells his producers. Mr. Zukor has given this industry a half century of greatness."

Jerry Lewis as emcee of banquet, chaired by Walter Mirisch, kidded honor guest with such lines as "Zukor in fifty years knows as much about show business as David Susskind." Bob Hope said, "I met Zukor when Conrad Nagel and Mae Busch were making movies for Channel 9—and didn't know it." Referring to Nixon, Hope gagged, "he doesn't need a job—residuals from the debates will keep him going."

Billy Wilder received SPG's "best produced picture of year" for his UA film, "The Apartment." "Best produced television series" award went to "Untouchables," award going to Alan Armer. Walter Grauman, Herman Hoffman, Lloyd Slzards, Joseph Shafter.

Bob Hope 'Shills' 75G for 'Dimes'

By ART WOODSTONE

The $100-a-plate "Tribute Dinner to Bob Hope" by the New March of Dimes last Friday (3) at the Commodore Hotel in N.Y. more than served its purpose: the organization collected roughly $75,000 to help fight the various diseases now under the MOD banner.

Hope himself was appropriately subdued but nonetheless as funny and hip as always. Lightly, he referred to himself as the "shill" for the dinner. The boys were all humorous, barring a tasteless joke or two, but the night seemed little more than another showcase for their talents, save for a handy reference or two by them to Hope's sense of humanity. George Jessel was, inevitably, the toastmaster and, inevitably, he was "up" for the occasion. Alan King, Henny

'Variety' in Middle

Memo to all press agents: Never try to handle two interviews at one lunch. The result can be chaos. The following is a loose recapitulation of the conversation that ensued last week when a VARIETY reporter was sandwiched at an Absinthe House table between the producer of one picture and a starlet featured in another:

Producer: What would you like to ask me? Fire away.
Reporter: Well . . .
Starlet: I love New York. I love the weather.
Producer: We're opening in 500 theatres . . .
Starlet: Have you read "Justine?"
Producer (to Starlet): You're stepping on my lines, dear.
Starlet: I want to test for Justine, or maybe Melissa.
Producer: March 30, we're opening.
Starlet: I think Clea is a bore.
Producer: I've ordered 700 prints.
Starlet: And it simply must be shot in Alexandria. It's so sensual.
Producer: Who's this guy Tubelle anyway?
Starlet: I mean, it's such a sensual book.
Producer: I don't mind if a reviewer says a picture's lousy.
Starlet: Can it be done visually, I wonder?
Producer: But he went too far.
Starlet: Maybe I look a little too much like Elizabeth Taylor. I mean if she plays Justine.
Producer: All the other reviewers loved the picture.
Starlet: This afternoon I'm posing for an Esquire layout.
Producer: I don't like to complain, but . . .
Starlet: No bikinis or tight shorts . . .
Producer: VARIETY is the only trade paper read in London . . .
Starlet: Leotards and a sweater. They're getting away from old-fashioned cheesecake . . .
Producer: Why don't you ask me about censorship?
Starlet: I love Esquire . . .
Producer (to Starlet, meaningfully): I saw your picture.
Starlet: Oh, did you?
Producer (after a pause): Yes.
Starlet: Well, I saw yours, too.
Luncheon ended in a draw.

Know-From-Nuttin' Immigration Cops Makes Life Hard for Flanders & Swann

Toronto, March 7.

Stopped for several hours at the Detroit-Windsor border by Canadian immigation men who "had never heard of them," Michael Flanders and Donald Swann, stars of "The Drop of a Hat," had a skirmish about reentering the British Commonwealth until officials were advised by Hugh Walker, manager of O'Keefe Centre here, that British comics and a two-weeks' contract to appear in Toronto.

Canadian border delay meant the return of the British performers—and Flander's wife, Claudia — to Detroit for a series of 'phone calls to validate their O'Keefe contract, thought they had their British passports with them. Return to Detroit meant considerable difficulty Flanders travels in a wheelchair in gaining re-entry to the United States. Pair return to Britain after their fortnight's engagement at O'Keefe's.

Steve Allen in Legit, Jed Harris Producing

Hollywood, March 7.

Steve Allen will appear in new play by Katherine and Dale Eunson, tabbed "Southern Comfort," which Jed Harris, directing and producing, will open in Santa Barbara in late May.

Harris also will present play in Frisco and Los Angeles before taking property to Broadway, where plans are now being completed for a fall opening.

SHOOT FOR KIDS, KILL ADULTS

Siritzkys, Paris Handlers of Films, Argue Trend Strictly to 'Adult'

By GENE MOSKOWITZ

Paris, March 7.

Sammy and Jo Siritzky, who through their distribution company, Athos Films, feed French offbeat and mainly foreign pix into eight specialized firstruns on the Champs-Elysees, maintain that the excellent biz racked up by Michael Antonioni's Italian pic "L'Avventura" (The Adventure) is no fluke but an indication of the general public's desire for more adult fare for tieir filmgoing.

This is the picture which was booed at the Cannes Festival and considered anti-commercial yet drew 127,960 patrons in its first at two small seaters and is racking up good biz all over France in a dubbed version.

"Avventura" delved into the impossibility of lasting emotions and love among the Italian Milanese upper sect. Siritzkys also point to the worldwise biz of the French "Hiroshima Mon Amour," the literary tale of a love affair of a French woman and a Japanese on the background of memories of the Atom Bomb and the occupation of France. At one time this release would have been considered too specialized for anything but arties and it is now getting full-scale general distrib here and in most western countries.

Siritzkys can only feel that audiences want more probing, deeper films. Ingmar Bergman's "The Virgin Spring" is turning out a better biz affair in its dubbed version in the provinces than it did in Paris.

Paris still keys overall biz but out-of-town French audiences are also beginning to give dough to offheaters. A mordant, macabre Hispano pic "El Cochecito" has also come in for solid reviews and biz and a new Antonioni Italo pic "La Notti" (Night) also kicked off for solid opening biz this week.

Siritzkys are now looking for unique Yank indie fare for distrib here and already have John Cassavetes' "Shadows" set and are dickering for Shirley Clarke's "The Connection."

Wise Softens Stereo On 'West Side Story'; Tandem Direction Okay, Not Easy

Hollywood, March 7.

A conflict is developing between the picturemen and the soundmen over the use of sterephonic sound, according to producer-director Robert Wise. Wise maintains that the overextension of the employment of stereo sound is disturbing and detracts from the enjoyment of a picture.

He is determined to control the direction of the sound in "West Side Story," which he is currently editing on the Samuel Goldwyn lot. Wise has no objection to directional sound per se in the large-screen 70m presentations when the sound comes from places on the screen, but he is unalterably opposed to sounds emanating off the screen area as, for example, from the back of the theatre or from the extreme sides. Wise contends that these sounds are artificial.

"West Side Story," which Wise co-directed with Jerome Robbins, will be presented without the introductory title or credits. It will be offered similar to a stage presentation.

Despite the unusual arrangement of utilizing two directors, Wise said there was no conflict between himself and Robbins. He acklowledged, however, that "it wasn't the easiest thing in the world for both of us." He pointed out that in the area of dance and songs—Robbins had preemption, while in strictly dramatic portions he had first call. However, they would each consult and give reactions to each scene filmed no matter in what area it fell.

Write In the Eclipse

Rome, March 7.

Decision of producer Dino De Laurentiis and director Richard Fleischer to utilize the recent eclipse of the sun here for the crucifixion scene of "Barabbas" was made only 48 hours in advance. Situation obviously didn't allow for retakes.

Lighting was the principal problem to cameraman Aldo Tonti, who was shooting in Technicolor and Technirama. Three cameras were used, one for the eclipse itself, one for a closeup of the cross on which Christ was hung, and one for a master shot. Shooting was done on a hilltop near Roccastrads, 120 miles north of Rome and involved a cast and crew of 80 persons. Total cost of the sequence was a little more than $16,000.

Rothman Calls 7 Sets of Salesmen Archaic Habit

Columbia Pictures International topper Mo Rothman foresees the recently developed European pattern of unified film distribution operation as inevitable for the U. S. and, in fact, all domestic sales methods. No need for seven different picture distrib organizations, he feels, citing that the global customers are so sharply hewed that "it doesn't make sense for seven different people from seven different sales organizations knocking on the door of the same people when one team could do the job."

It's different from production since that is still individual artistry and achievement but, on the sales end, Rothman cites that the bulk or the cream customers are sharply defined. In England it's ABC and Rank; in France it's the Gaumont, Pathe or Sogec chains; Italy, too, has its strong regional circuits; ditto UFA and others in Germany; in Australia it's Hoyts and Greater Union; in New Zealand it's Kerridge-Odeon and the Modabay circuits.

Rothman heads for a European quickie on March 17.

$114,574 NET LOSS, 13 WEEKS, FOR NT&T

Los Angeles, March 7.

National Theatres & Television, Inc., sustained a net loss of $114,574, equal to four cents per share on total revenue of $9,960,000, for 13 weeks ended Dec. 27, 1960, prexy B. Gerald Cantor reported over weekend in first-quarter statement to stockholders. Figure compares with a net income of $401,159 for corresponding period in 1959, or 15c per share on revenues of $11,533,000.

Cantor noted that theatre operations had improved substantially, and were profitable in January and February of this year. He also reported that the 1959 quarter included earnings from radio and television broadcasting interests totalling $269,000, of which company has since disposed. He declared these interests were sold for a profit of $3,000,000 during 1960.

Circuit topper pointed out that the first quarter of 1959 reflected unusually large profits—totalling $865,000—from disposition of theatres and real estate, while gains from similar dispositions in most recent quarter were $107,000.

WM. WYLER ON 'CHILDREN'S HR.'

Hollywood, March 7.

Perhaps the strongest indication of the Production Code's new maturity will be evident in the comparison of Lillian Hellman's "The Children's Hour" as made in 1935 and the new version William Wyler is currently preparing for production for the Mirisch Co. via United Artists.

The 1935 filmization of Miss Hellman's play as produced by Samuel Goldwyn and released under the title "We Three," was, per Wyler, who helmed the original film production, too, a "watered-down" version. "I wouldn't dream of re-making it if it were the same story," he said. "I've learned how it should have been made in the first place. For adults it wasn't a very good picture."

The 1935 film, according to Wyler, consisted merely of an old-fashioned triangle. The fiance of one of the schoolteachers was accused of having an affair with her best friend. The new version, Wyler insisted, is not about lesbians, but is about malicious and unmalicious gossip.

"I wouldn't make a picture about lesbians," he said. "The theme doesn't attract me. Nor would I make a picture if there were not a grain of truth in the accusations. The tragedy is caused by the grain of truth." As explained, there is never a relationship between the two women, but the impact of the gossip makes one of them realize that she has a special yen for her friend. "I think this is a more moral picture," he said. "I'm not making the picture for sensationalism or for a fast buck. I hope we won't have any difficulty. I've never had any trouble with the Production Code."

As To Moppets

Referring to the earlier film, Wyler said: "We were working under great difficulties—making pictures for children. We can't go on doing this. Let exhibitors put on special Saturday matinees for children."

Wyler, as are many other Hollywood producers, is in favor of a system of classification. If we make pictures for children we lose the adults. I don't want money from children on pictures they shouldn't see."

The film industry, he noted, can't be the guardians and take the place of parents. Parents, Wyler contended, should be the ones to guide their children in the choice of films just as they should decide what books and tv shows are suitable and which people are suitable for them to associate with. What children should or should not see depends on the parents' judgment of their own children, Wyler stated. The director pointed out that he had four children of various ages and that he carefully supervised the film entertainment of his youngsters, which included keeping them away from some of his own pictures. "I can't oversee the job of all parents," he added.

No More Spectacles

Wyler, who has received widespread acclaim for his direction of "Ben-Hur," said he's had it as far as spectacles go. "If anybody sends me a spectacle script, back it goes. That's not my style.

ZINNEMANN TO CANNES AS U.S. REPRESENTATIVE

Paris, March 7.

Academy Award winning director Fred Zinnemann has accepted the invitation of the Cannes Film Festival governing committee to serve as the U. S. representative on the international jury of this year's fest, May 3-16.

Last year's U. S. juror was author Henry Miller, whose writings are extremely popular in France. Zinnemann, who won an Oscar for his "From Here to Eternity," has also been much lauded here for "Hatful of Rain" and "Nun's Story."

20th-Fox Nicer to Indie Producer Than UA?—Rossen Thinks So

United Artists, long touted as the indie producer's dream home-away-from-home, etc., may be a little more conservative in its approach to indie problems than such an old-line, major studio-type operation as 20th-Fox.

At least that's the impression one gathers from talking to writer-director-producer Robert Rossen whose indie project, "The Hustler" (tentatively retitled "Stroke of Luck") started production in New York this week for 20th-Fox release.

Rossen had originally tried to peddle his "Hustler" package (the finished screenplay, plus himself as director-producer) to UA, but they were only interested in the package if it were complete with star as b.o. insurance. Rossen in turn talked to 20th prexy Spyros P. Skouras, who accepted the package—sans star—in a deal which Rossen believes to be the first truly independent deal that 20th has ever made on a one-pic basis. Subsequent to the deal, Rossen signed Paul Newman to head up the cast which includes Jackie Gleason and Piper Laurie.

Actually, when Rossen first became interested in the property, UA advanced him the money to take an option on the novel, with the agreement that if deal wasn't consummated in two years, he would repay UA the money lent, plus (no fools they) interest. This is what eventually happened.

Rossen, who won an Oscar for his "All The Kings Men," has in recent years been spending his time directing other people's properties, Darryl Zanuck's "Island in The Sun," William Goetz' "They Came to Cordura."

Happy He

In New York Friday (3) on the eve of the start of "The Hustler," he gave every impression of being immensely pleased to be back functioning as his own boss. In his offices on West 57th Street, the du-

Obligingly Postponed

Hollywood, March 7.

Allied Artists expects to reap fine harvest from the postponements of Adolf Eichmann's trial from mid-March to sometime in April.

Company has more than 200 opening dates for its release of the Bischoff-Diamond indie, "Operation Eichmann," skedded for March 15. Execs feel that continuing publicity on Nazi's trial in Israel will be an added plus for pic now and later.

Airline Smarties Hypo Early-Week: Films Please Copy

Hollywood, March 7.

Segments of exhibition to the contrary, Jerry Bresler contends theatre biz is still a weekend affair and some fresh stratagems are needed to stimulate Monday-through-Thursday attendance. To think otherwise, claims the Columbia producer, is to gainsay reality in the form of weekend vs. weekday grosses.

He thinks, for one, that exhibition could profitably ape the airlines—designate Monday, say, as "Family Night." Other schemes for other days, too, such as a second feature change on one of the four week nights. Even roadshow attractions could get into the act—e.g., full tariff for the father, half for the wife, with kids under 15 cuffed.

"We've got to change the pattern of exhibition," says Bresler. "Instead of an everyday pattern, it's got to be a day-by-day task of getting business, whether it means new customers or getting back the regulars who have come to accept teevee as their new form of entertainment."

The Bresler sound-off also occasioned a rebuke at exhibs who've been crying for more family product. "We're giving them what they want at greater costs, but what are theatremen doing about increasing the return at the boxoffice? Very little to warrant the screaming."

PERSPECTA INVENTOR'S SUIT 100% DEFEAT

Suit asking $120,000,000 in damages, instituted by C. Robert Fine, inventor of the Perspecta directional sound system, against Arthur Loew individually, the Loew's companies, Paramount and Warners, was dismissed in New York Supreme Court yesterday (Tues.). At the same time, a counter-claim against Fine was adjudicated valid by Justice Henry Epstein, who instructed a referee to fix damages.

In the principal action, Fine alleged the defendants defrauded him of royalties and backed away from contractual obligations. Louis Nizer, for the defendants, first moved for a dismissal as concerning Par and WB and this was immediately granted. Nizer then asked for a directed verdict (it was a jury trial) favoring Loew and the Loew's companies. This, too, was granted.

Niver thereupon asked for the counter-claim judgment. Charge in this instance was that Fine opened his own Fine Recording Co. in competition with Loew's Fine Sound Inc. this allegedly being an unfair business practice and contrary to the Fine-Loew's agreement. This also was granted, with the extent of damges to be determined.

Aaran Danzig represented Fine.

Curtis Kenyon Joins Par; Englund His Successor As Writers Guild Prez

Hollywood, March 7

Curtis Kenyon has resigned as prexy of Writers Guild of America, West, to join Paramount as story department head. He checked into new post yesterday.

Ken Englund automatically moves up from 1st vp to prexy, and James Webb moves into prexyship of Guild's screen branch. Duo's automatic promotions expire in May, when Kenyon's two-year term was due to expire.

Bernard Fei s ankled Par story spot in January to join Preminger-Stuart Agency as a partner.

BOB LIPPERT IN N.Y. FOR UPPED-BUDGET OK

Hollywood, March 7.

Robert L. Lippert is in Gotham for confabs with prexy Spyros Skouras on tilts in budgets for producer's slate of 16 features for 20th-Fox.

Filmaker gradually has been upping his pix costs. Most recent Lippert productions were "Battle at Bloody Beach," Audie Murphy starrer costing $585,000; and "The Big Show," Esther Williams-Cliff Robertson dualer, $1,000,000. Latter is most highly budgeted pic Lippert has ever made.

Vogel West, Then O'seas

Metro topper Joseph R Vogel left for the Coast over the weekend for quickie confabs with production chief Sol C. Siegel and other studio execs.

He's due back today (Wed.) and leaves almost immediately for a two-week prowl of the company's offices in Europe and to survey M-G production activities abroad.

TV Panels Pose Pertinent Question: Who 'Speaks For' Picture Industry?

Who are the key men of the motion picture industry as far as the general public is concerned—that is, the men who make the news and speak out on key issues confronting the industry?

Think about it a minute and you'll probably come up with a half a dozen names, none of whom is a top level policy-maker of the stature of—say—Eric Johnston, prexy of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, or company heads such as 20th-Fox's Spyros P. Skouras or Paramount's Barney Balaban.

Instead, that portion of the public interested in something more than the physical health of Elizabeth Taylor or the marital status of Marilyn Monroe, must rely on such men as Otto Preminger, Dore Schary, Arthur L. Mayer, Bosley Crowther, Jerry Wald, Stanley Kramer, and when he has a picture about to go into release) Samuel Goldwyn.

With the exception of Crowther, who is first, last and always, a newspaperman, all these men are indie operators who, highly conscious of the value of publicity, are indefatigible tv panelists, article signers and appearers-in-person generally. And, being indies, they inevitably reflect a highly personal point of view which may not jibe with the public image the MPAA might like to create.

Prem Vs Dory

Last week, for example, it was disclosed that an upcoming NBC-TV debate on film classification ("Nation's Future," April 29) will feature Preminger (pro) and Schary (con). Why, it's asked around the homeoffices, is Schary called upon to represent the MPAA view? This is no reflection on Schary or his abilities; it's just that the producer has been comparatively inactive in Hollywood in recent years ("Lonelyhearts," 1958, and "Sunrise at Campobello," 1960) and, in fact, has been devoting most of his time to the legitimate theatre.

Similarly, on a recent John Crosby tv show which set out to discuss the state of the industry, the panel consisted of Preminger, Crowther, and writers George Axelrod and Ben Hecht. Maybe the real policymakers—Johnston, Skouras, Balaban, etc.—decline to appear, or maybe they just aren't invited. In any case, it's suggested, now may be the time for a more concerted effort to put over the major company point of view, if, indeed, there is any in this era of growing independence.

This general situation was touched upon last Friday (3) by producer Wald in a speech before the U. of Pennsylvania's School of Commerce in Philadelphia. Wald, who describes himself as "a sort of dependent independent producer," in effect represents the link between outright indie producer and the studio contract man, working as he does within the frame of a big studio (20th) but in fairly autonomous fashion. Thus, his point of view might be a little more broad than most.

Said Wald candidly: if there is any top-level, constructive and positive thinking among the major executives on all the important problems which beset the industry, "I certainly am not aware of it."

Lack of coordination and cooperation in the film industry, he said, is reflected in the "tremendous" problems which face the industry. Today, principally censorship, but also in lack of new stars, growing foreign competition, and "the slow diminution of executive and administrative talent through a failure to train new men and new minds."

Thus, even to get the film industry's major problems highlighted in public print, it takes one of the six aforementioned image makers.

Lee Katz, Julien Derode Manage 'Day' Production

Producer Darryl Zanuck has appointed Lee Katz general production manager on 20th-Fox's "The Longest Day," due to start shooting in Europe in August.

Julien Derode will be associate production manager.

National Boxoffice Survey

Biz Turns Spotty; 'Exodus' Champ, 'Alamo' Second, 'Pepe' 3d, 'Impostor' 4th, 'Spartacus' 5th

Influence of Lent and some weaker films are making for a somewhat spotty boxoffice picture in key cities covered by VARIETY in the current stanza. Rain and some snow in different keys also are rated downbeat factors.

"Exodus" (UA) is still champ at the wickets as it was a week ago. Only this session, it is by a much larger margin. "The Alamo" (UA) is soaring to second position by dint of some remarkable showings, via popscale dates, in seven key cities. And its coin total does not include numerous Texas playdates where racking up amazing biz.

"Pepe" (Col), while still a bit uneven, is pushing to third position with a gross of better than $175,000. "Great Impostor" (U), which was coming along big last round, is soaring to fourth position. It's money total does not take in area saturation playdates in Detroit and L. A., where it is amassing a great gross total. Pic is topping "Pillow Talk," "Imitation of Life" and "Operation Petticoat" biz in several keys.

"Spartacus" (U) is capturing fifth position. "World of Suzie Wong" (Par) is finishing sixth. "101 Dalmatians" (BV), which likely will be heard from in the future, is taking seventh spot.

"Misfits" (UA), long high in weekly listings, is winding up eighth. "Ben-Hur" (M-G) is landing ninth place. "Where Boys Are," from same company, is finishing 10th.

"Gorgo" (M-G), comparatively new, is doing well enough to cop 11th spot while "Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) rounds out the Top 12 pix. "Never On Sunday" (Lope), "Go Naked in World" (M-G) "Tunes of Glory" (Lope) and "Ballad of Soldier" (Kings) are the runner-up films in that order.

"Hoodlum Priest" (UA) looms as one of the more promising new pix. It is wow in St. Louis, lively in K.C. and nice in Minneapolis. "Millionairess" (20th), very spotty to date, is okay to lean in most keys currently.

"Cry For Happy" (Col), another newcomer, looks fat in Washington, tall in Pitt and neat in N. Y. "Sanctuary" (20th), fair in N. Y., looms solid in Minneapolis. "Take Giant Step" (20th) is highly disappointing in N. Y.

"Can-Can" 20th), so-so in Toronto, looks nice in Frisco. "Village of Damned" (M-G), not so good in Portland, shapes okay in St. Louis. "Entertainer" (Cont) is hotsy in Chi and good in Washington.

"Grass Is Greener" (U), high on list for some weeks, looms nice in L. A. and good in Frisco. "Make Mine Mink" (Cont) is rated hep in Chi.

"Facts of Life" (UA) still is solid on longrun in N. Y. "Flaming Star" (20th) shapes dull in Cincy.

SOL SCHWARTZ WEST FOR STUDIO WARM-UP

New Columbia Pictures veepee Sol A. Schwartz flew to the Coast yesterday (Tues.) for a week and possibly two weeks' studio indoctrination as prelude to his taking over some of the production load and eventually succeeding Sam Briskin as studio head.

Col prexy Abe Schneider and veepee Leo Jaffe have extended their Hollywood huddles with Briskin on the new Col production program and suggested Schwartz join them while all are at the studio.

Former president of RKO Theatres will headquarter at the Beverly Hills Hotel and presumably will return to New York, thence go to London for powwows with Col's European production head, Mike Frankovich. Eventually Schwartz will headquarter at the Hollywood studio.

Mrs. Schwartz is with him on this preliminary trip, his first under the aegis of his new affiliation.

Eddie Fisher Services Issue, Ramrod Vs. RKO

Hollywood, March 7.

Ramrod Productions, Inc., yesterday (Mon.) filed breach of contract suit in L. A. Superior Court against RKO General Inc., formerly RKO, seeking damages of $1,400,000. Plaintiff also seeks restraining order against RKO's permitting exhibition of "Bundle of Joy," with Eddie Fisher prior to June 5, 1961, the expiration date of the five-year period specified under a loanout contract dated June 5, 1956.

Ramrod, which cites a 10-year exclusive contract for Fisher's services, dated April 5, 1956, contends "Bundle of Joy" (formerly "Bachelor Mother") has been shown 14 times on tv.

Based on the $100,000 Fisher got for appearing in "Butterfield 8," on Ramrod loanout to Metro, plaintiff estimated his services for the 14 tv showings are worth $1,400,000.

Newcomers to 20th Board

Scheduled to attend the 20th-Fox board meeting today (Wed.) in New York are John Loeb and Milton S. Gould, prospective new directors if board follows through with the proposal to increase membership from 10 to 12.

Loeb, of the brokerage firm of Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades & Co., and attorney Gould, of Gallop, Climenko & Gould, represent substantial group of 20th shareholders.

Ballyhooliganism Touches Pride

Canadians Resent 'Desecration' of Cenotaph As Indian Stunt for 'The Canadian'—Mayor in Jam

Toronto, March 7.

The Six Nations Indians were duped in their laying of a wreath on the Cenotaph and so was Mayor Nathan Phillips in being made an Indian chief, accepting a headdress and being dubbed "Mayor of All the People." According to an uproar from City Council members, they charged that "commercialization of a film" had intruded on City Hall in the Toronto showing of "The Canadian" (20th) which started an engagement here at the Imperial, Canada's largest theatre and flagship of Famous Players. (House seats 3,343.)

With City Council members vehemently claiming that over-zealous exploitation men had "overstepped the bounds of good taste," the Indian chiefs were criticized for their newspaper-camera posing with a wreath—supplied and paid for by the 20th Century-Fox staff—which the Redmen were to place on the Cenotaph, the acceptance of an honorary chieftainship by Mayor Phillips, complete with war-bonnet, and His Worship's promise that a steer would be provided at the Six Nations forthcoming feast.

Shock was expressed by Councillors at "desecration of the Cenotaph" and the war whoops and dancing of the 29 Indian chiefs in which the mayor participated in his City Hall chambers. Several members of City Hall Council snorted that Mayor Phillips will have to buy his own steer and that "the city will not foot the bill." Said Councillor Charles Tidy, a World War II veteran; "Let's hope that the exploitation of a film never happens again at City Hall."

Edgar Norris, city clerk, admitted that no request had come from the Indian chiefs to lay a wreath; that it "had come from the theatre people."

On the publicity backfire of the opening of "The Canadians," filmed in Saskatchewan and dealing with the refuge sought in Canada by the Indian perpetrators of the Custer massacre, Teresa Stratus, Metopera soprano, made an on-stage appearance of her motion picture debut.

MORTGAGED PIX MAY FLOP--CAPRA

Hollywood, March 7.

While a majority of Hollywood producers have hailed their emancipated status, veteran filmmaker Frank Capra contends there are more disadvantages than advantages in the independent setup.

Capra, now preparing "Pocketful of Miracles," a remake of his own "Lady For a Day," for United Artists release, contends that the present-day "star system must" makes the independent producer-director the "low man on the totem pole." He said he preferred the old studio setup where the producer had access to the company's stable of stars.

"You have to be a little nuts to be an independent producer," Capra declared. The producer-director deplored the current practice whereby actors are used to finance a motion picture. Although acknowledging that actors are entitled to what they can get, Capra said he did not think that the actors remuneration—because of the economics of present-day picture-making — is commensurate with what they bring in at the boxoffice.

"No star in the world or combination of stars," he said, "can carry a bad picture," Capra charged that the indie producer is saddled immediately with an enormous government license to make a picture because of the demands of the stars. "The minute you guarantee an actor $1,000,000," Capra explained "it's equivalent to paying the government $900,000 for a license for the privilege of making a picture." He pointed out that the money had to be borrowed and that interest had to be paid on the loan.

The best solution, in Capra's opinion, would be a system where the star would be guaranteed a small amount and he would gamble on the profits. "That's what an independent producer has to do," he maintained. The producer, he added, is the last one to receive any payoff. The real heavies in the situation, according to Capra, are the financing distributors who insist that star names be used "no matter how good the producer-director." Another drawback of the stars-only system, Capra insisted, was the necessity of having to wait frequently for as much as two years before one of the favored performers is available for a role.

Capra, whose cast for "Pocketful" includes Glenn Ford, Bette Davis, Hope Lange, and Arthur O'Connell, will roll the film on the Paramount lot as soon as Ford winds up his assignment in Metro's "Four Horsemen of the Apoclypse." The new version of Damon Runyon's "Lady For a Day," which Capra made in 1932, was written by Hal Kanter and Capra. The producer-director said that the time period would not be updated and the story would take place in the same depression era of the '30s as the original.

Importers Watch Oscar's '61 Pick; If Sweden's 'Spring' Should Win Rules Change Pressure to Rise

New York importing fraternity is going to be loud and vociferous in saying "We told you so" if Sweden's entry in this year's Oscar derby, "The Virgin Spring," wins the Academy Award as the best foreign language film of the year. The importers, via their Independent Film Importers & Distributors of America, for some time now has been urging the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences to change—or at least modify—eligibility rules governing the Oscar for best foreign language pic. As things stand now, every country nominates its own entry, from which list the five final nominees are chosen by the Academy.

IFIDA has asked that this group of films be supplemented by also making eligible those foreign language films which have opened in the States during the preceding calendar year.

The importers point out that while theoretically it's possible for a film to win the Oscar which has never been commercially shown in the States, in actuality this has never happened. In fact, in the last two years, the award-winning picture has always been the only one of the five nominees which has been in release here, and thus, think the importers, benefited unfairly (via publicity and word-of-mouth) over the other, lesser known entries.

Last year the French "Black Orpheus" won the Oscar, and the year before that, the French "Mon Oncle" took the prize. In both cases; winner was the only pic among the nominees which had been commercially exhibited.

This being the case, the importers say, why not include in eligibility all the pix which have been opened in the States in the year of competition?

Ingmar Bergman's "Virgin Spring" is the only one of the 1961 nominees to have been commercially shown. This, the importers reason, has given it a distinct advantage over such other promising contenders as France's "La Verite" and Italy's "Kapo," among others. If "Spring" wins, there's certain to be a stepped up drive to get the Oscar rules changed.

Situation, of course, is a touchy one for discussion at present (before the results are known), since "Spring" has been widely hailed as a fine film, and one that could well be expected to be among the top contenders even if it had not been widely released in the States.

A Sturdy Demand

New York office of the Arthur P. Jacobs Co. handouts that Warren Beatty, following "enthusiastic reaction" to early footage of a film he's making in London, has been signed for roles in two more "top properties," and will return to Hollywood at the end of this month to discuss offers with 20th, Paramount, Columbia, Warners, Columbia and Metro.

Universal and Allied Artists weren't mentioned.

Joe Levine Off On Exhib Safari

Joe Levine goes forth to woo the exhibitor chaps again when his "Showmanship Caravan" gets rolling cross-country later this month to promote his three features for Metro release this year—"Morgan the Pirate," "Thief of Baghdad," and "Wonders of Aladdin."

He'll pitch first to New England and mid-Atlantic theatremen at luncheon March 27 in the Waldorf Starlight Room, N. Y. Caravan's contingent will include George Jessel; and from Metro: Robert Mochrie, veep and sales g.m.; Burtus Bishop Jr. and Herman L. Ripp. From Levine's staff: Eddie Solomon, Ed Feldman, Robert Weston and Judson Parker.

Other meetings are down for the Ambassador West, Chicago, April 3; Dinkler-Plaza, Atlanta, the 4th; Statler-Hilton, Dallas, 5th; Beverly Hills Hotel, L. A., 6th; and the Fairmont, San Francisco, the 7th.

"Pirate" and "Baghdad" are slated for summer release, and "Aladdin" for late fall.

Van Heflin to Ceylon With Italian Troupe

New Delhi, Feb. 28.

Van Heflin, Arlene Dahl or Tina Louise and Silvana Pampanini are to be the leads in a $600,000 international production likely to be made on the island of Ceylon, where an advance crew of the Italian producing company has arrived to scout locations. Pic will be called "The Burmese Whip."

"Whip" is also to have a Ceylonese actress and actor as featured players. Some 1,000 Ceylonese are expected to be employed in various capacities in th course of shooting. Projected location is Negombo, 15 miles from the Ceylonese capital city of Colombo.

New Directors Too In-an-Out?

On Furlough From Hollywood Beat, Bob Thomas Blames Directors for Screen's Troubles

Tokyo, March 7.

Here on a Pacific tour that included stops at Hawaii, Tahiti and Hong Kong, Bob Thomas, the Associated Press Hollywood columnist, said, "There's nothing wrong with Hollywood that a new wave won't cure."

He said, "Hollywood needs a new burst of talent—stars, writers, producers, but especially directors, who are the real masters of the film medium," Thomas continued. "Such a flowering came in the '30's with the emergence of Wyler, Stevens, Capra, McCarey, Hawks, Ford, etc. All of them came up from the ranks and knew every aspect of moviemaking."

Thomas added, "The trouble now is that most of the great directors make only epics and create a film only every year or two. The directors who have risen since the war are mostly from tv and the stage. They haven't mastered the medium. They don't even work hard at it. They make a picture a year, then hustle back to the stage or tv instead of sticking around and learning the film craft, which is an entirely different baby than the other two mediums."

Thomas cited contrasts. He said, "Kazan showed his greatness in 'East of Eden' and 'On the Waterfront.' But he isn't willing to devote his full time to the art and hasn't reached his full potential as a film director. On the other hand," Thomas noted, "Fred Zinnemann, no newcomer to films, of course, but a recent member of the top ranks, makes films his life."

MARGOLD LOSES ANEW IN ANTITRUST ACTION

A move to reopen a Dec. 1960 judgment which dismissed for lack of prosecution two antitrust cases against major film companies has been denied by New York Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan.

The suits, which charged discrimination by defendants Warner Bros., RKO, 20th-Fox, Skouras Theatres, Columbia, United Artists and Universal, were brought by the Margold Amusement Corp., which operated the Canal Theatre in lower Manhattan, the G&W Operations Corp., which ran the Apollo on Clinton St. (lower eastside).

Margold had asked for triple damages of $180,000, G&W had asked $150,000.

SUES SCAMP MAGAZINE

Invasion of privacy suit has been filed in L.A. Superior Court by actress Sharon Wiley, seeking $150,000 damages for allegedly using her photograph in Scamp magazine of March, 1961 without authorization.

Ronald Vogel, photographer, and Splendid Publications are defendants. Complainant seeks injunction to prevent further unauthorized use of photos.

The Police Dog Story

Routine cops 'n' robbers meller with a fairly novel canine story twist that makes it especially serviceable as kiddie draw.

Hollywood, Feb. 23.

Wolf (dog)	Rocco

Concentrating on the canine element in their story, the Zenith Pictures team of producer Robert E. Kent and director Edward L. Cahn have constructed a serviceable lower-berth item out of an essentially standard, insipid cops 'n' robbers melodrama. For best results, the United Artists release should be programmed in double bills aimed at a moppet audience.

Orville H. Hampton's screenplay dwells at length on the training routine prescribed for rookie contenders of the police K-Nine Corps, then veers into a routine pattern in which policeman and policedog round up a gang of insurance-motivated arsonists. Star of the picture is Rocco (redubbed "Wolf," a handle more befitting a pooch of such heroic proportions), a husky German Shepherd who can growl, arf-arf, hurdle a fence and chew up a trousers leg with the best of 'em. That the dog is more impressive than the two-legged characters in this film can be attributed at least partially to the stiff, mechanical dialog penned by Hampton, delivery of which "Wolf" alone is spared.

James Brown capably essays the role of the rookie cop assigned to train the dog. Romantic interest is dispatched by Merry Anders. Adequate support is contributed by Barry Kelley, Milton Frome, Vinton Hayworth and Francis De Sales. Cahn's direction has a tendency toward repetition, but he has succeeded in minimizing the maudlin aspects that so easily can seep into a picture in which an animal is the hero.

Various crafts are dispatched in an unpretentious, businesslike manner. Among these assists are Maury Gertsman's camera work, Serge Krizman's sets and Arthur Hilton's editing. Tube.

Konga
(SPECTAMATION-COLOR)

Fairly exploitable fantasy-spectacle of a familiar nature—the mad scientist and his rebellious monster.

Hollywood, Feb. 24.

American International release of Herman Cohen production. Stars Michael Gough, Margo Johns, Jess Conrad, Claire Gordon. Directed by Jack Lemont. Herman Cohen's production of "Konga" is essentially a combination of three other monster spectacles of the screen. It is akin to "Frankenstein" in theme (mad scientist and superhuman creation), "King Kong" in physique (the oversized gorilla), and "Gorgo" in locale of destruction (London). But "Konga," regrettably, is not quite the equal of any one of the three. American International Pictures will have to bank on the film's intrinsic exploitation qualities to arouse the filmgoing public's curiosity. Lacking the novelty, names and thought-provoking values that spur word-of-mouth, the picture is a logical candidate for the swift saturation method of exhibition.

That the film is as diverting as it is from time to time reflects credit on director John Lemont, who has managed to keep his actors disciplined and concerned; cameraman Desmond Dickinson, whose Eastman-tinted views of plant, animal and human monstrosities are often intriguing; and art director Wilfred Arnold, who has designed some admirably ornate and employable sets and objects for the occasion.

Producer Cohen penned the screenplay in collaboration with Aben Kandel. Basis for the existence of their mutant monster is discovery of a link in the evolutionary barrier between plant and animal life by a botany professor who returns to London after a year in the jungles of Africa. The professor, unfortunately, is mad. Injecting a chimp (Konga) with a phenomenal growth serum extracted from the roots of an ultra-carnivorous plant, he creates a gorilla of super proportions, hypnotizes it and sets it loose on a campaign of murder and destruction.

Film is burdened with verbose, repetitious scientific gobbledegook, but ultimately boils down to the inevitable skyscraper-hopping climax in which the army puts an abrupt end to Konga's messy monkeyshines in the vicinity of Big Ben.

Of additional aid is the fact that the actors are British. Somehow the London tongue lends a certain extra degree of persuasiveness to a fantasy such as this, at least to the American ear.

A process dubbed Specta-Mation is utilized to accomplish the spectacle aspects. Jack Slade's editing is skilled, Gerard Schurmann's score stimulating.

Just why the professor is so unfavorably disposed toward his fellow man is never clear, but Michael Gough plays the part with style and fervor. Margo Johns is earnest as his ill-fated housekeeper. Claire Gordon is a shapely addition to the cast as a student over whom Gough goes romantically wild. Tube.

Saint Tropez Blues
(FRENCH-COLOR)

Paris, Feb. 28.

Champs-Elysees release of Jules Borkon production. With Marie Laforet, Fausto Tozzi, Jacques Higelin, Pierre Michael, J. M. Riviere, Monique Just. Written and directed by Marcel Moussy. Camera (Eastmancolor), Pierre Lhomme; editor, Denise Natot; music, Henri Crolla. Previewed in Paris. Running time, 90 MINS.

Anne-Marie	Marie Laforet
Trabu	Fausto Tozzi
Jean-Paul	Jacques Higelin
Francois	J. M. Riviere
Veronique	Monique Just

Film is the first "New Wave" pic by ex-scripter Marcel Moussy. It attempts to treat the freer sex habits of the youth of today in comedy fashion. He is also the first to use color. Located in the Riviera resort of Saint Tropéz, the virginal heroine manages to remain chaste through a myriad of temptations and mild orgies. It is lightly done but meanders somewhat, with flimsy characterizations. This primarily is an exploitation item on its frankness and youthful pranks.

A bookish girl, who is supposed to be home catching up on her studies, goes off to a summer resort with a childhood friend. The friend is a free-wheeling boy and they are soon involved with the free-living art colony of the place. She manages to come out of it intact and realizes she loves the old friend. So they open a nitery together and will presumably live happily ever after.

Director Moussy takes some potshots at the quaint morals of the place but the film rarely settles down to real situation comedies or a true feeling for the problems and escapades of the gilded youth and youth-seeking elders. It has okay acting by a flock of new actors. Marie Laforet is somewhat mannered but Jacques Hegelin denotes a true serio-comic flair as the irrepressible young boy in love. Mosk.

The Canadians
(BRITISH—COLOR)

Plodding drama about the Canadian Mounties, competently performed by Robert Ryan and others, but lacking any real dramatic spark. Tepid b.o. prospect.

London, Feb. 28.

20th-Fox production (Herman E. Webber) and release. Stars Robert Ryan, John Dehner, Torin Thatcher; features Teresa Stratas. Directed by Burt Kennedy. Screenplay, Burt Kennedy; camera, Arthur Ibbetson; editor, Douglas Robertson. At Rialto, London. Running time, 85 MINS.

Frank Bonne	John Dehner
Master Sergeant McGregor	Torin Thatcher
Contable Springer	Burt Metcalfe
Superintendent Walker	John Sutton
Grey	Jack Creley
Ben	Scott Peters
Billy	Richard Alden
The White Squaw	Teresa Stratas

The first British quota picture to be shot solely in Canada is a plodding, tepid drama about Canada's Mounted Police. It is short on high dramatic notes and on humor. Main virtue of pic is the sweeping Canadian scenery but even this is fuzzily photographed, especially in long shots. Despite a dogged performance by Robert Ryan as one of those Mounties who always gets his man and the introduction of singer Teresa Stratas there is nothing much about this one to give a kick to the boxoffice. This seems a safe booking for undemanding audiences, but that's its limit.

General Custer has been wiped out at Little Big Horn and the Sioux have entered Canada to escape the U.S. Cavalry. Ryan and two men are sent to meet the Injuns and tell them that they will be left in peace so long as they remain peaceful. But the Sioux camp is invaded by an American rancher searching for his stolen horses and his three gunhands. The Indians are massacred and the Americans abduct a white squaw as "proof" that they were rescuing a white woman. Nevertheless, Ryan and his two buddies take in the crooks and set off to take them to the Mounties' post. The audience plods along with the little band until the Indians stampede the villains over a high cliff.

That's about all, it takes a tedious time to happen.

A dull script is played out conscientiously but without much spirit by Ryan and this fellow thesps. The only really dramatic scene is when the Sioux take charge and stampede the horses but even this is patently faked. The Sioux are wasted after a promising start. Ryan, expressionless as his horse, gives a stolid performance as the dedicated Mounty who falls gently for the white squaw. Torin Thatcher and Burt Metcalfe are his two men and such slight humor as there is, brought out by the clash between the hard-bitten sergeant (Torin Thatcher) and the rookie.

John Dehner, Jack Creley, Scott Peters and Richard Alden are the heavies and, though they snarl a great deal, they don't add up to much a menace. Teresa Stratas, making her screen debut, sings a couple of songs charmingly but her acting is strictly minor league. Most disappointing aspect of this pic is the way the wonderful Canadian scenery is often wasted through apparent fuzziness in the lensing. It sometimes has the air of 16m film having been blown up. Rich.

Five Guns To Tombstone

Routine lower-berth western. Best fit for the moppet brigades.

Hollywood, Feb. 24.

United Artists release of Robert E. Kent production. With James Brown, John Wilder, Walter Coy, Robert Karnes, Della Sharman, Joe Haworth, Quent Sondergaard, Boyd Morgan, Jon Locke. Directed by Edward L. Cahn. Screenplay, Richard Schayer, Jack De Witt, from story by Arthur Orloff; camera, Maury Gerisman; editor, Bernard Small; art director, Serge Krizman; music, Paul Sawtell, Bert Shefter; sound, Robert Post; assistant director, Herbert S. Greene. Reviewed at Goldwyn Studios, Feb. 24, '61. Running time, 71 MINS.

Just about par for the supporting feature course, "Five Guns to Tombstone" will pad a twin-bill adequately wherever filmgoers still prefer two for the price of one, no matter the fluctuation in A-to-B calibre. There is, however, nothing here for the discriminating audience, and that should be kept in mind when pairing decisions are made. Even incurable western buffs will find nothing novel in the way of plot or character in the Zenith Pictures offering, but they may cotton to its sustained flow of action. The United Artists release will spur its most appreciative response from childrens' sections.

Robert E. Kent's modest production features James Brown as a reformed gunslinger framed into renewed lawlessness by his brother, an escaped convict hired for a huge heist on condition his brainy brother participate. Secretly in cahoots with the authorities, Brown plays along with the baddies and ultimately outfoxes and outguns their leader, whose greed proves his undoing.

Scenarists Richard Schayer and Jack De Witt, working over a yarn by Arthur Orloff, obviously haven't fretted over motivational nuances, choosing, understandably so under the circumstances, to stress action elements. Nor has director Edward L. Cahn labored long with explanatory details in his zeal for action. When a gun is fired and a man is killed in a balcony room of a quiet gambling saloon, none of the poker-playing customers even blinks. Apparently they are too intent on their own killings to notice.

Brown gives a reserved portrayal of the hero. John Wilder delivers an earnest delineation of his confused nephew. One of those laughing boy heavies is essayed in assured fashion by Walter Coy. About all that is required of the femme lead is that she be pretty. Della Sharman is just that.

Supporting work is efficient, as are the unostentatious contributions of cameraman Maury Gertsman, editor Bernard Small, art director Serge Krizman and tuners Paul Sawtell and Bert Shefter. Tube.

Une Aussi Longue Absence
(Such a Long Absence)
(FRENCH)

Paris, March 7.

Procinex production and release. Stars Alida Valli; features Georges Wilson, Amedee, Blavette, Jacques Harden. Directed by Henri Colpi. Screenplay, Marguerite Duras. Gerard Jarlot; camera, Marcel Weiss; editor, Jasmine Chasney. Previewed in Paris. Running time, 95 MINS.

Therese	Alida Valli

For his first pic as a director, film editor Henri Colpi ("Hiroshima Mon Amour" was edited by him) won the coveted French critic's prize, the Prix Louis Delluc. Film is a measured, atmospheric tale that tries to reveal the interior needs and aspects of its characters much in the vein of "Hiroshima" which was also written by Marguerite Duras who penned this script. Result is a slow, deliberate comment on a woman's need to find or relive old love, and war's place in this scheme. This appears mainly an arty theatre bet without the depth of its predecessor, "Hiroshima."

A woman (Alida Valli), who runs a cafe, thinks she sees her supposedly dead husband, killed in deportation during the last war, when a new tramp appears in her neighborhood. He turns out to be an amnesiac and she tries everything to try to make him remember only to have him run off.

Miss Valli is heavier than previously but still handsome and displays an interior intensity and poise that are not quite right for the cafe-owner role. But the pic only uses these real surroundings to detail this woman's longing for her first real love and a chance to experience it again.

Director Colpi has managed to build up tension and flow of catching images. Film just lacks the tie with life to make it truly arresting and gave it the tingle of life which it does not quite achieve.

Miss Valli gives her role an inner intensity while Georges Wilson is effective as the man without a memory. The ending is a brilliant tour-de-force as she tries to bring back his past by sitting before a gaudy jukebox on which she has put a classical record he on once liked.

This is a difficult film but one that might be worth the trouble as art and more general tastes seem to swing to the more personalized, literary-type distaff pix. But it needs specialized handling. Technical credits are excellent. Mosk.

The Trapp Family
(AUSTRIAN-COLOR)

Sentimental family portrait of the angelically warbling Austrian brood. Too outmoded in style to score in today's market, but clears the boards for 20th's future Trapp musical, "Sound Of Music."

Hollywood, Feb. 28.

Twentieth-Fox release of Wolfgang Reinhardt-UTZ Uterman production. Stars Ruth Leuwerik; with Hans Holt, Josef Meinrad, Maria Holst, Friedrich Dumin, Hilda Von Stolz, Michael Ande, Knut Mahlke, Ursula Wolff, Monika Wolf, Angelika Werth, Ursula Ettrich, Monika Ettrich. Directed by Wolfgang Liebeneiner. Screenplay, Herbert Reinecker, based on book by George Hurdalk and memoirs of Baroness Maria Von Trapp; camera (De Luxe), Werner Krien; editor, Margot von Schlieffen; art directors, Robert Herlth, Gottfried Will; music, Frank Grothe; sound, Hans Endraulat, Martin Mueller; assistant director, Zlata Mehlers. Reviewed at the studio, Feb. 28, '61. Running time, 97 MINS.

"The Trapp Family" is a sweet, old-fashioned picture for sweet, old-fashioned people. Once upon a (more innocent) time, say a quarter of a century ago, the Wolfgang Reinhardt-UTZ Uterman production, lensed in Austria, might have been quite a hit with the filmgoing public. But the screen and its audience are presumably made of sterner, slyer, more perceptive stuff these days.

The domestic fortunes of this film are somewhat partially dependent upon the extent of the reactionary, back-to-peaches-and-cream movement spurred by the boldness of theme and provocation of content that has characterized the screen's most important new efforts. Whether this ideological reaction will translate into an appreciable market in this instance is highly doubtful, especially since the product in question is of foreign vintage, is post-dubbed, bears not a single name (other than "Trapp" itself) that carries any weight at the U. S. boxoffice, and is too long and cumbersome for graceful pairing.

The screenplay, penned by Herbert Reinecker from a book by George Hurdalek, is based on the memoirs of the still-living Baroness Maria Von Trapp, which also formed the basis of the Broadway musical, "The Sound of Music," picture rights to which have been purchased by 20th-Fox which, in quickly releasing this version, thus clears the decks for the major undertaking to come. The story traces the activities of this model Austrian brood from the point at which it is joined by its inspirational force—a devoted young convent novice who undertakes the duties of governess of its seven children, later to become their stepmother—up through its flight from Nazi oppression and overseas to America, where its natural choral gifts enable it to catch on in the touring concert circuit and establish happy residence in Vermont.

The film's uncomprisingly sentimental nature has a tendency to slop over into naivete. A more lovable, less dimensional crop of characters is difficult to envision. On top of that, all of the conflicts are predictable and the pace commandeered by director Wolfgang Liebeneiner and supplemented by editor Margot von Schlieffen is ponderous in tempo, lopsided in emphasis. Sole virtue untarnished by dubbing translation is the choral warbling of the children, a delight to the ear and an assault on the heartstrings. Fact they sing like trained angels first time they raise their voices in concert is questionable, to say the least, but then everything wonderful comes pretty easy in this story.

Ruth Leuwerik, who bears a slight resemblance to Claudette Colbert, plays the novice-come-baroness. The character is not sufficiently developed, so that her charming innocence occasionally borders on the artificial, but on the whole she does a persuasive job. As the baron, Hans Holt cuts a handsome, impressively blank figure as a rather hapless example of obsolete nobility in a compressing society giving way to the commoner. The seven children form an attractive unit, individual personality flashing out only in the singing passages.

Frank Grothe's melodious music is an outstanding aspect. The Robert Herlth-Gottfried Will sets, especially the baron's home, are sturdy and elegant, and are appreciatively regarded through Werner Krien's camera via De Luxe Color. Tube.

Walk The Angry Beach

Stark study of lower-depth element on Hollywood fringe in which the glamor capital itself is depicted as the heavy. An earnest, passionate, but undisciplined, rather immature film lacking sufficient b.o. value by arty or general standards.

Hollywood, March 2.

John Patrick Hayes production (no release set). Stars Anthony Vorno, Rue McClanahan. Directed and screenplay by Hayes; camera, Vilis Lapenieks; editor, Esther Poche, Ronald Thorne; music, Bill Marx. Reviewed at General Film Labs, March 2, '61. Running time, 74 MINS.

Mrs. McVea	Lea Marmer

Hollywood's wilder, more sordid elements are the basis for an undisciplined, emotionally bitter "Expose" in "Walk the Angry Beach." Few will deny the baser instincts of mankind are as much a reality in the film capital as they are anywhere but, in implying that the corrupt nature of the community itself is responsible for the tragic death of his hero, a basically decent but confused young man who lacks the self-control or perception to avoid his own destruction, writer-producer-director John Patrick Hayes is guilty of a distorted perspective that tarnishes a no doubt sincere effort.

Although the very earnestness of Hayes' glum, acid point-of-view and the passion with which he presents his case merit industry and community observation, if only to witness the extent to which Hollywood can be held in low esteem, this film is not going to be a favorite down at the Chamber of Commerce nor is it likely to snare very easily the release commitment it is now without, at least from the major Hollywood distribution points. Way shy of respectable art house calibre, far too offbeat and specialized for popular general run, and entirely too risque in its present state to pass the puritan pressure barrier, it is a doubtful prospect for the current domestic cinemarketplace.

Hayes' angry young picture of Hollywood is pegged on the experiences of a young fellow (Anthony Vorno) who: 1) is abandoned by his wife, 2) fails in his junkyard business, 3) tangles with a prospective employer in his bid for a job, 4) joins a pair of crooks in a waterfront heist, 5) falls in love with a mixed-up peeler (Rue McClanahan) who wants to be an actress, but is a sucker for a bedroom "casting" pitch, 6) dies in her arms after he is knifed by one of the theives.

By refusing to give Hollywood, or mankind for that matter, the benefit of the doubt, preferring instead to poke around in all the dark, corrupt corners of human nature, Hayes' never makes it quite clear just what he is saying or proposing, if anything. It is as director that he seems most gifted—particularly in the course of several discerningly-lensed passages (with the aid of his cameraman, Viles Lapenieks). Editing by Esther Poche and Ronald Thorne has a tendency to be too abrupt and to take too much for granted. Original jazz score by Bill Marx, featuring Bud Shank, adds drive and the proper note of agitation.

Vorno does a compendable job as the hero. Miss McClanahan does exceptionally well as his stripper girl friend. General tone of thespic support is satisfactory. Tube.

The Long And The Short And The Tall
(BRITISH)

Gripping war yarn with some standout performances. Lacks women thesps but if public's not now sated by war pix, this one should do well.

London, Feb. 28.

Warner-Pathe release of a Michael Balcon production for Associated-British. Stars Laurence Harvey, Richard Todd, Richard Harris; features David McCallum, Ronald Fraser; John Meillon, John Rees, Kenji Takaki. Directed by Leslie Norman. Screenplay, Wolf Mankowitz, from Willis Hall's play; camera, Edwin Hillier; editor, Gordon Stone; music, Stanley Black. At Corner Theatre, London. Running time, 105 MINS.

Sgt. Mitchem	Richard Todd
Private Bamforth	Laurence Harvey
Corporal Johnstone	Richard Harris
Lance-Corporal Macleish	Ronald Fraser
Private Whitaker	David McCullum
Private Smith	John Meillon
Private Evans	John Rees
Tojo	Kenji Takaki

Director Leslie Norman and scriptwriter Wolf Mankowitz have not been able to resist the temptation to take a great deal of Willis Hall's war play into the open air of the jungle. This is a pity. It loses the sense of pent-in suspense that marked the play so effectively and it also shows up the fact that the Elstree "jungle" is rather phoney. Nothing can detract from the powerful interest of this war yarn, however, for the characters and their sparking are well contrived. Only snag is that there have been many war films and public interest may be satisfied by now. There's reasonably good stellar value in Laurence Harvey and Richard Todd. This measures up as a good boxoffice prospect.

Film depends on characterization rather than on the thinnish plot. It's set in the Far East jungle during the Japanese campaign. A small patrol led by a sergeant (Richard Todd) is cut off. Suddenly "sparks" makes radio contact and jabbering Japanese voices nearby cause them to realize that they're in a spot.

A lone Japanese scout moves into their position and Todd insists that they must get him back to base alive as a source of information. The remainder want to bump him off with the solitary, surprise exception of a loud-mouthed and brash private (Laurence Harvey). The drama of the film comes from the private hatred, misunderstanding and bitterness that each man holds for the other. There are not many highlight physical situations. The pic depends on the dialog which is candid, raw and completely authentic, and also on the conventional but blended characters and their reactions to each other and their plight. There's also an ironic climax.

Standout performance comes from Harvey. It is dramatic license that enables him to behave a way that would undoubtedly have had him up on a charge in a real situation. He is bombastic, amusing and, in scenes with the Jap, remarkably gentle and deserving with sympathy.

The bewildered Jap, subtly played by Kenji Takaki, is another very sound performance.

In fact there is no weak link in the cast. Todd is a dogged, worried sergeant; Richard Harris shapes very good as his righthand man and Ronald Fraser is fine as a dour Scot. David McCallum, John Meillon and John Rees competently make up a cast that is handpicked to put over the author's message.

Edwin Hillier's lensing is okay, as are the other technical credits, except for the too obvious certainty that the film was shot in a studio. But that's a minor moan. Director Leslie Norman has helped to raise an orthodox and rather wordy war adventure to quite a pitch of excitement. Rich.

A vague storyline is used as an excuse to work in a lot of documentary footage on Moscow and various other sectors of Russia. This is simple and unassuming but sans any character or newness in approach for any foreign chances except for possible cutting down for filler use or as tv fodder. Too much Russo stuff has hit Yank screens for this to have much curio value either.

A French video crew float around with one looking for an old wartime friend, and also doing programs about the country. Interludes with girls and a story of finding the financee of the interpreter's girl who has run off due to a misunderstanding, also give excuse for some other traveling footage.

Characters are fairly engaging if one dimensional. Some of the scenic values are okay. But the color is drab and pic overlong for its framework. Mosk.

Frontier Uprising

Adequate supporting fare for western buffs. Good production values.

Hollywood, Feb. 23.

United Artists release of Robert E. Kent production. Stars James Davis, Nancy Hadley, Ken Mayer. Directed by Edward L. Cahn. Screenplay, Owen Harris, from story by George Bruce; camera, Maury Gertsman; editor, Kenneth Crane; art director, Serge Krizman; music, Paul Sawtell, Bert Shefter; assistant director, Herbert S. General Torena	John Marshall
Lieutenant Ruiz	Eugene Iglesias
Chief Taztay	Herman Rudin
Commander Kimball	Addison Richards

"Frontier Uprising" rises slightly above lower-berth western standards in terms of physical proportion, but sings slightly below the norm in story and screenplay values. Upshot is secondary fare of appreciable appeal only to the most easygoing of sagebrush enthusiasts. United Artists is releasing the Zenith Pictures offering, produced by Robert E. Kent.

Jim Davis, star of the syndicated tv series, "Rescue 8," stars in this film as a rugged frontier scout embroiled in the early struggle for California among Yanks, Mexicans and the American Indian. Owen Harris has constructed his screenplay (from the story, "Kit Carson," by George Bruce) to allow for several lively battle passages and one novel sequence in which hero and heroine share a common bath, semi-Japanese style, in a partitioned pool, but his attempts to inject whimsy are clumsy and the dialog is creaky. The film is notable for some sweeping panoramic views of craggy desert country captured through Maury Gertsman's lens under Edward L. Cahn's observant direction, an unusually expansive quality for such a modest picture.

Davis plays agreeably and heroically. Nancy Hadley poses prettily for the camera, but that is a shortcoming of her performance. She seems to be posing, more than performing. Able support is chipped in by Ken Mayer, Nestor Paiva, Don O'Kelly, Eugene Iglesias, Stuart Randall, David Renard, John Marshall, Herman Rudin and Addison Richards.

The film benefits from the journeyman efforts of editor Kenneth Crane, art director Serge Krizman and cleffers Paul Sawtell and Bert Shefter. Tube.

Five Golden Hours
(BRITISH)

Only spasmodically amusing comedy, with too much weight on Ernie Kovacs' shoulders. Unusually heavy-handed production and direction by Mario Zampi. Useful marquee value, but mainly a misfire.

London, Feb 28.

Columbia and Fabio Jenner release of a Mario Zampi production. Stars Ernie Kovacs, Cyd Charisse, George Sanders. Features Kay Hammond, Dennis Price. Directed by Zampi. Original story and screenplay, Hans Wilhelm; camera, Christopher Challis; editor, Bill Lewthwaite; music, Stanley Black. At Odeon, Marble Arch, London. Running time, 89 MINS.

Baroness Sandra	Cyd Charisse
Mr. Bing	George Sanders

Alfredo	Sydney Tafler
Enrico	Martin Benson
1st Lady Guest	Hy Hazel
2nd Lady Guest	Joy Shelton

It's easy to see how the idea of "Five Golden Hours" would appeal to Mario Zampi's impish sense of humor. But something has misfired badly in this comedy which he produced and directed. It is gabby, protracted and largely tedious despite a very sound cast. The names may drag in some customers, but they are likely to be disappointed at the result. Technically the film is okay but Hans Wilhelm's script is not as witty as it may have read and too much onus is flung on the shoulders of Ernie Kovacs, a talented comedian, but one who is more acceptable in smaller doses.

He plays a professional mourner and pallbearer whose racket is to console rich, bereaved widows. This way he lives in considerable comfort. But he really falls for a baroness (Cyd Charisse) despite the fact that she's allegedly penniless. To help her out he persuades three rich widows to lend him money which he claims he can turn into a fortune by playing on the difference in time between Rome and New York—hence the title.

But when the baroness disappears with the loot, he is faced with the problem of explaining to the cheated widows. Kovacs decides to bump them off but when the plan goes haywire, he decides to feign madness. Eventually he marries Miss Charisse, but it seems fairly certain that she has her roving eye on his fortune and that it won't be long before he is attending another funeral, as the principal of the event.

This idea needs a far more nimble touch and wit than it has received. Though the cast works gamely their efforts, with the exception of those of George Sanders, swiftly become tedious. Kovacs tackles the funeral fun and games with huge gusto and earns a few yocks but there is far too much of him.

Sanders is suavely debonair as a fellow inmate of the looney bin while Miss Charisse looks charming as the baroness but has little into which she can get her teeth. Kay Hammond, Clelia Mantania and Avice Landone are the three merry widows.

Some small but telling contributions by Dennis Price, Martin Benson, Hy Hazel, Joy Shelton, John Le Mesurier and Finlay Currie support the principals. But it is the muddled, heavy script that causes the slight joke to go sour. Rich.

La Recreation
(FRENCH)

Paris, March 7.

Columbia release of Elite Films production. Stars Jean Seberg, Christian Marquand; features Evelyne Kerr, Francoise Prevost. Directed by Francois Moreuil. Fabien Collin, Screenplay, Daniel Boulanger. Moreuil based on story by Francoise Sagan; camera, Jean Penzer; editor, Rene Le Henaff. At Ermitage, Paris. Running time, 87 MINS.

Kate	Jean Seberg
Philippe	Christian Marquand
Wife	Francoise Prevost
Friend	Evelyne Kerr

Yank actress Jean Seberg stars in her fourth French pic with this, and it is a first directorial effort by Francois Moreuil. It is also a Francoise Sagan original and has a fresh and airy progression and unpretentious tang that could have this worth an arty theatre spotting ab oad with more general usage inherent in it via its entertainment qualities.

Moreuil has been content to let this simple tale amble along via the impetus of its actors which helps give it a feeling for incident and human relations. However, its Saganesque tale of people trying to love, and an older man's brief affair with a young girl is slight overall. It is pleasant but lacks a forthright conception.

Film is thus sketchy. An American teenager, Miss Seberg spies on a sculptor and his wife from her school. She also sees a hit and run driver too and does not know it is the sculptor until she falls for him. She has an affair with him and then leaves him. Pic is not wicked, but somewhat condescending to the bored upper crust it pictures while the hard-headed American girl, in a French boarding school, eagerly finds her first love in this listless group.

But it is well observed, with a racy American style dialog that manages to go over in French. The defensive wisecracks also score. This is a tenuous pic but has flair and impact in spite of its almost amateurish technical approach. This is a help in not insisting on relations and letting them grow and ripen, and then fade away.

Miss Seberg's aspects also fit as her developing love turns her into a female who has learned a lesson. Christian Marquand and Francoise Prevost are properly vapidly charming as the married couple. Moreuil shows a decided feel for situation comedy and may be heard from in the future. It is good natured and even tender but its almost sentimental indulgence of whim and surface feelings does not give it the needed penetration so this calls for the hard sell on its good points. Mosk.

The World in My Pocket
(GERMAN)

Munich, March 7.

Constantin-Omnia release of Corona (Alexander Grueter) production. Features Nadja Tiller, Rod Steiger, Peter Van Eyck, Jean Servais, Ian Bannen. Directed by Alvin Rakoff. Screenplay, Frank Harvey, based on novel "The World In My Pocket" by James Hadley Chase; camera, Vaclav Vich. Running time, 90 MINS.

The Marseilles setting and the "Rififi" style treatment alone would have made this hardly more than just another version of the much-used Brink's story. But an ingenious turn to the diabolical-comical lets pic come off as delectable fare with strong b.o. potential.

For in the end it is not the police who are spelling doom to the gangster quintet's excruciating efforts to appropriate the armored truck with the $1,000,000 loot, nor the amateur sleuth (this time, amusingly, a juvenile), nor even the familiar falling out among the robbers. It is an inanimate object, the strongbox on wheels itself, which merely has to employ its own inbuilt defense and safety mechanism to reduce to mincemeat what has been prepared and even executed as a perfect crime.

After its capture it goes right on broadcasting its respective location on every point of the further trip. When this is taken care of by cutting a wire, it just continues refusing to let itself be opened by force of explosives, blowtorches, etc., or to give away more than two of the seven code numbers necessary to handle the dial.

Thus defeated by the quasi-demonic power of a mechanical thing the truck's hijackers are losing their minds. First to crack is the safe-dial specialist with the hypersensitive finger touch, then all others. Their fate is played straight and for all its genuinely tragic effects. However, reminding of the kidnappers in the O. Henry story whom their bad boy victim drives crazy to a point where they die to get rid of him without the least bit of ransom, they are at the same time a screamingly funny lot.

The finish, set in the Southern France counterpart of "High Sierra" (on the surface repeating the end of the Bogart-Lupino film classic of the '40s) makes the most of this tragicomic contrast: seven corpses, two from the "good side," the rest comprising the entire team of evildoers, and an armored truck passing back into the hands of its owners, hardly scratched and with its contents intact.

Excellent performances throughout: Austrian Nadja Tiller is the appealing girl who masterminds the robbery attempt. Rod Steiger, past master in the gangster boss line, reveals quite a few new facets; Jean Servais, French veteran of the "Rififi" series, ex-Hollywood's Peter Van Eyck, now a German star and rightly so; and British Ian Bannen, remarkable young new lover type. Terse, underplaying direction by Alvin Rakoff and Vaclav Vich's outstanding camerawork do much to make this one of the more noteworthy pix of this season. Jok.

Les Amours De Paris
(Paris Loves)

Paris, Feb. 28.

Pathe release of Film Matignon production. Stars Dany Cowl, Francois Perier; features Harold Kay, Perrette Pradier, Nicole Courcel, Bernard Verniger. Directed by Jacques Robin, editor, Jacques Lestrangin. At Matignan, Paris. Running time, 100 MINS.

Maurice	Francois Perier
Floris	Dany Cowl
Doctor	Harold Kay
Francoise	Perrette Pradier
Nicole	Nicole Courcel
Jacques	Bernard Verniger

Situation comedy criss-crosses three couples, a cheating married man with a wife who's likewise, a young skirt chaser and a marrying-minded model, and a bumbling, zany couple. All ends happily after many complications, but this does not have the snap for characterization, and the inventiveness to make it of anything but primarily local fodder. Film looms unlikely for foreign marts.

The married man worries only about seeing his wife in the hospital while she has eyes for the doctor; the Don Juan finally marries the girl, and the madcap couple also find romance. Acting is acceptable but without the brightness and necessary sound story to really make their antics funny or beguiling.

New director Jacques Poirenaud seems assured but without the individuality and flair to have all this jell. Technical credits are good. Mosk.

L.A. Perking; 'Alamo' Rousing $26,000, 'Sundowners' Big 27G, 'Impostor' 21G, 'Exodus' 20G, 'Ben-Hur' Sharp $18,000

Los Angeles, March 7.

First-runs here are stacking up fairly well this frame, with a pair of incoming bills plus a number of continued hefty holdovers sparking the overall setup. "The Alamo," swinging over from showcasing at the Carthay on hard-ticket, is evincing plenty of strength on continuous-run at Hollywood Paramount where a boffo $26,000 is in prospect.

"Great Impostor" is heading for a good $21,000 in three theatres. "Where Boys Are," in first general release, looks like fair $9,500 in two spots.

"The Sundowners" shapes big $27,000 or close in second session, playing five houses. "World of Suzie Wong" is heading for hefty $10,000 on regular holdover for 12th week at the Chinese.

"Never On Sunday," displaying great stamina and help by Academy nominations, shapes great in 15th round at Fine Arts. "Exodus" heads the hardticket parade with slick $20,000 in 11th Warner Beverly round but "Ben-Hur" is only a step behind with a mighty $18,000 for 67th round at the Egyptian.

Estimates for This Week

'Pepe' Potent $14,000 In Cincy; 'Star' Light 5G, 'Gorgo' 8½G, 'Suzie' 8G

Cincinnati, March 7.

"Pepe" dominates the Cincy film front currently. Film's strong opening restores the Capitol to major biz status after brief lapse from long hard-ticket policy. In an otherwise spotty session, "Flaming Star" shapes modest in opener at Keith's. "World of Suzie Wong" bids firmly in fourth frame at Albee. "Gorgo" looks okay in second stanza at Palace.

"Alamo" is rebounding in 11th week and "Spartacus" holds okay at same stage.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; $1-$1.50)—"Suzie Wong" (Par) (4th wk). Firm $8,000. Last week, $10,000.

Cinema (Martina) (450; 70-$1)—"Carry On Nurse" (Gov) (18th wk). Powerful $3,000. Last week, $2,800.

'Impostor' Boff $12,000, K.C.; 'Priest' Fine 12½G, 'Spartacus' Wham 20G

Kansas City, March 7.

"Great Impostor" adds to wealth of new picture fare here currently and looks sock at Paramount on opener. "Hoodlum Priest" is playing a new combo of drive-ins and hardtops for nice total. String of holdovers is topped by "Spartacus," still wow at the Capri in second. "101 Dalmatians" at Uptown-Granada combo is rated smash. "Ben-Hur" at the Brookside on lower-scale run is good. "Suzie Wong" at the Roxy. "Exodus" at Empire is smooth in 11th week while "World of Suzie Wong" shapes strong in fifth at Roxy.

Estimates for This Week

Brookside (FMS-NT) (800; $1.25-$1.50)—"Ben-Hur" (M-G) (3d wk). Steady $6,000. Last week, same.

'Boys' Robust $21,000 In Hub; 'Circle' Slight 9G, 'Impostor' Wow 19G, 3d

Boston, March 7.

Trade continues at high levels set when the kids were out of school with good weather and no storms to disrupt biz. There's little new product. "Where Boys Are" is rated fast at Orpheum in first. "Circle of Deception," also new, is very light at Paramount.

Holdovers are getting the real coin with "Great Impostor" still great in third round at Memorial. "Pepe" is holding strongly in third at the Gary. "101 Dalmatians" is big in third at the Met. "Tunes of Glory" is showing big strength in 11th week at Beacon Hill. "Ballad of Soldier" looks torrid at Kenmore in sixth session.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (B&Q) (1,170; $1.90-$3)—"Spartacus" (U) (19th wk). Good $7,000. Last week, $8,000.

Beacon Hill (Sack) (678; $1.50)—"Tunes of Glory" (Lope) (11th wk). Stout $7,000. Last week, $8,000.

'Naked' Nice 9G, Det.; 'Fever' 17G, 'Exodus' $25,000

Detroit, March 7.

Only two newcomers, both strong, combined with hotsy holdovers and longruns, add up to another great grossing week for first-runs here. New and good are "Fever in Blood" at Palms and "Go Naked in World" at the Adams. "Exodus" continues sensational at Mercury in the fourth week.

"Swiss Family Ribinson" is big in fourth session at the Michigan. "Gorgo" is okay in second stanza at Fox. "World of Suzie Wong" is still sturdy in 11th round at Grand Circus. "Spartacus" is strong in 18th week at Madison. "Ben-Hur" stays fast in 55th stanza at United Artists.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Woodmont Corp) (5,041); 75-$1.49)—"Gorgo" (M-G) and "Key Witness" (M-G) (2d wk). Oke $18,000. Last week, $31,000.

Mercury (UM) (1,465; $1.50-$3)—"Exodus" (UA) (4th wk). Wham $25,000. Last week, $24,100.

Despite New Pix, B'way Mild; 'Cry' Lusty 31G, 'Step' Light 12G; 'Facts' Sturdy 32G, 4th, 'Misfits' 23G, 5th

Despite four new entrants, biz tone is quite moderate this round at Broadway deluxers. Several rainy days, with snowfall in the suburbs, are being blamed for sagging trade although Lent and some weak product appear to be just as responsible for the offish trend.

"Cry For Happy" looks to get a neat $31,000, day-dating at the Forum and arty Trans-Lux 52d Street. Best showing is being made at the former. "Love and Frenchwoman" hit big $17,500 opening stanza at the arty Paris.

"Take Giant Step" is heading for a light $12,000 in initial round at the Victoria, and may not be around long. It was rushed in when "Circle of Deception" faded in second week. "Modligliani" garnered a fine $8,500 opening frame at the arty Baronet.

"Cimarron" with stageshow looks to dip to mild $103,000 in third session at the Music Hall, but will stay another. "101 Dalmatians" is holding with fancy $23,000 in fourth session at the Palace.

"Facts of Life" is heading for a sturdy $22,000 in current (4th) week at the Astor, and big $10,000 in same week at arty Beekman. "Swiss Family Robinson" looks to get hep $9,000 or close in 11th frame at the Embassy.

"Sanctuary" likely will garner tepid $22,000 in second stanza at Paramount and a fair $6,000 in same week at arty Trans-Lux 85th Street. "The Misfits" is winding its fifth-final session at the Capitol with an okay $23,000. "Go Naked in World" replaces today (Wed.).

Many hard-ticket pix are offish currently. "Pepe" is standout example, with fairish $16,000 probable in 11th week at Criterion. Also, "Exodus" is dipping slightly from its capacity status which has prevailed since opening week at the Warner. It looks like $49,000 for 12th round, still wow. "Spartacus," however, is holding almost even with last week with a good $18,500 expected in 22d session at the DeMille.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,094; 75-$2)—"Facts of Life" (UA) (4th wk). Present round ending tomorrow (Thurs.) is heading for sturdy $22,000 or near after $29,000 for third week. Stays.

Capitol (Loew) (4,820; $1-$2.50)—"Go Naked in World" (M-G). Opens today (Wed.). Last week, "Misfits" (UA) (5th wk). Okay $23,000 after $35,000 for fourth.

Criterion (Moss) (1,520; $1.50-$3.50)—"Pepe" (Col) (12th wk). The 11th session ending last night (Tues.) was fairish $16,000 on 9 shows after $25,000 for 10 shows in 10th week. Continues.

DeMille (Reade) (1,463; $1.50-$3.50)—"Spartacus" (U) (22d wk). This round ending today (Wed.) looks like good $18,500 after $19,000 for 21st week. Stays on.

Embassy (Guild—Enterprises) (500; $1.25-$2)—"Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (11th wk). This round ending tomorrow (Thurs.) likely will hit hep $9,000 or near after $10,500 in 10th week. "Shadows" (BL) is due in March 21.

Palace (RKO) (1,642; 90-$2.50)—"101 Dalamatians" (BV) (4th wk). This session winding up tomorrow (Thurs.) looks to hit sock $23,000 after $29,000 for third week. Stays on until "Great Impostor" (U) opens March 29.

Forum (Moss) (813; 90-$1.80)—"Cry For Happy" (Col). Initial week ending tomorrow (Thurs.) is heading for neat $22,000. Ho'ds. In ahead, "Wackiest Ship" (Col) (3d wk-9 days), $19,000.

Paramount (AB-PT) (3,665; $1-$2)—"Sanctuary" (20th) (3d wk). Second stanza completed Monday (6) was mild $22,000 after $30,000 for initial week. Stays on until "All Hands on Deck" (20th) opens March 24.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (6,200; 90-$2.75)—"Cimarron" (M-G) with stageshow (3d wk). This round ending today (Wed.) looks to hold with $103,000. Second was $110,000. Stays one more week, with "Absent-Minded Professor" (BV) and Easter stageshow due to open March 16.

Rivoli (UAT) (1,545; $1.50-$3.50)—"Alamo" (UA) (20th wk). The 19th stanza ended last night (Tues.) was $14,000 after $15,000 in 18th week. "King and I" (20th) opens hard-ticket run here March 23.

State (Loew) (1,900; $1.50-$3.50)—"Ben-Hur" (M-G) (67th wk). This session ending today (Wed.) is heading for nice $25,500 on 11 shows after $24,500 in 66th week (10 shows). Continues.

Victoria (City Inv.) (1,003; 50-$2)—"Take Giant Step" (UA). First week winding tomorrow (Thurs.) is heading for light $12,000 or less. In ahead, "Circle of Deception" (20th) (2d wk), $9,500.

Warner (SW) (1,813; $1.50-$3.50)—"Exodus" (UA) (12th wk). This round ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like wow $49,000 or near. Last week, $53,000. Some matinees have not been selling out, and this is bringing down the weekly total. However, this is still terrific biz, with applications for seats still coming on dates late this fall.

First-Run Arties

Baronet (Reade) (430; $1.25-$2)—"Modigliani" (Cont) (2d wk). Initial session completed Monday (6) was fine $8,500. In ahead, "Make Mine Mink" (Cont) (11th wk-8 days), $6,400, and for an excellent extended-run.

Fine Arts (Davis) (468; 90-$1.80)—"Breathless" (FAW) (5th wk). Fourth week finished Monday (6) was great $14,200 after $18,300 for third round.

55th St. Playhouse (Moss) (253; ($1.25-$2) — "Don Quixote" (M-G) (7th wk). Current round ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks to hit big $7,500 after $8,500 in sixth.

Beekman (R&B) (590; $1.20-$1.75)—"Facts of Life" (UA) (4th wk). This stanza ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks to hit rousing $10,000 after $13,000 in third. Stays on.

Fifth Ave. Cinema (R&B) (250; $1.25-$1.80) — "Virgin Spring"

'Cry' Happy $14,000 In D.C.; 'Entertainer' Good 7G, 'Alamo' Boff 14G

Washington, March 7.

Mainstem trade shapes thinner this round than last with some holdovers losing their legs. Initialers offer the most hope. Best of latter is "Cry for Happy" which looks neat on opener at Capitol. "Question 7" is rated okay at Playhouse.

"Entertainer" at MacArthur looks good on first. "Great Imposter" is nice in second. "Exodus" is great at Uptown in second. "Alamo" is holding boff in its second pop-price round at Palace.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador - Metropolitan (SW) (1,490; 1,000; 90-$1.49) — "Great Impostor" (U) (2d wk). Fine $12,000. Last week, $15,000.

'Exodus' Fast $11,000, Port.; 'Village' 5½G, 2d

Portland, Ore., March 7.

City is bogged down with holdovers, which are failing to hold up too well this session. Even "Spartacus" in fifth frame at Broadway is offish. "Exodus," in seventh session at Music Box, looks lively. Lone newcomer, "Millionairess" shapes lean at Orpheum. Only fair takings shape for "The Misfits" at Paramount in second round.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (983; $1.50-$3)—"Spartacus" (U) (5th wk). Moderate $7,000 or close. Last week, $9,700.

Normandie (T-L) (592; $1.25-$1.80)—"Hand in Hand" (Col) (5th wk). Fourth week finished Sunday (5) was lively $6,600 after $8,000 in third. "All in Night's Work" (Par) due in March 22.

Little Carnegie (L. Carnegie) (520; $1.25-$2)—"Tunes of Glory" (Lope) (12th wk). The 11th week ended Monday (6) was socko $13,000 after $14,000 for 10th round.

Guild (Guild) (450; $1-$1.75 — "Two-Way Stretch" (BL) (7th wk). Sixth session finished Sunday (5) was robust $11,000 after $11,500 for fifth week.

Murray Hill (R&B) (565; 95-$1.80)—"Ballad of Soldier" (Kings) (11th wk). The 10th round ended Monday (6) was noisy $9,000 after $10,000 in ninth.

Paris (Pathe Cinema) (568; 90-$1.80)—"Love and Frenchwoman" (Kings) (2d wk). First stanza ended Sunday (5) was big $17,500. In ahead, "General Della Rovere" (Cont) (14th wk), $7,500.

Plaza (Lopert) (525; $1.50-$2)—"Never On Sunday" (Lope) (21st wk). The 20th week completed Monday (6) was great $18,500 after $18,200 for 19th round. The 20th week's total was the biggest here since Xmas time, the numerous Academy nominations accounting for spurt.

68th St. Playhouse (Brecker) (370; 90-$1.65) — "Millionairess" (20th) (4th wk). Current frame ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like okay $5,500 after $7,400 in third week. "Days of Thrills and Laughter" (20th) opens March 23.

Sutton (R&B) (561; 95-$1.80)—"League of Gentlemen" (Kings) (7th wk). Sixth round ended Monday (6) was smooth $11,000 after $13,000 for fifth week.

Trans-Lux 52d St. (T-L) (540; $1-$1.50) — "Cry For Happy" (Col). First stanza winding up tomorrow (Thurs.) looks to hit good $9,000. Holding.

Trans-Lux 85th St. (T-L) (550; $1.25-$2)—"Sanctuary" (20th) (3d wk). First holdover session ended Monday (6) was fair $6,000 after $11,000 on initial week.

World (Perfecto) (390; 90-$1.50) —"Male and Female" (Mishkin) (3d wk). This stanza ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks to get great $15,000 after $17,000 for last week, a record for a second stanza here. Stays on indef.

CHI ARTER FIRST-RUNNING

Chicago, Feb. 28.

Cinema Theatre, an arty on the Near North Side here, is currently a firstrun policy with "Make Mine Mink" (Continental). House, operated by Henry and Dick Stern, is a 500-seater.

"Mink," with a $1.50 top, is a projected $6,000 grosser the first week.

'MISFITS' BIG $11,000, L'VILLE; 'FAMILY' 5G, 7

Louisville, March 7.

Moderate takes are the rule this week. There was slight upturn in biz after last weekend's heavy snowfall, which had first-runs closing early. "Misfits" in second at United Artists still is strong being ahead of opening week by a big margin. The Brown, with "Upstairs and Downstairs" is only okay. "Swiss Family Robinson" in seventh at the Ohio is okay. Rialto wound up with "Goliath and Dragon" on Sunday (5), closing for installation of equipment to reopen with "Cinerama" March 28. Seating capacity of big house will be reduced to 1,100.

Estimates for This Week

Brown (Fourth Avenue) (1,100; 75-$1)—"Upstairs and Downstairs" (20th) and "Male War Bride" (20th) (reissue). Oke $4,500. Last week, "Gigi" (M-G), same.

Kentucky (Switow) (900; 75-$1)—"Suzie Wong" (Par) (5th wk). Moderate $4,000 after fourth week's $5,000.

Mary Anderson (People's) (900; 75-$1)—"Auntie Mame" (WB) and "No Time For Sergeants" (WB) (reissues). Fair $4,500. Last week, "Carthage in Flames" (Col) and "Sword of Sherwood Forest" (Col), $3,500.

Ohio (Settos) (900; 75-$1.25)—"Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (7th wk). Okay $5,000 or near after last week's $4,000.

Rialto (Fourth Avenue) (3,000; 60-$1)—"Goliath and Dragon" (AI) (2d wk). Light $3,000 in 4 days. Last week, $6,000.

United Artists (UA) (3,000; 75-$1.25)—"Misfits" (UA) (2d wk). Big $11,000 after opener's $8,000.

Membership Okay, 3-1, Screen Actors Hike

Hollywood, March 7.

Membership dues of the Screen Actors Guild will be hiked following a 3-1 majority vote by the members, per prexy George Chandler.

Out of 6,049 ballots cast in a nationwide mail referendum, 4,459 supported the dues revision, while 1,590 were against. Voting response was amongst the largest in guild history.

"The dues revision now ratified is but the second since the Guild became the collective bargaining agent for motion picture actors 24 years ago," Chandler said.

"Even with this raise, which for most members amounts to between 50 and 75 cents monthly, the Guild dues are still amongst the lowest of any union," he said.

The Guild Board of Directors requested the raise to meet a growing financial deficit and to put the Guild operations on a pay-as-you-go basis, Chandler said.

District Manager's Prize: Silver Lifetime Oakley

Kansas City, March 7.

Silver lifetime pass, signifying 25 years of service with Fox Midwest division of National Theatres, was presented to Leon Robertson, city district manager, by Fred Souttar, supervising district manager.

Event had double significance, for it was Souttar who was city manager at Hutchinson, Kansas, when Robertson got his first job in theatre business as house manager of the Royal Theatre of the M. B. Shanberg Midland Theatres circuit in 1926.

It was in 1936 that Robertson joined Fox Midwest circuit as assistant city manager at Springfield, Mo. His present district includes Kansas City and nearby area towns. Award was made at an inter-office affair Feb. 27.

TEXAS DRIVE-IN PATS

(1) Personality of Year and (2) Booker of Year

Dallas, March 7.

Albert H. Reynolds, veepee and general manager of Claude Ezell & Associates, was named "the outstanding personality in the Texas drive-in industry in 1960" and was presented the third annual John H. Hardin award.

Reynolds was recent chairman of the Texas Drive-In Theatre Owners Assn. convention. He is a director of the organization and was elected second veepee for 1961.

Lee Sherron of Allied Artists was named "Booker of the Year" at the TDITOA conclave.

Cinerama Action Awaits Plot Tales

Hollywood, March 7.

Cinerama will become active again in all major U.S. and foreign cities where it had been operating. This is thanks to Metro's first release in the three-split screen late next year. Initialer of studio's four-pix deal in process will be "How the West Was Won" (tentative title), with "The Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm," a George Pal production, to follow. "West" rolls in May, and "Grimm" later in year.

Hardticket policy will obtain on new product, as heretofore, Nicolas Reisini, Cinerama prexy, stated before his return to Gotham last week.

In majority of instances the same theatre where the five original Cinerama travelogs bowed will revive deep-curved wall-to-wall screen. Due to lack of product, equipment was removed in all but 15 U.S. houses now exhibiting kingsized screen shows. Identical policy is to hold for foreign situations.

In addition to Denver, new installations to open this month will take place in Santiago, Chile, and specially-built house in Johannesburg, S. Africa, until 57 total is reached.

All major cities in U.S. where Cinerama played will be alerted to re-install process in time to prep for necessary campaigns locally. Plan is to finish one Cinerama pic every six months for two years under Metro setup. In many instances Cinerama itself will operate theatres; elsewhere, on profit-sharing arrangements.

See Parental Dilemma When Saturday Matinee Pictures Ill-Matched

Albany, March 7.

Exhibitors should pay special attention to insure that both pictures in a Saturday afternoon double bill contain Legion of Decency A-1 (unobjectionable for general patronage) ratings. Recommendation is made in an editorial in The Evangelist, Catholic Diocesan Weekly.

If there is anything worse than two "objectionable" features billed together on Saturday afternoon, says the weekly, it's one acceptable picture duelled with one that is unacceptable. Conscientious parents, who check their children's film fare, thus must explain why the kids cannot attend the program, no matter how fine one of the pictures may be.

Editorial concludes: "If more parents exercised vigilance and let their requirements for worthwhile movies be known to theatre managers, doubtlessly the effort would be made to reserve Saturday afternoon, at least, for 'A-all-the-way' pictures."

850 RETIREES UPPED $95 TO $120 MONTHLY

Hollywood, March 7.

Starting April 1, about 850 industry retirees will receive increases in monthly pension checks from $95 to $120, conforming to recent approval of the tilt at negotiations between International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes for Hollywood's basic union crafts, films and television, and Assn. of Motion Picture Producers. Qualified workers who retire after April 1 also get the boost.

Details of provisions concerning vesting interest starting at 35 and a $500 insurance policy for retirees, likewise adopted at contract meetings have been referred to the Benefits Committee to work out.

Since the Pension Plan was set up Oct. 26, 1953, more than $23,000,000 has accrued in the fund from employe and employer contributions. Of this amount, approximately $75,000 was paid qualified retired workers last year, the first in which pension payments were made.

Ted Leonard, Paramount attorney and Pension Plan chairman, revealed the payments, past and future.

H'WOOD'S 'SOAP OPERA' KING

'Anne Frank' No 'Nuremberg' Parallel; Kramer Plots Hard Ducat Kickoff

Hollywood, March 7.

Can a non-spectacle film dealing with a serious subject (moral principle) succeed as a hardticket offering? Stanley Kramer, currently filming "Judgment at Nuremberg" for United Artists release, is convinced it can and is backing his conviction by setting "Judgment" for six reserved-seat engagements between Dec. 19 and 22.

Combined with a cast that includes Spencer Tracy, Burt Lancaster, Richard Widmark, Marlene Dietrich, Maxmillian Schell, Montgomery Clift and Judy Garland, Kramer feels the picture has the drama, size, and explosive quality to sustain hardticket handling.

The failure of "The Diary of Anne Frank" as a roadshow attraction and the hard sailing experienced by a number of more likely hardticket candidates does not disturb the producer-director. The six dates—New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Philadelphia, Washington, and San Francisco—are in the nature of a test, Kramer acknowledges. "It's our intent to go hardticket," he said, "but I wouldn't want to book 45 theatres now."

Following the world premiere in Berlin on Dec. 14, the picture will open at the RKO Palace in N. Y. on Dec. 19 and the RKO Pantages in L.A. on Dec. 22. Theatre bookings for the four other cities are expected to be concluded shortly.

Sees Big Advance

Kramer believes that "Judgment" will not only rack up a tremendous advance from the benefit audiences that gave Otto Preminger's "Exodus" a record advance but will also attract less sectarian groups. He believes he has an excellent chance to top the "Exodus" advance. Moreover, he is convinced of the public interest in the subject matter, as evidenced by the conflict over Berlin, the upcoming Eichmann trial in Israel, and the success of William L. Shirer's "The Decline and Fall of the Third Reich."

Kramer is following the pattern established by Preminger with the setting of his opening date almost on the date that he began shooting. The establishment of a target date, according to Kramer, serves as a tremendous psychological drive for everybody connected with the picture.

Don't Say 'Message'

Kramer, although known for providing "thinking entertainment" (he abhors the terminology of "message picture"), does not consider himself a crusader. He does not feel that his films cause people to act, but he hopes that it makes them think or at least become aware. The object, he said, is to build a platform and deal in a provocative subject. There is no attempt, he added, to sway people, but the picture may start a chain of thoughts. "The source of the thought process may not be known to the viewer," he said.

Kramer, who has directed his own pictures in the past few years, plans to turn several properties over to other directors and serve only as the producer. The only reason for this move, he said, is that he is anxious to complete a number of projects and if he were to direct them all, it would take several years before he got around to them. Kramer's current deal with United Artists calls for four pictures, two of which he is required to direct.

Following "Judgment," he has scheduled "The Child is Waiting," which like "Judgment" is based on a teleplay by Abby Mann. Mann, who wrote the "Judgment" screenplay, is also scripting "Child," which deals with the problems of retarded children. "Child" will be helmed by a director still to be chosen, with Kramer serving as producer. As his next producer-director effort, Kramer will turn to comedy with William Rose's "Something a Little Less Serious." Also on his slate are "Glorious Brothers" which Richard Fleischer will direct, and "Destiny's Tot," an original by Lee Pogostin.

Furlough Fun

Honolulu, March 7.

Consolidated circuit assembled a double bill, aimed at serviceman trade, for its downtown Liberty. Coupled were "Wackiest Ship in the Army" (Col) and "Onionhead" (WB), latter comedy pertaining to the Coast Guard.

It's the old busman's holiday psychology.

'Wong' Potential May Go $8-9-Mil

Ray Stark's production of "World of Suzie Wong," distributed by Paramount, in the early stages of release was projected as a $5-$6,000,000 grosser. The projection, within Par, is now up to $8-$9,000,000.

For purposes of evaluating the potential, Par had been comparing "Suzie" grosses with "Country Girl." Latter wound up with $7,000,000 in domestic rentals. Comparisons are now being made with "Psycho."

That "Suzie" has struck it rich could hardly come as much surprise to tradesters. Another boxoffice power is Walt Disney's "Swiss Family Robinson," which is in about the same fiscal stratosphere as "Suzie."

Particularly significant is that these two pictures, widely apart in theme, have gotten in the tall coin immediately post-holiday. The wide circulation and public penetration came after Christmas and New Year's—a period the trade traditionally has regarded as b.o. slumber time. (This year the weather was hardly an ally, either).

Another important trade angle is that with "Suzie" Par has obtained more playing time and more rentals in theatres smaller than those tenanted by "Girl" in many areas. Detroit's Michigan Theatre, 4,000 seats, grossed $82,000 in a four-week "Girl" run, whereas the same city's Grand Circus Theatre, about 2,000 seats, grossed $120,000 in the first eight weeks of an indefinite "Suzie" run. Keith's Theatre, Syracuse, with 2,600 seats, grossed $24,000 in a two-week "Girl" run. Par played "Suzie" at the Shopping Town Theatre, same city, 1,009 seats, the gross was $50,000 for seven weeks, and the rental for "Suzie" was twice that chalked up by "Girl."

This reflects the pattern around many parts of the country. The longer runs at the lower-overhead exhibition outlets, at least in the case of "Suzie" as compared with "Girl," are paying off better than the shorter engagements at the bigger showcases, so far as pertaining to rentals.

There have been cases where a distributor, playing a picture day and date on Broadway and Manhattan's east side, has drawn the lion's share of the rental from the off-Broadway small site. Loew's Theatres has blueprinted plans for additional exhibition properties and it's emphasized they're so far less ambitious in size than the gingerbread palaces that went up in the Marcus Loew era.

Irving Sochin New Chief For Times Corp. Sales

Irving Sochin, who recently resigned from Continental Distributing Corp., has been appointed sales head of Times Film Corp.

Prior to joining Continental, Sochin was sales director for Rank Film Distributors of America, and before that, he headed a special picture division for Universal. At one time he was also short subjects sales manager for U.

LOVE & GLAMOR FOR ROSS HUNTER

Producer Ross Hunter is a Hollywood anachronism. In an era dominated by the so-called adult pictures, Hunter has emerged as one of the industry's top money-makers with the type of films that are usually associated with the pre-tv period.

By today's standards, he operates with a modest budget, averaging about $1,500,000 a picture. But there's nothing modest about the payoff. His four most recent pictures were all financial blockbusters. "Imitation of Life" tallied $8,000,000 worldwide, "Pillow Talk" $11,000,000, "Portrait in Black" $8,000,000, and "Midnight Lace" $7,500,000.

With two earlier entries—"Battle Hymn" and "Tammy and the Bachelor"—Hunter has a record of six hits in a row, an enviable record for any producer.

One irony of Hunter's success is that it has been achieved in the face of critical brickbats. Reviewers frequently refer to the young producer's offerings as soap operas, but he prefers to call them love stories. Hunter's technique is deliberate and simple. The pattern has become so marked and identified with the producer that his supporters refer to it as the "Hunter touch."

Drowned In Glamor

Hunter operates on the theory that the mass audience of housewives, shop girls, secretaries, etc. and their male counterparts are not interested in messages, juvenile delinquency, and slice of life stories. He feeds them tasteful escapism drowned in opulence. His basic ingredients are a careful blending of story material and star selection, but bolstered by glamorous clothes and exquisite surroundings.

"The more opulent you get, the more the public wants to see the picture," he contends. A good part of Hunter's budgets are spent on the visual. He believes that the film patron wants to get away from his own drab surroundings for a few hours and enjoy a world he or she would like to be part of.

Hunter is the first to admit that he's doing nothing new. But he has the field to himself, since few, if any, other Hollywood producers have dared to gamble on what they consider an obsolete technique. A serious student of the film, Hunter has made a careful study of pictures of the past which have proved great successes. He frequently screens the pictures of Irving Thalberg and Louis B. Mayer.

Meets Theatremen

Hunter's personal tours with his pictures has made him a favorite of exhibitors and the fact that his pix also make money adds to this kinship. The relationship he has established with theatremen has resulted in unsolicited buildups of the Hunter name on marquees and in advertising.

"Naturally I would like the critics to say nice things about my pictures, but we know that does not assure good boxoffice," he says. "I'm only out to please the public." The producer capsules his aim as attempting to present "what Hollywood means to people ouside of Hollywood."

Formerly a staff producer at Universal, Hunter now operates out of U under the Ross Hunter Productions banner. His upcoming schedule is one of the busiest in Hollywood. He plans to make between three and four pictures annually.

Also on Hunter's slate is the film version of "The Chalk Garden," the locale of which will be moved from England to Carmel and San Francisco; "In the Wrong Room," "Elephant Hill," "Next Time We Love," modern version of the James Stewart-Margaret Sullavan starrer; "The Thrill Girl," "And Yet So Far," "Leitzel and Cordona," "Peter and Catherine" and "If a Man Answers." Hunter expects to complete this lineup in a two-year period.

Lopert's Beef: Misnomer to Call Day-Date Eastsiders 'Arties'

Charge It at B.O.?

Hollywood, March 7.

Columbia Pictures is readying a film project on the Diner's Club, a comedy based on credit card operation. Deal has been closed with Al Bloomingdale, prexy of DC, whereby his outfit will provide full cooperation.

Various titles, including "Diner's Club Man," have already been registered with MPAA Title Bureau. Idea is to follow pattern of "The Fuller Brush Man," Red Skelton funfest turned out in 1950.

Connecticut's 22 Bills on Film Biz

Connecticut exhibitors are stiffening against a flock of bills in the state legislature seen aimed at hampering the theatremen. State unit of Theatre Owners of America reports the measures, some 22 in number, range from censorship to driver licensing restrictions which would hinder ozone attendance. Another bill would up the minimum wage to $1.25.

In the censorship area, one measure would permit pre-censoring (per the Chicago system) in New Britain; another would create a commission to determine if the state's obscenity laws need patching as to "indecent magazines, obscene literature, and lewd pictures." Exhibs, naturally, fear that "pictures" could be construed to motion pix.

Bills effecting drive-ins include prohibition of 18-year-olds driving after dusk or before dawn unless accompanied by an adult, and one that would raise the minimum age for a driver's license from 16 to 17.

Hard Ducats Softening In Downtown Chicago

Chicago, March 7.

That the hardticket business here has reached a point of diminishing returns is reflected in the darkening of two roadshow houses as of March 19. The McVickers ends a 23 week run of "Spartacus" as of that date, representing only a fair stay for the picture. The Palace has been dark since mid-January, when "Alamo" ended a 12-week run.

As perhaps an index to the growing hardticket resistance here is the sharp upturn in the "Alamo" gate after it switched to grind policy in a moveover from the Palace to the Roosevelt. Now, more than ever, it begins to appear that the picture makes the hard ticket, and not vice versa. There's no knowing how "Pepe" might have fared on a two shows per night basis, but evidently no one's complaining about its steady grosses on the grind at the Balaban & Katz flagship, the Chicago. B&K has been a constant opponent to the roadshowing of films.

The brighter side of the Chi hardticket situation is represented by "Ben-Hur," which continues to play to solid biz in its 63d week at the Todd, and by "Exodus," which is marking its 12th week at or near capacity at the Cinestage.

Despite the apparent softening of the hardticket, both the McVickers and the Palace are looking for new roadshow product, and trade conjecture is that either would take on the rerun of "This Is Cinerama" if they can get together with the distributor on price.

"The Alamo" (UA) on Sunday (5) ended at San Antonio's Woodlawn Theatre 20 weeks of playing time. More than 150,000 patrons attended its 225 performances.

The "art theatre" and the "art picture" have become extinct in American film trade terminology, or should so become. This is the opinion of Ilya Lopert, who has been a producer, distributor and exhibitor and is now aligned with United Artists as European production coordinator. Lopert, who was one of first in the field of United States presentations of art product (he imported "Mayerling" before World War II), notes that theatres which had been devoted to avant garde product have swung over to commercial entries just as houses which played conventional pictures are now taking on foreign-language imports.

Manhattan's Plaza Theatre, an arty from way back, has played "The Apartment" day and date with the Astor on Broadway. The Plaza, consequently, says Lopert could hardly be termed an art theatre. Current in other Gotham spots which had been considered art: "Facts of Life" at the Beekman, "Millionairess" at the 68th Street Playhouse, "Wackiest Ship in the Army" at the Trans-Lux 52d Street, "Sanctuary" at the Trans-Lux 85th Street. Plaza now has "Never On Sunday."

Gourmets That Were

Time was, Lopert continued, when a picture done by a "master appealed only to the gourmet"; it was ahead of its time for the general audience. Now the public will buy Bergman, Cocteau, etc.

The real art picture of today, as the term was meant to convey years back, is one such as "World of Apu." But the theatres which were to be art theatres can't sustain themselves with this kind of picture. Lopert sees such entries eventually being confined to Cinema 16, to name one outlet, or going out like cultural one-shots via such an organization as Columbia Concerts.

Economics make for a factor, of course. Lopert points out that when he took over the 55th Street Playhouse in 1946 a weekly gross of $3,000, considering rental at 30%, was a smash success. Hardly so any more. The Little Carnegie used to have a weekly overhead of $1,400; now it's $4,200. A film such as "Apu" is not geared for this kind of fiscal atmosphere.

Theatres around the country more and more are booking pictures regardless of French, Italian, etc., origin. They're booking them because they are commercially sound. Such houses may be called "class theatres," said Lopert, who insists that the true art theatre has become a part of history.

Bettered Outlook For Savarese License Bill To Evade Rocky Vote

Albany, March 7.

N.Y. State Assembly is scheduled to vote Wed. (8) on the Savarese film license fees bill. Supported by the Motion Picture Assn. of America, Independent Motion Picture Distributors, Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Assn. and Independent Theatre Owners Assn. as well as the Commerce & Industry Assn. of New York, it would increase the rate collected by the State Education Department's Division of Motion Pictures from $3 to $3.50 for each 1,000 feet of original film licensed. However, the measure would decrease the charge on prints from $2 a thousand feet to $3 for the "entire copy," and "in addition $1 for each thousand feet or fraction thereof."

A memorandum filed by Commerce and Industry Association stated the new fee schedule had been discussed with and had been approved by the State Budget Division. This is expected to clear the way for signature by Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller, if—as seems likely—the Assembly and Senate vote adoption.

Both Houses passed the Savarese-Marchi bill last year, but the Governor vetoed it.

Can Diane Baker Overcome Biography?

[HAUNTED BY HER 20TH-FOX PUBLICITY]

Diane is not pretty—there is too much character in her face for that."

"Diane loved the beach . . . She rowed in the surf, speared fish, dived from the rocks when the tide was in . . ."

"The turning point in Diane's young life came when she spent a summer at Asilomar, the YWCA camp near Monterey . . . Diane was named head of Inspirational Talks at Asilomar."

"Diane's favorite subject was English and when she wasn't hitting homers she was reading Homer."

"She also entertained herself by writing philosophical essays."

"Diane Baker . . . is on her way. Most people who know her think she'll never stop climbing."

And, it should be added, most reporters who meet her know that she'll never stop squirming until 20th-Fox throws away the official studio biography from which the choice quotes above were lifted.

In New York last week, Miss Baker, en route from Athens, where she just finished "Lion of Sparta," to Hollywood, talked about the problems of a young actress, not the least of which is living down the kind of nonsense already cited.

Her bio notwithstanding, Miss Baker is pretty, and being the kind of girl who dives from rocks (when the tide is in), she obviously is intelligent, as well as intensely concerned with her acting career which has been spent entirely at 20th-Fox. With four years of her seven-year contract still to go, Miss Baker isn't getting high-hat about roles. She says quite candidly that she's ready to play almost anything they assign her.

Point made by Miss Baker, and which she thinks escapes other "new faces" starting film careers, is that she has to go along with "the system," play the roles given her in the hope that while she's gaining practical experience and building a name and personality, she will eventually get a chance to do challenging and worthwhile roles. As she sees it, she'll never become a film star by not appearing in films, as she suggests may be the reasoning of some of her contemporaries who have turned down numerous scripts as being beneath their talents.

"Lion of Sparta," an ancient Greek (as opposed to Roman) spectacle, is Miss Baker's sixth picture, her earlier films being "The Diary of Anne Frank," "The Best of Everything," "Journey to the Center of the Earth," "Wizard of Bagdad" and "Tess of the Storm Country." While in New York last week she was due to get her first look at "Tess," and was anticipating the screening with some anxiety since the pic was shot in 10 days. "It's not the easiest way in which to work," she commented with some understatement. "Wizard of Bagdad," by comparison, seemed a gigantic epic. Principal photography took 15 days.

Actress now feels that her "cooperative attitude" is beginning to pay off. She's high on "Lion of Sparta," suggesting that it has a good deal more content than the ordinary run-of-the-spec. She also reported that her two-and-one-half-month location in Greece had been uneventful (stomach-wise) and stimulating (culture-wise). The "Sparta" company, she thought, had definitely benefitted from the experience gained by 20th's "It Happened in Athens" troupe, which had had some problems with food and general sanitary conditions. Without sounding as if she were polishing a well-known apple, she said she liked Greece so much she hopes to go back this summer.

In the meantime she has returned to the coast studio. While awaiting a new role, she'll probably continue to study her profession (acting) with a private tutor, leaving the philisophical essays to the studio publicists.

Warth Case to Top Ohio Court; Found Guilty On Showing 'The Lovers'

Columbus, March 7.

Allan S. Warth, former manager of the Art Theatre, Dayton, has appealed to the Ohio Supreme Court his conviction on a charge of showing an "obscene" film, namely French-made, Zenith-distributed "The Lovers." In the lower courts, the manager testified U. S. Customs, had declared the film was not "obscene." He was convicted in Dayton Municipal Court, fined $1,000, and sentenced to 30 days on the Correctional Farm. However, the farm sentence and $500 of the fine was suspended.

An appellate court affirmed the conviction, and Warth took the case to the high court. He said the appeal was timed so that the Supreme Court could consider his case and a similar case by the manager of the Cleveland Heights Art Theatre, involving the same film.

Par's Potential $200,000 From Encyclopedia Pubs

Paramount has entered a deal with Encyclopedia Britannica for distribution of all its theatrical product in 16m form. Through the years various distributors have tapped the 16m market, releasing through EB, but Par until now remained aloof.

It's believed this new outlet for Par will net the company around $200,000 annually.

Water Is Where You Can Find It, At Loew's State

The hardticket film, already under attack by small exhibitors and a segment of the public, is receiving indirect brickbats on another score. The complaint is that the theatres presenting the reserved seat films are overpricing the concessions items, particularly the soft drinks.

VARIETY reader Paul Caster relates a recent experience at Loew's State, N.Y., where he attended a performance of "Ben-Hur."

"Some two and half hours after the film starts unreeling, there is an intermission," he notes. "The desert scenes guarantee a thirsty group of people heading for the lobby. In that lobby are two vending machines which offer soft drinks that can be had in most theatres for 10c, and in some theatres for 15c. The machines in the lobby of the State dispense the same drinks for no less than 25c. I presume the thinking is that if I'll part with a $3 for a ticket, I can afford the doubled price for the drinks. I can, but won't. So I looked about for a water cooler. There is no such item on the main floor.

"I searched about, then finally interrupted a group of usherettes—they were having an animated discussion which continued throughout the rest of the film—and asked where the water is being offered. Upstairs. Nestled snugly in an obscure corner, badly illuminated and carefully inconspicuous. It was Monday night, and the weather in New York was abominable. The house was less than half full. Still there was a line of some 20 people waiting to get at the water fountain. I can only imagine how big the line is when the 1,900 seats are all occupied."

Caster adds that he is serving notice on all Manhattan theatres running advanced admission films that he will only see the big pictures "if and when they are offered at popular prices in local theatres where the price of candy and soft drinks remain reasonably inflated."

Metro Nippon Cartoon

Hollywood, March 7.

Metro has acquired global release rights (exclusive of Nippon) to a cartoon feature produced in Japan by Toei, tabbed "The Magic Boy." It's company's first such direct acquisition of a Japanese film.

Deal reportedly entails a flat $100,000.

Greatest Art of Century–Films–Ignored At Linc Center; Is N.Y. 'Avant Garde'?

The lack of provision for any film facilities—film workshops or even a theatre devoted to film showings — in New York City's forthcoming Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts is nothing short of "shocking" in the opinion of Robert Rossen.

In New York Friday (3), the Academy Award-winning writer-director-producer termed the oversight also another typical example of how New York has consistently lost out on its chances for becoming the centre for serious film-making activity in this country. Despite all the talk about how the city welcomes filmmakers and will go out of its way to aid local production, experience tells a largely different story, Rossen said.

Latter point was in reference to some of his experience with official Red Tape in prepping the shooting of his latest pic, "The Hustler," entirely in New York. Since actual production only got underway Monday (6), he was reluctant to be specific on these problems, preferring to say that they were rather symptomatic of the overall attitude toward films, both in civic and cultural circles.

Where's Hicksville?

New York, says Rossen, is "about as avant garde as Keokuk."

In Britain, London is the center of all the arts, including films. The same is true of Paris for France, of Rome for Italy, and, at least in pre-war days, of Berlin for Germany. Since Hollywood has lost its geographic dominance as the center of U. S. filmmaking activity, the time is now ripe to focus film interest on New York, which is already the center of interest for all the other arts. And, make no mistake about it, says Rossen, the film medium is the true art form of our times.

Rossen is a born New Yorker who despite extended tours of duty in Hollywood and overseas, continues to make his home here. He points out that other Hollywood folk, either tired of the preposterous citrus fruit, caste systems or incestuous business deals which breed in southern California, have been taking up New York residence in increasing numbers in recent years. Idea, of course, is that New York is the most exciting and stimulating city on earth.

Need For Exchange

This being the case, Rossen says he wishes there were some place where he and such contemporaries as Joseph Mankiewicz, Elia Kazan, and other similarly endowed cliff dwellers could meet and talk, not among themselves, but with the young people who are interested in learning about the film medium. Such a place might have been provided by Lincoln Center, he thinks.

Rossen also carefully points out that he isn't making high-falutin' talk. He thinks that he, as a serious filmmaker who regards his craft with great respect, needs this contact with the younger generation if he's going to continue to grow as an artist. Quite obviously, he continues, many of these kids are going to tell him (Rossen) that he's full of (euphemistically speaking) outdated nonsense, and he's quite prepared to say that a lot of "new wave" ideas may be lighter than air.

This kind of disagreement is all to the good, though, he feels, and ultimately a greater contact between the old and the new can spell nothing but good for all concerned.

Rossen says that he's willing to go on the record as being ready to give time and effort to some kind of film center—for seminars, classes and showings—in the city. He's also willing to try and drum up the cooepration of Kazan, Mankiewicz, et al. in the project.

UPCOMING SCHEDULE OF CORP. MEETINGS

As it does about this time every year, the calendar is becoming crowded with the scheduling of stockholder meetings. And with the way stock prices have risen at most of the film companies, investors are not likely to do too much howling.

Decca meets April 11, CBS April 19, National Theatres & Television, April 11, RCA May 2, Universal April 11, and Zenith April 25.

HENRY MILLER LEGITER UNREELING 'DOLCE VITA'

Indicative of both the dearth of profitable legit properties around and the high interest in controversial "Dolce Vita" itself is the revelation that the Italo pic has been booked into Gilbert Miller's legit Henry Miller Theatre in New York for a hardticket, 10-shows-a-week run starting April 19.

Miller reportedly guaranteed Astor Pictures, distrib of the film, in excess of $100,000. Deal was set with Astor toppers Franklin F. Bruder and Everett Crosby. Engagement is described as a "limited preview run."

It also marks a couple of "firsts." It's the first time the 946-seat Henry Miller has ever played a motion picture, and it's the first time a subtitled foreign language film has gotten the hardticket 10-a-week treatment.

Film will be dubbed eventually for general release, but will get the prestige, subtitled treatment in Boston, where it opens at Ben Sack's Gary theatre April 26, and later in San Francisco, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Director Federico Fellini is due in for the New York opening.

J. B. Gordon Consultant For Meridian, Toronto

Hollywood, March 7.

James B. Gordon, for 30 years with 20th-Fox and Oscar-winner for special effects on "Journey to the Center of the Earth" last year, has been appointed consulting cinematographer by Meridian Films Ltd. of Toronto, Ontario, on company's upcoming theatrical special, "The Mask," a Taylor-Hoffman production.

Gordon, who heads for Toronto this week to pick up assignment, left 20th last year.

Kansas City, March 7.

Near-700 attendance is foreshadowed for the Show-O-Rama exhibitor gathering opening here today (Tues.) at the Hotel Continental. Theatre Owner of America affiliate is staging this idea market for the fourth year. Delegates from 17 states are present.

Opening luncheon speaker today will be Mike Simmons, ex-Metro, now of Gulf States Theatres on "Frontiers of 1961."

Major themes this time: Censorship, tollvision, ticket stimulation, smalltown merchandising, concessions.

Pickman Chides Snap Judging Of 'Great' or 'Flop'

Offering his first public speech since becoming Paramount's domestic distribution v.p., Jerry Pickman is eschewing plugs for his own company's product, instead is asking for an overhaul of industry practices. He wants a departure from the traditional buy-sell patterns, insisting that the status quo must go.

Pickman is scheduled to speak today (Wed.) before the Show-A-Rama convention in Kansas City. Advance indications are that he'll ask for a new kind of flexibility in the marketing of theatrical product on the part of both distributor and exhibitor.

It's Pickman's contention that each picture should be treated as an individual enterprise, perhaps opening on the usual firstrun basis, or skipping firstrun and going multiple-run, and/or with possible changes in non-modern clearances and availabilities.

Exec wants to get away from the bromide about the good picture making money and the bad one meaning sudden death at the box-office. He feels this is a negative approach, representing indifference, complacency and lack of imbeing conducted on all 11 Electro-Vision houses his chain acquired last Fall, with a view to bringing any and all up to date with the latest type of equipment and decoration.

Extras: Responsibilities, Benefits

Hollywood, March 7.

In a newsletter to members, Screen Extras Guild warned of strict adherence to rules relating to reporting on time for work and possible suspension for failure to show without notifying employer and without reasonable excuse.

Additionally, letter points out various facets of health and welfare benefits effective April 1, to be elaborated in a special booklet listing all details and sent to members shortly.

Full coverage of 70 days hospitalization, insurance against death and dismemberment, liberal allowance toward surgical expense and coverage of about 80% of almost all other medical expenses are provided for under new agreement reached at recent IATSE, basic unions and AMPP negotiations.

Extras must earn $1,000 for covered producers in initial eligibility period July 1 to Dec. 24, 1960 to be eligible for benefits on April 1 this year. Those who do not come within this scope, can become eligible July 1, 1961, or Oct. 1, 1961, or Jan. 1, 1962 or April 1, 1962 if $1,000 is earned in 12 month period ending three months before eligibility begins.

Life insurance plan provides $2,000 policy, payable on death of member while he or she is eligible. If member becomes permanently disabled during eligibility period before 60, insurance policy coverage will continue regardless of future earnings and without payment of premium.

Accidental death at work in or out of studio provides for an added $2,000. Same applies for loss of any two limbs or eyes as result of accident; half for loss of one limb or eye.

A maximum of $500 surgical expense also is included.

Hospitalization services without cost for 70 days provide if member is readmitted within three months of previous hospital stay, 70 day proviso covers both periods. If more than three months intervenes between discharge and readmission, another full 70 days hospitalization is available.

If a member takes private room, reimbursement will be $15 a day for maximum 70 days.

First $100 under medical benefit plan in calendar year must be met by member. Thereafter 80% will be paid by insurance company—to limit of $5,000 per individual during life. If good health is established after no more than $1,000 has been paid under benefit, full $5,000 lifetime maximum is reinstated.

Bob Benjamin Chairs UN Committee for Kennedy

Washington, March 7.

President John F. Kennedy Monday (6) named Robert S. Benjamin, United Artists board chief, national chairman of the U.S. Committee for the United Nations. It works for increased grass roots support for the U.N.

"At no time," Kennedy said, "has there been a greater need for an effective mobilization of all sources of support for the United Nations."

New York As A 'Location' Burg; More As To Police Helpfulness

By VINCENT CANBY

As Leonard Bernstein has already pointed out: "New York, New York is a helluva town." Also: "The Bronx is up and the Battery's down."

These two observations—one a subjective opinion and the other a fact of geography—are now as familiar to citizens of Mozambique as those of Murray Hill, mostly because of the ever-growing number of films made in and around Manhattan.

The Big Town, largely ignored as a location by filmmakers in the fat, pre-World War II days, has been utilized more and more frequently in recent years, both by Hollywood-based producers and indies, the shoe string variety as well as to whom budget is of no grave concern.

Lotsa Street Scenes

The city and it banlieue are prominently featured in such upcoming major productions as the film adaptation of Bernstein's legit musical "West Side Story," the Carrol Baker-Jack Garfein "Something Wild," the Fredric March-Ben Gazzara starrer "Young Doctors." It also plays a major role in John Cassavetes highly praised "Shadows," and is the background for numerous other low budget indie films such as Shirley Clarke's "The Connection," Little Movies' upcoming "29-4 and Falling," Wilson Ashley's "Deadfall," and Rick Carrier's "The Strangers."

At the moment, Robert Rossen is prepping start of his "The Hustler," in New York. City's charms are such that even French "new waver" Jean-Luc Godard ("Breathless") is contemplating a N.Y.-based epic.

Phenomenon of New York as a film star was discussed last week by a young New York jack-of-many-film trades, Ernie Pintoff, whose fame heretofore has rested on some funny and stylish animated cartoons, particularly "The Interview" and "The Violinist" (nominated for an Oscar last year).

Pintoff, whose Pintoff Productions has for several years been profitably turning out commercial films, has just finished his first live-action production, "The Shoes," a 30-minute serio-comic featurette starring Buddy Hackett and shot entirely on location in The Bronx and Manhattan. The city itself, of course, plays a prominent part.

Great, But Tempermental

New York according to Pintoff, is a "natural" performer, but also rather tempermental and, for a producer working on a limited budget, more expensive than one would think. Quite frankly, says Pintoff, who wrote, directed, produced and will also score the film (with Norman Paris), he might have been able to cut corners shooting outside and away from New York and its union supervision. As it was, he wanted New York and so he cooperated unionwise, which upped his budget considerably.

There were also the problems met when shooting exteriors in well-travelled byways of The Bronx. City cooperated fully, he said, promising him police help in keeping the curious back and away from the camera eye. However, he found that in actual practice the city's finest tended to lose interest in his project unless some pourboires were strategically circulated. This was no immense budget item, he admits, but it did add to the overall cost and to general confusion. There were also many takes ruined when, in shooting street scenes with a partially hidden camera, star Buddy Hackett was recognized by passers-by.

As a result, the 30-minute featurette took three weeks to shoot, which, comparably speaking is about as long as it took for William Wyler to make "Ben-Hur"

His "Shoes" experience has simply whetted Pintoff's appetite and producer now is making plans for a full-length feature, which he describes as a sort of "Black Orpheus" in New York. It would be a love story dealing with the city's Puerto Ricans.

Why this infatuation with New York?

For one reason, he's in New York. If that sound like simple opportunism, Pintoff goes on to talk about the "variety" and "movement" of the city, which is obviously grist for the cinematic mill. He's not convinced that pictures took a long step forward when they learned how to talk ("The Shoes" has only about five minutes of dialog), and what better place to capture visual excitement than in the biggest city in the world? In this there is "actuality," and "reality," which is, in effect, a reaction against the photographed stage play which most films resemble, whether or not they are based on legit properties.

This, he suggests, is one of the reasons for the increasing use of New York, as well as of any real location, as opposed to the old studio method of filming. By extension of this reasoning, this is also why location-shot films are usually better, or at least, more interesting, than the old studio product. When the camera gets outside, it begins to "see," often it sees things which never could have been planned in advance, and, as a result, its dependence on the soundtrack or "talk" is lessened.

Brenda Lee, 16, Cast

Hollywood, March 7.

Brenda Lee, 16-year-old rock 'n' roll singer, has been term-pacted by 20th-Fox and assigned to Robert L. Lippert's "Two Little Bears" for her first film spot. Studio is skedded to go to court this week for approval of contract with a minor.

"Bears" stars Eddie Albert, and will be produced for Lippert by George W. George, directed by Randall Wood.

First El Monte Hardtop In 25 Years Surveyed

Los Angeles, March 7.

In an expansion of theatre interests, Fred Stein Enterprises and its subsidiary, Statewide Theatres, are making an extensive survey in City of El Monte for construction of a 1,200-seat deluxe hardtop house incorporating 70m equipment and having parking facilities. Project, to cost in neighborhood of $350,000, will be the first hardtop erected to El Monte in 25 years.

Proposed operation will be the second in area east of L.A. skedded for construction in near future. Site of a new Statewide theatre in West Covina has already been approved and work is slated to get underway shortly along the same lines as the El Monte project, with cost in same neighborhood.

Stein last year remodelled the Crest, former Fox West Coast house in San Bernardino, to tune of $100,000, opening in June, and also completely refurbished the Studio Theatre in same city, at a cost of $60,000 for a Christmas Day, 1960, preem. Company currently is entirely redoing the Roxy in Glendale at a remodelling cost of $75,000.

Stein yesterday stated he is completely committed to the concept of remodelling and refurbishing his theatres, to make houses as attractive and enticing as possible to woo the public. Surveys also are agination on the part of production, distribution and exhibition.

Just about every picture has a chance if it's properly evaluated and best manner of presentation is determined by the exhib and the distrib working jointly. In Pickman's opinion the maximum results are achieved on specific pictures released under specific circumstances in specific market areas

In a statesmanlike approach Pickman acknowledged that Par cannot grow unless its exhib customers also grow. Each side has its problems, mutual problems, he noted, and called for suggestions and changes which can be mutually beneficially.

Pickman is addressing himself to all theatres, and not just big-money cricuits. The new order—the departure from the status quo in marketing practices—"pertains to all our customers," from New York's Radio City Music Hall down to the pint-sized Eastman Theatre in Des Moines.

As for the state of business, the man from Par is bullish. He said all exhibs he's talked to are in the mood for remodeling or expansion, the b.o. is going fine and the lineups from Par as well as other companies promise a continuing upbeat.

international film, TV film and documentary market

a new outstanding success of the MILAN TRADE FAIR

'Breathless' Called Very 'Sick'

Editor Henry Hart's criticism of the French-made "Breathless" in Films in Review adds: "The publicity says it has to do with 'two young people whose anti-social course is, perhaps, their way of facing up to the perplexing circumstances of our times.' That is a sinister declaration. It means that "Breathless" upholds and promotes the idea, that theft, murder and amoral nihilism are legitimate reactions to contemporary society."

Hart adds, "Any society which abets such propaganda is doomed."

Juliet Prowse: 'I'll Do a Marilyn'; Fights for Own Makeup, Sec'y On Hawaiian Location for Wallis

Hollywood, March 7.

Juliet Prowse has served notice on Hal Wallis; Paramount and 20th-Fox she won't appear in Wallis' "Blue Hawaii," opposite Elvis Presley, unless her demands are met by Wallis and Paramount. Demands "definitely are not monetary," said actress, through her agents, Goldstone-Tobias, which reported beef is three-pronged.

Points on which Wallis and Paramount have refused to accede, agency spokesman reported, include actress' request for her 20th-Fox makeup man, Roy Stork, for picture; passage expenses for her secretary to Hawaiian location; change in billings clause in contract.

"If I have to go to New York, as Marilyn Monroe did, I will do it," actress declared through her reps. "My advisors have informed me new name on a picture will bring money into boxoffice both here, abroad, they feel—and I agree—my demands are not out of order." Actress also blasted 20th-Fox, where she's under seven-year contract for "failing to protect" her in negotiations with Wallis. She declared that 20th, "which used to build and protect stars, now is interested only in the money it can achieve from loaning out its contract players."

Secret Out: Universal Stays on AMPP Roll

Hollywood, March 7.

Universal ended its defection from the Assn. of Motion Picture Producers last Nov. 1, it became known yesterday. Company since then has participated in all of the Assn's activities except those of the labor division.

Universal served notice of intention to withdraw in November, 1959, but under the AMPP's six months notification requirement it remained a member until May 1, 1960.

No formal explanation was ever advanced for the withdrawal. Unofficially it was ascribed to fact that after sale of the lot to MCA-Revue, Universal no longer had responsibilities of studio ownership. It was pointed out at the time that United Artists, which also does not own studio property, never belonged to AMPP, the Hollywood branch of the Motion Picture Assn. of America.

Universal retained its membership in the parent MPAA and also in latter's affiliate, the Motion Picture Export Assn. United Artists also is a member of the last two.

Italo-Pakistani Pact

Washington, March 7.

Government of Pakistan and National Assn. of Italian Motion Picture Industries (ANICA) inked a three-year agreement on import of Italian product last month, according to U.S. Commerce Dept.

Agreement provides for importation of no more than 30 Italian features on a rental basis by the end of the current fiscal year next June 30. Provision is also made for production of films in Pakistan in collaboration with Pakistani nationals.

Permits for the 30 Italian films will be reserved exclusively for Pakistani distributors. Remittances of earnings from the films will be freely allowed within the 180,000-rupee limit. Earnings over this amount will be blocked, but can be used for Italian-Pakistani coproduction in Pakistan.

'DEFENDS 'ABOLITION'

Its Distortions, Not Material, Argues Wilkes

Minneapolis, March 7.

Lloyd Wilkes, chairman of Project Awake, local anti-red group, says that his organization will continue to show the film "Operation Abolition" despite crjticism of the Fulton Lewis 3d film by the National Council of Churches and others.

While admitting the film has some "technical errors," Wilkes asserts most viewers don't consider these distortions material ones. He adds that his group points out both the pros and cons of the film whenever they show it.

Noting that between 50,000 and 75,000 Minnesotans have seen "Operation Abolition," Wilkes claims that "at least 90% of the church groups have backed us and encouraged us to continue showing it."

WESTERNERS TO N.Y. FOR METRO ENTHUSER

Hollywood, March 7.

Western division sales manager William J. Devaney will head Metro's Los Angeles, Seattle, San Francisco and Portland contingent winging to Gotham today (Mon.) for two-day sales seshes starting tomorrow at Astor Hotel.

Joseph R. Vogel, prexy, is slated to greet more than 100 delegates from country at opening sesh tomorrow. Robert Mochrie, sales veepee, will conduct pow pivoting on new product and discussion of sales policies for "Ben-Hur," Sam Bronston's "King of Kings" and touch on "How the West Was Won" Tent, title, maiden Cinerama plotted release of four to be produced for Metro in two year period.

In addition to Devaney, Thomas Aspell, branch manager and assistant Charles Geary will represent Los Angeles; Sam Davis, Seattle, Sam Gardner, San Francisco; and Duke Douvlyn, Portland.

Mochrie summoned division and branch managers for the sessions, which are being attended by Vogel, v.p.-treasurer Robert H. O'Brien, v.p.-general counsel Ben Melniker and other Gotham execs.

Conclave serves to spotlight the fact that M-G has several significant productions in the hopper, including the reissue of Selznick's "Gone With the Wind," the continuing "Ben-Hur," the newly-released "Cimarron."

Vogel has just concluded a series of Manhattan meetings devoted exclusively to "Kings." Clark Ramsay, studio ad manager, and Ralph Wheelwright, coordinator of global promotion on the picture, came in from the Coast for these get-togethers.

M. P. COUNCIL SPEAKERS

Johnston, Emerling, Frisch, Pleshette Lined Up

Motion Picture Assn. of America prexy Eric Johnston will speak at the opening session of the seventh annual conference of the Federation of Motion Picture Councils in New York March 16-17.

First day's program also will include a panel discussion featuring three exhibs. Ernest Emerling, Loew's Theatres veep; Eugene Pleshette, managing director of the Brooklyn Paramount; and Emanuel Frisch, chairman of the American Congress of Exhibitors and Randforce Amusement Co. treasurer.

'CLASSIFICATION' ODDS

Can Marano Bill Pass N.Y. State Senate?

Albany, March 7.

Will the Marano film designation bill, which passed the Assembly by an almost eight-to-one majority, clear the Senate hurdle? Or will it fail to do so, as proved the case with last year's Younglove film classification act.

This question received varying answers, after a 125-17 vote was registered in the Lower House.

Assemblyman Luigi R. Marano, Brooklyn Republican, expressed hope that the Senate would pass the measure. Another informed source "did not know."

The time element should work to the advantage of the designation bill, although this is not necessarily so. The Marano act was received by the Senate on March 2, whereas the Younglove bill came to that House on last March 24—as adjournment was approaching. It was referred to the Senate Rules Committee, which did not take affirmative action.

The Senate Education Committee, to which the Marano act was referred, had favorably reported the companion Duffy bill of 1960. Advanced to third reading, it was "starred" while awaiting arrival of the Assembly measure. However, the latter went to Senate Rules, instead.

HEAD PENNSY CENSOR NOW FILM CO. EXEC

Peter T. Dana has resigned as chairman of Pennsylvania Board of Film Censors to become eastern sales manager of Pathe-America. Budd Rogers, P-A prexy, long has known Dana, who once was a sales exec with Universal, stationed in Pittsburgh.

He went on the censor panel when it was revived by Penna. Gov. David Lawrence 18 months ago, shortly after leaving Universal.

'Pleasure of Company' To Be Sneaked in Chicago

Chicago, March 7.

Paramounteers Bill Perlberg, George Seaton, Jerry Pickman and Howard Minsky come to town tomorrow (Wed.) for four days to try out new sneak preview techniques for their upcoming "The Pleasure of His Company."

It's understood, but not confirmed, that Par will show a rough cut of the pic in two nabe theatres and study reactions for editing purposes. Simultaneous showings are also expected to experiment with new promotional techniques, with either theatre using: (1) no advertising, (2) cast and credit ads only, or, (3) name of pic only. Gates will then be compared to serve as a guide for future midwest sneakers.

Stormy February, But Biz Strong; 'Misfits,' 'Exodus' Nip-and-Tuck; 'Family Robinson' Lures Moppets

By MIKE WEAR

VARIETY's regular weekly boxoffice reports are summarized each month, retrospectively. Based on an average of 24 key situations, the source data constitute an adequate sampling of current releases but are not, of course, fully "definitive." An index of relative grossing strength in the U. S.-Canada market, this monthly reprise does not pretend to express total rentals.

The significant fact about first-run film business in February was the ability of the product in release to make such a strong showing in the face of the raging elements. One snowstrom after another plus the coldest weather of the year provided a severe test for top pictures, and the showings were remarkable against such handicaps. The severest winter in 80-odd years sloughed normal operations two different times along the heavygrossing Atlantic seaboard. True, exhibitors were favored by two holidays, with Lincoln's Birthday more of a biz-getter than usual because falling on Sunday, with a Monday celebration, making for a three-day weekend holiday period in some key cities covered by VARIETY. Washington's Birthday, per usual, proved the same prize winter holiday it always has been.

The race for top laurels was a close one between "Exodus" (UA) and "The Misfits," also from United Artists. "Misfits" nosed out the other pic principally because running so far ahead in actual coin total and because it amassed such large grosses although only out in release three weeks during February. The Clark Gable-Marilyn Monroe starrer grossed nearly $1,100,000 in keys covered by VARIETY.

"Exodus," which took second spot, promises to take over No. 1 position in monthly ratings just as soon as it obtains more playdates. Until late in the month, it was playing in only eight key cities.

"Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) is finishing a stunning third as compared with seventh spot in January. This Disney opus, which has proved astonishing even to the most optimistic exhibs, actually wound up on top one week in February.

"World of Suzie Wong" (Par), which was sixth a month ago, is capturing fourth position by dint of some fresh, strong dates. "Spartacus" (U), which was first in January, is winding in fifth position.

"Where Boys Are" (M-G), which was 10th in January, is pushing up to sixth place. "Ben-Hur" (M-G), long champ in monthly surveys, is finishing seventh inasmuch as it now has completed its first-run, hard-ticket engagements in a number of top key cities.

"The Alamo" (UA) is getting a jab in the arm via additional popscale, grind runs, and climbing to eighth spot as compared with 11th in January. "Wackiest Ship in Army" (Col) is holding in ninth position, same as a month ago, thereby indicating its nice staying power.

"Grass Is Greener" (U), third in January, is winding up 10th. "Never On Sunday" (Lope), a newcomer, is capturing 11th money while "Can Can" (20th) rounds out the Top 12 pix. Last-named is figuring in the list because now out on some additional regular scale runs.

"Tunes of Glory" (Lope), "Virgin Spring" (Janus) and "Please Turn Over" (Col) are the runner-up pix in that order.

Promising New Entries

Several new pix, launched near the end of the month, show promise. "Great Impostor" (U) looks to be heard from plenty in the future judging from its first few engagements started near the end of February. It was rated mighty in Pittsburgh, sock in Providence, smash in Denver and wow in Boston. "Cimarron" (M-G), another newie, has been somewhat spotty to date but wound up its first week at the N.Y. Music Hall with a nice total. It also was sock on first round in K.C. However, in many other openings it has been fair to mild.

"Pepe" (Col), another new entrant, did not show much until the final week in February, largely because only on release in a few spots until then. However in this final session it did well enough to cop fifth place in the weekly ratings. "101 Dalmatians" (BV), which has done next to smash so far, hints considerable future potential. "Circle of Deception" (20th) mainly has ranged from mild to good on initial playdates.

"Gorgo" (M-G) was sock the first two weeks in Philly. "Look in Any Window" (AA), another newie, was rated okay in Detroit but bad in Louisville. "Black Sunday" (AI) came through with a lively first week in Cleveland, its first big engagement. "Goliath and Dragon," from same company, was good in K.C.

"Savage Innocents" (Par), also new, was light in St Louis and mild in L.A. "Go Naked in World" (M-G), another newcomer, was drab in L.A. and Balto and fair in Portland and good in Cleveland.

"Marriage-Go-Round" (20th) did well enough to finish as a runner-up pic one week. "Ballad of Soldier" (Union), a newcomer, wound up 11th another week. "Gold of 7 Saints" (WB), mostly disappointing so far, managed to wind up 12th in another session.

February's Faves

1. "Misfits" (UA).
2. "Exodus" (UA).
3. "Family Robinson" (BV).
4. "Suzie Wong" (Par).
5. "Spartacus" (U).
6. "Where Boys Are" (M-G).
7. "Ben-Hur" (M-G).
8. "The Alamo" (UA).
9. "Wackiest Ship" (Col).
10. "Grass Is Greener" (U).
11. "Never On Sunday" (Lope).
12. "Can-Can" (20th).

Phoney Women's Federation

'Spartacus' Hoax Used Imaginary Cleveland Group—Motive Behind Gag Mystifies

Jan. 18 issue of VARIETY carried a story from Cleveland on "Spartacus" having been named best picture of 1960 by the Great Lakes Federation of Women's Clubs at a meeting in Cleveland. Question now arises: Who or what is the Great Lakes Federation of Women's Clubs?

DAILY VARIETY, which is published in Hollywood, ran an ad on Feb 13 reproducing an exchange of letters between columnist Hedda Hopper and Mrs. E. Lee Ozbirn, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Miss Hopper called to Mrs. Ozbirn's attention a story in the Hollywood Citizen-News on Jan. 19 which had "Spartacus" having been selected as best by "The Federated Women's Clubs of America." Miss Hopper added her opinion that "Spartacus" was one of the worst pictures I've ever seen" and noted that the script was written by Dalton Trumbo (ed note, this being a name not loved by rightists).

Mrs. Ozbirn wrote back to Miss Hopper, saying the General Federation of Women's Clubs never endorsed "Spartacus" and, indeed, Mrs. Ozbirn concurs with Miss Hopper's opinion of the picture. Further, Mrs. Ozbirn never heard of the "Federated Women's Clubs of America."

To repeat, the VARIETY story referred to the Great Lakes Federation of Women's Clubs, while the Citizen-News spoke of the Federated Women's Clubs of America.

Now comes Universal, distributor of "Spartacus," with a letter to VARIETY setting forth its position. Jeff Livingston, U's exec coordinator of sales and advertising, states: "Our investigations indicate there is no such organization as the Federated Women's Clubs of America or the Great Lakes Federation of Women's Clubs. Apparently you and we are the victims of a phoney release."

Livingston said David Lipton, U's ad-pub chief, had asked to pursue the matter. It has been "an upsetting one for the company."

Pathe-American's Western Sales Chieftain—Bateman

Hollywood, March 7

Francis Bateman, distribution exec, has been appointed by prexy Budd Rogers to post of western division sales manager of Pathe-America Distributing Co., Inc. Rogers last week set Peter T. Dana as eastern sales manager.

Bateman, who will headquarter in Hollywood at company's Coast offices, previously was western division sales manager for Republic Pictures from 1936 through 1956, except for three-year absence between 1947-50 when he served as general sales manager for Screen Guild.

Exhib Strives for Good Will But In Fort Lee, N. J., They Hate Better

Mal Warshaw, the hard-pressed Fort Lee, N.J., art house operator, is determined to gain acceptance in the community despite the constant harassment of a local Catholic priest.

A recent effort by the theatre operator to run a special young people's film series on Saturday matinee with the cooperation of the local school board ran into difficulty. Warshaw believes that the Fort Lee superintendent of schools failed to give his okay because of the fear of offending the local Catholic community. However, the school superintendent, Lewis F. Cole, is quoted in local papers as saying that the Fort Lee schools are not participating because of the commercial aspects of the program.

As a result, Warshaw is offering the entire Saturday matinee series free to both children and adults. In a letter to Cole, the theare operator said: "The aim of this program is simply to provide our younger citizens with rewarding, enriching, as well as entertaining motion picture entertainment. It is our hope that his kind of series will become a regular part of the activity of the theatre with the added participation of the Fort Lee school system as well as others in our area.

"While it is true that the Grant-Lee is a commercial enterprise, it is equally true that this particular program was not conceived for profit alone. It is a pointed effort on our part to work with the community in building a positive program of motion picture recreation."

Calling attention to the superintendent's comments on the commercial aspects, Warshaw said he is offering the balance of the Fine Film Series for Young People "as a service to the community." Stressing that the commercial aspect had been removed, Warshaw invited the school topper, the faculty and the students of the Fort Lee schools to attend the program as his guests.

Everett N. Crosby Productions Inc. has been authorized to conduct a motion picture and television business in New York. Capital stock is 200 shares, no par value. George F. Foley was filing attorney at Albany.

99-YEAR SENTENCE

18-Year-Old Negro Killed Theatre Owner

Austin, Tex., March 7.

An all-white jury Thurs. (2) sentenced Wesley Simpkins to 99 years in prison after the 18-year-old Negro admitted his guilt in the slaying of theatre owner Sam Lucchese Sr. Simpkins was one of three East Austin teenagers accused of the shooting last Dec. 4 of the owner of the Harlem Theatre, a Negro theatre. Trials of the other two have not been set.

Lucchese was found in his car at the rear of the theatre with $519.90 near his body. Most of the money was in a paper sack.

Blumenfeld Uses MPAA Ratings But to 'Classify'

An ever-growing group of exhibitors continues to press for film classification on its own.

Abe Blumenfeld, a veep of Theatre Owners of America as well as head of Blumenfeld Theatres, the large California circuit, has instituted his own classification system in all Blumenfeld houses.

Blumenfeld newspaper ads and lobby posters now carry symbols designating the film as either "suitable for entire family," "suitable for adults and teenagers" or for "adults only."

Blumenfeld's classification system is not likely to endear him to the Motion Picture Assn. of America. He bases his classifications on the MPAA's Green Sheet. The MPAA is not only against classification (except at the parental level) but also against the use of the Green Sheet ratings unless they are accompanied by the full Green sheet review of the pic, which explains the ratings given.

Green Sheet ratings have also been used to classify films in Memphis, much to the MPAA's chagrin.

Up-Rank Marty Blau

Martin Blau has been promoted from assistant publicity manager of Columbia's domestic publicity department to international publicity and promotion manager of Columbia International.

This is in line with Col's integration of world-wide promotional activities, according to Jonas Rosenfield Jr., ad-pub v.p.

'Millionairess,' 353-Seater: One-Day $1,115 Record For Atlanta's Fine Arts

Atlanta, March 7.

Despite torrential rains that practically washed out the opening and held the boxoffice take to $788.10, a new three-day record was set by 20th-Fox's "The Millionairess" at 353-seat Fine Arts Cinema. Saturday's (Feb. 24) mark hit a one-day record at $1,115.24, which, coupled with Sunday receipts ($829.18) brought three-day total to $2,733.22 for Sophia Loren-Peter Sellers starrer.

John and Ruth Carter, owners & operators of Fine Arts, kicked off "Millionairess" with an invitational screening (in which 20th-Fox and Citizens Jewelry Co. participated) at which time finalists in Miss Atlanta Pageant were introduced for first time. Tiein gimmick was that girls in pageant were wearing $1,000,000 worth of diamonds from gem firm's collection.

Another 20th-Fox pic, "The Mouse That Roared," did so well at Fine Arts that for some time thereafter Carters referred to their compact little nabe spot as "The House of the Mouse" in their advertising.

SCRANTON LIKES 'WONG'; MAY GO 7 WEEKS

Scranton, Pa., March 7.

What happens after Metro's "Ben-Hur" leaves town?

Many a theatre man has been asking himself that question. Delighted with the grosses for the Biblical spectacle, he still wonders, "What next?"

Ben Rosenberg, Penn-Paramount president, believes he found the answer for the newly-renovated Center Theatre here. After a record-breaking 17 weeks with "Ben-Hur," he shifted to a popular price policy with "World of Suzie Wong."

Bolstered by turnaway weekend crowds, grosses have been exceptional for this territory and pic is in its fifth week, may go one or two more.

Kennedy's 'It's Parents Responsibility' Cited, With Others, Agin' Censoring

Dallas, March 7.

Criminologists and sociological authorities support President John F. Kennedy's apparent skepticism regarding the value of censorship, according to the Council of Motion Picture Organizations of Texas.

At his televised press conference of Feb. 1, the President made it plain that he believed the parent, not the Government, was responsible for protecting young people from any depiction of crime and violence in films, tv and radio.

Kennedy had said "we can't put the problem on Mr. Hoover (J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI) or on the White House or on the Congress. It rests with the families involved — with the parents involved. But we can do something about the living conditions and the atmosphere in which these children grow up, and we are going to do something about it."

Kyle Rorex of COMPO reported these following statements made by Doctor E. J. MacNamara, dean of the New York Institute of Criminology; and Paul W. Tappan, professor of sociology at New York U. and former chairman of the United States Board of Parole.

MacNamara: "A criminal personality is not going to be developed by a motion picture. We must read more, see more, think more—that's a big problem for America."

Tappan: "The evidence is clear that the causes of law violations are to be found deeply rooted in the family and the neighborhood where the child is trained, not in the movie theatre where he may be entertained. The causes lie in the values and in the relationship that the child experiences among his close associates in direct personal relationships."

48 DAYS ON ROAD

Skip Regan Hinterlanding For The Filmgroup's Pair

Los Angeles, March 7.

Skip Regan, distribution vp for The Filmgroup, leaves Friday (10) on a 48-day tour of key cities on two pix to be released by the Roger Corman outfit. Duo include Corman's own "Atlas," and "Pirate of the Blackhawk," acquired for U. S. release.

Trek kicks off March 13 in New Orleans, at meeting of Southern division distribs and exhibs.

The Foggy Dew Afflicts Geishas 'Seeing' America

Boston, March 7.

How a 13-city tour by Columbia's "Cry For Happy," skedded for deluxe flights with Miko Taka, two geishas, Teruko and Somezuru and 19 pieces of luggage, including five and one-half pound wigs and a tea service for slaking the thirst of the press, turned into a "bus and truck" show, was recounted by Mack St. John, local publicist of Columbia Pictures. He's "Papa-san" to his fledglings.

Trials and tribulations were caused by conked out airlines, various strikes, gathering fog and whatnot. Result was a sort "Gulliver's Travels" (another Columbia picture) it is coyly suggested. Starting out on Tuesday (14) with the party slicked up and smiling, they made Dallas, San Antonio, Houston and Chicago okay. The trouble started in Chicago — they nabbed the last plane out for Detroit, arriving six hours late and were grounded. St. John corraled an auto, piled in Miss Taka and the two geishas, in costume, plus the 19-pieces of luggage and motored from Detroit to Cleveland.

From Cleveland to Pittsburgh, there was more trouble.

The plane couldn't land at Pittsburgh because of bad weather and flew back to Cleveland with the St. John's show, which by this time wasn't "for happy." They had to hire another car and make the long jump over the road. By this time, the geishas were weary, and ill, not used to American food and longing for their own country.

They got out of Pittsburgh, bound for Boston, on Thursday (23) on a two engine plane, not affected by the strike, but it didn't get them to Boston. They got grounded in Providence by fog, and St. John and the Japanese girls had to take a Greyhound bus to get to Boston at 1:30 a.m. morning of the skedded press conference.

During the "ups and downs" of St. John's four from Hollywood of 13 cities in 18 days, which turned out longer because of the plane upsets, the publicity chief learned to speak some halting Japanese, eat raw fish, but still doesn't like it, while indoctrinating the geishas, who don't like American food, with the exception of hamburgers, to eat U.S. chow.

To top everything, following the Boston confab, at which press and former Japanese ambassador greeted the group, fog cancelled the skedded Boston-New York flight, and St. John hied out to hire a limo for the next leg of the trip. From New York, the group makes Washington and ends the tour at San Francisco, March 3. The geishas fly right on to Kyoto and home. The picture goes into the Keith Memorial, Boston, March 15.

St. John, son of the novelist, Adela Rogers St. John, gagged that press on the tour has been "for happy," but the trip was not.

Toronto Toll Specials A-Coming

'The Consul' Mighty at $1.50—Carol Channing Direct-From-B'way and Others

By ROBERT McSTAY

Toronto, March 7.

Paramount's Telemeter system of tollvision operating here experimentally under Trans - Canada Telemeter, is opening a further phase of its programming on March 16 with a week's run of the Gian-Carlo Menotti stage opera, "The Consul" with Patricia Neway. It will be fed to the suburban subscribers here nightly for a week at $1.50 toll charge.

On April 2 Carol Channing's "Show Girl," six-person intimate revue now at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre in Manhattan will become the first direct-from-Broadway offering into metered homes. Following specials will be off-Broadway "Hedda Gabler" with Anne Meacham week of April 4 and a taped "Evening with Edith Piaf in Paris" on May 4.

Les Winik, veepee in charge of programming, and Jean Dalrymple, with title as executive producer of Telemeter play, were in Toronto in connection with details of the auxiliary programming for Etobicoke's 6,000 subscribers. Duo represented International Telemeter Co., a division of Paramount Pictures Corp.

Eugene Fitzgibbons, prexy of Trans-Canada Telemeter, has disclosed that only about 100 subscription boxes had been yanked because of homeowners' refusal to pay 75c a week for film or sports rights. He pointed out that, of some 6,000 subscribers in Etobicoke, a western suburb of Toronto, defectors seemed little interested in films at home and "wanted the hard-to-get coin box as a status symbol."

With a heavy waiting list, those willing to pay $5 for the installation of the Telemeter attachment, plus the 75c weekly minimal cost, was so large that such installations had been "snapped up."

There's no monthly service charge for a subscriber but it is necessary for the latter to purchase a weekly 75c worth of programming during the month. "Obviously if the subscriber was not interested in using the equipment, Trans-Canada Telemeter could not afford to leave it inactive." Minimum usage was $39 a year and that "Telemeter preferred to give the equipment to someone who wants it rather than leave it idle."

National Ballet of Canada has been approached by Telemeter, ditto the Tyrone Guthrie producer of "H.M.S. Pinafore," but that both bookings had been snaffled by the regular television showings over Canadian Broadcasting Corp.

Fitzgibbons stressed that the four contracted Telemeter specials now set would run full-length, than encores would be left in "Show Girl," and that performances would not be marred by the insertion of commercials.

Winik also explained that these four productions will form the nucleus of a "library" when the International Telemeter Co. extends its operations in the U. S.

WEINBERG TO VANCOUVER

For 4th Annual Film Fest In Canadian City

Maryan G. Talbot, executive secretary of the Vancouver International Film Festival, has returned to her British Columbia base after seeing distributors and film critics in New York with an eye to selecting an international jury for this year's (4th annual) shindig. Again it will be a two-week affair, July 10-22, with 28 countries participating.

There will be a film critics' jury in addition to the international jury which, incidentally, will include one from the Far East (probably from India or Japan), one member of course from Canada.

Herman G. Weinberg (New York) will be one of the American jurors.

Edna Ferber Rips 'Cimarron'

Edna Ferber, longtime novelist and sometime collaborator with George S. Kaufman on various stage plays, has lashed out in the N. Y. Times against the Anthony Mann-directed, Metro remake of her book "Cimarron." Miss Ferber declares that the pan of the picture by Bosley Crowther in the Times "was too mild."

Quoting the novelist to the newspaper:

"My own emotions in this case doubtless are aggravated by the frustration which tortures me. I can't do anything about this picture. I didn't even know that a second picturization of my novel 'Cimarron' was being made. I received from this second picture of my novel not one single penny in payment. I can't even do anything to stop the motion-picture company from using my name in advertising so slanted that it gives the effect of my having written the picture. I am not carping because I receive nothing from the profits of this picture. In 1929 writers who sold their books or plays to the motion-picture companies did so under contracts which now are considered absurd.

"I do care about the form and treatment and content of this present picture entitled 'Cimarron.' I do care about the publicity which conveys the false impression that I had anything to do with the writing or the presentation of this picture. One large black-lettered advertisement read: 'The words are those of the Pulitzer Prize winning novelist Edna Ferber.' This is a good deal like being forced to stand by helpless while your daughter is being ravished and sold into slavery.

"I shan't go into the anachronisms in dialogue; the selection of a foreign-born actress with a slight foreign accent to play the part of the American-born bride; the repetition; the bewildering lack of sequence. Owing to a contretemps I did see 'Cimarron' on the screen in Arizona four weeks ago. This old gray head turned almost black during those two (or was it three?) hours!."

RKO THEATRES BRIEF DIVISION MGRS. IN N.Y.

RKO Theatres division managers were in for a N.Y. homeoffice powwow yesterday and today (Wed.) to set bookings through summer and discuss operations generally.

Harry Mandel, prez of the chain, presided. Top-tier execs on hand included Albert A. List, board topper of the parent Glen Alden, who spoke to the fieldmen yesterday.

NABES GETTING BOUT

Stanley Chain Not Contracting For Downtown

Philadelphia, March 7.

Stanley Warner chain will present the Floyd Patterson-Ingemar Johansson fight telecast in five neighborhood theatres. The bout will not be shown in a midtown first-run, since the Stanley, which usually puts on the fight TV, is occupied with "Pepe."

Theatres showing the fight are the Broadway (S. Philly); Kent (Northeast Phila.); Logan (North Phila.); the 69th St., in suburban Upper Darby, and the Stanely, Camden, N. J. All seats are priced at $5 including tax.

Odeon Echelon Set

Toronto, March 7.

Chairman of the board of Odeon Theatres (Canada) Ltd., which operates some 110 houses across the Dominion, is J. S. D. Tory, Toronto lawyer, who succeeds Leonard Brockington, Q.C.,

G. R. B. Salmon is new prexy, with Edward G. Forsyth, former ass't g.m., a new director.

Brockington remains on the directorate.

Bout Shared in K.C.

Kansas City, March 7.

Showing of the closed circuit television coverage of the Patterson-Johansson fight March 13 will be double-barrelled here, one session being downtown in the Municipal Auditorium exhibition Hall, and the other being in the Uptown Theatre, Fox Midwest operated.

Installation of the equipment in the Uptown is going forward now. Previously the Midland Theatre, downtown, has presented the tv fights. Theatre since has been taken over by a new organization which is readying it as a professional bowling center.

Armory Gets Big Bout; 3,000 Bleachers, at $3; Like Number $5 Reserves

Troy, N.Y., March 7.

For the first time since the close-circuiting of championship boxing bouts was inaugurated locally, an armory, rather than a theatre, will be the area outlet for the Floyd Patterson - Ingemar Johannson match, March 13. Troy Armory, which seats about 6,000, will be scaled $3 to $5. The drillshed has 3,000 reserved, and 3,000 bleacher accommodations.

Either Fabian's Palace or the old Grand, both in Albany, heretofore was in hookup. However, the former is dated for "Fiorello" by the Broadway Theatre League of Albany. A switch was necessary, because the Stanley Warner Strand—scene of the other three touring shows in the League's first season—was to be dark, for a $300,000 modernization.

At first it was believed either Proctor's in Troy (which had carried several fightcasts) or Proctor's in Schenectady, would be substituted in TelePrompter's pickup of the third "go" between the heavyweights.

IMPORTERS SPELL OUT NIX ON ALL-MUST-SEAL

New York's importing fraternity has officially branded Theatre Owners of America's proposal to exclude all but Code Seal pictures from U.S. screens as "not only morally but legally wrong."

In a statement prepared by Michael Mayer, exec director of the Independent Film Importers & Distributors of America, importers call the proposal morally wrong in that it would "delegate the freedom of the screen medium to a select group to pick and choose films that may be shown."

IFIDA adds that it would be legally wrong because it would represent "an improper conspiracy of exhibitors to prevent the showing of non-conforming and unusual motion pictures on the screens of our nation."

Connecticut Exhibs' Next Anti-Toll Step: Federal Court Objections

By ROBERT H. ECHELSON

Hartford, March 7.

Despite the green light for paysee by the Federal Communications Commission, the wireless parlor boxoffice setup faces a major obstacle in the near future. Revealed here recently was a proposed appeal to the U. S. District Court by the Anti-Toll TV Committee of Connecticut against the FCC's sanction.

Bernard Menschell, Connecticut theatre operator, and head of the group, says type of appeal and strategy of future opposition will wait until the group's counsel has had time to study and digest the FCC report.

Without any further legal roadblocks, paysee would get underway here within a three to six months period. Trial period of three years will be co-sponsored by RKO General Inc., a major broadcaster. Some $10 million will be spent on the test.

With the FCC go head signal, came the resignation of Edward D. Taddei, general manager of Channel 18 (WHCT-TV, a U). Resignation became effective immediately.

Taddei in explaining his resignation said "I feel my job in Hartford has been accomplished. After having had a part in keeping an independent station alive in this city, and after having successfully worked for the establishment of a pay-tv test, I feel my job is at an end." He declined to discuss his future plans.

Cash-and-Lease

Taddei was head of Capitol Broadcasting which sold the station to Hartford Phonevision Co., owned by RKO General, for $150,000 cash. In addition Capitol is receiving $245,000 for a 10-year lease of physical properties such as plant and transmitter, etc. An option states that these leased properties may be purchased by Phonevision at the end of a four-year period for $570,000.

Expected to join the Anti-Toll TV Committee of Connecticut in its legal fight is the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut, a TOA affiliate. Parent TOA group is also expected to lend support to any legal moves to quash paysee here. Understood also that behind the scenes moves are underway to have Congress block the parlor tv box office.

For more than a year the film theatres of Connecticut, both ozoners and hardtops, have been assessing themselves a per person and per seat tax for war chest purposes.

According to Taddei, prior to his resignation, ground rules will have to be laid down by FCC on recruitment of subscribers for the three-year trial. Recruitment procedures will be disclosed when the FCC gives the station rules of conduct.

The major undetermined factor in the start of the nation's trial wireless pay 'n' see tv is the form of opposition by the theatre and other groups.

What Now?

According to W. Theodore Pierson, counsel for the Hartford Phonevision Co., operator of WHCT, focal point of the pilot program, if an appeal is taken, the court may be asked to stay the operation until there is a judicial decision. If there is such a stay ordered by the courts that would stem the start of the experiment until the appeal is decided.

With no court stay, but the case in the courts, there would have to be a judgment on proceeding that would entail weighing the merits of points raised in the appeal. Preliminary work toward starting the subscription service has been underway for some time and will continue.

Phonevision wants a minimum of 2,000 subscribers before it starts the test and anticipates a possible 10,000 parlor patrons before too long. Zenith Radio Corp. is the developer and patent holder of the decoding system to be used in the Hartford experiment. License to the use of these has been granted to Theatre Entertainment Co., which in turn has refranchised them to RKO General.

Programming will be split between free and fee tvcasting. An approx 40 hours of paid broadcasting is contemplated. Main bill of fare will consist of telecasting feature motion picture film plus a series of live spectaculars such as boxing, legit, ice shows, etc. Motion bill of fare would be duplicated throughout the week and sometimes on the same [illegible] so that there would be about 17 hours a week of unduplicated telecasts.

Charge for programs will vary from a low of 25 cents to a high of $3.50. Additionally to paying for programs, subscribers will have to pay an installation fee estimated at from $7.50 to $10 and a weekly rental fee for this equipment of probably 75 cents a week.

The Zenith system consists of an encoder that scrambles sight and sound as it leaves the transmitter and a decoder that restores both to original form. A device will be installed on the sets to allow viewers to leave paysee for conventional tv and return without any charge.

Connecticut Classification Drive

City of New Britain Also Cherishes Its 1917 Censor Right in New Charter Bid

Hartford, March 7.

Drive to censorship is underway in Connecticut. Two different frontal attacks on the exhibition of film are now underway in the legislative chambers of the General Assembly. As a result, last week the Legislators started chewing up the facts, figures and fiction re: movie classification and censorship.

Bill was proposed in the General Assembly which would establish a motion picture review board to tag film as F (Family) or U (Unfit for family). Bill would also determine which releases were suitable for children under 16 and which not.

City of New Britain which is seeking a new charter from the State Legislature has, buried in many provisions, a proposed ordinance that would establish a municipal censorship board. Heading this board would be a "clerk" with powers of licensing film before presentation!

Actually a censor board for New Britain would not be new. It was and still is a law on the books of the Hardware City. Has existed since 1917 but never enacted. Now that new charter is before legislature, city solons want it to remain on books. Behind all this is political, and religious pressure in the city.

Similar to other bills now being promoted in various state legislature's Connecticut's classification bill has been drafted by the Legislature's Judiciary Committee at the request of State Rep. Nicholas B. Eddy (Rep., its House chairman.

Under its terms, all motion pictures destined for commercial showing in the state, would be reviewed and divided into classifications F or U. Classification would have to be included on all marquee film advertising.

Eddy says that he is not interested in censorship for motion pictures but believes that parents should be given some sort of official guide on the contents of motion pictures. He will withdraw his bill, he says, if film industry comes up with its own policing plan or more information regarding the suitability of films for children.

KRAMER USING REVUE LOT AS A TENANT

Hollywood, March 7.

After employing Universal's facilities for "Inherit the Wind," producer-director Stanley Kramer has settled down on the lot—but this time with U's landlord—Revue Studios.

Kramer is presently using the new sound stage recently completed at Revue. His "Judgment at Nuremberg" production is the first film—theatrical or telepix—to be made on the new sound stage. It's believed that Kramer has a five-year deal for the new stage and gets first call on the facility for feature productions. When Kramer is not in production, the stage, of course, can be used for Revue's own telepix production.

Kramer had to ankle his office space initially when U, from whom he sub-leased, required the space for its own production activities. Moreover, U could not provide him with the stage facilities because of its own program.

Kramer had at first intended to make "Judgment" completely in Germany, but reconsidered after a careful study of the costs and other factors involved. His plan now is to film only a week of exteriors in Nuremberg, utilizing only one member of his cast — Spencer Tracy.

Astor Pix Pickup

Los Angeles, March 7

Eight Astor pix have been acquired by Manhattan Films International for distribution in the 11 western states.

Among spread is "La Dolce Vita," Cannes Film Festival winner and biggest European grosser of the year.

French Pix Production, Cinema B.O. So Far This Year Looks Like 1960

Paris, March 7.

At the halfway mark of the 1960-61 fiscal film season here, it looks like this year will about equal the recent ones in production and also in boxoffice figures. This means that attendance still can use a big hike, but at least it has about stopped declining, previous years, and looks like it even might go up. There seems to be a renewed public interest in films, especially the big ones, despite the growing video set sales. As a result, film people are beginning to look optimistic even in the face of a growing backlog of films.

In the 1959-60 season, Roger Vadim's "Les Liaisons Dangereuses 1960" drew over 600,000 patrons in its Paris firstrun. In 1958-59 Marcel Carne's "The Cheats" attracted more than 500,000. So far this season, two pix have already drawn over 400,000 in first-runs, and seem destined to equal or even surpass previous toppers. They are H. G. Clouzot's "The Truth," with Brigitte Bardot, and Metro's blockbuster "Ben-Hur."

Two French pix have hit better than 300,000. "The Frenchwoman and Love" and "Rhine Crossing." Latter won the Grand Prix in Venice last year.

A solid group of films also drew 100,000 to 200,000 patrons, among which there were seven Yank pix, "Let's Make Love" (20th), "The Alamo" (UA), still in its first-run, "Unforgiven" (UA), "Don't Give Up Ship" (Par), "Apartment" (UA), "Midnight Lace" (U) and "Five Market Women" (Par). There were nine French pix and two Italo entries.

Even With Tighter Film Censorship, More Sexy French Pix in Offering

Paris, Feb. 28.

Though film censorship is getting tighter here, and pressure groups are deploring the frank sex and social pix being turned out, "New Waver" Francois Truffaut's next pic will be about "menage a trois," that is a woman and two men living together by common choice and needs. However, Truffaut says it will be a hymn to love and life. Pic rolls later this season, with Jeanne Moreau, Oscar Werner and Henri Serre heading cast. Film is called "Jules Et Jim."

Trauffaut calls this pic a pure love among three people even though the subject obviously seems touchy on the surface. To him, they are all innocents with modesty and moral integrity.

Other "Wavers" are also taking objective looks at mores and love today. Jacques Rozier's "Adieu Philippine" has two teenage girls fighting over a man. Alexandre Astruc's "Prey for the Shadows" is about an adulterous wife who loses her husband and lover because of her need for independence. Claude-Bernard Aubert's "Cowards Live on Love" unfolds a love affair between a Negro and a white girl. Jacques Demy's "Lola" is about a bar girl with an illegitimate child whose lover finally comes back. Jean Valere's "Adults" concerns an American girl's seduction among the nightlifers of Paris.

So despite attempts to curb the outspoken French pix by more stringent censorship, French films will still treat love problems with their usual candor and directness. Roger Vadim is planning the topper, a modernization of the Marquis De Sade's "Justine," as "Vice and Virtue" in which a good girl is corrupted by Nazis during the last war.

London Cinema Tries To Boost Night Biz

London, March 7.

Latest attempt to bolster London night life comes from the Academy Cinema. Starting tomorrow (Wed.), the cinema is launching late film shows starting at 11 p.m. The programs, which will be screened four nights a week, will differ from the feature film shown during the day.

Success of the experiment, which has been given an okay by the London County Council, will depend largely on whether there will be enough all-night buses and private cars to enable patrons to get home late at night.

Import Pix Allocations To Be Upped by Japan

Tokyo, Feb. 28.

Import quota allocations are expected to be boosted by two for all importer-distribs for the fiscal annum beginning April 1. It is also expected that present allocation classifications, including "special adjustment" and special cases, will be unified into the basic license allocations.

These are the decisions reportedly reached by preliminary meetings of Finance Ministry's Foreign Film Liaison Council. Increased allocations would mean about 250 imports for fiscal 1961, a hike of about 40 from the previous year.

See Anglo-French Co-Prods. Nearer

London, March 7.

Big program of Anglo-French co-productions is possible as result of talks just held between reps of producing organizations and trade unions of both countries. Still to be ironed out are conditions of employment on co-productions and many administrative details.

Delegates to the talks, held in Paris, came from the British Film Producers Assn., the Federation of British Film Makers and the Chambre Syndicale de la Production Cinematographique Francaise on the one side and the British Federation of Film Unions and representatives of the French unions on the other.

Although there is no news in London of further talks, the feeling here is that the difficulties in the way of a big co-production program will be overcome.

RUSSIANS LIKE COLLEGE SYMPHONISTS FROM U.S.

Moscow, March 7.

On its opening night in Moscow the Michigan University Symphony got a very warm reception, despite the apparent fears that this time the Russians might be getting the worst of an exchange deal in which Soviets are sending the Igor Moiseev Dance Co. to the States as part of the current cultural exchanges.

Soviet audience that filled almost half the huge Luzhniki Sports palace seating 15,000 particularly enjoyed the performance of Russian and American composers. Musorgsky, Rimsky-Korsakov, S. Prokofiev, and D. Kabalevsky were played side by side with Bennet, Creston, Lowe and Gershwin. Americans had to borrow 30 Russian instruments.

"Porgy and Bess" and "My Fair Lady" tunes, old favorites here, were given big and generous recognition by the Muscovites. In fact they wanted more Gershwin at the end as encore, but the unit, anxious to please, responded with "The Internationale" instead . . .

U.S. collegians have taken off on a tour including Leningrad, Kiev, Odessa, Erevan, Tbilisi and other large centers of the USSR.

Brauner's 100th Film, Remake of '4 Poster'

Berlin, Feb. 28.

Artur Brauner, Germany's busiest film producer, has just started on his 100th pic, "Das Riesenrad" (The Giant Wheel), a remake of Stanley Kramer's "Four Poster" (1951). However, it's only a remake in a minor sense. Where the old film employed only two players (Rex Harrison, Lilli Palmer), the new one, which stars Maria Schell and O. W. Fischer, has a cast of 17. Incidentally, it's the first film after eight years which sees Miss Schell and Fischer, once this country's top screen couple, reunited.

"Das Riesenrad" is directed by ex-Hungarian Geza von Radvanyi. Ladislas Fodor wrote the script. Skedded are 37 production days including 10 days (exterior shootings) in Vienna. Gloria will distribute Brauner's 100th vehicle.

80-Yr.-Old Cinema Buff

London, Feb. 28.

Mrs. Louise Roberts, an 80-year-old widow, has been given free passes and reserved seats for life at two of her local cinemas in Neath, Wales. Mrs. Roberts has earned this tribute the hard way. Three times a week for 50 years, she has visited the two houses and has seen 15,000 films in her 7,800 visits.

Kenneth Evans, general manager of the two cinemas, says: "She doesn't mind what films she sees, but she prefers Westerns with plenty of shooting." Her favorite star? John Wayne.

14 Operas Set For Zurich in June

Zurich, Feb. 28.

For the first time within memory, the Zurich Opera House (Stadttheatre), under its new topper Herbert Graf, has announced the complete lineup of its traditional June Festival four months prior to start. Fest will run June 3-30. It is to include an ambitious array of 20 performances of 14 operas by 11 composers, including one world premiere. Instead of costly star performers whose fees are now reaching exorbitant proportions, the program will consist of some of this season's most successful new productions, updated with several name singers, plus a guest performance by the full-scale Bayrische Oper, Munich, company and an entirely new Zurich production.

Latter will be the world preem (June 9) of a Bohuslav Martinu opera, "Griechische Passion" (Greek Passion), based on the 1951 novel by Greek writer Nikos Kazantzakis which was later turned into a successful French film, "He Who Must Die," by Jules Dassin. It will be staged by Graf and batoned by Paul Sacher, with sets by Teo Otto.

The Munich Opera will guest June 11 with a contemporary German opera, "Elegie fuer junge Liebende" (Elegy for Young Lovers), by W. H. Auden and Chester Kallman, with music by Hans Werner Henze, staged and conducted by the composer, with Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, Carl Christian Kohn, Eva Maria Rogner, Lilian Bennigsen and Ingeborg Bremert. Zurich stint will immediately follow the May 20 world preem at Schwetzingen, Germany, and precede both the Glyndebourne (July 8) and Munich (Aug. 22 and 31) performances.

Repertory operas with name performers will include three Richard Strauss operas: "Rosenkavalier" (June 3 and 21), "Ariadne auf Naxos" (18), both with Lisa Della Casa, and "Elektra" (25-30) with Inge Borkh and Heidi Krall, batoned by Rudolf Kempe; "Flying Dutchman" (6) with Astrid Varnay and Franz Crass from Bayreuth; Verdi's "Othello" (8-15) with Miss Krall, James McCracken and Tito Gobbi-Rudolf Knoll alternating as Jago.

Also, two Mozart operas, "Cosi Fan Tutte" (4) and "Magic Flute" (10), latter with Swiss singers Maria Stader, Heinz Rehfuss and Peter Lagger; and original-language productions of Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" (20) and Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" (29), in Italian, and Saint-Saens' "Samson et Dalila" (23), in French.

In addition to the Martinu and Henze items, contemporary opera will be presented by Benjamin Britten's "Midsummer Night's Dream" (17) and Swiss composer Heinrich Sutermeister's "Raskolnikoff" (7), based on Dostoievsky's "Crime and Punishment."

Mex Producer Plans Pix of Ibanez' Works

Mexico City, Feb. 28.

Producer Olallo Rubio Jr., has revealed plans of his Moctezuma Films International firm to turn out about 20 of the works of Vicente Blasco Ibanez. First on list would be "Mare Nostrum."

In other deals Rubio hopes to associate with Hollywood and, in any case, he has issued a call to Hollywood producers who plan remakes of Ibanez's novels, to shoot them in Mexico.

Rubio has film rights to the Ibanez works and has deals cooking with diverse Hollywood firms to bring to the screen the best of the Spanish writer's works.

Longrun, Upped-Scale Pix in Aussie Keys Blamed for Product Shortage

Sydney, Feb. 28.

Blockbuster films, running for long spans in the keyers, are responsible for a pileup of product in distributor vaults, and the slow product turnaround is proving a major headache to suburban exhibitors presently. For example, here six key houses are shuttered to other pix because blockbuster biz holds over product at upped admissions.

These include the Mayfair with "South Pacific" (20th); the Paris, "Can-Can" (20th); the St. James, "Ben-Hur" (M-G); the Plaza, "South Seas Adventure" (Cinerama); the Forum, "Spartacus (U), and the Lyceum, with "Song Without End" (Col).

In Melbourne, the longrun pix are also taking the major playing time and circulation of product to suburban and country exhibitors has slowed down considerably.

Specialized Selling to Keys

Major loops such as Greater Union Theatres and Hoyts are now concentrating on specialized selling of product in their keyers on upped admissions on the blockbuster pic in association with distributors. This policy will continue right throughout this year.

Meantime, the general run of exhibs outside the key city areas are falling back on reissues until such time as non-blockbuster pix can obtain a city release before going out on general playdates.

Away from the blockbuster scene, business is holding up strongly in the key cities. "Wackiest Ship in Army" (Col) is pulling powerfully, with "North to Alaska" (20th) a surprise click. "It Started in Naples" looks a topgrader for Paramount, and "Pollyanna" (M-G) is still solid.

Tokyo Ad Agency Spots Trend Towards Tele

Tokyo, Feb. 28.

Effects of tv on Japan's sagging film biz were revealed by a poll conducted by Dentsu Ad Agency, which disclosed that 43.2% of those questioned had reduced the frequency of their theatre visits since acquiring tv sets. Polled were 500 Tokyo citizens in the 18-29 age bracket.

Survey further revealed that 88% enjoyed films, with figure being higher for males than women. Foreign films drew preference of 49.4% with Japanese films preferred by 25.4%. Others had no preference.

Arg. Legiters Hit Tax Setup

Buenos Aires, Feb. 28.

A delegation of legiters recently called on Mayor Hernan Giralt, to protest because although municipal theatre taxation has been cut by 10%, it applies only to those which present plays by an Argentine author. The delegation stated this was unjust and tended to prejudice the local authors, as producers are often able to present the latter's work only with the coin earned producing the foreign-authored plays.

Actor Orestes Caviglia told the mayor that the implied ban against the foreign plays would cost producers around $650 monthly. It was also explained that when the foreign translations are produced, the actors are Argentine, as are the translators (who earn excellent royalties), the decorators, scene shifters, etc. There is a dearth of locally-authored plays mainly because native writers are absorbed by tele and screen work.

The barrage of arguments was difficult for the mayor to contend with, particularly as he had with him his Cultural Secretary, Sr. Armando Cocca, who has done so much for legit through establishment of temporary theatre buildings in public parks. He promised to rephrase the measure once the City Council resumed sessions after the summer.

U.S. JOINS LIMA, PERU, FAIR NEXT OCTOBER

Washington, March 7.

U. S. motion picture exhibitors and manufacturers of film equipment are invited to take part at the International Film Industry Fair in Lima, Peru, next October, the Commerce Dept. advises.

Dept. Motion Picture Director Nathan D. Golden said the exhibition will be held in conjunction with the Second Pacific International Trade Fair to be held in Lima, Oct. 12-29.

Campaign for 'Exodus' In Britain Launched

London, March 7.

Montague Morton, United Artists European topper, hosted a press luncheon at the Savoy Wednesday (1) to launch the British campaign for Otto Preminger's "Exodus." Morton served as host in the absense of Preminger in N. Y. But the producer was on parade vocally. Over the transatlantic phone, he told his guests that "Exodus" was set to open at the Astoria May 9. This is an unfortunate clash with the Cinematograph Exhibitors Assn. annual conference at Torquay.

For 30 minutes Preminger then answered questions from a dozen or so film scribes. He assuered everybody that "Exodus" was a "biggie" and that it would be shown in key situations throughout the U. K. on a hard-ticket basis. Preminger was taxed considerably on the question of whether the film has an anti-British bias. This, he denied.

462 Films Released In Buenos Aires in 1960, 431 of Them Foreign

Buenos Aires, Feb. 28.

There were 462 pictures released in Buenos Aires cinemas last year, of which 431 were foreign and 31 Argentine-made. Of the foreign films, 182 were American, 50 French, 46 German, 43 British, 43 Italian, 19 Spanish, 11 Mexican, 10 Russian, five each Czech and Japanese, four Swedish, three each Austrian and Polish, two Franco-Italian, one each Chinese, Franco-Brazilian, Franco-Italian-German, Hungarian and Italo-Spanish.

Of the Argentine releases five were co-productions; two with Mexico, two with Germany and one with Italy.

The total of releases is 10 more than in 1959, with the American totals dropping from 217 to 182, whereas the French increased from 37 to 50 and the native productions from 23 to 31. The German total went from 37 to 46.

About 100 of the releases were Anamorphic, 67 Cinemascope, 10 MexiScope, seven Technirama, five Dyaliscope, four Totalscope, two Naturama, two Megascope, one Supercinescope, one Regalscope, one Totalscope, one Superscope, two Todd-AO and one Supertechnirama.

Argentine production starts 1961 with 14 pictures in the can, ready for release and four nearing completion. An interesting detail is that seven of the 18 are in color.

'Escape to Berlin' To Constantin in Germany

Berlin, Feb. 28.

Constantin-Film, one of Germany's top distribs, has acquired the domestic distribution rights of "Escape to Berlin" which Will Tremper directed for Stun-Film. Film, which has been declared "artistically outstanding" by the West German pic classification board, will have its preem March 17 at Zoo Palast, top first-run house here.

One day before, "Escape" will be shown to East German refugees via a special performance at Congress Hall here. "Escape," West Germany's most anti-Communist feature pic since 1945, deals with the flight of East Germans to West Berlin.

"Brutality in Stone," a German anti-Nazi documentary, has been chosen as accompanying short subject presentation.

Mex Govt. Distrib Exec Proposes Cutback to 60 Pix Prods. Per Year

Mexico City, Feb. 28.

The first concrete proposal to cutback Mexican production to no more than 50 to 60 pictures annually during the next two years was made last week by producer Jesus Grovas, board member of Pelicuals Nacionales. Heavy pile up of films in cans during the last five years and lack of exhibition dates as well as a decline in Central and South American markets, is the chief cause of the industry's present problems, Grovas said.

The producer claimed that 140 canned films are warehoused in Mexico for lack of dates and 90 mark-time awaiting Latin American market exploitation. This means that Peliculas Mexicanas and Pelicules (handling distribution throughout Latin American and internally respectively) are hard put to absorb new production, much less to finance it.

Grovas' hard-hitting statement said that reduced production may cause unsettlement in labor. But he added that "all segments must resolve their own problems individually because producers cannot shoulder the problems of the entire industry."

As for upping time to five, six or more weeks, to compensate for reduced number of pictures, as has been suggested by some quarters, Grovas took a dim view of this, claiming that chronic lack of finances makes this impossible. He said the Mexican industry is in a "vicious circle" because of faulty bally, the heavy investment tied up in canned films, and the constant struggle for budget money.

Must Tighten Belts

The only relief can be achieved by "tightening our belts and reducing the number of pictures made," Grovas concluded.

Lack of coin for financing new pictures is most acute in Peliculas Mexicanas which has charge of Latin American areas. For month of February an additional $400,000 is required, with the Film Bank or the federal treasury having to put up this money. The official distributorship also asked the Film Bank to give it a moratorium on interest payments due on former loans "temporarily" until the situation normalizes.

With exhibition channels insecure, the feeling is growing in official circles that a production clampdown is essential. A series of meetings have been held by a commission representing Peliculas Nacionales and Quirino Ordaz Rocha, controlling major federally owned exhibition cutlets. The aim is to see if there can be a pepping up of the lagging internal exhibition pattern. Commission members include Gregorio Wallerstein, Pedro Galindo, Federico Heuer, Miguel Zacarias, Cesar Santos Galindo and other top execs. This reflects the fact that the situation is serious indeed.

A private check with a few leading producers reveals that their personal opinion is that a slump in Latin American markets, occasioned by political and exchange factors, should not have had the drastic consequences now facing the industry.

Combo Publicity Plan For British Film Biz In U.S. Still Mulled

London, March 7.

Oft-suggested idea that British film industry should set up a combined organization in U. S. is being mulled by British Film Producers Assn.

Following suggestions from Nat Cohen, head of Anglo-Amalgamated Film Distributors whose "Carry On, Nurse" already has grossed upwards of $1,000,000 in America, the producers are now getting down to details.

Something along the lines of the overseas publicity organizations set up by the Italian and French film industries may result, but this is not certain. Several of the "big boys" among Britain's film producers are believed to be against the move, preferring to concentrate their efforts on individual films and stars.

Cuevas Ballet May Be Broken Up Next Fall

Paris, March 7.

The International Ballet of the Marquis De Cuevas will probably be broken up next August after fulfilling dates in Spain, the French Riviera, Portugal, U.S. and Paris, according to Horatio Guerrico, administrative head of the troupe which has about 45 dancers and 10 among its upkeep personnel. The late Marquis, who died in Cannes last week, left no future plans for the company. Now it is up to his wife, the Marquise, to decide the fate of the company.

Though technically a U.S. ballet company, it has only played there once. Now it may do so again soon, before disbanding, under the aegis of Sol Hurok.

London Opening Of 'Porgy' Still Months Away

London, March 7.

Douglas Netter, one of Samuel Goldwyn's toppers, dropped into London for a couple of days from the Continent and on Friday (3) he talked to VARIETY about "the frustration of having to wait for 'Porgy & Bess' to hit the London film scene." Goldwyn's pic is skedded to follow "South Pacific" at the Dominion, but after 151 weeks the 20th-Fox's opus shows little signs of sagging. "Porgy" must wait.

Netter is philosophical about the delay. "We're contracted to the Dominion and it's the ideal theatre. Anyway, 'Porgy & Bess' will be just as good a film in a year's time as it was when shot."

In Germany, "Porgy" clicked particularly well, playing in six cities. In Berlin, it ran 28 weeks, Munich 23 weeks, Hamburg 18, and Frankfurt 13. In Stockholm, it played 22 weeks and it has had healthy runs in Antwerp, Copenhagen, Amsterdam and Zurich.

Netter said that difficulties about producing a hard-ticket, roadshow in Paris and in key spots in Italy are slowly being resolved.

Swiss Film Play Of Friedrich Duerrenmatt

Zurich, Feb. 28.

Swiss playwright Friedrich Duerrenmatt's comedy-drama, "Die Ehe des Herr Mississippi" ('The Marriage of Mr. Mississippi'), a hit in Germany and Switzerland, but only moderately successful in its off-Broadway presentation as "Fools Are Passing Through" at the Jan Hus Theatre in April, '58, is currently being filmed by Praesens-Film A.G, Zurich as a Max Dora production. Due to the lack of a suitable studio (the newly planned, large-scale Swiss film studio here will not be ready before next fall at the earliest), all interiors have been shot in Berlin, whilst location work is presently being finalized in Zurich.

Picture is being directed by Germany's Kurt Hoffmann of "Aren't We Wonderful?" and other German postwar hits, and lensed by Sweden's Sven Nykvist, one of Ingmar Bergman's cameramen. A string of top German stage and screen thesps has been cast in the principal parts, including O. E. Hasse as the district attorney, Mr. Mississippi; Johanna von Koczian, also in "Aren't We Wonderful?" as well as in the last Mario Lanza pic, "For the First Time," as his scheming wife, a complete about-face as against her previous ingenue roles; plus Hansjoerg Felmy and Martin Held. Swiss talent involved will include Max Haufler and Ruedi Walter. Duerrenmatt wrote the screenplay himself.

Praesens hopes to enter "Mississippi" as the Swiss participation at the upcoming Berlin Film Festival next July. Picture is budgeted at 350,000 dollars, above-average by Swiss standards. About one-third of the budget reportedly goes to stars' salaries.

Danish Film Data

Washington, Feb. 28.

Denmark produced 16 feature films during 1960, the same number as in 1959. Production costs ranged between 400,000 to 600,000 kroner (equal to about 14½c) per pic. Danish producers received subsidies at the rate of 25% of the entertainment tax for a black-and-white film and 40% for a color film. The 16 films produced in 1960 came from eight studios.

U. S. films were estimated by U. S. Commerce Dept. to comprise about 40% of screen time in Copenhagen theatres as well as 40% of the grosses of Danish houses.

Paris Joinville Studio May Close

Paris, Feb. 28.

Though film production is increasing here, and burgeoning Common Mart coproduction is also upping the total, there is a possibility that one of the oldest studios near Paris, the Joinville, may close down and be razed to make way for schools or low-cost housing developments. This would put 200 technicians and workers out of jobs. The new technical pic syndicate staged a short strike recently and put the matter up to the Culture Minister Andre Malraux.

Joinville, with three sound stages, is owned by a company which rents the land. The latter reps feel the income is not enough of late and prefer to try new types of buildings on this site. Some feel the "New Wave" penchant of shooting in real settings has not used all the available studio space. Two other studios have been closed since the war and recently the Victorine Studios in Nice, with seven stages, was closed until a decision was made on its future. This too could disappear unless some company buys same and keeps it in film biz.

Filmites feel that these studios should be kept in operation and that the government should do something about it or France would find itself short of studio space in the near future.

GENEVA FIRM SPREADS TO TELEVISION FILMS

Geneva, Feb. 28.

Eima-Films S.A. Geneva, a Swiss firm which has specialized in producing, repping and selling advertising films in the past six years, has inaugurated a new tv film department, headed by J. C. Buerkl. Company is managed by A. Mahrer.

Their 1961 telefilm program will comprise 39 half-hour, 35m black-and-white vidfilms whose original version will be French. It is contemplated, however, to dub these films into English, German and Spanish for worldwide exploitation. Dubbing will either be done in Switzerland or, if necessary, in respective countries where these films will be marketed. For the latter purpose, an "international" soundtrack will be available with each property.

Vidfilm specialists both from here and abroad are reported to collaborate artistically as well as technically.

Eima-Films is no stranger in international film circles where certain specialized tasks are concerned, having collaborated recently with Paramount which utilized their lighting equipment and part of their technical staff while filming in Europe. Same goes for some French and British production units shooting in Switzerland, as well as several governmental delegations from abroad. Incidentally, the Swiss firm has also been charged with producing the official documentary short about the inauguration of American Machine and Foundry's recently finished, ultra-modern bowling centre here.

19-Year-Olds Now Exhibs

London, Feb. 28.

The Palace Cinema, at Brickley, near Chester, has been re-opened by two film enthusiasts, Barry Flanagan and Eric Platt. Says Platt: "We believe in the cinema and we know what people want."

Flanagan and Platt are both 19-year-olds.

'Buy American' Policy Not Extended To Yank O'Seas Military Clubs

Frankfurt, Feb. 28.

Although President Kennedy's "Buy American" policy is going to alter many facets of living for the 500,000 American servicemen and their families stationed around Europe, it's not going to invade their military nightclubs to any major extent.

Much as the Yank servicemen abroad are lonely and hanker to see top American acts, for many of the Army and Air Force's 550 officers, non-commissioned officers and enlisted men's clubs in Europe, there are just too many "cons" as against all the "pros" of booking the top Stateside acts. So the acts are mainly British or Belgian with locally hired orchestras.

"Anything from the U.S. attracts youngsters. It's something from back home. It draws a crowd and pays for itself," an Army club manager here said. I have a small place. It doesn't hold 200. But I can pack it with good entertainment.

"The most I ever paid was $650 for an hour show by Don Cornell. I can't afford these shows often, maybe every six weeks or two months," he added.

The manager of a large military club reasoned. "We'd have to charge admission for a high-priced show. And we can't do that. Every member has a right to come in whether he pays a fee or not."

Since most of the military clubs operate on a monthly membership fee that varies from $1 to $4, they figure that the entertainment should be offered free—or at least only in exchange for what their guests eat and drink. And with drinks in the military clubs costing only about 35c and low-priced dinners, the money for the entertainment has generally come from two sources — the slot machines and the percentage paid by European salesmen offering their wares at booths in the clubs.

'Buy American' Crackdown

Now under the new "Buy American" policy, the club managers have been told that there can be no more foreign displays of merchandise in their clubs and open messes—and they are going to suffer financially as a result. At the Frankfurt officers' club the Casino, the take has been about $10,000 a year from the foreign displays—each stand owner pays a flat fee of from $5 a day on up, plus giving the club 10% of his gross

German Producers In Hong Kong Making Pic

Hong Kong, Feb. 28.

The West Germany film company, Nero Films, has just started shooting location scenes in the Colony for its picture, "To The End Of Time." Toho actress Akiko Wakabayashi, who starred in an Italian-Japanese film, "Akiko," for which she went to Italy last summer, has a starring role in this German pic. She co-stars with German actors Helmut Griem and Hans Lotahe.

Nero's film producer Seymour Nebenzal, a German film crew and Miss Wakabayashi will be here for a month before going to Germany to finish the picture which is based on the book, "Brack Wasser," by Heibrich Hauser. The book is known in the U.S. under the title of "Bitter Waters."

Too Much Sex Bad For Screen Aver Aussie Censors

Sydney, Feb. 28.

While not officially pointing a hot finger at overseas' film producers to refrain from lensing spicy sex sequences in future pix, Aussie film censors are understood to be greatly concerned over the excessive sex footage coming into the country at present.

Aussie censors frown, it's understood, at those let's-go-to-bed-together suggestive sequences, rapes on the beach or haystacks, not actually seen, but strongly suggested by the camera. Continental producers have been overplaying the sex stuff, according to exhibitors here, and overspiced pix, excepting comedies, are losing favor with the public, they say.

Understanding here is that unless there is a sex letup, a lot of hot footage will be kept in the censors' vault. Front-of-house material is also been closely watched by the censors right now for sexy lines, hot clinches and similar stuff. Even press books are given a keen scrutiny for alleged offensive material.

Around the local show biz loop, the general opinion is that the Aussie censors are very broad-minded and that a lot of sex sequences have been given the greenlight despite later protests from Church authorities.

French Yen Westerns, With 'Alamo' Sockeroo

Paris, March 7.

French audiences seem to be reacting against the intellectual, subdued film fodder here of late and are going in for films with simple, open vistas and human comportment. Yank westerns have become especially popular and racking up biz are "The Alamo" (UA), "The Magnificent Seven" (UA) and "North To Alaska" (20). Particularly big boxoffice-wise has been "Alamo."

Lately French pix have been dealing with intimate literary themes done in muted manners. The rambling Italo "The Adventure" did as well as the rugged tale of an amoral girl in "The Truth," with Brigitte Bardot. But now these films are taking a back seat, at least for a while, to the direct actioners.

Anglo-Amalgam. Signs 2-Pic Deal With Janni

London, March 7.

Anglo-Amalgamated has signed a two-picture deal with indie producer Joseph Janni for world distribution rights of "Billy Liar" and "A Kind of Loving."

"Liar," a hit play at the Cambridge Theatre, was expected to be made by Woodfall Productions for Bryanston Films. But Janni unexpectedly outbid Woodfall and the film will now be made with Anthony Newley in the lead instead of Albert Finney, who is star of the stageshow.

French Prod. Believes Circusy Days of Film Making Thing of Past

Paris, Feb. 28.

French pic producer Paul Graetz feels that the circusy, ballyhoo days of filmmaking are over, and that films are now entering their maturity as far as subject matter, treatment and execution are concerned. There is a place for children's films, says Graetz, but no longer do producers think that the average international patron has an IQ of a 14-year-old boy.

Graetz points out that when he made "Devil in the Flesh" soon after the war, it ran into plenty of censor problems but is now a daily feature on American tv sans any cuts. A producer today, opines Graetz, should be thinking about what his film will look like in the future. In other words, if not a work of art, a pic should be something a producer will always be proud of and something that has its say about life today, and its problems.

Graetz recently made a film in Rome, "La Giornata Balorda" ('The Strange Day') which was banned there but did fine biz here. It concerns unemployment in Italy today unflinchingly and seemed to rub Italo censors the wrong way. He points out that "Bicycle Thieves" was also shunned in Italy until it won renown abroad.

Graetz' next pic is a film version of Arthur Miller's play "View From the Bridge" which Sidney Lumet will direct. He also has a pacifistic pic on his sked. Graetz winds that good pix, or those that treat important problems, can also be good commercial pix.

Geneva & Lausanne Ignore Swiss Objection to Terms for 'Ben-Hur'

Lausanne, Feb. 28.

Metro's "Ben-Hur" had its second Swiss opening Feb. 24 at the 1,312-seat Metropole Lausanne, to a sellout house. Opening was preceded the day before by an invitational preem whose near-capacity audience included many governmental reps, religious leaders, political and social opinion-makers and a flock of scribes from all sections of the press. Same as everywhere, the William Wyler epic garnered beaucoup praise, and an extended run looks a certainty. Promotional buildup in Lausanne was unprecedented for that city, including extensive billposting and advance ad campaign, window displays, tie-up with a big restaurant, a four-week novelization in a leading magazine and lots of free advance space in the press.

First Swiss "Ben-Hur" date at the Alhambra in Geneva ended one week before the Lausanne opening after a record-breaking 12 weeks' run. During that time, pic has been seen by 85,000 people, or 47% of Geneva's population (170,000). Grosses in that city swelled to unheard-of proportions and reached 240% of "Gone With the Wind," also from Metro, with five sellout admission prices and at a special sized house.

Openings in German-speaking part of Switzerland Zurich, Basle, Berne are still uncertain, due to differences with Swiss Exhibs Assn, which is stubbornly opposed to accepting Metro's terms for the picture. The exhibitor owning the Geneva and Lausanne situations, specifically noted this attitude and brought it out at his own risk. As per results so far, he never had to regret it.

Boehm Claims Kwan Set For New Hong Kong Pic

Hong Kong, Feb. 28.

Hollywood script writer Sidney Boehm, here for the shooting of Hollywood's newest film about Hong Kong, said that the pic, "Kowloon," will get under way in July. Boehm claimed that Nancy Kwan, vedi star in the film.

Part of the shooting will be in Macao, but the greater portion will be in Hong Kong. Boehm is currently working on the script which he intends finishing by June. He did not say who would co-star with Miss Kwan in this Paramount release.

Jackie Chan Virtually Ignored in Hong Kong

Hong Kong, Feb. 28.

Hong Kong cinema patrons have a habit of snubbing Oriental stars and rolling out the red carpet of welcome to glamorous Hollywood and French stellar players. Elizabeth Taylor, Ava Gardner and Martine Carol, among the femme stars, were enthusiastically greeted when they separately visited the Colony in past months.

The Japanese Toho group of five actresses, which came here for the Toho fete, in contrast were indifferently treated . . . France Nuyen, who was here for the making of the film "Suzie Wong," only aroused mild curiosity . . . In her home town, Nancy Kwan could lunch at Jimmy's without being fussed over.

Latest Oriental performer here is petite Jackie Chan who drew world notice for knowing a certain Antony Armstrong-Jones. Except for press reports following her arrival, Miss Chan, on her first visit to the Far East, was left alone.

Now It's Helivision

Paris, Feb. 28

Albert Lamorisse, who made the prizewinning short, "The Red Balloon," and the documentary feature pic, "Trip in a Balloon," has perfected a camera process he calls Helivision. It consists of a camera that is so fixed in a helicopter that it can take closeups and long shots during a scene without any perceptible camera tremor.

In his last film, Lamorisse followed hunters and a balloon around at will but could not go down for close shots or use long focal lenses due to the plane movements. He can now do this and intends to make a film in it soon. Lamorisse opines it should be invaluable in the big scale epics.

JAPANESE BRANCH?

Rogers & Cowan Sees Entertainment Publicists Chance

Tokyo, Feb. 28.

Visiting with his actress-wife Barbara Rush, publicity exec Warren Cowan of Rogers & Cowan, disclosed that he'll set up representation in Japan. He sees great opportunity here for expansion in entertainment as well as in the commercial and industrial world, adding "I'm much impressed with the penetration of tv here also."

Practicing his profession, Cowan added, "Our company has a basic philosophy. We change with the times, keep exploring, and especially try to improve our operation. The next long step is to come to Japan."

Probable R&C rep here is Glenn F. Ireton, longtime editor-publisher of the Far East Film News.

RCA AND AMPEX GEAR PRIME INDIA'S VIDEO

New Delhi, Feb. 28.

An RCA television camera and an Ampex Videotape recorder—continental Asia's first—costing about four lakhs of rupees, are being added to the embryonic TV facilities of the government-monopoly broadcasting network, all-India Radio. Chief research engineer T. Rajamanikam, who recently completed an extensive U.S. tour, did a course in operation and maintenance of the videotape recorder at the Ampex plant at Redwood City, Calif. While in the States, he visited Ampex Video recording installations at Fort Lee, Va., Florida U., and several television stations.

All-India has one experimental television station in this capital city. Operating time, two hours per week, is to be stepped up to give daily broadcasts when the new school term starts.

20th as Indies' Pal

ties encompassed paperwork, interviewing aspiring actors and even overseeing emergency repairs to some stopped-up plumbing next to his private sanctum.

Discounting faillaire du cabinet, Rossen stated that this was the way he liked to work. That is, he liked to work on a project on his own, from acquisition of property, through the writing of the screenplay, before making a deal with a distrib. In such a fashion, he said, he was able to maintain complete control on the project. "You gamble time, which is money, of course, because you may work for six months or a year and then realize that the property isn't quite right, and you drop the whole idea."

On the other hand, if one works for another producer, the project more likely than not would be pushed through, regardless. Rossen says he has a bookshelf of projects he has abandoned but which, had he been working for someone else, probably would have been made anyway. He has one advantage over other directors who might pursue his policy: he is his own screenwriter and thus doesn't suffer too much financially when he throws away his own scripts.

One large problem still unresolved on the eve of shooting was the title of the film. "The Hustler," the original title of the novel which deals with a guy who "hustles" his living as a pool shark, is frowned upon by 20th execs who see it as suggesting instead the saga of a peripatetic prostie. They have suggested the alternative "Stroke of Luck," which Rossen digs not at all. He feels that he is making a serious film, dealing basically with the conflict of good and evil, and "Stroke of Luck" suggests something comic and maybe even a bit Irish free association: luck, four-leaf clovers, Ireland.

There may still a chance to salvage the original title, which, properly exploited and sold, shouldn't delude anyone who set out to the theatre to see a streetwalker-in-action.

Rydge Named to Board Of Aussie Govt. Bank

Sydney, Feb. 28.

Norman B. Rydge, chairman of directors of Greater Union Theatres, key Aussie film chain, has been appointed to the board of the Rural Bank of New South Wales, top government-controlled banking house here.

Rydge, apart from GUT and the new bank appointment, is also interested in hotels and real estate.

BRITISH ROYALTY EYE HINDU DANCE

New Delhi, Feb. 28.

Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip, now visiting India, were treated to a 40-minute performance of Indian terping by stage and screen danseuses Vyjayantimala, Padmini, Ragini, Kamala Laxman, and Radha in the southern metropolis of Madras at a reception given by Governor Bishnuram Medhi. Chief Justice P. V. Rajamannar, a connoisseur of the arts, sat beside the Queen and explained the various symbolic dance poses to her.

The dancers were afterwards presented to the Queen and the Prince. More than 1,200 guests from all parts of the big southern state of Madras watched the show.

Now 'Lolita' Producers Ask Lloyds for Money

London, March 7.

After the "Cleopatra" experience, the indie makers of "Lolita" are getting on the insurance-claim bandwagon. AA Productions is claiming money from Lloyds' underwriters for four days' shooting lost at Associated-British studios last week. Sue Lyon, the film's teenage starlet, came down with tonsillitis and James Mason and the camera crews were kept idle.

"Lolita" is being produced by James B. Harris and directed by Stanley Kubrick. It is estimated that the cost to the makers of the film for lost time is around $22,000.

Stan Forman Irked Over Censor Nix of 'Ghetto'

London, March 7.

Stanley Forman, boss of Plato Films, is peeved with the British Board of Film Censors. The BBFC refused a certificate to Plato's documentary, "Warsaw Ghetto," captured from the Nazis at the end of the war, unless Plato was prepared to cut some scenes showing the bodies of Hitler's victims.

Forman claims that on a recent commercial tv program about Eichmann those same scenes were in the program, which was screened at a peak hour. Forman considers that this is an unfair anomaly and he has asked the BBFC to reconsider its decision over "Ghetto."

Inside Stuff—International

Swedish reaction to the stage play "The Antiphon" by Djuna Barnes was marked by most mixed opinions. Ivar Harrie of the evening tabloid Expression, circulation 370,000, called it "one of the Dramatic Theatre's great productions." Ebbe Linde of Dagens Nyheter, circulation 350,000, expressed the hope that no Russians would see the show with United Nations Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold listed as co-translator. It was, said Linde, "a caviar party for farmers—one does not have to be so much of a farmer to be disgusted by scoop after scoop of imagist caviar, coming one right after another for a whole evening. This is particularly true when the caviar is not quite fresh." Other critics generally expressed the feeling that the play made interesting reading, but was not so exciting on the stage.

Bolshoi Opera in Moscow has lately mounted in two acts the four-act opera of the late Prokofiev, "The Story of A Real Man" which ran afoul of the authorities in 1949, Stalin being still extant. Composer never heard the work performed, it being judged then "too extremely formalistic, anti-melodic and modernistic"—serious charges.

Libretto is based on the novel of same name by Boris Polevoi, Stalin Prizist. It tells the (true) story of a Soviet pilot who lost both legs during the World War, yet returned to the ranks to fulfill his duties as a soldier. In the opera he is seen, crashed in enemy-occupied territory, liberated by partisans and, later, in a military hospital before back in the war, and finally, united with his sweetheart.

Latest recipient of what amounts to a Mexican "Oscar" award best conductor for music is conductor Jose Yves Limantour (Paris-born, Oxford educated, Tanglewood and Hindemith trained) who for the past years has specialized on Mexican longhair along with Chavez, Halffter and Ponce. Limantour has played and premiered much of Revueltas music which mostly had to be copied, edited and revised. "Noche de los Mayas" is one of these scores given at last years Revueltas premiere and the forthcoming one in Vera Cruz end of March will introduce "Pancho Villa." Award ceremony will be part of that Festival. Revueltas records are made by a local company (Musart) whose director is Otto Mayer-Serra.

Herbert G. Luft, historian for the upcoming Hollywood Motion Picture & Television Museum, will interview leading film authorities in Paris and Rome for further developing plans for collection and or exchange of historic film material. Luft, on commission by Col Lesser, chairman of the Museum Commission, has left for Paris, where he will huddle with Prof. Charles Ford, cinema arts authority and a leading French film critic, and Mme. Lotta Eisner, film historian for French government. In Rome, he'll meet with Dr. Fulfio Lucisano, member of Italian production committee, and Prof. Dora Beseti of Rome U.

New small theatre which plays every night from 10 to midnight has opened in Milan. This Teatrino del Corso presents sketches, one-acters and even "newscasts" aimed at catching late diners, while letting the audience out in time for the last bus. The accent is on light and fast entertainment but once in a while a poetry piece slips into the hall of fame (like Christopher Fry's "A Phoenix Too Frequent"). There is a one-acter in which a girl from Mars arrives on earth provided only with weird information picked up from television.

Netherlands Opera which has not been known for a very high artistic standard has racked up a striking and successful performance of Verdi's "Simone Boccanegra" conducted and staged by Antal Dorati with decors and costumes designed by his 20-year-old daughter Tessina Dorati. Family-combination proved to be a fortunate one, because the unity of stage and orchestra reported very special.

Newest full-length ballet of the Bolshoi in Moscow is "The Hunchback Horse" to 1932 music by Rodion Scendrin.

JUILLIARD STRINGS TOURING

Hong Kong Wonders If U.S. Culture Being Curtailed

Hong Kong, Feb. 28.

Juilliard String Quartet is due here for a single recital on April 5. Harry Odell is acting as local impresario. Group travels under U.S. State Dept. President's Program) guarantee against loss, as booked by American National Theatre & Academy, acting as administrator.

Booking prompted questions here as to the apparent dropoff in cultural visits from the States. This British crown colony has previously seen Rudolph Serkin, Golden Gate Quartet, Thomas Scherman's Little Orchestra of 45, Eleanor Steber, Blanche Thebom, Benny Goodman and the L.A. Philharmonic.

'West Side Story'

United Artists, took six months to film at a cost of $6,000,000. All in all, according to Wise, he spent an active period of 20 months on the production. The film is scheduled to open in New York on Oct. 18 as a hardticket presentation.

Wise believes that "West Side Story," a Broadway longrunner before being converted into a motion picture, will be the first musical to do big business abroad. His optimism is based on the fact that the theme of juvenile delinquency, a world-wide problem, as well as the Romeo and Juliet story angle, have an appeal for audiences throughout the world.

"West Side" is part of Wise's four-picture non-exclusive deal with the Mirisch Co. On his future slate are "The Haunting of Hill House," based on the Shirley Jackson book, and "Battle," the story of photographer Robert Capra. "Haunting" is set to go this fall.

'Buy American'

income. And at the posh officers' club at Patrick Henry Village in Heidelberg, the headquarters of the U.S. Army in Europe, it's been estimated that the club pocketed about $25,000 a year as its cut from merchants.

Without these funds to draw on, the clubs will have to rely more than ever on the take from the slot machines to foot their entertainment bills. However, at some of the choice spots it's been estimated that the slots are taking in as much as $100 a day per machine, so the clubs won't be broke. One leading club, the elegant Von Steuben Hotel in Wiesbaden, recently nixed the policy of bringing in big name American acts.

"If I book the really top acts, every club member wants to come and bring his wife and friends," explained the manager. "I can't seat them all and I don't want to risk making some of them angry."

He explained that his policy was to book good, but not top, names and thus maintain a good steady business.

U.S. Acts Not Enough

Servicemen in the sticks have long complained about the second-rate acts available in their clubs, and the fact that they don't have the opportunity to see first-rate U.S. entertainers who might perform in the larger cities. Hence, some of the special services clubs have organized bus tours to distant cities, and brought servicemen in from long distances to view the recent "Holiday on Ice" show and the Louis Armstrong concert, both of which were booked "on the economy" in Frankfurt and other major German cities.

But one leading Army entertainment director said that so far as the "Buy American" policy is concerned in the military entertainment circles, "We were told, in effect, to continue as in the past. If the clubs could hire only Americans, they'd never find enough," he concluded.

Prudential Dropping '20th Century' After 4-Year, $16,800,000 Outlay

After four years of continuous sponsorship, 52 weeks a year, setting a record in tv's news-public affairs annals, Prudential is bowing out of CBS-TV's "Twentieth Century" at the end of the season.

Prudential, with a $6,000,000 annual advertising budget, has been spending $4,200,000 a year for the show. Since the bowout of Carroll Shanks as Prudential prexy, there's been a cumulation of interest in the medium with a resultant budgetary cutback to $4,000,000, hence the decision to cancel out and spread its money elsewhere. It's anticipated that Prudential will shift to entertainment segs and buy "pieces" of shows, possibly the summer reruns of "Playhouse 90," the new "Defenders," etc.

Meanwhile, CBS board chairman Bill Paley, impressed with "Twentieth Century's" track record (it's won every prize in the tv book over the four-year span and frequently pulls in Nielsens commensurate with prime nighttime shows), has passed along the word to the web's sales dept. to "go out and sell it." If the show is sold, Paley has ordered a "lock in" of the present 6:30 Sunday time period. With a $45,000 weekly production nut, it's hardly likely that the network will continue with the series at least on its present ambitious scale (it's already carrying the full hour "CBS Reports" as a sustainer). If "Twentieth Century" fails to latch on to a new sponsor and is of necessity dropped, it's readily conceded it would deal a body blow to the whole course of public affairs programming.

For the CBS sales boys it poses a problem: How indelibly inscribed is the Prudential "image" after a four-year identity with the show?

There are, of course, peripheral values and prestige still accruing to the series. Although "Twentieth Century" has been sold in 20 foreign countries—the highest number for any public affairs program—the whole area of U.S. syndication remains open. Under its contract with Prudential, the show could not be thrown into domestic syndication while continuing as a network attraction.

Producer of the show is Burton Benjamin, who continues under contract to CBS. He, along with his associate producer, Isaac Kleinerman, have formed their own Holbrock Productions in association with CBS and have thus far developed four properties. If "Twentieth Century" returns, Benjamin envisions dropping the producership and assuming an exec producer status to permit him to continue developing new properties.

"Twentieth Century" was the joint brainchild of Benjamin and Irving Gitlin (latter now at NBC). Prudential bought it on the strength of a letter with ut so

It's Fashion Show Time

Local fashion specials by major department stores now seem to have become a semi-annual tradition in New York. The three stores which aired specials last September — Macy's, Alexanders and Orbach's—are doing so again, all within three days of each other.

Station lineup will be the same as last fall's, with Alexanders repeating on WCBS-TV, Macy's again on WNBC-TV and Orbach's back on WABC-TV. Macy's show is first, Sunday (12) night; Alexanders runs Tuesday (14), at 7:30 8, and Orbach's Wednesday (15) at 7.

Some fancy production is going into the specials. Alexander's outing, for example, was taped in part on location at Aruba in the Netherlands Antilles, and has Rita Gam and Orson Bean as hosts. Specials are all timed to the arrival of the Paris fashions in N.Y.

KRON-NBC in New 2-Yr. Pact Despite 'Antitrust' Feudin'

San Francisco, March 7.

NBC and the Frisco Chronicle's KRON-TV have composed their differences at least to the extent of extending KRON's affiliation agreement with the network.

KRON reported it would continue as NBC's Frisco outlet for another two years, beginning July 1, subject to termination on 90 days notice by either side.

Continuation of the affiliation, which began when KRON went on the air in 1949, was revealed in an affidavit filed in th U. S. Court of Appeals on behalf of the Chronicle. The affidavit, signed by attorney James B. Schnake, said that NBC made an offer in writing to KRON for continued affiliation on Feb. 22. The tv station accepted.

Reason for this curious way of revealing the continued affiliation is that KRON last year filed a suit against NBC, charging that NBC's $7,000,000 buyout of independent KTVU, Frisco, violated the antitrust laws. FCC okay of the KTVU buyout is still pending.

Late last year KTVU made a determined pitch to obtain NBC affiliation and NBC served notice on KRON that it, in effect, was tearing up the old affiliation agreement. Major difference between the old and new affilattion pacts, apparently, is that only 90, instead of 180 days notice now must be given to terminate the agreement on either side. The KRON-NBC suit is still pending.

CBS 'Defenders' As Thurs. Punch

CBS-TV is taking no chances on coming a-cropper on Thursday nights next season in the manner it did this year. So the web this week pencilled in "The Defenders" for the Thursday 9-10 period as the fulcrum of the evening's programming.

First couple of episodes of the Herb Brodkin-Reginald Rose series are in the can and are being screened for sponsors, and the CBS brass are convinced it's the hottest series to come down the pike in some time. Consequently, they feel that the series, programmed against "My Three Sons" on ABC and probably "This Is Your Life" on NBC, can make a dent, particularly with the Bob Cummings Show serving as its lead-in at 8:30-9.

"Defenders" would be followed at 10-11 by "CBS Reports," and the web, naturally, would concede that "you to ABC and "Untouchables" as far as audience is concerned. But it figures with a good action show at 7:30-8:30, followed by Cummings and "Defenders," it can score strongly over the rest

RURAL VARIETY SHOW MAY GET NBC NOD

Chicago, March 7.

NBC-TV's Friday night schedule comes in for more juggling this month if Massey-Ferguson comes through on a tentative order for the 8 p.m. slot currently berthing the situation comedy, "One Happy Family." M-F has in mind a rural-slanted variety stanza, somewhat like its "Jubilee USA" on ABC-TV last year, and NBC has offered the Friday evening period.

Crossroads Productions of Springfield, Mo., will package the show, which tentatively is pencilled for a March 17 start and is understood to have lined up Red Foley and Snooky Lanson so far. M-F is slated to end its Saturday morning show, "Today on the Farm," also on NBC, March 25.

Needham, Louis & Brorby is the agency.

CBS-TV Lays Off More Technicians; Total Now at 100

CBS-TV this week laid off 43 technicians in its New York production plant. The latest lopoff brings to over 100 the number of technicians and other operations personnel laid off by the web in N.Y. and Hollywood over the past 10 months.

Latest layoff stems primarily from the shift of shows to the Coast and the cutback in production for outside sources as spotlighted by the breakup of the CBS Production Sales unit. However, those are not the sole causes; the layoffs trace back to a sixmonth trend in tightening of live operations in N.Y.

Cutbacks are part of a continuing pattern in which the web has been closing down some of its studios in Gotham and realigning its entire production setup in an effort to make live program production pay its own way. This realignment, coupled with the decrease in live programming and the shift of shows to the Coast, account for the layoffs. Two daytime stanzas shifted to Hollywood, one last July and the other this week. Latter is "Video Village"; the earlier show was "The Verdict Is Yours."

WAYNE & SHUSTER GET SUMMER SERIES

Comedy team of Wayne & Shuster, whose U. S. tv appearances have been confined to multiple guest-shots on the Ed Sullivan show, will get a series of their own this summer on CBS-TV. It's a situation comedy tentatively titled "High Time," which will replace Jack Benny during the dog days.

CBS-TV's Cecil Barker and Seymour Berns will produce, which will be sponsored by Lever Bros. and State Farm Insurance, the regular Benny bankrollers. New series will start June 25 and run through Oct. 8, when Benny returns.

3 Variety Shows Up for Grabs

Oddly enough three of the bigtime live hour variety shows on tv are open for sponsorship availabilities. These are Dinah Shore, Ed Sullivan and Garry Moore.

Dinah lost her Chevy sponsor. Eastman-Kodak cancelled out of Sullivan to buy half of Walt Disney on NBC-TV. Garry Moore faces loss of either Plymouth of Polaroid, or maybe both. In the case of Sullivan, it's not a case of "can we sell it?" but "who will get it." The sponsor line is already forming. There's a possibility Colgate, Sullivan's alternate sponsor, may go for the whole hour.

Similarly CBS anticipates little difficulty in disposing of Moore.

'Playhouse 90,' 'Brenner,' 'Flickers' Set as CBS Expedites Summer Sked

CBS-TV this week finalized more elements in its summer schedule, with "Playhouse 90" now definite for Tuesday nights, "Fractured Flickers" set to replace "Henessey" on Mondays and "Brenner" reruns due to spell the June Allyson stanza the same night.

"Flickers" is a humorous treatment of the silent film days, out of the Jay Ward Productions shop, which does "Rocky & His Friends" for ABC. "Flickers" will make two silent film series on the nets this summer, other being the returning Saul Turrell-Paul Killian "Silents Please" on ABC. Lennen & Newell bought the package for Lorillard, cosponsor of the "Henessey" show "Brenner," of course, is the Herb Brodkin series which had a short run on CBS season before last.

As to "Playhouse 90," which replaces Red Skelton and Gairy Moore for the summer in the Tuesday 9:30-11 slot, CBS is somewhat limited in its choice of properties. Such memorable stanzas as "Judgment at Nurnberg" and "The Days of Wine and Roses," for example, are unavailable because they are being filmed as feature pix, and the authors can't sell CBS reuse rights. Original deals for these were for single-use by the network, with reuse to be negotiated.

Network is currently negotiating its list of "90" reruns.

Colgate's WABC-TV Spots

Colgate-Palmolive has bought spot schedules on WABC-TV, N.Y. for both Halo and Ajax. ABC owned & operated station also got new business in the past few days from Standard Brands, Scott Paper, Procter & Gamble, Prewitt Inc., and Mennen Food Products.

My-T-Fine, meantime, has renewed its bankrolling of five weekly quarter hours in the station's ayem strip "Joe Franklin's Memory Lane," and Clairol has renewed its own WABC-TV spot campaign.

Lorillard Coughs Up 500G Daytime In Femme Biz Bid

P. Lorillard has decided to go into daytime television in a direct appeal to housewives. On the theory that most mentholated smokers are women, company is putting about $500,000 into ABC-TV daytime.

Buy for the Spring brand, out of the Grey agency which only recently acquired it, marks the first significant buy of daytime tv by a cig bankroller since Chesterfields owned time during the early days of NBC-TV's "Matinee Theatre." Only other cig coin in predark has come from Raleighs, but mainly for the coupon-saving merchandising angles.

This sudden shift in the type of video time being bought by a cig company matches the move into NBC-TV daytime programming by General Motors (see separate story).

Fred Pierce, of ABC research, is said to be one of the heroes in making the deal with Grey. It was the statistic evidence about lady smokers that evidently turned the trick. At least four veeps from Grey were in on the act, due to the significance of the buy.

SARA LEE'S OSCAR COIN

Kitchens of Sara Lee bought a quarter of the Oscarcast over ABC-TV April 17. Brings the 10:30 p.m. starter to three-quarters sold status, since Procter & Gamble came in early for half of the stanza.

Cunningham & Walsh placed the Lee money in the tv coverage of the annual award fete by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences.

Canada Wants To Call Beer a Beer

Ottawa, March 7.

Major Canadian breweries are pressing for relaxation of regulations that force television commercials to confine beer and ale pictures to labels only—no cans, bottles or suds. Brewers asked the Board of Broadcast Governors to switch the rules so beer advertising could frankly advertise beer and not be "vague and evasive."

Briefs submitted by Canadian Breweries Ltd. (Dow, Carling O'Keefe's) as well as Molson's and Labatt's, believed Canadians "have become sophisticated to the point where the sight of a beer glass or a beer bottle is not objectionable." Brewers opposed drinking scenes and use of persons under 21 in commercials.

Strong opposition to any form of beer advertising, not just new regulations, came from Ontario and Manitoba anti-alcohol groups. Central Canada Assn. of Broadcasters, representing privately-owned AM and tv stations in Ontario, suggested BBG conform to Ontario laws which, claimed CCAB, were changed last fall.

CJOH-TV's Ottawa Bow

Ottawa, March 7.

One of a string of eight new television stations to preem in 1961 in Canada's major market areas, formerly exclusively to Canadian Broadcasting Corp. video, CJOH-TV in Ottawa will debut full power March 12.

With its preeming, this new tv'er will face a unique situation. It brings to Ottawa the first opportunity for local dialers to switch to a second channel since Canada got tv. Until now, CBC's video station CBOT served this area's English-speaking viewers, and CBOFT aired fulltime in French. Reception of upper New York state stations was possible in the suburbs via tall antennas, but was uncertain and usually freakish. A Cornwall-based station could be picked up only in infrequent locations and times.

Al Stern's 'NBC Guaranty Trust'

As chief factotum of NBC Enterprises, to which he was recently elevated, Al Stern is on a five-pronged corporate merry-go-round that spans the globe. With diversification as the keynote of the whole Stern operation, it's somewhat analogous to the parent broadcasting company setting up an "NBC Guaranty Trust Co." under Stern's prexyship. It encompasses everything from lending money, licensing, translating the California National Productions vidfilmery into a success (it's hoped), establishing vested and/or financial interests in enterprises—in and out of broadcasting—both here and abroad, leasing or buying theatres and studios, "angeling" Broadway productions and projecting NBC Enterprises in a big way into the realm of management-surveying. A tall order for a seven-day week, an hour off for lunch.

Since a network is a network and eventually the profit margin hits a plateau, Stern has been given the assignment to make money from his assorted forays, both foreign and domestic. Obviously these approximate the same goals set forth by the rival networks, but it's unlikely that any one personality—as in the case of Stern—is riding herd in such a multi-dimensioned scope. He's realistic enough to know that in some areas the results will fall something short of spectacular; he's not even sure that some of the endeavors hold forth the handsome profits initially visualized. But if they're there, Stern determined not to miss a trick.

It's particularly in the area of scouting acquisition of non-broadcasting businesses, which to some degree are allied with radio-tv in terms of advertising their products, that excites Stern. And if one day he's finalizing the "angeling" of the incoming "Devil's Advocate" legiter (to add to the current string of NBC-backed "Do Re Mi," "Irma La Douce," "Beckett" and "A Taste of Honey") the next will find him jetting to the Coast to keep pace with new vidfilm syndication entries ("we think CNP might soon be headed in the right direction with the correct formula"). The next day could find him engaged in some licensing project, or yet again keeping tabs on world-flung aides scouting NBC International's future horizons in West Germany, or Japan, or Brazil or existing vested ties with Argentine, Venezuela, New Zealand, Australia or Wales.

RCA board chairman Bob Sarnoff is of the opinion that Stern's job is perhaps the most exciting in the business. Stern concurs.

What Gives With Talent Associates? It's Down to One Show (Armstrong)

What is going to happen to Talent Associates?

David Susskind, in his relatively short career as a producer, has said a lot of things that have brought attention to himself and TA, in which he is a co-partner, so, naturally the question is being asked quite a great deal these days.

Al Levy, Susskind's partner and the organization's business brain, said a month ago, "We have no intention of closing Talent Associates, none whatever." This was in response to questions based on early rumors of the company's demise. He reiterated the opinion last week.

Yet, since a month ago, it has become fairly clear that "DuPont Show of the Month," the Breck-sponsored "Family Classics" (squeezed from two-hour size into an hour) and "Witnesss," a regular series that has already gone off the air for the season, will not be back next fall. The prospects of further Art Carney specials under the TA production banner are presently dim.

So far, only "Amstrong Circle Theatre" has a reasonable, if not perfect, chance of returning to the air next season, leaving TA with one active production on alternate weeks. However, a small beam of optimism is focused this week from a second direction. CBS-TV needs something to replace the Jackie Gleason half-hour this spring, and the network and the Levy-Susskind are jointly developing a mystery anthology called "Haunted," which could assume Gleason's Friday period in early April. Even if it proves to be Gleason's successor during the remainder of the season, there is no guarantee, as there rarely is in a business of contract cycles, that it will survive the summer.

Considering Levy's emphatic denial, made when he fully realized the odds against most of his company's productions returning next fall, inclination is to believe that Talent Associates will remain in business—but on a markedly abbreviated basis.

Susskind's own fulltime participation in the company becomes a second question. Already com-

Set Lucille Ball, Belafonte Specials

Though CBS-TV is downbeat on specials, its attitude isn't preventing it from booking 'em into next season, as far away as December. That's the date—Dec. 3—set for Lucille Ball's first special since her Westinghouse stints last year, "Lucy on Broadway." Bulova made the deal, via McCann-Erickson, and Desilu will produce, possibly in N.Y., where Miss Ball's starring in "Wildcat."

Also on tap are Harry Belafonte specials for spring and for next September, both under Revlon sponsorship, per the cosmetic house's direct deal with the singer. Spring show will air either May 21 or June 25, depending on preemptions CBS can arrange; September date isn't set. Also a likelihood for fall—Judy Garland, with possible, with possible taping in June.

Sevareid's 'CBS Reports' On Brit.-U.S. Relations

Eric Sevareid is doing his first "CBS Reports" stanza for Fred Friendly. Show, still untitled, is about the changes taking place in England, and includes changes in English-American relations. One phase of this to be included in the show is the demonstrations against the U.S. Polaris sub base at Holy Loch in Scotland.

Sevareid, who's stationed in London, is in N.Y. this week for huddles with Friendly on the show. He then returns to London for further filming on the stanza.

Sweetness & Light Client (Lorillard) Shifts to Action

P. Lorillard made its first network television buy for the new season in a rather dramatic way. Reps for the client and its agency, Lennen & Newell, sat down on Thursday (2) in the Johnny Victor Theatre in N. Y. to view NBC-TV's "Cain's 100,"' which Metro made for the Tuesday-at-10 hour, and before they left NBC's headquarters they'd committed themselves to about $1,250,000 worth of the hour.

Lorillard was beaten by American Tobacco, Brown & Williamson and R. J. Reynolds, chief among its competitors in the cig field, as far as fall buys are concerned. The other companies had pinned down shows and time slots two weeks back, marking the beginning of network tv's very early selling season. Perhaps this situation prompted Lorillard to make a quick buy. "Cain's" was made for Metro by Paul ("Untouchables") Monash. The purchase of one-minute a week in the action-adventure by Lorillard, known generally as a "sweetness and light" sponsor from the type of programs it has mostly associated with, marks a change in the advertiser's program policy.

'Best of Disney' For NBC-TV Falls Through

Some ex-ABC-TV first-runs almost ended up in a prime time NBC-TV slotting, but the whole thing was called off. Latter was considering use of "The Best of Disney," taken from current and previous ABC-TV-exposed hours, for Fridays at 7:30 come fall.

Old ABC hours revert to Disney's company when the longtime network-Disney tie ends at the end of this season. Whether the reruns go or not, NBC-TV will have an hour a week of new Disney films and cartoons on Sundays, sponsored by Eastman-Kodak and RCA.

HOW TO SERVICE HIT & RUN CLIENT

By GEORGE ROSEN

Things may be quiet around Detroit these days, but there's fresh evidence that the automotive moguls are doing a lot of thinking—specifically about television. And one of the primary things they're thinking about is how they can embrace the medium without committing themselves to full-season contracts and preferably attach themselves to programming on a 13-week basis.

In other words, the men who control the automotive advertising purse strings would like to play it just as they do in magazines—get in while the climate for selling is hot (namely October, November and December, during the big push on new models) and play the rest of the season by ear.

At stake in the ultimate decision is something like $60,000,000 in seasonal billings for three-network tv programming. But that the auto makers have finally come to the realization that all of the answers they're looking for are in after the Oct.-Nov.-Dec. campaign, and that January to June sponsorship carries but little weight, is evidenced from the fact that Ford was willing to pull out of the hottest rated show on the tv spectrum ("Wagon Train") rather than commit itself for a full season's sponsorship.

Right now, with but few exceptions, it's a big question mark what the auto companies intend to do about next season, with most of the coin still uncommitted. Since the networks are dead set against 13-week sponsorships (and that's the way the automotives would like to embrace programming), it's deemed highly likely that a considerable portion of the coin will be siphoned into spot tv, with its flexible hit-and-run pattern.

Ford alone is represented by upwards of a $15,000,000 budget heretofore channeled into tv network programming. Along with "Wagon Train," they've asked for relief from sponsorship of the Hitchcock series and it's highly improbable that Tennessee Ernie will be checking in for the auto sponsor in the fall.

How the auto companies feel about tv could ultimately have a great bearing on the necessity of the networks to embrace the "magazine concept" in their future thinking. Obviously the networks have no intention of allowing $60,000,000 to fly the coop. That kind of billings spells the difference between success and failure. And the automotives aren't alone in the quest to strike while the iron is hot, and then scram. That's the pattern usually followed by such "seasonal" sponsors as watchmakers, anti-freeze, cold remedies, greeting cards, etc., keyed to special campaigns.

As far as Detroit is concerned, it's a 13-week selling season.

GM Into Daytime

Indicative of the automotive quest for shortterm programming is General Motors' buy into NBC-TV daytime, establishing a trend in network purchases out of Detroit. A little bit of car money trickled into pre-dark stanzas before, but that was years ago.

This may total over $1,000,000 over a 13-week period, GM buy was prompted also by a desire to maintain its discount structure at NBC.

And for a twist, Frigidaire, another GM product, may go into nighttime programming during the third quarter of 1961. Presently in days, the bankroller wants the prime time coverage to match its peak appeal to consumers.

'Playhouse 90' Alumni (TV's Top Creative Artists) Band Together, Form 'Society for Uplift of Drama'

By JACK HELLMAN

Hollywood, March 7.

Greatest array of creative writers, producers and directors ever to come out of television are banding together for the uplift of the medium. It might be interpreted as a challenge to the networks, which have evinced a desire to elevate the program content and restore the art form.

Spearheaded by John Frankenheimer, the group is an alumni of CBS-TV's defunct "Playhouse 90" and they seek no financial gain. Said Frankenheimer, "It's more a labor of love, to pay a debt to tv we owe for giving us our chance and making possible greater rewards. It pains us to see what passes for intelligent entertainment on the networks."

The idea of a creative "stock company" was born in the mind of Frankenheimer and is being proposed to the others. "I'm positive that they will be as enthusiastic as I am because they feel the same way I do." The plan is for each to do one or two hour shows a year. Even though many of the subjects would be controversial, such as Robert Alan Aurthur's "Memphis by Morning," an examination of desegregation which Frankenheimer said he would gladly do for nothing, they would ask no more freedom than that accorded them when Hubbell Robinson was the program veepee at CBS-TV.

Those who would form "the society for the uplift of the drama" have now been swallowed up by the major studios or the Broadway stage, as directors or writers. "But I'm sure they'd take time out in the interest of improving the 'breed' of network programming and, in a way, give thanks to television for giving them their big chance." They are Martin Manulis, Vincent Donehue, Arthur Penn, John Houseman, Herbert Brodkin, George Roy Hill, Rod Serling, J. P.

'Snow' Must Go

When Nat Hiken's new comedy series bows on NBC-TV in the fall (in the Sunday 8:30 p.m. slot) it will not come in with its present "Snow White" title. And for a very good reason.

The Hiken show will follow the 7:30 to 8:30 Walt Disney series. "Snow White" leaves the suggestion that it's leftover Disney cartoon footage. The thought doesn't appeal to Disney, to Hiken or to NBC.

Hence the new title. Hiken doesn't know yet what it'll be.

Dundes to Frisco, Replaced by Ruegg In CBS-AM Shifts

Major reshuffling of CBS Radio execs will find Jules Dundes returning to San Francisco and Fred Ruegg taking his post in N.Y. as v.p. in charge of company-owned stations, with Maurie Webster moving in from Frisco to take charge of CBS Radio Spot Sales.

Shakeup, announced by CBS Radio prexy Arthur Hull Hayes, finds Ruegg, for the past five years general manager of KNX, Los Angeles, emerging as the key man in the network o&o setup. Dundes, for the past several years v.p. in charge of o&o stations, the post which Ruegg will take over, will become v.p.-general manager of KCBS in San Francisco, the job he held some years ago. (It was at his request that he's returning to Frisco.)

Webster, who's been v.p.-g.m. of KCBS, also moves to N.Y. and becomes v.p.-general manager of CBS Radio Spot Sales, succeeding Milton F. Allison, who will be assigned to a new sales post within Spot Sales. Succeeding Ruegg as v.p.-g.m. of KNX will be Robert P. Sutton, who's been program director of the station under Ruegg.

How Green-Backed Are Their Valleys

London, March 7.

Television Wales and West, commercial station serving Welsh vales and the hills of U. K.'s West Country, has just announced a before-tax profit of $3,836,837. This is up $832,300 on last year.

After tax-man's cut, TWW profits have increased from $1,536,632 to $1,854,554. Shareholders are to get a final dividend of 70 p.c., making 110 p.c. against equal to 73½ p.c. last time. TWW, started two years ago, claims to pump out more local advertising than any other British tv station.

Away on the other side of U. K., Anglia Television, responsible for commercial tv in eastern counties, announced a $922,686 profit. Directors have declared an interim dividend on A, B and C shares of 20 p.c. for year ended Oct. 31, 1960. They do not intend recommending a final dividend.

CBS-TV O&O Meet

General managers of CBS-TV's five o&o stations will meet in N.Y. for four days starting next Tuesday (14). Sessions, to be chaired by CBS Television Stations v.p. Craig Lawrence, will cover sales, programming, news and public affairs shows and station editorials.

Also participating in the meetings at the St. Regis Hotel will be CBS-TV Spot Sales, which reps the stations, along with the sales managers of the five o&o's, who will participate in a full-day's sales clinic.

Big TV Pitch For Westinghouse Biz

Everybody's shooting for Westinghouse's tv budget allocation in '61-'62. There's maybe $4,500,000 at stake in actual coin but a lot more in video prestige, since Westinghouse, both a set manufacturer and a real veteran of the network wars, doesn't appear at present to be especially anxious to make a new commitment.

NBC-TV wants to retain the billings and is expected to pitch to Westinghouse via agency McCann-Erickson within a few days. Web, it's understood, wants to interest the client in a Friday night alternate-week hour at 10 p.m. with program fare that resembles an all entertainment" version of the DuPont Sunday night potpourri on the same web. Other webs are getting in there too with their own pitches.

This season Westinghouse sponsors the Nanette Fabray half hour, but that's going off at the end of the current season. For the moment, however, web and sponsor have plans to shift the show from 8:30 to 9:30 on Fridays to finish out the season. That should happen in May.

The Westinghouse stanza is designed so that it could alternate with a Dinah Shore hour. Producer Henry Jaffe has feelers out for Wednesday from 10 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV, but the network would be willing to give her Fridays if Jaffe can get a bankroller or two pinned down.

If not Dinah, then NBC has blueprints prepared for an Irving Gitlin public affairs entry called "The

'We're Out to Make That Lion An Image of TV Quality,' Sez Weitman

Metro TV, which is coming into the '61-'62 season with six shows, feels that the scatter-gun approach to pilot producing, which accents numbers over quality is passe. Robert Weitman, v.p. in charge of production, prior to returning to the Coast in a quickee visit, said that Metro TV is "dedicated to custom built properties" which will stand up in this "terribly competitive" biz.

"We would sooner come in with a limited number and concentrate our efforts," said Weitman. Metro TV's production topper came into N. Y. with a print of "Cain's 100," slotted by NBC-TV for Tuesdays at 10 p.m. next season. Pilot for the projected hour vidfilm series is underwritten by NBC-TV.

Weitman, expanding on his theme that Metro TV doesn't want to grind out "sausages," said that each of its projected series for next season had been hand picked, backed by a production-writing team with savvy. "We're out to make that Lion an image of quality on tv," said Weitman who added that MGM prexy Joseph Vogel and his management team are solidly pushing the efforts of the company's tv wing.

Definitely slated for next season are "National Velvet," for which NBC-TV has given MGM TV assurances of the return of the half-hour series. Picking up the tab will be Rexall, the current alternate week sponsor.

ABC-TV also has blueprinted "Asphalt Jungle," Weitman added. "Jungle" replaces "The Islanders" on that web April 2. "The Islanders," the hour MGM-TV vidfilm series, had been axed in mid-season.

Other projects for next season include "Dr. Kildare," an hour project tied to NBC-TV; "Father of the Bride," with General Mills underwriting the pilot; and "Harry's Girls," uncommitted to either sponsor or network. "Harry's Girls," exec producer of which is Alan Jay Lerner, has had three episodes completed.

'Concerto for Combs' As Kahn's 2d Entry On W. German Location

Berlin, March 7.

Ronald J. Kahn and his American tape mobile unit have started production of the second vidpic, "Concerto For Combs," for the W-German company, Tele-West. Like the first venture ("A Child's Game"), "Concerto" is a two-language production (German and English), shot on tape and designated for W-Germany's coming second channel as well as for the U.S. market.

As to "Child's Game," Kahn said: "We believe that it was the time that a dramatic tv show was completely taped on location. So far, a unit that went on location used film while only studio scenes were taped." The above vidpic marked two other firsts" too: It's the first time that a dramatic tv show has been simultaneously taped in two languages. Also, it's the first U.S. tv show entirely performed by foreign artists on tape.

"Concerto" has to do with children and was written by German pic director and author, R. A. Stemmle, an expert with regard to children's stories. Story concerns the kidnapping of a child and sees the gangsters tracked down by children. It's a tongue-in-cheek vehicle, Kahn explained. The locality is Berlin. Don Cash directs.

"Concerto" has been set for 12 production days.

WPIX 'Russia,' 'Hitler' Shows Get Reprise

WPIX, N.Y., will repeat its documentaries, "The Russian Revolution" and "The Secret Life of Adolf Hitler," both of which scored heavily in the rating meter for their first time out. "Revolution" is slotted March 29 at 9 p.m. and "Hitler" April 26 at 9 p.m.

New York indie is currently putting together an in-depth study of Eva Peron. All the WPIX produced telementaries have been done by the station's team of William L. Cooper and Walter D. Engels. Westbrook Van Voorhis has done the narration.

Kahn, Quinn Exit NTA

Kermit Kahn, advertising director of National Telefilm Associates, has resigned. Kahn had been associated with NTA for a long while, before and after NTA's acquisition of WNTA-TV. For an interim period, he had taken a Coast assignment with William Morris.

Recently, NTA has shifted a good deal of its advertising and promotion in syndication to the Coast.

Also resigning from NTA is Donald Quinn, general sales manager of NTA spot sales. He has been replaced by John Fernandez, promoted from the post of NTA spots sales manager.

2d Year Sales On 'Play of Week'

In many instances months before the first year contract of "The Play of the Week" expired, stations have signed up orders for the second year cycle. To date, about 13 stations, in markets ranging from Los Angeles to Elkhart, Ind., have signed up for the second year "Play of The Week" cycle.

Second year production of "The Play of the Week" now is unwinding on WNTA-TV, National Telefilm Associates Newark-N.Y. o&o. Fate of "Play of the Week" next season and the production department helmed by Worthington (Tony) Miner may hinge on the disposition of the station, now up for sale. There is a chance of course that NTA, itself, may elect to continue production of "The Play of the Week"" notwithstanding who the owners of WNTA-TV may be.

Roster of second year renewals includes: WSJV, Elkhart; WXYZ, Detroit; WTMJ, Milwaukee; WSYN, Greensboro, N.C.; KCOP, Los Angeles; WILL, Champaign, Ill.; KMSP, Minneapolis; WBEN, Buffalo; WBAL, Baltimore; KING, Seattle; KOA, Denver; WTIC, Hartford.

Renewal of WXYZ, Detroit, for example, came in four months ahead of the expiration of the first year cycle. "Play of the Week," sold abroad in Australia and Canada, is syndicated in about 70 markets.

93% RENEWALS ON 4TH YEAR 'SEA HUNT'

Ziv-UA reports that it has secured 93% renewals to date for fourth year of "Sea Hunt" production and sold "Miami Undercover" in 131 markets.

"Sea Hunt" renewals were made in some markets even though there are from four to six months to go on the present series in those markets.

Among the latest "Sea Hunt" advertisers to sign up are: Holmes Pontiac, KSLA, Shreveport; Louis Shanks Furniture, KTBC, Austin, Tex.; and Standard Oil of Indiana, WKZO, Kalamazoo. Recent stations signing up for the Lloyd Bridges starrer include: KWTX, Waco-Temple; WGAN, Portland, Me.; WCAU, Philadelphia; KPRC, Houston, WDSU, New Orleans; and WJW, Cleveland.

Sponsors picking up "Miami Undercover" include: Time Finance, WHAS, Louisville; Busch Bavarian, KWTV, Oklahoma City; Royal Bedding, WJAC, Johnstown, Pa.; and International Harvester, KGW, Portland, Ore. "Miami Undercover" station sales include KXLY, Spokane; WATE, Knoxville; and KVAL, Eugene, Ore.

Earnshaw to WB TV

Hollywood, March 7.

Fenton Earnshaw, prexy of radio-tv branch of Writers Guild of America, West, has resigned to take over a tv producer post at Warner Bros., effective immediately.

In submitting his resignation, Earnshaw indicated that his prexyship in guild would prove incompatible with his new producer role. First WB duties will involve production of new "Solitaire" series.

TIDEWATER BUYS 2 WOLPER SPECIALS

Tidewater Oil, on behalf of its Flying A dealers, has purchased from David L. Wolper Productions two one-hour specials, "The Race for Space" and "Project: Man in Space" for telecasting in 50 selected markets.

Foote, Cone & Belding, representing Tidewater, is putting together a lineup of stations in the eastern and western divisions which encompass Flying A operations. "The Race for Space," a repeat in certain markets, will be aired in the second week of April. "Project: Man in Space," currently in production will be telecast the second week of May.

Germans Lament Too Many Old Pix

Frankfurt, March 7.

Das Bild, Germany's largest circulation daily tabloid, has just repeated a familiar cry to Americans, but new to German readers—why so many rotten old films cropping up on the television screens?

Peter Knievel, writing in the mass circulation medium, complains that "either the program officials have no understanding of films—or they are saving in the wrong direction."

Last year 45 movies cropped up on the 5,000,000 West German television sets, he notes—nearly one a week. This sounds astoundingly low when compared to the number of old pix played on American tv, but the major difference here is—television operates for only about four hours nightly, and so far there is just one channel available. So when an old movie is scheduled, the set owner has two choices—watch it, or turn off the television entirely.

Even if it's going to make the film house owners weep, he suggests, West Germany should show some good movies on television occasionally.

Germans would gladly see oldies if they are the good old movies, he notes, and he suggests the old films with Greta Garbo and Ingrid Bergman, and the German classics like Emil Jannings' "Traumulus" and Heinz Ruehmann's "Feuerzangenbowle" and Heester's "Beggar Student."

CROSBY GABFEST INTO SYNDICATION

John Crosby's hourlong series on WNEW-TV, N.Y., will be placed into syndication through Banner Films Inc. It's one of a pair of WNEW-TV taped series turned over to Banner; the other is Dr. Albert Burke's "A Way of Thinking," series of half-hour political commentaries.

Crosby's been on the air since mid-January, and his discussion show has tackled such subjects as the critics, state of tv programming, the automobile in American life and state of the motion picture industry. Burke most recently has been doing two four-part series on the dynamics of Communism and the dynamics of Democracy.

Banner, headed by Charlie MacGregor, has distributed some of WNEW-TV's specials in the past, particularly its Chopin show with Moura Lympany and its special on the Nazi concentration camps, "Remember Us?"

Trans-Lux Sales

Trans-Lux Television reports fresh deals on a variety of shows distributed by the firm.

"Felix the Cat" has been sold to KHQA, Quincy; KGLO, Mason City; WHBF, Rock Island; KEYC, Mankato; and overseas, Australian Broadcasting Commission, Arabian-American Oil Co., Saudi Arabia.

"American Civil War" series, produced by Westinghouse Broadcasting, has been bought by KFVS, Cape Girardeau; KGLO, Mason City; KONO, San Antonio; WSAU, Wausau; KQTV, Ft. Dodge; and WSTV, Steubenville. Encyclopaedia Britannica Films has been sold to KONO, San Antonio; WVEC, Hampton, and WSAU, Wausau.

TV Narrows Time Span

How close tv distribution now follows theatrical run for Hollywood pix is exemplified by the Columbia post-'48 pix package now being marketed by Screen Gems. Although the concentration of the 200 pix falls between 1949 and 1955, a few pix such as the "Last Hurrah," and "Me, and the Colonel," go through the releasing year of 1958.

True, the most recent pix in the Columbia package carry delayed telecasting provisions running into years. Nevertheless, it's indicative of the shortening time span between theatrical and tv distribution

TV's Foggy Notions About London

By LESLIE HARRIS

London, March 7.

Not having been in Hollywood recently, one assumes that marathon monologs on the basic differences between television and the flickers are still tied with palm reading as the favorite form of late evening divertissement in the Bevhills Polo lounge.

That being the case, if some deep thinking flip has had the "tonight's the night" bit, and is ready to blast off in stereo, I have a nifty to set the palm fronds rattling—European production.

Even Univac couldn't reconcile the thinking of the two industries on this subject. Not only are they in orbit on different planets—their tracking devices aren't in phase.

More motion pictures are in production in London than in Hollywood at the present time. That doesn't even include "Cleopatra" which Lloyds is producing. If you want to parlay Paris and Rome, the odds are four to one. Right up to the first of this year there wasn't a square foot of space available in 11 major motion picture studios in London.

Television, on the other hand, is not represented by a single American company, producing in Europe.

In 1961 over 55% of the gross revenue from motion picture exhibition will come from the world market.

40% of the production costs of a television series can now be recovered from overseas sale. But only the British companies are taking advantage of it.

This isn't a case of Gimbel not telling Macy's. A recent VARIETY issue carried four stories on European film production including a forecast that the 27% of Yank films now being made overseas would be topped in 1961.

Television, however, hasn't yet decided the message.

Actually the motion picture industry zeroed in on the profit potential of the European market some 30 years ago, and has been steadily improving its position ever since.

Television did a fast walk on in overseas production five years ago, but made an even faster sortie, when initial efforts didn't jell.

The Fog Vs. The Smog

The fact that overseas television talents weren't geared to American standards then, however, is not indicative of the situation existing today. And there is little sense in television developing secondary myopia. After all, the world's most experienced airline jets the pond almost as fast as a Hollywood junket, and you need a score card to tell the fog from the smog.

The movies first saw the vision when Ben Goetz checked his bags at Claridge's. The country was loaded with untapped talent, and the economics were right.

Two other facts became clear to Goetz, like immediately. The overseas market could provide the profit margin, and to preserve this scale franchise a certain amount of production reciprocity was in the cards.

But Goetz, who built MGM's Elstree studios outside of London did some overtime crystal balling, and saw something more in overseas production than just placating governments, labor groups and quota requirements.

It was a big, wide, wonderful world of stories, stars, exotic locations, and a lot of falling down masonry that didn't look like plaster boards. It was an out from "Broadway Melody of '31" and on in to films like "Goodbye Mr. Chips."

But, there wasn't a geiger counter to reveal the extent of the uranium strike, until suddenly Leslie Howard and Robert Donat were racking up grosses. Greer Garson was being brave about the whole thing, and Cary Grant had given up his trapeze act. Ronald Colman and Bob Hope had preempted the continental crush by getting to Broadway first, but David Niven, Errol Flynn, James Mason, George Sanders, Marlene Dietrich, Hedy Lamarr, Charles Laughton, and the Strattford Co. were queued at the quay.

And they are still lined up outside the passport office, including Lawrence Harvey, Julie Andrews, Olivier Harrison, Sophia Loren—you name 'em. The immigration office has 'em.

Only today, as much of their emoting is done overseas as in Hollywood.

How Do You Rate An Accent?

Yet, television continues to maintain with a straight face—you can't get a rating with an accent. So how come Bergman and Olivier carried off the honor's last season, and the biggest catches for '61 are Deborah Kerr and Vivian Leigh?

By the way, this is not to suggest that European stars are bigger b.o., or more talented than the domestic breed, or vice versa. It is merely to point up a curious paradox. Why has the motion picture industry done so well with foreign stars and overseas production, while television continues to subscribe to the myth that nobody, but nobody in Cedar Rapids can identify themselves with a leading man who didn't graduate from Hollywood High School. So how come Cary Grant has been one of the major boxoffice draws for 20 years?

And if you really want to pound this premise to a pulp, how come people from Moline line up to see Elizabeth Seal and Joan Plowright? Dad, those broad a's aren't grown in Brooklyn. I suppose I shouldn't mention it, but George Bernard Shaw wasn't naturalized when he wrote "My Fair Lady" and Rex Harrison's accent didn't seem to discourage theatre parties flying in from Dallas.

Ah, well, as the man says—that's show business.

But seriously, it's about time

CBS Films Distributes BAR Listings in Bid To Stimulate Syndication

CBS Films is providing stations as an "industry service" with copies of the quarterly BAR (Broadcast Advertiser Reports) listing of syndicated programming and sponsorship. Such information previously has been available only to subscribers of the monitoring service.

The quarterly book lists each syndicated show on the market alphabetically, then runs down each station carrying the show with sponsorship information. A cross-index of advertisers lists sponsors alphabetically with a rundown of the shows and markets each uses. Glossy cover is used to advertise current CBS Films properties.

Idea behind distribution of the listings is to stimulate station execs into more imaginary use of syndicated fare. Stations can check what operators in other markets are programming and in what time periods, and who's sponsoring what where. For example, if a regional or national advertiser sponsors a show in other markets but hasn't bought it in particular station's market even though sponsor has distribution there, the station could make a pitch for the show and the regional business. Similarly, by discovering that some show categories tend to appeal to particular types of local advertisers, the stations can groove their sales pitches toward specific local sponsors.

As one station operator wrote CBS Films after getting his copy, "I have been brousing through my copy and getting smarter every minute." Some 1,700 copies of the 1960 fourth-quarter report were mailed to every station in the country.

MCA TV'S HOUR SYNDIE PUSH

Vidfilm's 'Borrowed' Properties

Pre-sold properties, pix, book, or cartoon titles, still have a lure, as illustrated by plans for next season networking.

Among shows on the Screen Gems roster is "Hazel," series idea borrowed from the one-shot cartoons in the Satevepost. Metro-TV is coming in shortly on ABC-TV with "Asphalt Jungle," based on the film of the same title. Metro-TV's roster next season reads like a partial who's who of previous pix summesses: "Dr. Kildare," "Father of the Bride," are two out of Metro's TV's four entries. There's also in the Metro-TV stable Alan Jay Lerner's "Harry's Girls," which has more than a kissing cousin relationship to "Les" Girls," another Metro pic property.

Twentieth-Fox continues with its successful "Dobie Gillis," borrowed from a book property. For next season has a big stake in "Bus Stop," hour series based on the ex-legit, film property slated on ABC-TV.

There have been instances of successes and failures in pre-sold properties. "My Sister Eileen," for example, was one of those durable properties of other media that just never seemed to make it on tv, judging by the ratings. Screen Gems has had much greater success with "Rin Tin Tin," citing the opposite example.

The execution of the pre-sold property is what makes all the difference, what separates the successes and failures.

Indie Producer As a Stimulant In Hastening Release of Features

Acting to spur the release of features to tv, in many cases, are the indie producer and major distributor arrangements.

Distributors often make a seven or 10 year deal with indie producers, under which the distributor has all licensing rights, including tv, for the term of the contract. As one distrib exec explained, it's better to put a pic on the tv block towards the end of the indie contract than wait for all the sub-run theatrical money to come in, if there is such a potential.

What has happened in some instances is that the distributor, having the tv rights to a pic, has neglected to exercise that right for one reason or another. The default at times has resulted in reopening negotiations for tv licensing at a hiked take to the producer.

Indie-distributor contracts vary, pic by pic and according to the particular strength of the producer. Producers such as Sam Goldwyn seldom give up their tv releasing rights to a distributor. Theatrical distributor of big named producers and big-budgeted pix may grant a prior option to the particular distributor, but all other provisions of tv distribution are a matter of negotiations.

In some cases, the stimulant to put a feature in tv distribution stems from the side of the indie producer. In these cases, the indie producer may see no sense in letting the feature lie untapped in the vaults simply because, for one reason or another, the distributor may not think it propitious to feed the pic to tv. Producers stimulating the tv release have provisions in their contract which allow them to share in the tv revenues. Rather than holding back on potential tv revenues, such producers prod the distributor in realizing the tv take as soon as the particular feature finishes its theatrical run. Such a situation is especially prevalent in the foreign import field.

Matty Fox Exits TV Industries

Matthew (Matty) Fox has resigned as prexy and director of Television Industries, effective March 1. Basil Estreich, senior v.p., was elected prez and chief exec officer.

Fox's decision to resign was attributed to his desire to devote full time to Tollvision of America, the subscription television company.

Walter S. Mack, formerly president of Pepsi-Cola and presently a director of Television Industries, was elected a member of the exec committee of Television Industries.

New prexy Estreich indicated that the financial statement of the company for 1960, shortly to be released, will show an improvement over '59.

Polly Bergen's Pilot

Hollywood, March 7.

Pilot, "Occupation Female," starring Polly Bergen, will be produced by Screen Gems in association with American Entertainment Corp. Comedy-adventure dealing with a newspaperwoman working in the early '30's will be produced and written by Luther Davis.

Series is projected to debut in the '62-'63 season. Officers of American Entertainment are Luther Davis and director Oscar Rudolph.

'Play of Week' In Chi Reprieve As Crix Move In

Chicago, March 7.

After considerable hesitation and much bickering, and with the local press finally rallying to the cause, WGN-TV has renewed NTA's "Play of the Week" for next season. New skein will comprise 32 new shows and seven reruns, and station will give it only one exposure per week instead of two, as its' been doing this season.

It's already been noted here that "Play" has been a disappointment in Chi, failing to get respectable ratings or sufficient sponsorship. Until last week it failed even to generate much excitement on the television pages, but when the word went out that it might not be renewed Daily News telecritic Terry Turner launched a campaign to save it. In a column last Thursday (2), he asked for "Play" advocates to stand up and be counted via a postcard ballot. It's understood the next morning's mail was encouraging.

Whether as a result, or by coincidence, WGN-TV inked the second skein late the following day.

Undoubtedly the two hour dramas will be moved to a new slot next season. It hasn't fared at all well opposite Jack Paar and feature films at 10:30 p.m., Mondays and Fridays.

Ken Murray Library Set for Syndication

Hollywood, March 7.

Ken Murray will narrate a half-hour television series tabbed "Where Were You?" with much of the documentary material coming from Murray's private film library. Official Films Inc. is packaging series for national syndication, with 26 of the fact skeins already canned.

Package will be sold to stations on a city-to-city basis, to start immediately, according to Howard Landau, Coast head of OFI.

4 OFF-NETWORK SHOWS TO START

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

First large scale syndication thrust of hour vidfilm series has been undertaken by MCA TV, which is introing four off-network hour series at one time in the market-by-market hopper.

The four series are "Riverboat," "Suspicion," "Cimarron City," and "Overland Trail," all of which had been on NBC-TV. Other first-run off network series in the hour field are being mulled by MCA TV for introduction in the syndie market.

Initial package of four 60-minute series already has attracted a roster of deals. Stations lined up at the starting line include: Metropolitan Broadcasting's WNEW-TV, N.Y.; WTTG, Washington; KTTV, Los Angeles; KKTV, Colorado Springs; WGAN-TV, Portland, Me.; and WBNS-TV, Columbus; WITN, Washington, N.C.; WBRE-TV, Wilkes-Barre; KVOA-TV, Tucson; WAGA-TV, Atlanta; WEWS-TV, Cleveland; KPTV, Portland, Ore.; and KVAR, Phoenix.

Station list includes affils of the three networks, as well as indies. "These full hours," according to MCA TV v.p. David Sutton, "are designed to fill a current need of local stations for early evening and late night . . . programming."

Total package includes: 44 hours of "Riverboat;" 21 hours of "Suspicion," 26 hours of "Cimarron City," and 17 hours of "Overland Trail."

First syndie effort on hour vidfilm series had been undertaken some time ago by National Telefilm Associates which acquired early vidfilm series of 20th-Fox and Warner Bros. which initially had been networked. They were put in syndication under the overall title of "Hour of Stars."

The MCA TV thrust, though, in the hour vidfilm syndication field represents a much larger group, with a promise of more to come. "Riverboat" stars Darren McGavin, with a roster of guestars; name roster on "Suspicion" includes Bettes Davis, Ray Milland, Anne Baxter, James Mason, Myrna Loy, Greer Garson, and Bob Cummings; "Cimarron City," stars George Montgomery as the top continuing lead; and "Overland Trail," William Bendix.

Move by MCA TV bolsters the number of series being made available to syndication which may be keyed for a fall start.

At the last count there were five first-run new series slated for fall airing, with Ziv-UA accounting for three of the new half-hour series. Other new half-hour series are slated from Independent Television Corp. and Screen Gems. Off-network — first run in syndication— properties are slated from ABC Films, California National Productions and CBS Films.

None of the aforementioned houses, though, told of any plans in the hour vidfilm field, either in terms of fresh production or off-network properties.

ALLTIME FAVES

WMTW-TV Polls Viewers on Pix Popularity; Big Response

Portland, Me., March 7.

WMTW-TV, which has 3,300 features in its station library, recently conducted a one-day-only (Sunday) mail poll contest. Station asked the public to jot down their alltime film favorites. By week's end, station received nearly 900 replies from fans in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Public's alltime favorites, in order of popularity, were: "Gone With the Wind"; Al Jolson pix; "Yankee Doodle Dandy"; "Ten Commandments"; "Johnny Belinda"; "Ben-Hur"; "It Happened One Night"; "Shane"; "Going My Way"; Jeannette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy films; and tied for 10th place was the Disney version of "Swiss Family Robinson."

"GWTW" isn't available to tv.

Who's Gonna Get WNTA-TV?: It's Almost Becoming a Cliffhanger

20th-Fox Interested?

Twentieth-Fox is evidencing some interest in the possible purchase of WNTA-TV, Newark-N. Y. indie. To date, the interest is described as "speculative" and within the 20th-Fox organization. According to a 20th-Fox spokesman, the interest hasn't reached the stage of a direct approach to National Telefilm Associates, owner of the channel. Whether 20th-Fox's interest in the station will go beyond the present state was described as quite iffy. Fox was said to be more interested in an overall NTA deal, with the station as part of the package.

Twentieth - Fox bought KMSP, Minneapolis, from National Theatres and Television, which then was the parent company of NTA. National Theatres and Television now owns the largest bloc of shares in NTA. NTA, as a distributor of 20th-Fox features to tv, has 20th-Fox as one of its major creditors.

The developments surrounding the offered sale of WNTA-TV, Newark-N.Y. indie, are assuming the ingredients of a "cliff hanger," with contending bidders popping up and cloaking principal backers in anonymity.

Latest contender for the VHF channel is David Susskind who states he heads a group, members of which are "influential and rich." Susskind said he would be ready to make a definite bid for the station on Thursday (tomorrow), after an examination of the station's books. He declined to state the identity of members in his group, explaining that they prefer not to be identified at this time.

Susskind has a long association with WNTA-TV, moderating "Open End" and being associated with "The Play of the Week" at its inception as exec producer. If his group purchased the station, he said he would assume active management of the station. Asked how he felt contending with educational tv interests for the purchase of the station, Susskind replied that he's all for educational tv, but he feels that the millions of dollars he could command in programming the station would result in all-around better programming in the areas of drama, music, satire and news. "If I don't get the station, I hope educational tv does," he added.

Broker Howard Stark, representing the educational tv interests, described his negotiations at a "standstill." He said he had indicated to owners National Telefilm Associates that he's prepared to offer more than the $4,000,000 already proferred by him. He would not say how much more his educational group is willing to go, indicating he's waiting for a propitious time.

$7,000,000 Pricetag

It's understood that NTA is seeking about $7,000,000 for the tv outlet. WNTA AM & FM also have been put on the block. NTA's board of directors will have to pass on all bids. There is the possibility that NTA's board may find none of the

Jessel Set to Host Pitt Feature Pix In Fri. Nite Cycle

Pittsburgh, March 7.

George Jessel, who has practically done everything in show biz during his 50 or more years in adds another undertaking to his career when he begins hosting a series of feature films on WIIC here Friday night. The station has cancelled NBC's "Happy" and "One Happy Family" and has Jessel on a series of 13 shots in the 7-8:30 p.m. time. Show will be called "Hall of Fame Theatre." He will come in on weekends where he will tape promos, spots, lead-ins and general comment on the films on view.

The list in the series include "At War with the Army," "Roadhouse," "Laura," "Late George Apley," "Man From Colorado," "Oxbow Incident," "Green Grass from Wyoming," "Snake Pit," "Kentucky," "Our Town," "Jane Eyre," "Big Wheel," and "Yank in the RAF."

This is the first filmed series in the city in the prime evening time since WTAE used movies on Sundays a couple of years ago. The idea of having a host to film entries was started here three years ago by KDKA-TV, with Harold V. Cohen, drama critic of the Post-Gazette, into the Sunday afternoon slot. His show, "Double Feature for a Sunday Afternoon," is the highest rated feature film show in the city, getting an ARB rating of over eight points to its nearest competitor. WIIC used Karl Krug, drama editor of the defunct Sun-Telegraph, for some time on its "Movie of the Week" on Saturday nights at 11:15 but moved him to the Sunday afternoon showing of "Play of the Week."

Don Ameche was considered as the host on the series before Jessel but when he stalled due to his forthcoming Broadway show, the station went to vet agent Joe Hiller for another name host. Hiller sold them Jessel by just mentioning his name.

Baker to Van Praag

Douglas J. Baker, formerly production chief for Film Counselors, has joined Van Praag Productions blurbery as director of production.

In the industry since 1937, Baker has worked with producer Pare Lorentz in New York and for Paramount on short subjects on the Coast.

New Appointments, Additions for ITC

In the wake of the elevation of Abe Mandell as v.p. in charge of administration and sales at Independent Television Corp., a roster of appointments and additions have been made at ITC.

John Pearson, currently general manager of ITC of Canada, Ltd., becomes assistant director of international sales. He will work out of ITC's N.Y. world headquarters in close association with Mandell, who remains v.p. in charge of international sales. Hershel Harris becomes sales manager for ITC of Canada. Harris, who will be based in Toronto, will also supervise the first of ITC's Canada branch offices in Montreal.

Samuel Gang was appointed Mexican and Central American division manager and head of ITC's new offices in Mexico City. Gang, a veteran in the international sales department, formed the National Telefilm Associates foreign division.

John Darnton was named manager of the new Far East sales division. Darnton, who had previously represented ITC and Associated TeleVision of England, will work out of the new division's main offices in Sydney, Australia.

Domestically, too, Mandell has made several major appointments. Carl Russell has been named sales manager of the central division, and in charge of the Chicago office of ITC. Bert Weiland becomes manager of syndicated sales administration, working at the home office with William Andrews, ITC v.p. in charge of syndication.

TV Com'l Festival Judging 1,200 Entries; Even Hard-Sell Bates In —On Other Madison Ave. Fronts

By BILL GREELEY

Judging began yesterday (7) on more than 1,200 film and videotape commercials entered in this year's American TV Commercials Festival.

The Festival's TV Commercials Council, made up of more than 60 agency and media execs, will be working in daily shifts (groups of five to 10) at the TvAR rep offices, selecting 150 top blurbs in a variety of categories, and 25 "commercial classics."

At last count, there were 1,161 film and 119 vidtape entries representing a total of 97 agencies, 51 production companies, 11 tv stations and three advertisers. Total is very close to last year's when the Festival was initiated, but this year the entry fee was raised and several more of the smaller agencies are in the competition.

So are all the major shops, some with scores of submissions and representing as many as five branch offices. BBDO, McCann-Erickson, Young & Rubicam, J. Walter Thompson, Benton & Bowles and Compton are some of the big shops whose multi-entries reflect a strong desire for recognition.

Even Ted Bates, which snubbed the affair a year ago, has several entries and a man on the Council. Bates creative topper and Madison Ave.'s No. 1 exponent of hard sell, Rosser Reeves, has always argued that taste and art should be subordinate to the pitch, and judgments based thereon defeat the purpose of the commercial. He was upset, for instance, when a trade mag picked on a nostrum blurb that captured the market in six months as the worst commercial of the year.

But this year, after an initial directive that there would be no seeking recognition anywhere, Reeves gave in to the wishes of his creative and production folk.

The entries from tv stations are primarily in the local retail sales categories, a segment of the ad industry that broadcasting has been trying to crack for years.

Winners will be announced at a Festival awards luncheon May 4 in the Hotel Roosevelt. John P. Cunningham of Cunningham & Walsh is Council chairman. Wallace Ross is the Festival director.

Strouseville

As expected, Norman H. Strouse, who took over as prez and chief executive officer last June at J. Walter Thompson, has made several changes in the "management team."

Senior veepees elected at the first meeting of the new board of directors were Howard Kohl as secretary; Edward G. Wilson as treasurer; Wallace Elton as chairman of the New York office operations committee; William D. Lauriet Jr., as manager of the Detroit office; Arthur Farlow as vice chairman of the Chicago office operations committee; and Kenneth Hinks and Dan Seymour as members of the executive committee.

George Reeves, manager of the Chicago office, was renamed executive veepee. Samuel Meek and Henry C. Flower Jr., veteran JWT execs, have had their vice chairman titles lifted, but continue as directors and members of the trustee group of the company employees' profit sharing trust, which owns a majority of the voting stock.

Up and down: Thomas Tausig, formerly ad director of P. Lorillard cig company, joins Grant Advertising as veepee and management supervisor.

Alden H. Sulger Jr., formerly with Grey Advertising, joins Ted Bates as a veepee and account supervisor.

William Phillips, with the agency since '59, gets v.p. stripes at Ogilvy, Benson & Mather.

James P. Foley, formerly with Smith, Kline & French Laboratories, Philadelphia, joins Jordan, Sieber & Corbett, New York, as a client contact and copy writer. Phyllis O'Sullivan, formerly a media supervisor in the Montreal office of Kenyon & Eckhardt, joins JS&C as account service manager.

Lester Cohen, with the agency for 12 years, gets veepee stripes at Compton.

Arthur J. Bellaire and Philip C. Carling elected to board of directors at BBDO.

Charles J. McCann, formerly with Salada, joins Lennen & Newell as an account exec.

Kenneth L. Geelhood, with the mag for 15 years, is named ad manager of Hearst's Motor Magazine.

Robert G. Lurie, formerly with Lawrence C. Gumbinner, joins Papert, Koenig, Lois as an account exec.

New Biz: Exeter Motors, distributors for Peugeot in four midwestern states, to Papert, Koenig, Lois.

No Biz: Rugoff & Becker Theatres, New York arties, has been resigned by Sharlane-Benet. Shop had the account for 20 years.

London Agencies

London, March 7.

Every morning the men of Britain shave about 126,000,000 yards of hair from about 500,000 square yards of face. Of every 20 males in this country only five use electric razors, but sales of plug-in face-mowers are rising—from 63,000 in 1946 to 1,057,000 last year. Which, presumably, is one reason why Gillette Razors have asked S. H. Benson Ltd. to run a $420,000 soap-and-water shave campaign. Newspaper ads and 15-and-30-second tv spots will be used to sharpen interest in Gillette razors and blades . . . Benton & Bowles is running the Massey-Ferguson campaign, claimed to mark the first full-scale entry of a U.K. agricultural machinery manufacturer into commercial tv. The M-F commercials are being scanned every Sunday until the autumn in eight tv areas . . . The Midland Metal Spinning Co. is spinning a whole lot of metal—in the shape of frying pans and saucepans—on to Tyne Tees TV. Longleys and Hoffman is fixing a test campaign for Midland's Towerglide kitchen ware on the nothern television station, running until May . . . C. W. Hobson Ltd. launching Nulis skin cream for Reckitt & Sons Ltd. next month. Campaign includes ads in woman's magazines and 30-second spots on the London, Midlands, Northern, Scottish, TWW, Southern and Anglia commercial stations.

With the Station Reps

Meeker Assoc.'s unique selling plan of grouping five "quality" radio stations in the "garbled" Denver market (18 AM outlets) looks after the first two months as though national business for the quintet will be at least tripled.

Called the Denver Metro Network, the group is now averaging 25 to 30% of the new national business being placed in the western city where before the combined billings didn't total 10%. Meeker has been able to grab off a Metro web order on every new national Denver account except two. New biz this year includes Hellman's, Gold Medal, Chapstick, Q-Tips and an exclusive from Gunther Publishing. In three cases, according to Meeker general manager Bob Dudley, the money for the group buy has been added to existing advertiser budgets.

The five stations, which combined average about 20% of the market's ratings, are KLAK, with a country and western format; KOSI, good music; KMOR, sports; KFML, light classical music; and KDEN, album music (all also feature news). Meeker regularly reps KFML, and, in individual buys, the other stations still work through their regular reps.

Meeker got the stations together on the combo plan (then checked out its potential with New York agency execs) when its research showed that the over-populated AM area was getting $1,200,000 annually in national billings instead of the $1,900,000 share that retail sales indicated.

Reppery is now working on similar groupings of "quality" stations in other "garbled" markets that lose out on national coin because budgets have to be spread too thin.

Spotlight: Studebaker-Lark mulling cancellation of some markets in its syndicated bankrolling of the comedy series, "Mr. Ed." Sponsorship is in co-op with dealers, and apparently the car sales slump has some wanting to pull out. . . . Detroit a particularly soft spot in a soft national scene. Toni has reportedly cutback its steady $3,000 Motor City spot campaign to around $1,000. Pillsbury launched a heavy Detroit campaign, but cancelled out. Automotive industry layoffs have caused a slide in retail sales.

DeGray on the Way

Former prez of ABC Radio, Edward J. DeGray, has begun his own radio-tv consultancy firm. He's going in for both station buying and liaison between stations and reps and general program-sales-exploitation advice to station clients in both media. Outfit is called E. J. DeGray Assoc.'s and has temporary Park Ave. headquarters.

Briefs: John L. Herbert has joined the New York radio sales staff of Katz. He was with H-R Representatives . . . Robert McGredy, formerly national tv sales manager for Westinghouse Broadcasting, has been named general sales manager of TvAR, WBC reppery . . . Maurice E. Fidler, with the promotion firm since '59, has been named manager of the Radio Advertising Bureau's member service department.

Storer WAGA-TV Scraps Traditional Pattern On News for Open-End Style

Atlanta, March 7.

WAGA-TV, owned and operated by Storer Broadcasting Corp. and longtime affiliate with CBS, Monday (6) ditched its hidebound evening news format and substituted what it chooses to call "Panorama," a sort of open-end type of news show.

Station is deemphasizing the former segment style of broadcasts, with set times allocated to news, sports, weather and editorial comment.

Spokesman for station explained: "News on any important subject —weather, disaster, or sports—will be interjected between program segments in capsule style . . . with only one qualification . . . it must be news."

Ed Blair will be producer of "Panorama," which will be presented Mondays through Fridays at 6 p.m. Blair has been designated as "host-communicator" delivering news capsules and updating stories between program segments. Blair will handle headlines from wire sources, telephone reports and two-way radios.

Ballantine, Reynolds Warm Up Home Plate

P. Ballantine and R. J. Reynolds will start their 11th and sixth years respectively as co-sponsors of WPIX's, N. Y., exclusive tv coverage of the N. Y. Yankee baseball telecasts. Agency for both clients is William Esty.

WPIX this season will telecast 130 games, including three preseason exhibition games, 81 home contests, 46 regularly scheduled road games, 44 night presentations, plus pickups of 15 doubleheaders.

Mel Allen, Phil Rizzuto and Red Barber form the trio of commentators for the Yankee telecasts.

Gerken, Hydrick to Met

Richard H. Gerken has joined Metropolitan Broadcasting Corp. as eastern sales manager for radio, while Daniel E. Hydrick Jr. is moving into the company as assistant to prexy John W. Kluge.

Gerken has been with Buckley-Jaeger Broadcasting, at one time associated with Kluge in Metropolitan and presently operators of WHIM, Providence, and KGIL, Los Angeles. He was also with WNEW, N. Y., now owned by Metropolitan.

Hydrick for the past six years has been general manager of WGH and WGH-Muzak in Norfolk.

Sacramento—Don Tatum, exec v.p. of Disneyland, has been named to the board of directors of the California State Fair and Exposition by Gov. Edmund G. Brown. Tatum, former executive with RCA, ABC and Don Lee Broadcasting, succeeds Llewellyn Bixby, Long Beach, whose term expired.

HOW EXEC VEEPEES ARE MADE

NBC-TV's 'Hot' Sat. Nite Features

NBC-TV has released the titles of 22 of the 30 features that it is buying for network use. All 20th-Fox productions, the pix are said to cost (for two runs) about $180,000 apiece.

Half of the initial choices by the NBC program department from a list of 150 20th features are in color. List includes:

"How to Marry a Millionaire," "Snows of Kilimanjaro," "Titanic" "On the Riviera," "What Price Glory," "Streetcar Named Desire," "Glass Menagerie," "Halls of Montezuma," "Day the Earth Stood Still," "Desert Fox," "Cheaper by the Dozen," "There's No Business Like Show Business," "Frogmen," "Black Rose," "O. Henry's Full House," "Monkey Business," "People Will Talk," "Deadline, USA," "No Highway in the Sky," "Demetrius and the Gladiators," "Garden of Evil" and "Broken Lance."

NBC will show 30 originals and from them 20 repeats. Price per minute on first-runs (for tv) will be $30,000 and $22,000 on repeats. All the pix were released theatrically after 1950.

No More Comparative Claims For Soaps, Detergents on Brit. Com'l TV

London, March 7.

Comparative claims for soap powders and detergents no longer wash in British tv ads. The Independent Television Authority, which governs commercial tv in U. K., has scrubbed out commercials which compare the claims of one sudsy packet with another. Manufacturers will be able to use simple claims such as "washes whiter than white" or "Grubby washes better," but suggestions that detergents are better than Brand X or "ordinary soap powders" are banned, following a recommendation by the ITA's Advertsing Advisory Committee.

Commercials for other goods—where comparisons are "readily provable"—are not affected by the ban. Said an ITA spokesman on the washtub ruling: "These measures will take into account the marginal nature of the differences between many of the products of this highly competitive industry. The great variety of conditions in which products are used in the home makes conclusive substantiation of claims for supremacy of one product over others almost impossible. In these circumstances it is felt that the best course is to withdraw from the advertising the elemental precise factual comparison between products."

Detergent and soap powder manufacturers contribute a big part of ITV's income, spending millions on tv commercials every year. The ban means that a great many of their commercials will disappear during the next fortnight. They include perhaps the best-known commercial in U. K., in which, week after week, a housewife unerringly chooses a pile of laundry washed with the advertiser's brand of detergent and never chooses a second pile washed with "Brand X."

But supporters of the "comparative-claim" wash-powder commercial are not going down the plughole without a struggle. Said a spokesman for the Thomas Hedley group, manufacturers of Tide, Daz and Fairy Snow: "We believe that these new rules which discriminate against one industry will be found to operate against the best interests of the consuming customer."

British Retailers Carry Torch for Color TV

London, March 7.

The British Radio and Television Retailers' Association is the latest body to campaign for early color television in Britain. Richard Burbidge, prexy of the Assn., which represents over 7,000 dealers, is concerned that Britain is falling behind in the color race.

He says: "The public's not concerned on what line-screen color will be shown. It just wants color quickly." Burbidge complained of dithering within the radio industry and also by the Government which, he says, is causing falling set sales.

WBC Productions: McGannon's Major Programming Bid

Westinghouse Broadcasting has established a program production wing WBC Productions, to produce radio and tv shows for the 11 WBC stations with the initial project slated as a 90-minute nighttime video strip (Monday-Friday) from New York and San Francisco.

While details of the vidtaped stanzas had been set early this week, Westinghouse prexy Don McGannon said, "The two nighttime tv shows represent an ambitious start of what will eventually become program product in all areas, everything from pure diversion to public affairs and public service, and all firstrate entertainment."

An hour will be produced in New York, the final half-hour in San Francisco via WBC's KPIX. Only permanent talent so far revealed is Joyce Davidson, controversial Canadian tv personality who is exiting CBC to work the WBC New York hour.

It's believed the Westinghouse stations will be slotting the nightly spread following the 11:15 p.m. news to replace late-night feature film shows. It's understood that a prime factor in the decision to produce the 90-minute series was a slide in ratings for the late features, even when slotting the new post '48's.

Westinghouse will be attempting to sell the shows to station in noncompeting markets—those besides Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Boston, Baltimore and San Francisco.

Exec producer for WBC Productions will be Ben Park, who produced "Lab 30" for WBC stations and who was for several years NBC's director of pubaffairs. He started his video career in Chicago, and produced such "Chicago School" shows as "Studs Place," "Portrait of America" and others.

Associate producer will be William Peters, freelance writer for consumer mags. Roger W. Murphy, a former associate producer with ABC and NBC, has been named production manager.

GF Coin to CBS Cartoon Series

General Foods has purchased half-sponsorship of "Alvin and the Chipmunks," new cartoon series, and CBS-TV has definitely slotted the stanza on Wednesdays at 7:30 as its challenge to "Wagon Train."

The network's 8 to 8:30 choice to compete against the second half of "Wagon Train" hasn't been selected yet, but it looks like either "Father Knows Best" repeats or "Oh Those Bells" with another cartoon series, "The Shrimp," now considered just an outside chance.

"Alvin" is produced by Format Films in association with Ross Bagdasarian, creator of the Chipmunk characters, big record hits of a year ago.

NBC'S MCANDREW HITS THE JACKPOT

Exec veepee stripes aren't tossed around indiscriminately. Least of all around the networks. They're generally bestowed in recognition of services over and above the line of duty—services that can be translated into hard, fast dollars.

Which brings up the "sitting pretty" status of NBC's Bill McAndrew, upon whom the accolade was bestowed a couple months back. When prestige programming—in this instance news—can be parlayed into such handsome revenues and, along with public affairs programming, achieve a $20,000,000-a-year billings, then such "beyond the call of duty" affluence is bound to attract attention of the bosses.

Such unique sponsor response puts NBC news-public affairs in the same enviable financial range as the "Today"-"Tonight" (Garroway & Paar) division. But whereas the latter two entries come within the framework of entertainment, McAndrew is obliged to get his the hard way.

Not that the $20,000,000 represents a profit. Far from it. By the very nature of news-public affairs, it never came out black ink. Whatever the incoming sponsor coin, it's siphoned back in an expansion of operations, so that if you're lucky in whittling down the losses it adds up to quite an accomplishment. It's still a multi-million dollar "out of pocket" investment for NBC (as it is with the other networks), but nonetheless a far cry from three years ago when NBC was acknowledging that it was costing some $13,000,000 a year to project itself into the news-public affairs arena.

But those were the days before a Dave Brinkley-Chet Huntley combo had achieved a status where they could attract a $6,000,000 per annum cross-the-board sponsor, as in the case of Texaco. Or when a Gulf could plunk down something like $3,000,000 and give McAndrew & Co. carte blanche in programming a series of shows keyed to the same night's headlines.

Today sponsors are beating a path to NBC's news door for a sampling of its wares. Such commercially-minded clients as Procter & Gamble, Lever Bros. and Purex, all with competitive products, have joined in concert to bankroll the Tuesday night "JFK" specials. Purex all told is lavishing some $1,300,000 on news-public affairs entries out of the NBC shop. Timex is riding with the "White Papers" to the tune of some $3,000,000. The Mutual of Omaha tab for NBC news will hit $1,500,000 this year. The news strips on the "Today" show represent a fat chunk of billings for the o&o stations. The participating news spots in radio, coupled with Sonoco's 15-minute cross-the-board show, "Monitor" and other client pledges add up to some $1,500,000 for the NBC AM coffers.

A lot of sponsor coin is already locked in for next season. Once having gained the advantage in news NBC is now dedicated to the proposition that if it could achieve $20,000,000 billings this year, why not upgrade the operation to achieve $25,000,000 in '61-'62?

Further NBC intelligence: McAndrews now has approximately 300 staffers and stringers scattered throughout the world.

Paley Lauds Collins' 'Courage'

Following is the text of a letter CBS board chairman William S. Paley sent to NAB president LeRoy Collins last week:

"I have been away, and have just read with great interest your address to the NAB Joint Board on Feb. 10. I want to send you this personal note of congratulations. You were forthright and courageous. The broadcasting industry needs such progressive leadership, particularly at this time in its development.

"I certainly agree with you that whatever needs to be done to discharge our responsibilities to the public interest must be done by those of us within the industry itself. You will find, as you probably realize, that many of us do not agree with some of the things you said. But your general objectives are the important thing, and we endorse them. You can count on our best efforts as we work toward the goals you have outlined."

CBS-TV In a Bind: 26 'Ichabods' Rolling, But No Place to Put 'Em

Despite the fact that there's continuing production going forward on the new "Icahabod" series, it looks as if the show won't hit the air next fall on CBS-TV, which is footing the bill on 26 episodes. And this would mark the second year in a row that the Connelly & Mosher package "just missed" getting on.

As of the moment, there's simply no spot left for "Ichabod" on the CBS schedule for fall. The network has three one-hour periods open, Wednesday 8:30-9:30 and Thursday 7:30-8:30 and 9-10. It has six or seven hour pilots due in, and has virtually locked up the periods for 60-minute shows. Only a last-minute sponsor placement of a half-hour would open up a possible hole for "Ichabod," and CBS currently feels so strongly about programming hours in those periods it might even forego a sponsor placement on a half-hour.

So the network will foot the bill on the 26 "Ichabod" stanzas and place them on the shelf, either for mid-season next January or for the '62-'63 season. Last year, there was only a pilot, and though Kellogg ordered half-sponsorship, CBS couldn't find a cosponsor and "Ichabod" never quite made it. CBS was high enough on the show, however, to order 25 more anyway.

That's not the only "in production" series that may not make the schedule. Web has 13 "Oh Those Bells" in the can, and while it's hoping to place the show Wednesdays at 8, there's a solid chance that slot may go instead to "Father Knows Best" reruns. In which case, "Bells" takes to the sidelines again, another two-years-in-a-row victim of circumstance.

WGN-TV at 10: 'Help'

Chicago, March 7.

Chi indie WGN-TV, having explored all possibilities within the shop for improving its 10 p.m. newscast, now is seeking outside help. Station has pacted Frank Atlass Productions for 13 weeks' consultancy on the program, which is running fourth in a four-station news race at 10 (see separate story). It's an expensive half-hour roundup, going seven nights a week.

Barry McKinley, Atlass's top producer, will personally take on the show as production coordinator. It's perhaps ironic that McKinley was once a staff producer for WGN-TV, fired in 1953 (but before Ward L. Quaal came in as general manager). He worked next at WBBM-TV, under Atlass and for a time on the Fahey Flynn-P. J. Hoff newscast that now dominates the market.

There's undoubtedly some hope at WGN that the McKinley-Atlass combo can pull off the same trick again.

Returns In on Hot Chi News Race; 1st Spot to WBBM-TV

Latest Nielsen returns, for the first time, separate the men from the boys in Chi's hot four-station news derby at 10 p.m. Previous month's report couldn't be taken as definitive because it had surveyed only two weeks of Alex Dreier's newly-incepted show on WBKB.

WBBM-TV's "Standard News & Weather Roundup" still maintains a wide lead, as it has for five years, averaging around 30 for the five weeknights. ARB shows a high of 40 on one of the Sunday night outings during the period.

Nielsen puts Alex Dreier in undisputed second place, with a 16.4 average, slightly higher than he had been getting at WNBQ but in a period of exceptional sets in use. WNBQ, with a 10-minute Floyd Kalber newscast, is running third over the five days with a 12.6 average and WGN-TV, with a half-hour roundup helmed by Jim Conway, is last with a 7.5 average.

ARB pretty much bears out the Nielsen breakdown as to standing, but with, of course, a differential in percentages. Period covered had a number of big news stories, including two plane crashes and the Presidential inauguration, which is felt to account for the upbeat in sets in use.

Incidentally, the Nielsens show Len O'Connor's post midnight strip tapping ratings of 8 at 12:05 on WNBQ, which is extremely high. Interesting thing about it is that the commentary show is a taped reprise of the one he does earlier at 5:50 p.m.

ABC-TV 'Paradise' To Sun. Nite at 10?

"Adventures in Paradise" may not be cancelled at the conclusion of this season after all. Ollie Treyz, the network's president, is mulling use of the 20th-Fox 60-minute production (presently on Mondays at 9:30) as his Sunday-at-10 entry come fall.

It's not fait accompli yet, since so many ideas go whirling through the tentative sked for each new season, but originally it was ABC-TV's intention to put "Asphalt Jungle" next season in the Sunday anchorage. This Metro stanza will probably get the time for the duration of this spring, but if "Paradise" is kept "Jungle" will either have to find a new roost or be axed.

Reportedly, ABC was willing to dump "Jungle" as a fall Sunday entry if Procter & Gamble came up with extra coin for the weekend lineup. P&G was touting Hubbell Robinson's "The Lawyer" for the 10 p.m. Sunday period, but ABC evidently did not get quite as much of the soap manufacturer's coin as it hoped for, so "Jungle" penciling for '61-'62 was not erased.

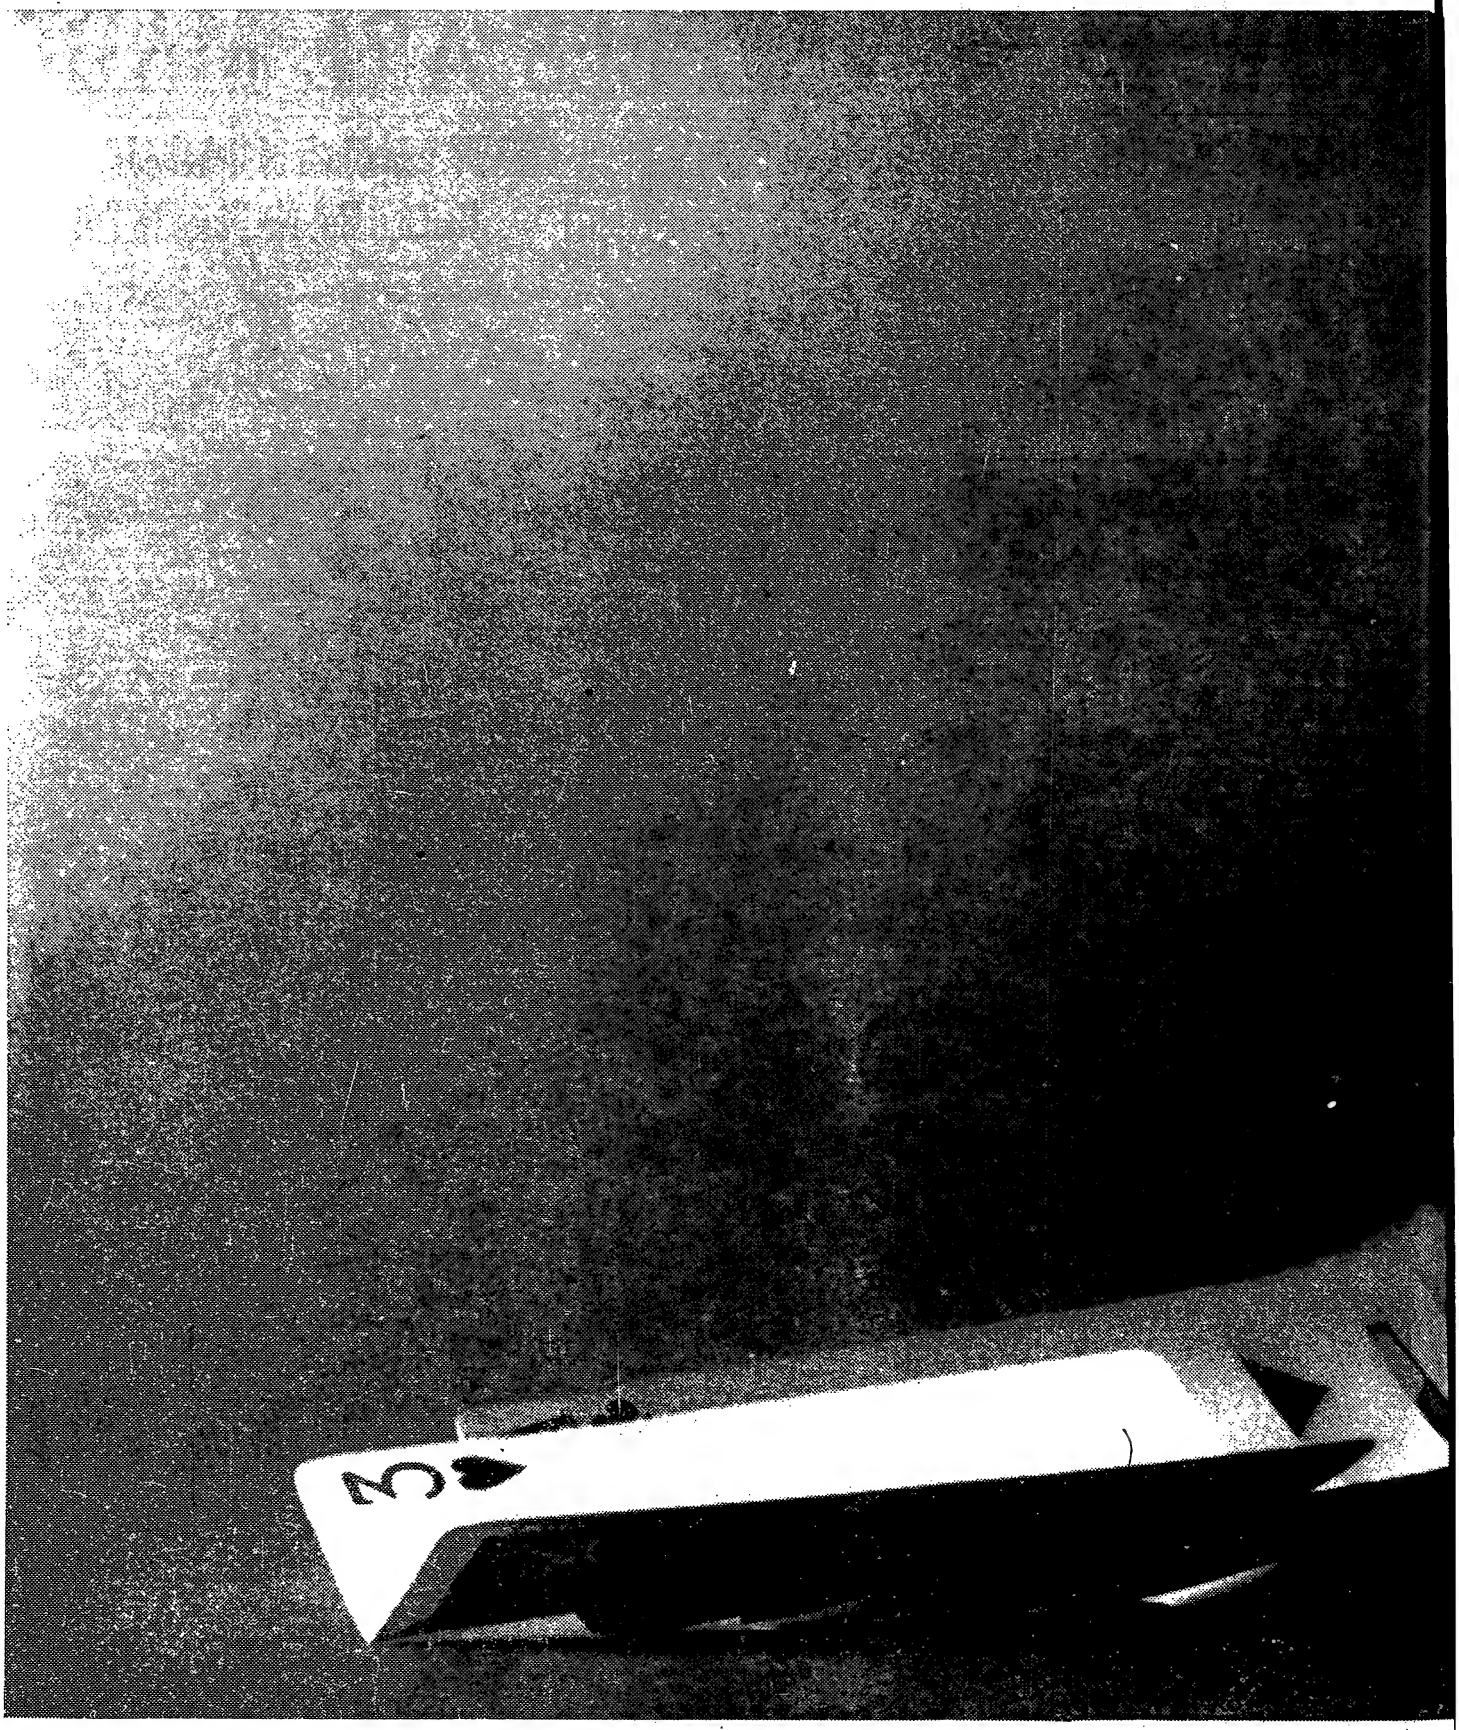
Meantime, Treyz is said to be offering P&G "The Rebel" for a 7 o'clock berth Sundays. Stanza is definitely giving up its current 9 p.m. slot at the end of this season. P&G owns half of it now.

CBS' Hartford Affil

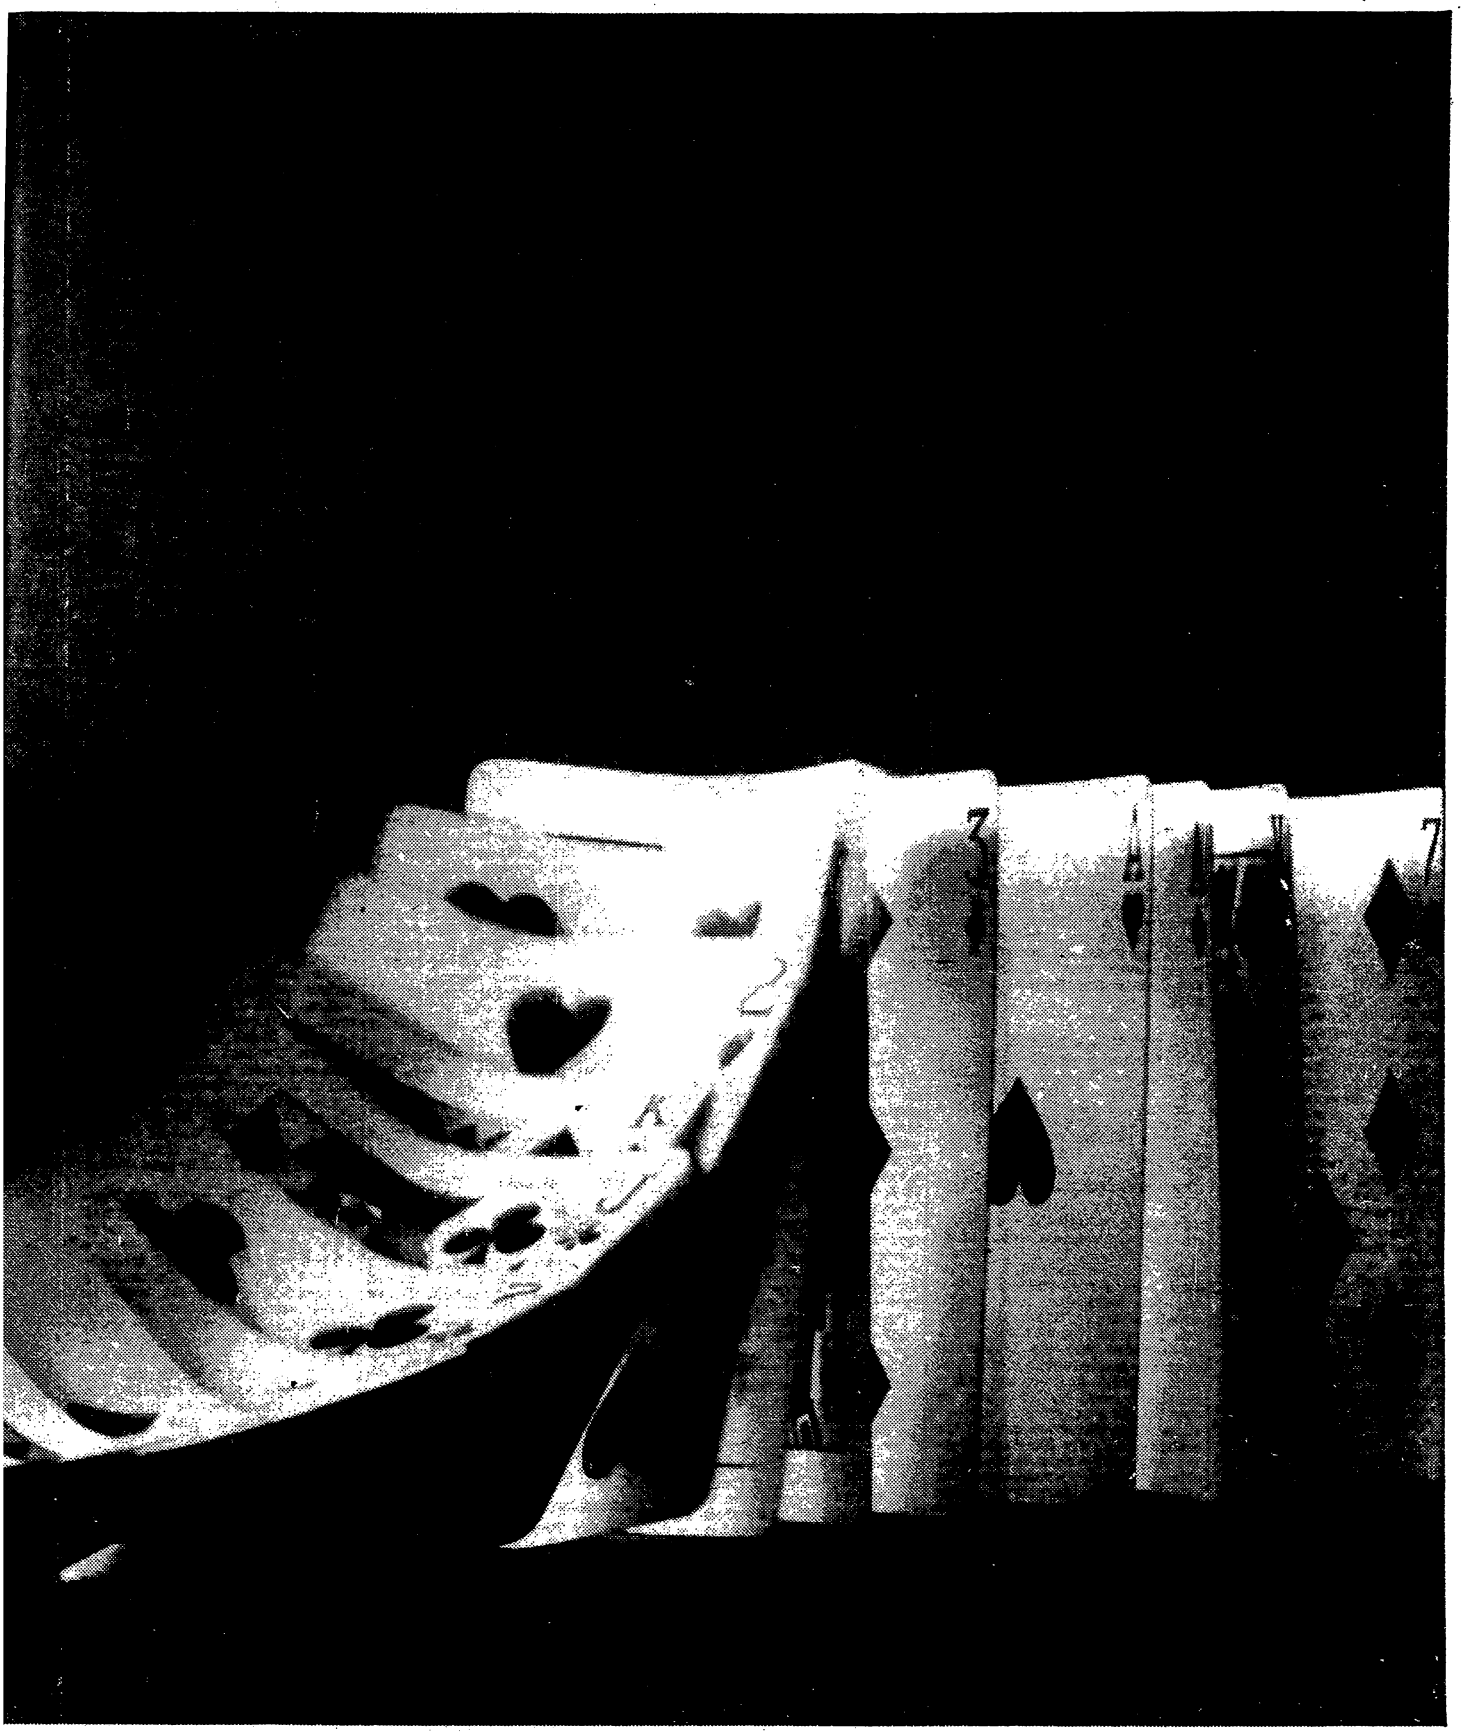
Hartford, March 7.

After a six-month layoff, CBS will again have an affiliate in the greater Hartford area. Station WINF in nearby Manchester joins the CBS affiliate ranks on March 19, same day station moves up to 1,000 watts.

Net will split affiliations with Mutual on the Manchester outlet until August when station's Mutual contract is up.



There is nothing harder to stop than a trend.



NETWORK	1ST OR 2ND PLACE	3RD PLACE
ABC-TV	394	65
NET Y	325	134
NET Z	200	259

*Source: Nielsen 24 Market TV Reports. Average Audience, 9 weeks ending Feb. 26, 1961. Sunday 6:30-11 PM. Mon.-Sat., 7:30-11 PM.

And 459 half hours now say the trend is to ABC-TV:

Fascinating figures emerge when you take a first, second and third look at the network scene.

In the 459 half-hour Nielsen rated periods to date this year,* ABC was first or second 394 times. Competitively, this puts ABC 21% ahead of Net Y, 97% ahead of Net Z in half-hour firsts or seconds.

The race for third was copped by Net Z. It came in third 56% of the time. Net Y came in third 29% of the time. ABC came in third only 14% of the time.

Another aspect, it appears, of the nothing-is-harder-to-stop-than-a-trend trend now pointing the way to more effective network television buying. ABC Television

GIARDINO D'INVERNO
(Winter Garden)
With Henri Salvador, Don Lurio, Cetra Quartet, Betty Curtis, Gino Corcelli, Ornella Vanoni, Johnny Dorelli, Arturo Testa, the Kessler Twins, Bluebell Girls (10), dancers (4), Kramer Orch, others
Director: Antonello Falqui
Producer: Guido Sacerdoti
Writer: Dino Verde
60 Mins.; Sat., 9:15 p.m.
RAI-TV, from Rome

This elaborately produced item was perhaps the finest show of its kind ever produced by RAI-TV, and rated high even when compared to Yank and other variety stanzas. Praise was even more welcome as variety has never been RAI's forte, though the genre is the most popular in this country. Credit is due all concerned, from producer Guido Sacerdoti to director Antonello Falqui on down the line.

Success was all the more unusual as it was accomplished without the aid of the usual Italo comic personality and his more or less risible lines of patter. The laughs were in the capable hands of Henri Salvador, who dominated the proceedings with visual mimed humor in a varied series of inventive sketches interspersed with his own wk repertoire of songs. His was a complete, winning talent which rates definite Yank attention, both for video and niteries.

Other standout item was dancer Don Lurio, whose zestful, new, and telegenic terping as well as choreography easily rate him the number one spot in his field—at least in these latitudes. His numbers with the Kessler twins (likewise imports) were begeff, contribution of the duo being high on looks, voice, and ability. They were also spotted in a strong intro song, "Pardon, Monsieur," and at intervals during show.

Cetra Quartet, with such elaborately conceived numbers as their card game to a vocalized rendition of "Blues in the Night," to name just one, have never appeared to better advantage. Another discovery of the show was voice of Ornella Vanoni, personal and unusual is this tall exotic looker who previously ruled the field (which at the same time limited her) as a singer of "criminal" low-life sagas.

Gorni Kramer served as affable host to the proceedings, and also contributed a trickily lensed squeezebox duet with himself for fine musicomic effects. His orchestra is best heard in some time. Likewise appearing to advantage, thanks to inventive direction, able writing and lighting, as well as simple but to-the-point settings, were high-rated Italo singers such as Arturo Testa and Betty Curtis, latter belting out a winning tune by Kramer, "He Kissed Me." Not to be outdone, the Bluebell line assembled for this show, apart from looks, was also able and most versatile.

Rave-ful show had another major virtue: in a country in which all too many entertainment values are killed by over-long stints, "Winter Garden" with its relatively short value-filled one-hour duration brought a welcome change and made one wish for more.

EICHMANN
With John Freeman
Writer: John Haggarty
Producer: Jock Watson
60 Mins., Wed., 9:35 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

With Adolf Eichmann's trial in Israel due in a few weeks, ATV devoted a profile of him, sketching in what is known of his history from birth to his kidnapping in the Argentine. Filmed material being non-existent, and even photographs being scanty, the hour took the form of a biography delivered by weekly-editor John Freeman (famed for his "Face to Face" interviews on the rival web). Concentration-camp film was used to illustrate the horrors for which Eichmann is being charged, and interviews with one or two people who'd brushed against him and others who'd taken part in the Jewish search for him broke up Freeman's monolog.

The result wasn't a particularly bold or exciting use of tv, although producer Jock Watson assembled the material well. There simply weren't enough visual illustrations to fill the 60 minutes. But, on every other count, the program was memorable. Freeman adopted just the right tone of grave impartiality, and only showed passion when he recalled his personal reactions to the discovery of those pitiful human remnants at Belsen.

Few clues could be given at this stage to the workings of Eichmann's mind, and Freeman indicated that one main interest of the upcoming trial would be such revelations. Lily Mathe, violinist in the concentration-camp orchestra and thus saved from extermination, mentioned his love for sentimental gypsy music and played his favorite lachrymose melody. A British ex-prisoner recalled his fury when he told Eichmann that he thought the treatment of the Jews was abominable, although otherwise he was calm and courteous. And a moving moment was provided by Czech. Emil Just, who tried to pass bread to starving Jews and, when found out, was sent to join them.

The 15-year hunt that ended in San Fernando suburb was touched on by two helpers, who pieced together his movements from scraps of information derived from his mistress and a lot of circumstantial evidence. Finally, the Israeli Ambassador in London, Arthur Lourie, put forth his Government's point of view, stating that the trial was taking place to put his deeds on the record. Eichmann's personal fate was a small matter compared with the need to bring to light all the details of his enormous crimes. In fact, it was a program to stir the mind and rouse the conscience. Its impact owed much to its sedate detachment and general impartiality.

THE POISONED EARTH
With Michael Gough, Joseph Furst, Frederick Bartman, J. G. Devlin, James Maxwell, Barry Keegan, Stratford Johns, Eric Thompson, Jack May Producer: Casper Wrede
Writer: Arden Winch
90 Mins., Tues., 9:35 p.m.
Associated-Redifussion from London

Suppose a scientific egg-head had invented an A-bomb of limited scope which, by reducing the suicidal effects of fall-out, made war a much more likely possibility. That was the intriguing idea behind Arden Winch's "Poisoned Earth." But it was an idea that never really exploded into the frightening dramatic mushroom it might have been. Winch is a skilled writer, yet he seemed to have lost his way in this wordy piece, set in a sandy waste where the bomb was being tested. The imagination was not gripped by characters too obviously from stock—unworldly scientist, glib reporter, cynical public relations man and a bunch of ban-the-bomb agitators ranging from an idealistic young couple to a smooth-tongued politician who believed that the ends always justified the means.

Back and forth went the arguments as the final count-down came nearer. Was the testing of the bomb justified or not? But most of the points of view expressed had been heard before.

Only Michael Gough, as the most selfless of the agitators, and Joseph Furst, as the even more selfless scientist who had made the bomb compelled attention. Furst pleaded that the scientist is concerned only with experiment, the pursuit of truth. The use to which his discoveries are put is not his affair. Then, just before the bomb was due to go off, he discovered that his son, for whom he had been searching for years, had died in a Nazi concentration camp, at the hands of doctors conducting scientific experiments.

The effect of this revelation was such that he walked out into the target area to become the first victim of the bomb he had made. This was the play's climax and it should have been shattering. Yet it wasn't because it just wasn't believable.

DER JUENGSTE TAG
(Doomsday)
With Ilse Steppat, K. J. Wussow, Rudolf Vogel, Elisabeth Neumann, Herta Martin, Claudia Gerstaecker
Director: Michael Kehlmann
Writer: Oedon Von Horvath
110 Minutes
West-Germany TV, from Munich

German tv, is as hard up for fresh dramatic material as anyone else, but is successfully tapping a half-forgotten source: the so-called "no-man's-land plays," written by successful or up-and-coming dramatists shortly before 1933 and never performed in Germany due to a Nazi interdict. They were never performed anywhere else because those exiled authors, Bruckner, Zuckmayer, Hasenclever, Rehfisch, Frank, and Horvath, rather than convert existing material to Paris, London or New York requirements, tried to make new starts and write from scratch for the public of their respective adopted homelands. (Just one or two succeeded.) Except for a few half-hearted attempts here and there, German legit theatres have not yet drawn on that backlog. TV has, and it has proved a bonanza.

Oedon Von Horvath whose Broadway-bound emigration was cut off in 1939, on the Champs Elysee, by a falling tree, created a new type of folkplay, harsh and illusionless, in every way different from the cliche that had been known by the tag before.

"Doomsday's" premise still would have been a dish for the old-time folkplay writers: a merely exploratory kiss by a local belle caused the unhappily married small town stationmaster to miss a train signal. From this trite incident, the play developed into a sort of mass trial where almost everybody in the tightly knit little community sooner or later had to face the question what share of guilt for the trainwreck he had to bear.

The stationmaster, feeling completely innocent, pinned the rap on the girl and consequently demanded exoneration from her by means of a false alibi. This she was eager to supply but her increasing sense of guilt did not allow the case to come to rest with that. The stationmaster's loveless wife also had to assume part of the responsibility before her own conscience; her well-meaning brother somehow found himself a party to the crime, and so the chain-reaction soon involved nearly the whole town.

Unlike the traditional folksy melter, play didn't wind up with general expiation. It showed the failure of such attempts to cut the knot, such as perjury, blackmail, flight and murder, and that was the maximum "moral" that could be detected.

Memorably acting by the cast, with tragedienne Ilse Steppat the best as the wife who had actually nothing to do with the incident. Michael Kehlmann's expert direction did not miss any effect on the many levels of this work. Jok.

STRESS POINT
With Betty Baskcomb, Harry Littlewood, Larry Dann, Richard Longman, Victor Lucas, John Gill, Richard Shaw, Aubrey Woods, Francesca Annis, Henry McCarthy, John Boxer, Peter Halliday, Peter Swanwick, J. Mark Roberts, Brian O'Higgins
Writer: W. D. Pereira
Producer: Alan Bromly
45 Mins., Thurs., 7:55 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

This was a decent little drama, which held the attention on the strength of its documentary detail rather than its plotting. It took place in an aircraft factory, and concerned an afternoon in the life of its managing director, Sir James Gifford (Richard Longman). He had more problems than could be counted on a couple of hands. One of his experimental aircraft had developed trouble in its engine-casing, and another was having difficulties in its tail. There were clashes between the publicity man and another executive, a threat of a strike over redundancy notices, and Gifford's daughter ran away from school. No wonder the poor guy had an ulcer, and was strongly urged to ease up.

Upshot was that he decided to spend more time with his family, and less with his business, to smiles all round. On the face of it, a simple, over-packed tale, but it had a sturdy sense of place, of real work being done, and this carried it through.

The acting was reliable rather than showy, and producer Alan Bromly ensured a crisp and authentic atmosphere. Otta.

A LIFE OF BLISS!
With George Cole, Hugh Sinclair, Frances Bennett, Jennifer Schooling, Tracy Connell, Annette Kerr, William Kendall, Arthur Hewlitt, Jackie Chissick, Dennis Spencer, Pauline Loring, Marian Diamond
Writer-Producer: Godfrey Harrison
30 Mins.; Wed., 8:30 p.m.
BBC-TV, from London

Back for a further skein, "A Life of Bliss" has begun to show signs of malnutrition. It began with BBC steam-radio, where it held a steady fan-rating through several seasons. Now that it's gone visual, its verbal invention shows signs of flagging, and the situation, on the one caught, provided scanty yocks.

The series centers around bachelor David Bliss (George Cole), the kind of silly-ass character who's always putting his foot into it up to the neck. If there's a wrong end of the stick, he'll grab it. The other permanent personnel are his sister (Frances Bennett) and his brother-in-law (Hugh Sinclair), and they are mainly feeds for the gags. In this one, a damsel (Jennifer Schooling) was invited for the week-end, only to find that another guest was a director of brother-in-law's firm, a married wolf who'd once chased her around a ship for no good purpose.

To avoid embarrassment all round, the wench was hidden upstairs, pretending to be an aged relation who was sick. This led to some mildly farcical capers, such as Bliss trying to hide the girl's trunk, plastered with her name on the labels, and donning a wig to impersonate her.

The invention of incident kept up a fair pace, and allowed George Cole to indulge in a variety of double-takes and verbal gaffes. But it needed an injection of wit in the dialog—and this was not provided by the show's resident scribe, Godfrey Harrison. Other performances were adequate, although all except Hugh Sinclair forced the brightness beyond the piece's merits.

Harrison, who produced his own work, was brisk and jaunty, and the reliable George Cole was usually worth watching. But, if it's going to enjoy a very long life, "A Life of Bliss" calls out for hormone treatment. Otta.

Foreign TV Followups

Sunday Night at the Palladium

Chief bait of this stanza of ATV's "Sunday Night at the London Palladium" was the show-topper, Hugh O'Brian, who rated the billing for his Wyatt Earp impersonation and didn't achieve much more than an amiable personal appearance, handy for the fans but take-it-or-leave-it for the rest. Handicapped by a recently broken ankle, O'Brian couldn't help but be physically static. But trouble might have been taken to find more novel material for his act.

He opened with a Western ballad, "Oralie," which, he claimed was "Wyatt's favorite." This didn't say much for Earp's musical taste, but O'Brian delivered it manfully and his voice passed when it was put under no great strain. A feeble take-off of Presley raised some simple yocks, and was followed by an unmemorable ditty, theme of which was that O'Brian was so attached to his horse that he had no time for girls.

Then came the emotional bit, with lights dimmed. He told a true story about a Marine buddy who'd served with him in Korea. This fellow had gone through a deck of cards, explaining how each one reminded him of some religious symbol—the Jack for the Devil, the Queen for the Mother of Christ, and so on. This rose to a crescendo of fervor, aided and abetted by orchestral backing. It was a pretty pimple-raising effort which had many squirming, but O'Brian just about summoned enough fervor to see it through. He closed with a spiritual, "World in His Hands," and went out, bathed in golden light. It was, in fact, a compound of old-fashioned gags and rabble-rousing, which might have been even more embarrassing if O'Brian hadn't possessed a genial, homey, and patently sincere presence.

The rest of the bill had average appeal. Gene Detroy, with his Marquis Family of chimps, put them through their pseudo-human capers with a fair line of insulting patter. The Hedley Ward Trio, a local group of singer-instrumentalists, were jaunty and polished in "All Night Long" and "Pepe." The show was given a sprightly sendoff by the Mathurins from Paris, who hurtled round the stage in zippy style.

George Carden devised a fetching tap routine for the chorus line, and Don Arrol emceed with, as usual, more enthusiasm than wit. Bill Ward produced with assurance and pace. Otta.

Armchair Theatre

Canadian actor-writer Ted Allan turned a savage eye on Hollywood in "The Money Makers," which filled this stanza of ABC TV's "Armchair Theatre." It came out strong, hard, and vicious but its point of view was so doggedly black and some of its plotting so loaded that its anti-ratrace message didn't carry conviction.

Paul Finch (Ted Allan) was a double-crossing producer who set himself up as an independent, his assets being a couple of good scripts written by a blacklisted writer, Nick Lovell (Sean Sullivan). As Lovell's name couldn't be used, Finch persuaded young Michael Bedford (John Meillon), with one novel under his belt and full of starry optimism about turning it into a movie, to put his handle on the credits. So the young man acquired a sacktul of dollars, but lost his wife, who disapproved, and steeled his soul to even dirtier deeds.

Allan laced his script with low-down observation. Everything was in, from the switchboard operator who spied for the boss to the wicked use of concealed tape-recorders to get some blackmailing ammunition that might come in handy later on. In fact, too many crooked actions spoiled the brew, especially as the moral disintegration of the young writer was far too glib to ring true. In the end, the youngster was so expert at the shady business that he turned the tables on Finch. This made an effectively neat climax, but it showed up the emptiness of the package.

The piece was played for more than it was worth by a fine cast. Ted Allan himself made quite a serpent of Finch, lending him a beady eye and a humorless line in wit that seemed to fit. Harry H. Corbett, as the studio boss's son-in-law, stood out, and the rest of the company played with a brittle and nervous pace that suited the play and gave it considerable horsepower. The final kick was delivered by director William Kotcheff, who provided a brilliantly harsh frame for it. As a piece of dramatic merchandise, "The Money Makers" had a striking package, and it helped to hide some pretty dubious contents.

Television Playhouse

After a tepid start, Angus Cooper's "The Sergent's Tooth" settled into a satisfactory groove and made an above-average contribution to Associated-Rediffusion's "Television Playhouse." Its script was observant; the characters had edge, and the story, although not remarkable for its novelty, had heart.

Said tale concerned Diane (Lola Brooks), teenage daughter of Doris Mapp (Mona Washbourne). The girl wanted to marry a struggling

Omnibus

Four of the five avant garde dramatic pieces last Sunday (5) on "Omnibus" were successful. All of them, on this excursion into modern theatre, surprisingly, were comprehensible.

The sole holdout on interest was an early Eugene Ionesco work called "The Killer," not to be confused with Hemingway's "The Killers," which, as a short story and then as a motion picture, was purely naturalistic drama. "Fierce, Funny and Far Out" was the banner for his NBC-TV 5-6 p.m. hour, in which, successively, were presented 1938 and 1961 versions by William Saroyan of the same scene from "The Time of Your Life," "The Killer," the first scene from Samuel Beckett's "Krapp's Last Tape" and all of Edward Albee's "The Sand Box."

Saroyan provided a rather loose, pleasant narration to tie the various dramas together. The author summed up a barroom "love" scene between Mike Kellin and Nancy Wickwire as a "kind of boozy, dreamy yes" when it was written for 1939 audiences. He did a brief, funny remake of the same scene—with the same actors—for the psycho-oriented '60s, and labeled it a "nervous, frenetic, keyed-up no."

When Myron McCormick met "The Killer" (who to Ionesco was an idiotic, undiscriminating symbol of fate), he delivered a pretentiously windy monolog. Perhaps it wasn't all Ionesco's fault that it didn't succeed. McCormick seemed the kind of actor who reacted well to emotional situations but failed almost entirely in translating abstraction into dramatic form. Bad in "The Killer," he was excellent in the next scene as "Krapp," where if there were any messages, they were transmitted by the actor's face and body and not by his words.

Saroyan thought Ionesco wrote a deliberate "yes and no," and that Beckett authored a "clearcut no." These capsule summaries of avant garde writing were not fatuous. The novelist and playwright made his few words quite light perhaps but appropriate, making the "way-out" more tangible to observers.

The star piece of the afternoon was "The Sand Box." Sudie Bond was a chipper Grandma, left out by her selfish daughter to meet death in a sandbox. Death, was a lifeguard, essayed with perfectly moulded woodeness by John Granger. This new author's irreverence and sense of humor are facile, yet brainy.

Idea of doing such things on "Omnibus" added to its long track record of worthy challenges.

Play of the Week

Paul Vincent Carroll evokes some moments of lyrical magic in "The Old Foolishness," this week's "Play of the Week" on WNTA-TV, N. Y. His play has its faults, particularly in structure and partially in premise, but it has warmth, compassion and occasional flights of poetry that register a true sense of wistfulness and longing.

Moreover producer Lewis Freedman has dressed "The Old Foolishness" in a production that overcomes many of the script's limitations, thanks to perceptive direction by Leo Orenstein and a brilliant performance by Sally Ann Howes. Miss Howes succeeds in the difficult role of a girl who causes three brothers to fall in love with her; by the time she's through, she's got the audience feeling the same way. Her performance is utterly charming, natural and entirely believable.

Similarly, Albert Salmi drives home a solidly believable portrait of a stolid farmer whose imagination and emotions are suddenly lit up by Miss Howes. Salmi handles his transformation from sensible dourness to reckless animation with skill and conviction.

Behind these two key characterizations are excellent jobs by Jean Muir, as Salmi' shrewd and understanding mother; by Richard Moore and Mitch Ryan as his brothers, also in love with the girl; and by Fred Gwynne, as a light-headed and light-hearted friend of the family who believes in "the old foolishness," the legends of heroic deeds that abound in the Irish countryside.

"The Old Foolishness" is an Irish play, and while its best moments are Irish, so are some of its worst faults. Which is to say that Carroll's lyricism of love and longing are in the best Irish tradition and ring true. But the use of the Irish rebellion as a factor in the play and as the major factor in the unbelievable ending ring equally false.

It's a rewarding two hours, particularly for those in the mood to be carried away with Irish poetry. But it's not outsanding tragedy, as Carroll intended it to be. Chan.

The Twentieth Century

This CBS-TV series came up with a standout documentary last Sunday (5) on the work of Dr. Gordon Seagrave, the "Burma Surgeon" who has been directing a medical missionary center in the backwoods of that country for several decades. It was of particular relevancy to Pres. Kennedy's "Peace Corps" project, which could use Dr. Seagrave's career as a model for the type of dedication needed for working in underdeveloped countries.

The stanza was a simple photographic record of the work done in the mission to combat ignorance, disease and malnutrition in the Burmese backwoods. But it was also an eloquent and deeply moving tribute to Dr. Seagrave, a wartime hero during the American retreat from Burma in 1942 and an even greater hero in his daily labor to propagate the principles of modern medicine on a frontier of civilization.

Dr. Seagrave narrated most of the show himself and his dry, Yankee style, without a trace of affectation, gave a particularly sharp edge to the half-hour which showed him delivering a baby via a Caesarian section, playing baseball with his nursing staff and engaging in the routine of being a medical director. A very old man, Dr. Seagrave concluded with an explanation of his standing pledge to die on Burmese soil. Herm.

Dinah Shore Show

Dinah Shore did some Oscar electioneering on her outing for Chevy Sunday (5) over NBC-TV with a partisan plug for the Sammy Cahn-Jimmy Van Heusen tune "The Second Time Round" and her guest, Shirley Jones, who's been nominated in the "best supporting actress" category. The campaign by nominees for the coveted Academy Award is a murderous one with every one concerned in hot competition for plugs of any sort and it seems that it would be only proper if a variety show hostess assumed the role of a neutral observer and not risk the anger of the unmentioned contenders.

Aside from this mis-step the show had its usual bright and lilting flavor. Meredith Willson's "76 Trombones" opened the hour with a spark and his "I Ain't Down Yet" from "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" closed it with a bang. Willson was on hand to stir things up in his amiable folksy style and did well leading a group of "laughing people" as well as self-accomping on piano as he vocalized "Trouble" from "Music Man" and as a lead-in on "I Ain't Down Yet."

Also good in the musical vein was Miss Shore's "Tall Hope," Miss Jones' "Where Oh Where" and the two femmes on "El Sombrero." Latter tune and "Tall Hope," incidentally, are from the current Broadway tuner "Wildcat."

The show slipped slightly in the comedy vein. A running gag about agents fell flat and Jonathan Winters' routine about a lovesick turtle was not one of his better efforts.

CBS Reports

The administration of justice in general and the effect of news media and trial procedures in particular were the subject of a fascinating and provocative documentary in "A Real Case of Murder," last Thursday's (2) "CBS Reports."

Exec producer Fred Friendly and producer Jay McMullen focussed on the 1959 arraignment, trial and acquittal of 15-year-old Peter Manceri of Brooklyn, accused of beating and stomping a 65-year-old man to death in a park during a summer night. Entire case against the youth had been based on the testimony of his 13-year-old girlfriend, who charged him with the crime.

The program carefully reconstructed the events, revisiting the places in question with film units. Narrator Ed Murrow and producer-reporter McMullen talked with Brooklyn D.A. Edward Silver, who prosecuted the case, and defense attorney Abraham Brodsky, and with witnesses who countered the girl's testimony, as well as Manceri himself, and his parents, who helped reconstruct the story.

The principal points made by Murrow and McMullen were twofold—(1) news coverage accorded a person accused of a crime is often slanted and prejudicial; (2) the so-called "adversary" trial procedure tends more often to be a game of wits and strategy between attorneys than an honest effort to secure truth and justice, and Lord help the accused who hasn't the means to hire an adept defense counsel.

Murrow went over the news coverage of the arrest, arraignment and trial of Manceri carefully, indicating the one-sided nature of the reports of his arrest, many of which didn't even bother to carry his denial and one of which even dropped the customary precaution of listing the accusations and allegations. When bail was set for the youngster, one evening paper editorialized against it. And during the trial, evidence submitted for the defense was ignored in the reports and some papers even failed to report the acquittal. Radio and tv coverage was not exempt from the Murrow blast, and he and Friendly were to be commended for an implied criticism of their own CBS News, which via its WCBS-TV "Late News" was one of the offenders.

As to the second point, McMullen in his interviews with both counsels, punched away at the circumstances of the case and in particular at the practice by both sides of withholding evidence from the other until the trial itself for strategic reasons. McMullen's point—and neither lawyer was sure of the answer even in hindsight—was whether there would have been a trial at all had the D.A. been aware of the surprise

TIME FOR DECISION
With Dave Murray, narrator
Producer-Director-Writer: Dave Murray
30 Mins. Sun. 11:15-11:45 p.m.
WTAE, Pittsburgh (Live & film)

Like a page torn from the darkest days of the depression, Dave Murray presented here the most professional and thought provoking piece seen in Pitt in a long time. The harrowing details of a people without hope used an old woman as a central character who "in the midst of plenty is hungry. Now there's no room left for pride." Murray showed how unemployment is the most pressing issue in the country today and asked: "What are we going to do about it?"

Charles McGrath's camera faithfully followed the woman as she signed up for free food, trudged up long stairway to her humble room, and of the utter lack of hope in her future and of the thousands similarly hit in the Pittsburgh area.

Murray gave such alarming statistics as one community having 80% unemployed, a whole county with 30% of its working force out of work and no hope that the situation will change.

Desperate and unemployed workers were shown pleading for work, for food and care for their families and public officials saying that with automation and increased efficiency the jobs that these people had will never return. Murray offered no solution except drastic Government intervention. Most of the people shown no longer get Government jobless benefits and are living on the dry milk, flour, cornmeal, powdered eggs, lard and rice given to them by free food centers.

Many other deplorable situations were touched on within the Pittsburgh area but a show of this impact should be expanded to include the other depressed areas. No problem is closer to the hearts of Pittsburghers than unemployment and no problem seems more difficult to solve. This is a strong, hard hitting show that deserves a network showing, with the other areas given the same strong, sympathetic treatment. Lit.

JFK—REPORT NO. 1
With Frank McGee, David Brinkley, Ray Scherer, Sandor Vanocur, Martin Agronsky
Producer: Robert Northshield
Director: James Kitchell
60 Mins.; Tues. (28), 10 p.m.
PUREX
NBC-TV (tape)

Bowing a series of reports on the progress of the new administration in Washington, the first stanza set the stage with a profile of Pres. Kennedy, covering his early youth, his family, his entrance into politics, and his current associates. Using a group of photographs shot by Jacques Lowe and Life mag cameramen as its chief material, the show was an arresting, even if not fully integrated, study of the young President's personality.

The probing of still photos by the tv cameras, via intense close-ups and fast cutting, was used to dramatize the JFK image which has become familiar enough through regular motion picture clips. The photos not only captured the subtle and fleeting nuances of the Kennedy character, but the frozen stills imparted a monumental quality to the subject, as if the Kennedy story was already immortalized in a sculptured panel being scanned by the tv cameras.

Except for some shots going back to Kennedy's childhood, the show covered well-known ground. JFK was shown in various stages of his career, surrounded and cheered on by his family until he won the ultimate political prize. The sequences joining Kennedy with his group of advisers fully indicated the youthful and dynamic atmosphere now prevailing in Washington.

The immediate political problems facing Kennedy were discussed by a panel of four Congressional leaders from both sides of the aisle. This section of the show, moderated by Martin Agronsky, was highlighted by a sharp exchange between Democratic Senator Paul Douglas and Republican Senator Everett Dirksen over civil rights. NBC correspondents David Brinkley, Ray Scherer and Sandor Vanocur contributed personal and political estimates of the President's first 40 days in office. Frank McGee handled the overall narration ably. Herm.

SORROW ON THE ROCKS
Narrator-writer: John Raleigh
Director: George Walsh
60 mins., Thurs. 9:30 p.m.
WFIL-TV, Philadelphia

In terms of one man's bout with the bottle, "Sorrow on the Rocks" provided a sobering picture of alcoholism. The effect was hypoed by news director John Raleigh's stern and warning declaration.

Raleigh first offered a string of pertinent data: Alcoholism is the fourth greatest health menace; one out of every 13 males over 20 is an alcoholic; the cost to industry is an estimated $1,000,000,000 a year, etc.

Then he presented the case history of "Robert Branton," "a basically nice guy." The study of his boozy declension absorbed most of the hour-long session. There was no sermonizing atmosphere, however, just a procession of facts and recognizable situations.

There was the happy martini lunchtime, the choice of liquor instead of food, the first drink setting off the no-stop signal, the fights with the wife and business associates, the two-week binge winding up in a hospital emergency ward.

Harrowing but not hokey were the scenes of the drying-out process with the leather wrist straps, restraining sheets and tranquillizer injections. The hallucination state was realistically portrayed by local actor Robert Benson.

All paths finally lead to AA (Alcoholics Anonymous). But Raleigh commented that in the interest of reality, a lasting salvation cannot be predicted, either with AA or in private clinics.

He also stressed the fact that the Pennsylvania Liquor monopoly system collected $254,500,000 in 1959 sales, but only devoted a scant sum of this to the repair of the terrible damage resulting from drink. The broadcaster had a word for this situation—"criminal."

Program was a visually and verbally stimulating stanza in WFIL-TV's "Eye Witness" series. Top credits accrue to scripter and narrator Raleigh, director George Walsh and lensers Bill Lawrence and Jack Short. Gagh.

25 YEARS OF LIFE
With Bob Hope, emcee; President Kennedy, Mary Martin, Sid Caesar, Peggy Cass, Fredric March, others
Exec. Producer: Richard Linkroum
Producer: Robert Bendick
Director: Clark Jones
Writers: Gordon Auchincloss, Marvin Marx, George Foster, others
Composer-Conductor: Harry Sosnik
90 Mins.; Thurs. (2), 9:30 p.m.
LIFE
NBC-TV, from N.Y. (tape)
(Young & Rubicam)

Capsulizing the frantic 25-year span in history since the inception of Life magazine in 1936 into 90 minutes of tv viewing takes a bit of doing. At best it's a rough and tough assignment to encompass on such a "large as life" canvas the essence of a quarter-century: the fads and the fashions, the advances in science, the comedic topicalities and the tragedy of war as depicted through the photographic eyes of Henry R. Luce's magazine.

In the face of such potential production hazards, the Luce-sponsored "25 Years of Life" spectacular on NBC-TV Thursday night (2), for all its failings in imaginative conception and execution, sparked a few visual and audible treats.

Unfortunately there were lengthy lapses, which would have made it a tighter and a better show as a 60-minute entry, but the highlights spanning the Bob Hope intro to JFK closing compensated for the watching.

For all its sprawling components, the spec was brought off with a fair amount of finesse—thanks to the Dick Linkroum (exec producer), Bob Bendick (producer) Clark Jones (director) triumvirate that gave it some zip and paçing.

One could have easily dispensed with the back-to-back sequencing of Hope's alphabetical and photographical tribute to the femme stars, and the fashion parade, both of which slowed down the show at the midway mark. And the comicalities of the Sid Caesar-Peggy Cass "Average Family" brace of then-&-now skits were only of middlin' vintage, a throwback to early Caesar but hardly Caesar at his best. But fore and aft, "25 Years of Life" had its commendable moments.

Hope was in fine fettle, fast and sharp, for the standup quips based on the quarter-century of Life covers (with an assist from Luce in the audience.) There was some ingenious staging as the "scads of fads," from the Susie Q to the hula hoops, to the yo-yo and the trampolines, the jampacked telephone booths and down the line of eccentricities and crazes, were woven into an eye-filling choreographic pattern.

This was followed by the show's standout moments—a fascinating documentary in itself, as Fredric March narrated a 10-minute still (Life) photo pictorialization of the war. It had a searing impact, enhanced by an imaginative musical contribution by Harry Sosnik.

Billed as a "surprise guest," Mary Martin, a four-time Life "cover girl," came on to synthesize and glamorize the "Life in show biz" coverage. She and Hope parlayed their banter-&-song twosome into a delightful sequence.

President Kennedy's closing remarks were appropriately keyed to the "new frontiers" in communications and information.

It should have been a much better show, in the face of such production-time investiture, but in these days perhaps one can't quibble too seriously when even a half-hour of good entertainment is extracted. Rose.

'Columbus to B'way' As WBNS-TV Special

Columbus, O., March 7.

Though virtually every major city in the U.S. can lay claims to a hometown celebrity who's made good, WBNS-TV here took advantage of the fact to dispatch a film crew to N. Y. for a "From Columbus to Broadway" special on show biz luminaries who hail from Columbus.

Announcer Joe Holbrook, newsman Chet Long and the camera crew took on such talents as Earl Wilson, Dody Goodman, Eileen Heckart, Pat Wilson of "Fiorello," "Candid Camera" director Julio DiBennedeto and "Bye Bye Birdie" lyricist Lee Adams.

Station airs the special Thursday night (9).

Azcarraga Scans Future Horizons Of Television & Radio in Mexico

Mexico City, March 7.

Despite the "appearance" of a monopoly via its control of the three television channels here, the Emilio Azcarraga-Romulo O'Farrill Telesistima Mexicano combine should be continued for at least a year or two more "until television in Mexico has matured."

That's the considered opinion of Azcarraga, who said this week that until the set circulation increases sufficiently, until the three stations cah program on a fulltime basis, and until the outlets can sell important time periods currently going begging, the general structure of tv here should not be changed.

When tv in Mexico does mature, however, then "we ought to divide the O'Farrill interests and ours so as to discontinue the appearance of a monopoly," Azcarraga said. At that time too, it will be necessary to consider moving two additional channels, 7 and 9, into Mexico City. It's currently unfeasible to bring these channels in because their only effect, would be to open the market in light of the inability of the current three channels to program fulltime for additional dubbed westerns from the U. S., Azcarraga said.

Mexican tv is already walking a thin line as concerns Government interference, Azcarraga indicated. Total of 37 dubbed series a week are being telecast in Mexico City, primarily on Channel 4, and they are the subject of constant complaints from organizations and Government bureaus. "Our arguments in defense... is the great number of live programs we have," Azcarraga said, these principally on Channel 2. Great majority of the top 10 shows are the live locally produced stanzas.

Azcarraga was vigorous in his denial that Telesistima constitutes a monopoly, pointing out there's no pressure on agencies or sponsors and that each station operates independently. But when the time is right, he admits, there will have to be a separation with the O'Farrill interests. He states there has been no "difficulty of any kind" with O'Farrill.

Azcarraga is currently in the process of establishing a two-way program exchange with the U. S. via sale of five-a-week Spanish-language soap operas to the U. S. He's already sold one series in Los Angeles, to KHJ-TV, and the station has indicated it wants a second. He admits that "we are lacking about $1,000 weekly in our budget to produce these soap operas efficiently," but once a market is established for them in Central and South America as well as cities such as Miami, San Antonio, Chicago and N. Y., "we shall be in a position to produce them more skillfully and with no apologies.

He sees such program sales as "precisely what may serve to avoid any Governmental regulations which could be imposed on the importation of dubbed programs from the States if we are able to point out that we have made sales of four or five soap operas weekly in the U. S." As of the moment, Azcarraga and his associates have clamped the lid on any additional purchases of dubbed shows from the U. S. for fear of Government regulations. But if they succeed in setting up a two-way flow, he believes then the pressure will ease considerably.

MON. BIG DRAMA NITE ON BBC-TV

London, March 7.

Latest play in the BBC-commercial networks battle for audiences is a switch in the BBC program pattern. New scheme makes Monday a big drama night on BBC with a live transmission of a play instead of the recorded series, hitherto a Monday highspot. The recorded series are being shuttled to Saturday, replacing the recorded plays and films which used to be shown on alternate weeks.

Said a BBC spokesman: "The changes are being made as an experiment. But this will not mean that fewer cinema films are to be shown. They will be dropped from the Saturday evening programs, but they will be shown at other times."

NET's Scoop on JFK's Projected Peace Corps; Slated for 'Prospects'

National Education Television Network (NET) snared an exclusive taping session with President John F. Kennedy, as well as scoring a virtual beat on the rest of the industry in terms of being on the spot for a depth treatment of a major story.

Story is the President's projected Peace Corps, which will be the subject of the next Eleanor Roosevelt "Prospects of Mankind" monthly stanza. NET, which produces "Prospects," had set the topic and a White House taping session before the President announced his executive order creating the Corps last Wednesday (1).

The following day, Thursday, as per earlier arrangements, Mrs. Roosevelt appeared at the White House—her first visit there since her own tenancy—along with NET's Jack White and Metropolitan Broadcasting exec v.p. Bennett Korn for a 10-minute taping with the President. Taping was done by Met's Washington station, WTTG, which like its Gotham outlet, WNEW-TV, carries the show.

The program, titled "The Peace Corps: What Form Will It Take," will air March 12 at 8-9 on WNEW-TV. Besides the President, other guests will be Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Prof. Samuel Hayes, both among the original Peace Corps proponents, and Prof. Senteca Kajubi of the U. of East Africa in Uganda.

Lotsa Hoopla For WSB's 39th Anni

Atlanta, March 7.

WSB, owned and operated by Atlanta Newspapers, Inc., publishers of a.m. Constitution and p.m. Journal also WSB-TV and FM, is celebrating its 39th anniversary this month.

Oldest mill below Mason & Dixon Line, WSB is known as "Voice of theh South" in Dixie radio circles, so station is devoting whole month to observing its birthday.

First special—and ambitious—event came Sunday (5) when station presented a two-hour production of William Shakespeare's "The Merry Wives of Windsor," performed by 19 players from Theater Atlantic, Inc.

Jerry Vandeventer, WSB's Nightbeat director, produced "Merry Wives" for airing, narrated it and inserted the music and sound effects. Several WSB staffers all hams at heart and with thespic talent to back it up) had prominent roles in the cast.

Production was taped at WSB while cast still was fresh from presenting same play as one of five during its 1960-61 season. While there was an intermission between the two acts, commercials were conspicuous by their absence during show's 120-minute time.

Contests are being held by station with cash prizes to whet interest of listeners, of which Atlanta has plenty.

Vandeventer's "Nightbeat" program, a melange of music, comedy, patter, spot news reports from radio cars prowling city, interviews and just about anything else that comes to Vandeventer's fertile imaginative mind, plans to air special programs from radio shows of the past.

There will be an all-day celebration scheduled for real birthday (15) when such noted guests and personalities as Chet Huntley, Robert Shaw, Gordon MacRae, Mitch Miller, Guy Lombardo, Eddie Cantor, George Jessel, Jack Benny and a host of others will salute the station via taped segments.

Indianapolis — Ethel Freeman, formerly with WFBM—Radio and WFBM-TV, Indianapolis, as promotion manager and publicity director, has been named promotion and publicity director of the Indianapolis Indians.

Beer-Drinking Murderer Cues Rheingold Pullout On 'Late News' Com'l

Rheingold Beer exercised its rights of one-time cancellation last Tuesday night (28) on WCBS-TV's "The Late News" in N. Y. The occasion was the arrest that day of Fred J. Thompson, confessed sex murderer of four-year-old Edith Kiecorius.

Brewery pulled out because it didn't want to be associated with coverage of a story in which Thompson's beer-drinking played a prominent role. Fact was that he confessed he was drunk, largely on beer, when he committed the crime, and several empty beer cans were found in his room. Topper was some CBS Newsfilm used that night which showed a police crime lab expert dusting a Rheingold can for fingerprints. The newsreel shot was a medium shot, so that the lettering was barely visible.

Spokesman at Foote, Cone & Belding, the Rheingold agency, said that it was the contractual prerogative of any news sponsor to cancel out of a single show at his discretion, whenever in his judgment a particularly heinous or calamitous story may militate against his product. He said the nature of the crime itself, along with the unfortunate association of the murder with beer, not only Rheingold but the entire brewing industry itself, were responsible for the Rheingold decision. Apart from the news, one other spot on another station was cancelled, he said, but other commercials were kept on.

Rheingold sponsors "The Late News" on a three-two rotating pattern, taking sponsorship three times one week, twice the next, and alternating with Blue Cross as sponsor. Tuesday, night of the capture of Thompson, was Rheingold's scheduled night.

Coincidentally, the week before "The Late News" had coverage hearings in Albany which were critical of Blue Cross' fees. It so happened that the sponsor on that night was Blue Cross itself. But it didn't cancel.

Scott Paper Still Yens Robt. Young After Six Years

Scott Paper will extend a relationship of some six years next fall when it picks up sponsorship of the new Robert Young series on CBS-TV. Scott for five years bankrolled the Young-Gene Rodney "Father Knows Best" and this year is sponsoring a portion of the "Father" repeats.

Still undecided is whether Scott will carry sponsorship of the new Young show, in which he's also partnered with Rodney, on an every-week basis or will sell off half to another bankroller. If Scott decides to take only half, General Foods has first crack at the alternate week, per its agreement with CBS reached when it renewed Danny Thomas and Andy Griffith for fall.

Oddly enough, the Scott sponsorship deal for the Young show did not come about so much through its history with "Father Knows Best" as through the coincidence that the new Young show will go into the same time period as the one occupied all those years by "Father," Monday at 8:30.

When "Father" went off the air (first run) at the end of last season, Scott retained the Monday at 8:30 timeslot and installed "Bringing Up Buddy." That show didn't work out as well as Scott would have liked, and won't be back next fall. Meanwhile, as part of the power play to keep the General Foods business, CBS-TV decided to install Young's new show in the 8:30 slot next fall to provide a powerful leadin for the Thomas and Griffith shows.

According to protocol, when a show is installed in a time period "owned" by a longstanding sponsor, that sponsor is offered first crack at the show. CBS offered, and Scott was only too delighted to resume the relationship with Young & Rodney.

VARIETY - ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top ten network shows on a local level and offers a rating study in depth of the top ten syndicated shows in the same particular market. This week ten different markets are covered.

In the syndicated program listings of the top ten shows, rating data such as the average share of audience, coupled with data as to time and day of telecasting competitive programming in the particular slot, etc., is furnished. Reason for detailing an exact picture of the rating performance of syndicated shows is to reflect the true rating strength of particular series. Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations and/or advertisers to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY. Coupled with the rating performance of the top ten network shows on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every tv market in the U. S.

(*) ARB's November, 1960 survey covered a two week period. Syndicated shows sharing one of the two weeks with an alternating or special program could not be properly judged for comparative performance. Therefore, November data will be limited to those syndicated shows which played both weeks.

Morning's Become Electric

Among the more searching questions man has asked himself down through the ages have been "Quo vadis?", "Why did I take that last drink?" and "Who?" (from "Sunny").

But perhaps the most poignant query of all was posed by the weary-eyed aborigine who first asked, "How can there be anything good about any day that starts with getting up in the morning?"

Unfortunately for that heavy-lidded philosopher, he left this mortal coil a bit too soon. If he were still around, he might well be one of the many million televiewers for whom the zombie-like limbo of wake-up-time has become one of the most electric, exciting chunks of the day.

We refer, of course, to the impact the "Today" show has had on its audiences during the years since its debut (long ago and Garroway) in January, 1952. Never before have viewers' mornings been so rich with the images and sounds of vital people and attention-grabbing events.

Commercially speaking, the early history of this early-morning venture was woeful. Initially, the program had a line-up of but 27 stations, and only one sponsor (Kiplinger's "Changing Times") had the temerity to buy even a soupçon of time on the show.

Currently, no fewer than 148 stations are carrying the program, and during last year alone, 80 different advertisers were happy to participate in its sponsorship.

With Garroway coming on at 7 a.m. and the hypnotic Jack Paar holding forth until 1 a. m., we are giving the public a full network service unique in the medium. Matter of fact, a truly conscientious NBC viewer can start his day an hour before Garroway, by watching "Continental Classroom" at six.

JUST WHAT are the ingredients that make Dave Garroway's "Today" so bright an example of NBC's full network service? Perhaps the best answer is a quick look at the contents of a fairly typical 7 to 9 a.m. session—say, the show that was presented exactly two weeks ago today.

There were, first of all, the frequent time checks, weather reports and newscasts. These are daily "musts," for "Today" is intelligently aware that many viewers tune in for just those things, althought much of its audience does stay with the show for its entire two-hour run.

For those viewers who like nothing better than a good argument—particularly before that first cup of coffee—there was a debate between the University of Illinois' Dr. Heinz von Foerster (speaking from Chicago) and Princeton's Professor Ansley Cole (talking from New York) on the implications of the "population explosion."

From Washington that same day came a lively interview of Senate Minority Leader Everett Dirksen by both Martin Agronsky (in the nation's capital) and host Garroway, in New York.

"Today's" Manhattan studio was the setting for most of the morning's action. Mel Torme was on hand to sing several thousand of Harold Arlen's song hits, and the composer himself dropped around to chat with Dave about "Happy with the Blues," the recently published book on Arlen's life.

Still another interview was conducted from the same studio by Jack Lescoulie, who looked about as tall as Manners-the-butler as he sat alongside towering Wilt Chamberlain and tossed a few questions to the Philadelphia Warriors' star about pro basketball.

There was lots more that morning, including a couple of swim-suited lovelies who represented Florida and who just happened to have a basket of artificial grapefruits with them when they arrived at the studio (doesn't everybody?).

NBC believes that such touches leaven the seriousness of most people's mornings. But even a carload of bathing beauties—heavenly thought—would not have altered the fact that "Today" is essentially a program of news and commentary, one of the most important such shows in all television.

THE STAFF'S impressive string of news beats over the seasons is really something to crow about. It was first on the air with films of the Hungary revolt and the Andrea Doria sinking; it brought us the first films-with-sound of the disembarkation of the Santa Maria passengers at Recife; and it had the first live coverage of the rescue work that followed the tragic Rikers Island plane crash of two winters ago.

As swift-moving a production as it is, "Today" nevertheless finds time to explore certain subjects at great length when length is called for. Garroway has presided over in-depth (meaning two to ten-hour) treatment of mental health, geriatrics, teenagers, missiles and dozens of other provocative topics.

Never a show to stand still for very long, "Today" was also the first regular U. S. network TV program to be taped in Europe. In the spring of 1959 it was televised from Paris for a week (who can forget Brigitte Bardot's reciting of Shakespeare from an Eiffel Tower terrace?), and last year it made a similar jaunt to Rome.

THE 12,000 GUESTS who've visited the program over the past nine years have been newsmakers from just about every field of endeavor—politics, science, fine arts, journalism, education, industry, show-business and you-name-it.

Among the lofty personages who've appeared—at least once—are such as President Kennedy and Cabinet; Ernest Hemingway; the late Frank Lloyd Wright; Dr. Ralph Bunche; Elizabeth Taylor and Carl Sandburg. The white-maned Sandburg, we'll have you know, refers to Garroway as "the grand old man of television."

It goes almost without saying that the most important unifying factor in "Today"—a show of myriad elements—is Dave himself. Moving through the show's diverse phases, he's the catalyst who loafs like a gentle bear from set to set, a guy whose vast scope of knowledge insures his ease with just about any guest coming before "Today's" cameras.

The fact that he accomplishes as much as he does each day with such apparent ease is, possibly, his strongest asset, although his slow-gaited, loose-jointed demeanor does come in for loads of kidding.

Comedian Morey Amsterdam may have spoken the final word on that subject when he guested on the ninth anniversary show a couple of months back. " 'Today' is actually a one-hour show," said Morey. "It's just that it takes Dave two hours to do it."

Which would be all right with us even if true. A hyperthyroid, human-dynamo type may have a place on the TV screen, but, please, not at 7 in the morning.

VARIETY-ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top ten network shows on a local level and offers a rating study in depth of the top ten syndicated shows in the same particular market. This week ten different markets are covered.

In the syndicated program listings of the top ten shows, rating data such as the average share of audience, coupled with data as to time and day of telecasting competitive programming in the particular slot, etc., is furnished. Reason for detailing an exact picture of the rating performance of syndicated shows is to reflect the true rating strength of particular series. Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations and/or advertisers to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY. Coupled with the rating performance of the top ten network shows on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every tv market in the U. S.

(*) ARB's November, 1960 survey covered a two week period. Syndicated shows sharing one of the two weeks with an alternating or special program could not be properly judged for comparative performance. Therefore, November data will be limited to those syndicated shows which played both weeks.

Burns, McGannon, Aubrey Back U.S. Aid on Teach-vee

Washington, March 7.

Senate Commerce Committee is expected to approve shortly legislation to provide each state and the District of Columbia up to $1,000,000 in federal grants to set up educational television stations.

The bill, by Senate Commerce Chairman Warren Magnuson (D-Wash.), has sailed through the Senate twice before, only to die on the House side.

The Commerce group held two days of hearings on the measure last week and collected a series of rousing endorsements from both commercial and educational telecasters.

But most unusual support came from Federal Communications Commission Rosel Hyde, who parted company with the rest of his colleagues to go on record for use of federal funds to aid teach-vee.

The formal FCC statement stuck to traditional policy and, while supporting the "objectives" of the Magnuson bill, said the question of whether federal moneys should be used was a policy determination for Congress.

Hyde said he felt "impelled to urge" use of federal funds with this explanation: "I am optimistic enough about the possibilities of educational tv to believe that it can even educate the people to demand of commercial television something better than a surfeit of cowboys, private eyes and giveaways. This is not to indicate an expectation of full and immediate change but rather of immediate progress.

"There is a world competition of cultures. If we had on educational tv service in every good-sized city of the U. S., this would certainly enhance our image in the world and assist in the fight against the communist system."

RCA president John L. Burns, a former teacher at Harvard and Lehigh, testified that teach-vee experiments have shown that "tv has the capability to spark a massive upgrading in the quality of American education, with the maximum development of individual potentialities at all levels, for a cost we as a nation can afford—a cost, in fact, which we cannot afford NOT to pay."

CBS-TV prexy James T. Aubrey Jr. said educational tv needs the initial boost provided by federal grants. Once the public sees it, support will automatically be forthcoming. He said: "The public doesn't quite know what educational tv is and what it can do. They are unwilling to give this unknown infant their support. When an educational channel comes on the air, however, the picture changes."

Westinghouse Broadcasting president Donald H. McGannon said the Magnuson measure is needed to help inform and educate the public. "The education of our adult population has never been more vital. It must and can be carried out by television and radio and any other media of information we can devise."

Other support came from National Education Assn., American Assn. of University Women, various educational tv associations, reps of individual educational tv stations, and public school officials.

Frontier's New But The Problems Are Old

By ART WOODSTONE

Frontiers everywhere are always jerky going, but the bumps in the "New Frontier" are just about killing the networks.

And the word "pool," which has had many connotations throughout time, is plain dirty these days.

In one way or another, the tv networks, particularly those of NBC and CBS, have had their run-ins with the present Administration, not because President Kennedy is averse to coverage but, in part, because his staff is not quite sure how to handle the needs and demands of radio and television.

Once upon a time, the networks fought each other over who was going to operate a tv pool and how it was going to be paid for. If such matters are still of concern to NBC, CBS or ABC, they have been driven to the background by the strife occuring now with the Administration and between the webs and indie stations of the United States.

In one week alone, the networks have suffered two woolly mix-ups in pool tv coverage, and a third situation was negotiated in that period with government that suggests further trouble.

(1) N.Y. radio indies banded together on Wednesday last to chew out NBC-TV for not providing unlimited and unrestricted tape on Kennedy's news conference that morning. Confusion preceded the objections by the stations and confusion persists about how to handle pooled coverage of this increasingly interesting weekly event.

(2) On Friday (3), the two pilots from the RB-47, who the Russians made prisoners and then released in time for Kennedy's first news conference in January, held their own first news confab from their military station in Topeka.

Art Sylvester, an assistant secretary in the Department of Defense, made one kind of ruling about coverage and then had to make another under pressure from CBS and still another under later pressure from NBC.

(3) The potential trouble area has to do with the televised coverage of the "man shoot" (rumored to be in late April). Who receives the feed, for which an NBC team will handle the poll cameras, and what will be covered seem to be reasonably clear, but, considering these other experiences, it seems wisest to rely on to an old platitude: "There's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip."

All This and Eichmann

Then there's one matter that has nothing to do with the domestic administration, but has a lot to do with the administration in Israel. That's l' affaire Eichmann. He goes on trial next month. After weeks and weeks of negotiation with Capital Cities Broadcasting, which managed to tie up the courtroom for its own tv cameras through an arrangement with the Israeli government, the American tv networks still haven't reached a point of understanding as to precisely what it will cost them to take the feed from Capital Cities (a broadcasting chain in which Lowell Thomas is a major stockholder) or for that matter whether Capital Cities should, on principal, be considered the exclusive source or merely the pool unit for the entire industry.

The Kennedy news conference squawk by a group of N.Y. radio stations, among them WNYC, WMCA, WMGM, WINS and, most particularly, WNEW grew out of rules unilaterally imposed on the Presidential news conference by NBC, which last week was responsible for the pool feed out of Washington. NBC management, reacting to objections from the network's affiliates, laid down the rules to protect itself, in brief, exec veep David Adams and the station relations department of the web said that while they would readily supply sound or tv tapes of the conference to any station asking for them but the stations must (a) promise to air them when NBC airs them; (b) that stations could use no excerpts of NBC's feed, and (3) the tapes could not be repeated later on by local stations.

Leading to this was an event a few weeks earlier during another NBC White House pool feed when (according to the web), KTTV, a Los Angeles independent tv station, accepted the Kennedy tapes and "deliberately" delay their showing until the NBC owned & operated station in the same city was about to show one of its own local stanzas. This move by KTTV drew from the NBC station there the charge that the indie was trying to split the audience and, worse, split it with material graciously supplied by the o&o's parent company.

Whether NBC can make its rules stick through another pool feed is considered, in most quarters, highly doubtful. Actually, the networks and the indie stations are works and the indie stations have already sat down and agreed to unrestricted feeds to the N.Y. radio indies.

Presently, CBS takes the reported position that, when it does the pool work, it will feed any radio or tv station where there is not already CBS coverage, on the grounds that if anyone really wishes to see Kennedy answer the weekly barrage of questions he'll tune in when it's shown by the CBS affiliate. Only ABC appears to feel that they'll feed the "New Frontier" to any station anywhere, at any time—provided they don't have to pick up the extra cost involved.

As to the war between Administration and networking, this is really wild. Pierre Salinger, the President's news secretary who, like anyone else, is feeling his way through this new weekly experience with mass audiences, has set some rules (not always clear, insofar as the webs are concerned) about when a conference can be shown on the air. Last time, the conference by Kennedy was to be delayed until the actual event had concluded. It was delayed, but not without a great deal of trouble first:

This segment of "Tales on the New Frontier" began when the Washington City News Service, a UPI subsidiary, allegedly jumped the gun a few weeks back and began filing material on Kennedy some 10 minutes before he had finished answering queries from the assembled journalists in the New State Department auditorium.

White House reportedly blew its stack, leaving soot on the well-painted walls at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. Salinger's first rule thereafter was to make sure that at least radio and tv wouldn't cheat when the President wanted a conference d.b.'d Networks complied with his request to have the conference shot live in Washington and have the affair transmitted to N. Y. where it would be taped. This would insure Kennedy the required time lag.

But somebody in the Administration, apparently one of the more cynical federal appointees, suggested, to ensure the webs didn't cheat by feeding tapes before Kennedy left the press room, that a Secret Service man be assigned to each of the network tape-making rooms in N. Y. Somebody else thought this was a bit rash, so the tactic was shelved.

A Peek at Topeka

When the two pilots began talking at 3 p.m. on Friday in Topeka everything seemed hunky-dory, but beforehand there was nothing but trouble. Defense Department told NBC News a day earlier that no live or taped tv coverage would be allowed of the former Russian prisoners, that only radio tapes and films (to be delayed until 6 p.m.) could be made.

But CBS soon thereafter was hovering about Topeka in one of its remote live camera units, awaiting further word from the high command in N. Y. which had at the same time sent instructions to its Washington boys to complain to the White House over the restriction against making tv tapes of the RB-47 fliers. Complain they did, and the White House paid heed. So, as CBS was about to move its camera truck in for a one way kill on Friday, NBC, which found out about it, also complained: since NBC had been told nix the day before and consequently didn't have time to prepare its own taped coverage, CBS must be made to open the doors (via another pool) to all broadcast and telecast comers, including NBC.

At the "man shoot" from Cape Canaveral next month, NBC will serve as pool master for everyone. That the network will attempt to enforce the same rules that got it into trouble with the indies last week is not thought likely. In this case NBC will have its hands full just following the rules set down by the Government. The network is not being allowed to show live some of the preparations to hurtle man into space. Washington, understandably, is not keen on graphically demonstrating a rocket failure, particularly in this case where the life of a human being is involved.

However, NBC may begin its live coverage the moment the tail fins "show fire"—the indication that the first stage will be a success. Any aberration by tv—and whoom! More trouble.

President Kennedy has lately appeared on Dave Garroway's NBC program, on "25 Years of Life" and CBS' tribute to Robert Frost. Evidently he wants to be seen and heard and, equally evident, the public wants to see and hear him. "Stations are more interested in the President today than they were in any other President," a network official observed last week.

"Kennedy's making news, so I guess we've got to put up with a little trouble to make sure we get him."

CBC Cracks Down, Won't Countenance Two-Timing Affils

Ottawa, March 7.

Canadian television stations tied into the tv web of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. will find themselves in big trouble if they also try to pick up shows from another network. A second video web is possible, and it's also possible that network will offer a tempting cash to non-CBC stations: the biggest football series in Canada, the Big Four skein. Toronto's new tver CFTO-TV, outbid CBC for tv rights to the Big Four games and it is expected the station will span the airers into a network.

However, CBC will have none of it. A CBC official said the corporation would block any attempt by any of its web affiliates to get live shows from any other network. CBC felt "double affiliation" would destroy a network's identity. Last year CBC negotiated two-year contracts with every tv station in Canada except the new "second" stations located in cities already served by CBC.

For a station outside the CBC network to hook up with CBC affiliates would necessitate, first, establishment of another network. This would require wire or microwave arrangements via the Bell Telephone Co., or Canadian Pacific Railways or Canadian National Railways, and all this would have to have the okay of the Board of Broadcast Governors. Even with a new web setup, each CBC affiliate wanting to switch to the new web would have to get approval of both CBC and the BBG.

WTCN-TV Gets Minn. Twin Ballcasts; CBS Wouldn't Preempt WCCO

Minneapolis, March 7.

Refusal of CBS to relinquish evening time slots forced WCCO-TV, web's Twin Cities affiliate, to withdraw from its agreement to televise Minnesota Twins American league baseball games. WCCO Radio and WCCO-TV had been granted exclusive radio-tv rights by the ball club and sponsor Hamm's Beer.

While WCCO Radio retained broadcast rights for the full season schedule, the tv contract was switched to WTCN-TV which recently lost its tieup with ABC. In unique arrangement, 50 night and weekend games will be televised by WTCN-TV on a simulcast basis with WCCO Radio. Bob Wolff and Ray Scott will divide announcing chores on the simulcasts with longtime WCCO sportscaster Halsey Hall handling sideline observations.

Met's Proxy Statement: Sullivan, Korn 70G

Probable distinction of being the highest-salaried general manager of a single radio station in the U. S. goes to Jack Sullivan, v.p.-g.m. of WNEW, N. Y. On the Metropolitan Broadcasting Corp. prexy statement mailed last week to stockholders, Sullivan's salary is listed at $70,000 annually.

Other officers of Metropolitan listed are prexy and chairman John Kluge, whose 1960 remuneration was $99,519; Bennet H. Korn, exec v.p. for tv operations and g.m. of WNEW-TV, $70,000; and Benedict Gimbel Jr., v.p., $35,000. Gimbel, who sold WIP, Philadelphia, to Metropolitan, has an employment and consultant pact which runs to the beginning of 1970 and calls for payment of $25,000 annually during the consultancy term which begins at his option or on or after Jan. 1, 1962.

Second highest paid officer is a non-broadcaster, Lawrence Odell, prexy of the Foster & Kleiser outdoor advertising division, who earned $70,833 in 1960 but whose contract calls for future annual compensation of $85,000.

George Putnam Cleared In L.A. Defamation Trial

Los Angeles, March 7.

George Putnam, KTTV newscaster, was cleared last week of defamation charges brought by tax attorney James J. Arditto and Noah Dietrich, who formerly headed the Howard Hughes empire, in which they collectively asked $2,264,500 in damages.

Complaint issued from two KTTV newscasts Jan. 24, 1958. Originally Assemblyman Bruce Allen, Tidelands Oil chairman; Miles Laboratories and Bond Clothing Stores were co-defendants, but were dismissed from action on payment of $21,513 last September.

Plaintiffs charged remarks made by Putnam on two shows led to dissolution of Arditto's law firm

Welk SRO for '61-'62 Despite Dodge Bowout

Lawrence Welk may have lost Dodge for next season, but he's back in business for sure. J. B. Williams (Geritol, Sominex, etc.), which now has the other half, has decided to become full sponsor come fall in the program's 9 to 10 p.m. Saturday time.

For the summer, however, ABC-TV has gotten Sinclair Oil to take the Dodge half. Williams picks up the full tab in September.

RCA's Dividend

RCA declared its 25 cent per share dividend on common stock. It's payable April 24 to holders of record by March 13.

The usual 87½ cents were declared by the manufacturer-broadcaster on preferred stock, payable July 1 to holders by June 5.

BARTLEY'S DISSENT ON KNIGHT'S BUY

Washington, March 7.

Federal Communications Commissioner Robert T. Bartley has voted against sale of a Manchester, N.H., radio station on grounds the purchaser had used combination discount ad rates as a competitive tool.

Bartley's dissent was directed against the $327,500 sale of WGIR by Northeast Broadcasting Corp. to Norman Knight. Knight owns WHEB, Portsmouth, WTSV, AM and FM, Claremont, WTSL, Hanover—all N.H., and WEIM, Fitchburg, Mass.

Bartley explained his dissent: "I believe the charging of lower rates for additional stations, on which advertising is purchased results in a competitive advantage which is unfair to the operator of a single station in such market or markets."

ATV Bumps 'Cheyenne,' Sets 'Gunslinger' Deal

London, March 7.

Associated Television toppers Val Parnell and Lew Grade, just back from trip to U.S., have returned with a big hooray for "Gunslinger," CBS hourlong western skein, with which Associated is replacing "Cheyenne." Parnell and Grade were so impressed with a private view of "Gunslinger" arranged for them by CBS that they decided to slot it into the Associated program pronto. First show goes out on March 18.

In London, Parnell also revealed that Associated is replacing "Maverick," another of their longtime western, with "Outlaws."

Said Parnell: "Everything went fine on our U.S. trip except that Lew got hit on the head by a small avalanche of snow from a New York skyscraper. Luckily he was wearing a British bowler hat.

Some seconds count for more than others. An average commercial minute on the CBS Radio Network during 1960 drew 28 per cent more homes than on the second network... 117 per cent more homes than on the third network... 120 per cent more homes than on the fourth! And this year, with a new expanded program schedule — more news, information, special features and sports, plus the most popular personalities on any network — you can count on CBS Radio for even bigger audiences. In all network radio — whether your commercial is 30 seconds in one show or you buy a saturation campaign — every second counts most on bids acceptable and retain its tv and radio franchise.

Also very active in the picture is Elv A. Landau, former board chairman of NTA. He, too, wants to program the station on a high cultural level and if at all possible, maintain the same WNTA-TV management and production team. Landau has opened offices in the Times-Life building and is understood to be working toward gathering a group of indie stations under a programming umbrella, with WNTA-TV as the spearhead. It could not be ascertained whether Landau to date has made a definite money offer for the station.

WNTA-TV, meanwhile, is operating as a going outlet, with management currently engaged in mapping plans for next season.

Educational group is headed by Howard C. Sheperd, board chairman of the Greater New York Fund and retired chairman of the First National City Bank. The Sheperd group is working in conjunction with National Educational and Television Center (NET). Spokesman for the educational group poopooed reports that it would not have adequate finances for programming the station if the channel was won by etv. Spokesman indicated that there are monies already there for the taking from foundations, business, and other sources if and when the station is acquired. NET further stated that it would carry its fight to acquire the station right up to the Federal Communications Commission.

As to the FCC moves to popularize the UHF spectrum and the FCC UHF experiment in N.Y., the etv spokesman said etv welcomed the moves. New York, though, he pointed out, isn't a smaller burg than Pittsburgh or Oklahoma City, which has both UHF and VHF educationaly stations in operation, with the UHF stations confined to special "in school" and other specialized uses.

With the fur flying over the possible sale of WNTA-TV, Newark-N.Y., station v.p. Ted Cott is off to Europe for an eight-day visit to London and Paris.

Cott, if the station is acquired by either Landau or Susskind, or other commercial interests, probably would join the new management team. Cott has had a long association with Landau, former NTA board chairman, and he's a cousin of Susskind and has worked closely with him in the past on "Open End" and "Play of the Week."

VARIETY-ARB's weekly chart offers a day-by-day analysis of the top feature evening slots in a particular market. On Saturdays and Sundays, daytime feature slots compete with nighttime pix periods for designation as the top feature slot of the day. The analysis is confined to the top rated feature slots in the ARB measured period, broken down by days in the week. The ARB measured period usually covers three or four weeks. Other data such as the time slot and average share of audience is furnished. Top competition and competitive ratings also are highlighted.

TV's Foggy Notions

television grew up, and stopped using the accent gambit as an excuse for timidity.

The fact of the matter is that in 1961 television will be established as a world entertainment medium—not just a domestic attraction. Both from a programming and economic standpoint, it has to get a fix on other areas than Hollywood, to release the pressure on the dwindling talent and idea pool. Such an expansion will also take the bite off many advertisers who are fighting a losing battle with the cost per thousand theory.

Television has had a right to a certain amount of nervous tremors over European production. So had the movies. They didn't start with "Ben-Hur."

Most of television's teething problems in overseas production can be traced to two factors—inexperienced personnel, and rushing into production without having properly cased the layout. For example basing a production in Rome, where there aren't enough English speaking actors to support a series. Or setting up shop in Holland, which is excluded from quota. Or sending over a producer who has never been off the lot before, and didn't realize that in Europe a producer is also expected to be an administrator.

In the past year, however, most of the weaknesses in overseas production have been shored up. Technically and artistically it is superb. The acting pool is adequate, but with the heavy motion picture schedule, young leads are hard to come by.

Writing talent, on the other hand, has suddenly become available. Previously the top writers had looked upon television as a slightly wayward stepchild of the cinema, and refused to have anything to do with it. Now they even ask for name credits.

Ideas and properties are plentiful. Directors are shaving their beards. And if it's lookers you are looking for, I give you two words—London-Rome!

Production costs are about the same. You just get more for your money. The gimmick is selling the show overseas as quota. That's where the savings are.

But television production overseas, just as with the motion pictures, still demands American know-how. To set the style, pace and continuity. American creative talents are indispensable.

And when we say creative talents, we mean "pros." European production is not for amateurs, diletantes, characters looking for preproduction expenses, and co-financing promoters.

Actually this group seems to have taken a powder. Some say, the nouvelle vague wafted them over to France. Right now it's chic to be plugging an offbeat French director, instead of a new Bardot. Anyway, they aren't around anymore. But a lot of talent is, and if television wants to play it smart, it would appear that taking the lead of the motion pictures—i.e. bagging some talent, and allocating a few sous for overseas lensing, would be in order.

NET's Opera Tapes

Metropolitan Opera Guild and the National Educational Television & Radio Centre this week started vidtape production of three programs for presentation by affiliates of the National Educational Television network. Production began Sunday (5) on excerpts from Mozart's operatic comedy, "Cosi Fan Tutte," which has been playing New York schools in an English version under auspices of the Lincoln Centre Student Program.

Stage director is Rose Landver, head of Hunter College Opera Workshop. Curtis Davis, program associate for NET, is producing the tele version.

JFK Sends in Murrow Nomination

Washington, March 7.

President Kennedy formally sent to the Senate today (Tues.) the nomination of (CBS newsman) Edward R. Murrow as director of the U. S. Information Agency. Confirmation of the appointment by the Senate is required.

The nomination was transmitted some six weeks after the President announced his intention of bringing Murrow into the Government. There was no explanation for the delay, although it is known that the FBI is running behind time in clearing Presidential appointees, due to the large number involved with the change of administrations.

Also today, Kennedy officially nominated Donald M. Wilson, former Time-Life Washington writer and a Kennedy campaign aide last fall, as deputy U.S.I.A. director, and Paul Rand Dixon as a Federal Trade Commissioner. Dixon is slated to be Federal Trade Commission chairman, and has recently been chief counsel of the Senate Antitrust Committee.

NBC Gets Setback as U.S. Appeals Court Upholds Nix on Spot Sales

Washington, March 7.

NBC and four of its affiliates have 90 days to carry its fight against Federal Communications Commission's spot sales order to the U. S. Supreme Court.

U. S. Court of Appeals here last week affirmed FCC's order of October 1959 barring any television network from serving as national spot sales rep for any affiliated station. At the time, the order applied to CBS and NBC, since ABC did not have a spot sales outfit. Since then, CBS voluntarily disbanded its tv spot sales unit.

In unanimous opinion by a three-man bench, the appeals court rejected all the main contentions put forth by NBC in its challenge of the FCC action.

In answer to NBC's argument that the Commission lacked legal authority—to issue the order, the court held that the FCC's chain broadcasting regulations had already been sustained in court. The spot sales bar, made under authority of the chain broadcasting regulations, were based on the Commission's conclusion that "a great many instances (exist) where the networks, because of their control over affiliation, can influence affiliates in their choice of spot representative and thus restrain competition and interfere with the independent responsibilities of the station licensees."

The court said it had no basis to hold this conclusion erroneous.

As for NBC's claim the rule was unwarranted because it rested merely on a "potential" evil of restraint on affiliates, the appeals bench declared: "We need not decide whether the evil may fairly be characterized as 'potential.' For it is settled that practices which present realistic dangers of competitive restraint are a proper consideration for the Commission in determining the 'public interest, convenience and necessity.'"

Finally, the court said it had no reason for holding FCC's requirement that tv webs divest themselves of spot sales units was unreasonable. NBC had asserted this requirement was unduly harsh.

Joining NBC in the court challenge were Metropolitan Television Co. (KOA-TV, Denver), WAVE, Inc. (Louisville), Pulitzer Publishing Co. (KSD-TV, St. Louis) and General Electric Co. (WRGB-TV, Schenectady).

NBC has 90 days to file for a review with the Supreme Court.

WTOP Lends a Helping 'Buy Now' Hand to Step Up Drive 'Against Gloom'

Washington, March 7.

Apparently operating on the theory that what is good for the advertiser is good for the country, WTOP Radio has launched its own massive drive "against gloom, pessimism and defeat" and Lloyd W. Dennis Jr., vice president and general manager urges broadcasters throughout the nation to join the effort.

It all began, says Dennis, with President Kennedy's appeal that individuals should not ask what their country can do for them, but look for what they can do for their country.

Dennis rationalized this into "Operation Optimism" which is aimed to accelerate spending and thus, he concludes, improve the economy of the country.

GE's $23,800,000 Bid In Brit. TV-Radio Mfg.

London, March 7.

The $246,000,000 General Electric Co. whose interests range from light bulbs to power stations, has made a $23,800,000 offer to take over all the share capital of Radio and Allied (Holdings), manufacturers of Sobell & McMichael television and radio sets.

Around 65 of Radio and Allied's total voting power is already commited in favor of the deal—latest in a series of mergers which are concentrating Britain's tv and radio industry into a handful of large groups.

Directors of both companies have issued a statement expressing confidence that the new arrangement "will result in the efficient deployment of their combined resources and will provide the basis for an expanding trade in both home and export markets."

In their combined form the two companies will have nearly one-sixth of the U.K market. Merged production and marketing facilities will put the new group in a favorite position when color tv gets going here and GEC claims that its color research is already "very far advanced."

Dallas—Stanton J. Pearson has been named sales manager for KBOX, the local Balaban station.

Resistance to CBS-TV's Morning Plan Crumbles; Finalize Emcee Lineup

Clearance for CBS-TV's new morning sales plan moved well over the 90% mark last week as final affiliate resistance to the plan crumbled. Meredith Publishing okayed the plan for its Omaha and Kansas City stations, WOW-TV and KCMO-TV, and will probably approve it in Syracuse on WHEN-TV as well.

And Taft Broadcasting, which remains the only multiple-owner holdout and only major market holdout to the plan, lost half its effectiveness against clearance when it disaffiliated its WKRC-TV from CBS-TV in Cincinnati to join ABC. The new CBS affiliate, Scripps-Howard's WCPO-TV, will carry the morning shows. Taft's Birmingham station, WBRC-TV, remains the only serious holdout.

Meanwhile, CBS set emcees for its new morning program lineup, which bows next Monday (13). George Fennaman will host "Your Surprise Package," new 11-11:30 stanza; Steve Dunne will emcee "Double Exposure," the 11:30-noon entry, and Red Rowe will take over "Face the Facts" at 2-2:30. Monty Hall, host of "Video Village," will move to the Coast in order to remain with the show, and Eileen Barton joins the stanza as his assistant on-the-air.

Fresno 'U' Sold For $3,000,000

Fresno, March 7.

The O'Neill Broadcasting Co. sold KJEO-TV, an ABC affiliate, to the Shasta Telecasting Co. last weekend for $3,000,000 cash.

J. E. O'Neill, the Fresno firm's president and sole owner, said papers to complete the sale were signed in Frisco Thursday (2) night. Sale is subject to FCC okay.

KJEO-TV is one of Fresno's three UHF channels, broadcasting on channel 47. O'Neill has owned and operated the stations since it went on the air in September, 1953.

George Fleharty, mayor of Redding and president of Shasta Telecasting, said he has no plans for any change in KJEO-TV's operation. Joseph C. Drilling, he said, will continue as general manager.

Shasta Telecasting also operates KVIP-TV, an ABC affiliate, and KVIP-AM in Redding.

'Clancy' Worden, TV's Pubaffairs Dean, Retiring; With CBS 28 Years

By BOB CHANDLER

When Clarence (Clancy) Worden retires next October as public affairs director of WCBS-TV, the CBS flagship in N.Y. and probably the "most decorated" station in the nation in terms of public service awards and recognition, he'll take with him the undisputed title of dean of tv pubaffairs toppers.

For Worden was certainly one of the first television public affairs chiefs, if not the actual first. And considering he started in his WCBS-TV post in 1950, and since he's been through four general managers at the station with hardly any change in pubaffairs approach or philosophy, he's got to take the record for longevity in a pubaffairs post as well.

But it's in the reputation and "image" of WCBS-TV itself that Worden can take his chief source of pride. "We're up to Rate Card No. 21 now in just over 11 years, and I think our public affairs shows have had something to do with that. Every time we sell a one-minute spot in 'The Late Show' we've really been selling a little piece of 'Camera Three' as well."

Worden has some definite ideas, after 11 years in television, as to the function and organizational status of a pubaffairs department. He firmly believes that the job of pubaffairs programming is to give the audience what it can't get in commercial programming—"something for everybody," and to give the station an image of prestige in the community.

And equally important as a means to the end is Worden's insistence that the public affairs department be completely independent of a station's (or network's) program department. The program manager's job, he believes, is to develop properties that are "commercial" in the strictest sense. The pubaffairs director deals in non-commercial properties, caters to minority viewers and tastes. Worden sees the objectives of program and pubaffairs departments as diametrically opposed, and fears that any control of pubaffairs by a program department would result in a watering-down and a "commercialization" (in the type of program) of pubaffairs shows.

The job of public affairs begins where commercial or mass programming ends, as witness the case of "Camera Three," the station's best-known pubaffairs stanza. It was intended from the start by Worden as a freewheeling show that would touch on anything and everything in literature and the arts. And as such, it was "a producer's show," the producer in this case having been Robert Herridge.

'Hire Good Men'

Choice of Herridge cues up another of Worden's tenets as a pubaffairs director, "Hire good men." Worden attributes some of his success to hiring "men who are smarter than I am, producers who are geniuses in some areas." He admits that when Herridge got arty, "sometimes I didn't know what half the shows were all about, but I knew they were good. And when Herridge came up with a bad show idea, I knew it was bad and was able to persuade him not to do it."

Herridge was "Camera Three's" first producer, starting in 1953, after he'd been doing an education series for Worden that wasn't working out. "Camera Three" under Herridge's freewheeling and imaginative stewardship became a smash, a network pickup followed and Herridge himself moved over to the web. His successor was Lewis Freedman, now producer of "Play of the Week," and the current boss on "Camera Three" and an equally freewheeling personality is John McGiffert.

The "Camera Three" story is pertinent in that it reflects Worden's basic tenets—(1) pubaffairs programs start where commercial shows leave off, as vehicles for minority viewers who can't get their satisfactions from commercial programs; (2) pubaffairs should be divorced and separate from programming, which has as its function the development of commercial formats (imagine "Camera Three" in the hands of a program department); and (3) hire people smarter than you are to do your programs, particularly in the public affairs area.

But there have been other significant shows during Worden's tenure at WCBS-TV under such diverse management personalities as Richard Swift, Craig Lawrence, Sam Cook Digges and Frank Shakespeare. In terms of "image-builders," Worden calls "Sunrise Semester," the early-morning college-credit courses with New York U. far and away the most important of these. But he points out he can't take credit for "Sunrise"—he says it was all Digges' doing and of all four gents he characterizes Digges as the most aggressively pubaffairs minded. Other major pubaffairs efforts have been "Eye on New York," "N.Y. Forum," "American Musical Theatre," "Our Goodly Heritage," etc.

Worden, when he retires in October, will have put in 28 years with CBS. He started with the network in 1938 as Major Bowes' publicist, after having been with the Brooklyn Standard-Union and the N.Y. Daily News as a political reporter.

FCC Report Bolsters Chances For Permanent Equal Time Suspension

Washington, March 7.

A preliminary Federal Communications Commission report on broadcasting's 1960 campaign performance reflects well on the industry and further bolsters chances of permanent suspension of equal time for Presidential and Vice Presidential races.

The report, submitted to Senate Commerce Committee in accord with a resolution passed by the Senate last year, contains compilations of data garnered from political broadcast questionnaires dispatched last summer and fall. But FCC said final tabulations have not yet been made. Among conclusions made in the report (some previously revealed in FCC's statement to the Commerce group last month) are:

—The networks made available, under Section 315 suspension, a "substantial amount" of time "in good viewing hours" with charge.

—Despite the free time given politicos, the parties spend as much for tv network broadcast in 1960 as in 1956. Although radio expenditures were somewhat less, "indications are that total expenditures for political broadcasting were substantially higer in 1960 than in 1956."

—Affiliated tv stations "with few exceptions" cooperated in carrying the Great Debates. Sustaining web programs, other than the Great Debates, on which Presidential or Vice Presidential contenders appeared received less clearance, however. Affiliates of the radio networks reported high clearnace, although less than the tv affiliates.

—"By and large, networks and stations exercised considerable care and succeeded in providing virtual equality in sustaining time as between the Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates of the two major parties."

—Minor Presidential candidates received "relatively little" cuffo time. However, FCC noted that there was no third party of any great import during the 1960 campaign.

In the statistical breakdown, FCC, as previously reported, estimated total broadcast charges for all GOP candidates at about $7,500,000 and for the Democratic contenders about $6,750,000. Other candidates were billed about $400,000.

Overall, charges for combined radio and tv network time facilities were about 7.5% below 1956 for the two major parties—$3,006,102 in 1960 compared with $3,251,454 in 1956. For the three tv networks, the Democrats shelled out $1,106,875 and the Republicans $1,820,360 for a total of $2,927,235. The 1956 tv network total was $2,930,514. The four AM radio networks billed GOP and Democratic candidates $78,867 last year and $320,940 in 1956.

Sustaining Time Up 32%

Amount of sustaining time by the three tv networks rose 32.8% from 29 hours, 38 minutes in 1956 to 39 hours, 22 minutes last fall. The Republicans received 18 hours, 21 minutes, while the Democrats received 19 hours, 26 minutes. The four AM radio webs provided a total of 43 hours, 14 minutes in sustaining time—a 33.5% increase over 1956.

A total of 430 tv stations reported a combined 1,250 hours given GOP candidates and 1,253 to Democrats. Programs paid for by candidates or supporters amounted to 2,223 for Republican candidates and 2,193 for Democrats over all tv stations reporting. Commercially sponsored programs totalled 521 hours for Republicans and 471 for Democrats. Radio stations gave Democratic candidates 2,567 free hours and Republicans 2,483.

The three tv networks gave the Republican and Democratic Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates eight hours, six minutes apiece. In non-sustaining times, the tv webs showed the Democratic national ticket 11 hours, 15 minutes and the Republican, 13 hours, 34 minutes.

Of the Great Debates, 472 tv affiliates carried the first, 468 the second, 471 the third and 468 the fourth.

FCC said that if Congress decides to enact permanent suspension of Section 315 for the national tickets, consideration be given to whether all appearances of presidential or vice presidential should be exempted. FCC noted that Vice President Lyndon Johnson was also running for reelection to the Senate in Texas, and his GOP opponent there had indicated to the Commission he had asked for equal time to match Johnson's appearances on national tv. Since the Commission was never advised as to whether the opponent was granted equal time, it never ruled on the question.

Robt. Sarnoff to Legion: 'We've Earned Permanent Claim to 315 Freedom'

Washington, March 7.

Robert W. Sarnoff, NBC chairman, told the American Legion seminar here last week that broadcasters earned the right to the same freedoms in 1964 that they earned in the 1960 Presidential campaign.

He said that tv was able to present the two major candidates with unprecedented freedom because "Congress lifted the legal restrictions that would have compelled us to give equal time to a dozen or so minor and fringe-party candidates in which the public was not interested." He added, however, that the relief "we enjoyed was only temporary; the restriction is still on the books, embodied in section 315.

"Now that broadcasters have demonstrated the skill, fairness and responsibility with which we can rise to the opportunity, we believe we have earned a permanent claim to the freedom we were able to exercise."

The NBC topper received an award from the Legion for his work in seeking to reform Section 315.

V of A Enlists College Students For Series Being Beamed O'seas

Chapel Hill, N.C., March 7.

The Voice of America has set up temporary headquarters in the Univ. of North Carolina's communications center, where it will tape a series of radio panel discussions by students from UNC, Duke and North Carolina College.

Frederick Buch, producer of the Voice of America program, "Report to Youth," and Hobson Banks, moderator of panels, have completed arrangements for recording the programs, and work on them began last week.

According to Buch, producer of the program for the U.S. Information Agency, which operates the Voice of America, "Report to Youth" is designed to present to the English-speaking youth of the world as accurate a picture as possible of the activities and thoughts of American youth.

The programs are broadcast worldwide in English, and translated summaries into various foreign languages are in some cases also made.

Fifteen-minute panel discussions scheduled for production at the Univ. of North Carolina will be on on the subjects, "problems of racial integration in American colleges"; and "the role of athletics in institutions of higher learning."

The USIA men are also planning a number of individual interviews with students and faculty members at UNC. Buch said that an interview with Mohammed Reyazuddin, student at UNC from India, on his impressions of America, will be taped for broadcast also.

Following the recording sessions at Carolina, the group will move to Raleigh, where Buch and Banks plan to tape panel discussions by students from Meredith College, State College and Shaw Univ., on the subjects. "working your way through college," "youth and the arts" and "youth and agriculture."

Toledo—Electric Autolite Co. announced its return to national tv as co-sponsor of "The Racer," a regular weekly half-hour adventure series with an auto racing theme starring Brian Kelly and John Ashley. Program will begin in the fall at a time and on a network to be announced later.

Y&R 'NIGHTBREAK' VENEZUELA TV BUY

Young & Rubicam, which began the whole thing two-and-a-half years ago by buying a multivariety of spots for its own clients in ABC-TV's daytime program lineup, has extended bundle buying to South America.

VeneVision S. A. a new Venezuelan outlet, began operating this week, and the American ad agency played a large role. Y&R bought an hour a night, from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. (Monday through Friday) for its various clients and is calling the time "Nightbreak." (ABC-TV, in the U.S., called its new sked, the one in which Y&R heavily participated, "Operation Daybreak.")

Venezuelan prime time strip is made up of Latin-dubbed versions of Warner Bros. programming—"Sunset Strip," "Maverick" and "Cheyenne" included. Agency is feeding into the cross-the-board slot (at relatively low cost) participations by General Foods, Bristol-Myers, Procter & Gamble, Johnson & Johnson and Chrysler. S. C. Johnson and Dorothy Gray, from other agencies, are also in the 8:30 lineup.

ABC holds a minority interest in the Venezuelan network in which Y&R bought "charter" advertising.

U.S. OK's 'Man Shoot'

the spot, and they can cut into the audio if they wish, but won't be permitted to cover the basic running narration of the shot itself. The Canaveral project, of course, will have audio communications with the satellite, but will not be made available for broadcast.

Date of the shoot is still uncertain, but arrangements have been made so that producers, correspondents, etc., will fly to Canaveral at a specified number of days before the attempt in order to prepare on the spot. Film units will be stationed in the Atlantic to cover the recovery phase of the story, and also live units will be at the White House for ceremonies honoring the Astronaut.

All of this will be pooled coverage. As to the difference in coverage by the networks, this will depend on how they prepare their background shows—for example, news specials the night before the shot are being planned which would utilize footage of the training programs of the Astronauts, the space shots using chimps and the previous recovery attempts. Each web would do its own job on these background efforts.

Networks have already assigned key people to the story.

WNBC-TV Springs A New Rate Card

WNBC-TV, the NBC owned & operated station in N.Y., is putting out a new rate card, in which the station hopes "to bring the pricing of primetime 60-second announcements into a more realistic balance with the cost of triple-A 20-second spots." New card, No. 21, effective March 1, also offers an extra cash discount for extra-volume skeds.

Bankrollers can earn an additional 5% off on a new consecutive weekly discount plan, (added to an additional 5% available if a sponsor buys no fewer than seven announcements per week, and if he also has a triple-A, 10, 20, 30 or 60-second spot). Top discount thus becomes 57.25%—a 7.25% increase over Rate Card No. 20.

Because ayem local biz is offish, WNBC-TV has reduced spot buys between 7 and 10 a.m.—and also in the 8 p.m. station-break strip.

The 7 to 10 a.m. prices for minutes were reduced from $400 to $300, 20-second announcements from $300 to $225.

To bring more equality in the pricing of 60-sec and 20-sec triple-A availabilities, outlet has set a $2.500 price on minutes, a rise of $200 while the 20-second spots remain $2,300.

Tenting in D.C., or In One Era and Out the Other

Finding a roof for five Corinthian tv station news-and-camera teams in Washington, as the Kennedy era began, was much more difficult than finding reason for their presence. They had no intention of duplicating CBS's superb network coverage; they sought to duplicate only Corinthian's success, as evidenced by coverage of last year's conventions, in relating major political events to their own communities.

Local news doesn't come to us. We go to it, even if it's in D.C.—and even if our definition of local is non-traditional. Without a legacy to stand on, our individual station news teams tackled Project Washington with mike and camera. The Houston group was after, among other things, a Ladybird's eye view; Tulsa hoped to strike oil by spending a day with Senators Kerr and Monroney; our gentlemen from Indiana got on the bandwagon with the state's Drum and Bugle Corps; the young men from Sacramento, reversing Greeley's advice, came east to cover the Inauguration's pomp—and to examine plans for legislation affecting their tele-urban community.

Different regions find different meanings in Washington, 1961. Those differences are best explored by local tv reporting crews and public affairs programming, focusing on political faces and issues of special interest to the folks back home. This is the kind of journalistic initiative, under group organization, that results in high identification with regional audiences, cementing stations to communities and communities to stations.

THE PAGE MORTON SHOW
With Miss Morton, Walter Fleischer Orch (7); announcer, Tony Marvin Director: Dick Charles
15 Mins., Sun.: 4:05 p.m.
CHOCK FULL O' NUTS
WCBS, N. Y.

(Grey)

Once upon a time it was the voice of honey-haired Jean Martin that soothingly trilled the jingle, "Chock Full O' Nuts Is The Heavenly Coffee." But now that Miss Martin's marital status with CFN prexy William Black is being adjudicated by the courts, Page Morton has replaced her as the company's ambassadress of song.

Miss Morton's show, introed as "the heavenly voice of Page Morton and her piano," is currently heard in some 15 cities. One of the latter is New York, where courtesy of WCBS, the Sunday motorist and others with time on their hands may catch her at 4:05 p.m. Whether her voice is "heavenly" is a matter of opinion.

But on the strength of Sunday's (5) edition Miss Morton's vocalistics certainly abound in come hither qualities. Her low, sexy voice brought out all the nuances in "J'Attendrai" and even put new ones in it. She knows her way around a ballad and for dialers who've had their fill of rock 'n' roll this quarter hour is a welcome escape.

Rounding out the show is Walter Fleischer's listenable combo which contributed a tune on its own aside from backing Miss Morton. Announcer Tony Marvin intoned the CFN plugs with an aromatic delivery and displayed a tuneful baritone to boot as he dueted the "heavenly coffee" jingle with Miss Morton.

Show, incidentally, is also heard Saturdays via WOR, N. Y.

The many AM stations in the metropolitan New York area should monitor each other and learn how dedicated almost every one of the platter-chatterers is to the sound not only of his own voice but that now well-worn cliche "service." There is so much saccharine hooey about this being "your" station, with these magic call-letters so concerned, 24 hours on end, each day, with "your" traffic problems, "your" weather reports, "your" welfare, "your" public service that it's all a big bore.

The guy who shaves to deejay palaver-and-music or the guy who drives downtown to ditto, or the housewife for that matter, may welcome less of "their" welfare and more of the station's music-and-news, with a minimum of yakity-yak. The commercials that fall in between more than make up for any supplementary conversation. Little wonder that when a WPAT (Paterson) comes along with a lightly-and-politely programming concept it carves a niche for itself.

13,500 Dodge Dealers In Closed-TV 'Meet'

Dodge dealers throughout the country attended a closed-circuit television sales meeting last Thursday (2).

The program, produced and networked by Theatre Network Television, reached some 13,500 Dodge dealers in 31 cities.

In recent weeks, TNT has handled closed-tv shows for all four automotive leaders—General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, and American Motors.

testimony of three girls who discredited the state's key witness Defense kept the girls under wraps until the trial and sprang them as surprise witnesses; would the D.A. have dropped the charges had he known of the girls?

All of this made fascinating viewing throughout; yet the serious nature of the two key points under consideration were continuously underlined. A 10-minute wrapup session with U.S. Judge Irving Kaufman, State Court of Appeals Chief Judge Charles S. Desmond, and Harvard Law School Dean Erwin N. Griswold, tended to be inconclusive, with the trio tending to be moderate in their views on the problems.

For Murrow, who's got two more "CBS Reports" coming up, it was another distinguished effort; for McMullen, whose potential as a topflight tv documentarian is only beginning to be realized after his fine work in radio, it was a skillful job of reporting and producing. Overall supervision, especially of the editing, by Friendly was as usual a brilliant job. Chan.

Bell Telephone Hour

Bell Telephone soirees continue to deliver a class kind of entertainment, always in good taste and with a high entertainment flavor. The series goes for unusual effects, high contrasts, but nearly always an olla podrida with appeal to the bulk of the listeners.

The episode with Gracie Fields and Stanley Holloway was done in the near-classic vaudeville style of the London music hall. The duo painted a pleasant picture of the entertainment which used to abound in the British capitol as well as some of the stages of this country when this century was young. The pair mixed comedy, nostalgia, and near pathos in a blend in which the common denominator was enormous variety talent.

Also of top artistry was the pair of arias by Renata Tebaldi "Vissi d'Arte" from "Tosca" and the infrequently performed "Io Son l' Umile Ancella" from "Adriana Lecourvrier." She is a singer with the mark of greatness.

Also in the solo vein were the offerings of Burl Ives who did ballads and pops with backgrounds of dancers and a vocal group which chimed in periodically. Ives provided a pleasant musical commentary on American folklore for a satisfying period.

The most ambitious segment was the combination of the Roberto Iglesias Ballet Espagnole and Los Chavales de Espana, which didn't come off as it should. Curiously, Los Chavales came off better in this sequence because of better integrated efforts. Iglesias' solo efforts, were well-danced, but more group excitement was needed to carry off the air of gypsy abandon.

Ramparts," which would go for $42,000 on first-runs and $17,500 on repeats. Show is meant to be for 26 weeks of originals, but it could be cut back to accommodate an alternate bankroller like Westinghouse or perhaps, if the entertainment format falls through, even Westinghouse itself. Westinghouse once had a Desilu-made hour in a late Friday time over at CBS-TV, but it folded when the ratings didn't materialize in sufficient force to duplicate the then large ($12,000,000) Westinghouse expenditure.

Originally, NBC wanted to use a Chet Huntley or Frank McGeehelmed half-hour news stanza Fridays at 10:30, but either could be moved into a 10:30 Wednesday period, which is now part of the web's thinking.

As for the rest of Friday, it's a catch-as-catch-can arrangement for NBC-TV. Unlike other nights, which are mainly sewed up program-wise, Fridays are open to "all takers," and there is even a possibility that if Miss Shore doesn't end up at 10 she will get part of 9 p.m. Meantime, web is sweating out the return of American Tel & Tel for the "Bell Telephone Hour," which also could either go Wednesdays at 10 or Fridays at either 9 or 10.

negative

Stations become important to people for the things they avoid as well as the things they do. Accentuating the negative: the noisy intruder, the meager news coverage, the lack of constructive programming based on local needs, the quick device in place of the sound service. A more positive approach over the years has helped bring each of our radio and television stations the most responsive audience in its coverage area. People listen. People watch. People know.

NAB Warns Mfrs: Cool Down On Those Toy Pitches on Video

Television toy advertisers will be the first target in a stepped-up National Assn. of Broadcasters Code Review Board campaign to alert subscribing stations to tv commercial abuses.

Code's New York office also is reportedly meeting with agency and advertiser execs in an attempt to amicably negotiate a cooling down of toy pitches, especially those slanted at pre-school kids, and in the areas of dramatic representations and price appeals.

Code Board has tentatively slated a scrutiny of toy advertising for the next Washington session, and in the interim is understood to be preparing a bulletin on toy blurbs for subscribing stations.

As "guidelines for toy advertising," the bulletin, being prepared by the New York Code Office, is particularly concerned with dramatizations that show a toy in use in a way that isn't authentic, and demonstrations suggesting attributes not inherent in the toy as purchased—dazzling visual effects and unfair glamorization.

Stations also are warned about oversimplifications, such as "only" and "just" applied to toy prices exceeding a few dollars and appeals contending that a child betters his peers with a high-priced toy, or that the lack of said toy will invite contempt or ridicule.

Code contends that "younger children are not in all situations able to discern the credibility of what they watch, posing thereby an ethical responsibility for others to protect children from their own susceptibilities."

Color TV to Highlight British Radio Show

London, March 7.

Color tv will add a flash of rainbow to this year's Radio Show for the first time. New color receivers will work alongside black-and-white sets when the show opens at Earls Court on Aug. 23. Move is result of a plan by BBC and Radio Industry Council to give public glimpse of color service which the BBC is pressing to launch. Programs are likely to be relayed to the show from BBC's experimental color studio at Alexandra Palace.

PACKED HOUSE FOR MINOW'S SWEARING

Washington, March 7.

It was SRO in the Federal Communications Commission's hearing room when Newton N. Minow was sworn in as new chairman last Thursday (2). Congressmen, attorneys and FCC staffers of all ranks squeezed into the room for the biggest turnout for such an occasion in the memory of oldtime observers.

After outgoing Chairman Frederick W. Ford convened the special session of the Commission for "the very pleasant purpose" of admitting Minow, Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas gave the oath to the 35-year-old former law partner of Adlai Stevenson.

Douglas, noting that Minow once served as clerk to the late Chief Justice Fred Vinson, said: "Over at the court, we are mighty proud of his professional achievements since that time . . . his great ability, great sense of public service, his character and drive."

Douglas, incidentally, recalled that he had aspired to be FCC Chairman in the late 30's, and had come close to getting the appointment from FDR.

Among those on hand were House Commerce Chairman Oren Harris (D-Ark.), Rep. Peter Mack (D-Ill.), and president LeRoy Collins of National Assn. of Broadcasters.

Minow fills the unexpired term of ex-FCC Chairman John C. Doerfer ending June 30 and a full seven-year term beginning July 1. Commissioner Charles E. King had been filling the Doerfer seat on an interim appointment from President Eisenhower last summer.

Atlanta — Horace W. (Buddy) Ray, program director since 1959 for WAGA-TV, Storer chain mouthpiece here, has been appointed operations manager for mill. Announcement was made by Ken Bagwell, station's general manager, himself a recent appointee. Ray joined Storer web in 1955 at WVUE, Philadelphia, and transferred to Atlanta in 1958.

'Clancy' Worden

He then moved directly into the network's publicity department under the late Louis Ruppell, and then into WCBS as director of public affairs and special events. In May of 1950, the network decided to consolidate WCBS and its new tv station, and Swift, then g.m. of the radio station, was named to head WCBS-TV as well, with Worden becoming director of pubaffairs for both and assistant to the tv g.m. besides, and Dick Doan becoming program boss for both.

Later, the stations were divorced again and Worden stayed in tv. That "assistant to the general manager" title was justified because besides his pubaffairs duties, Worden was given the job of continuity acceptance boss over commercials and live programming, a job he still holds down as something of a symbol of the CBS-TV o&o stations' independence and autonomy, since the web itself maintains a fully-staffed department to handle the same thing. Worden doesn't see any connection between his two jobs, other than that the continuity job merely requires "common sense" and a knowledge of the "do's and don'ts."

As of the moment, WCBS-TV is enjoying a sort of extra bonus to its pubaffairs schedule, in that it's handling exclusively Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's biweekly tv "reports to the people," and also is getting most of Mayor Robert F. Wagner's television appearances on an exclusive basis when a hot issue arises such as Police Commissioner Kennedy's resignation last week.

Worden, an old political reporter who's kept up his contacts, has a wide-ranging circle of political friends and acquaintances. But he's realistic enough to admit that those WCBS-TV exclusives aren't his doing except inasmuch as his pubaffairs efforts have helped give WCBS-TV a measure of prestige and class to go along with its mass circulation.

San Antonio — Exclusive television rights for the Texas Open Golf tournament to be played April 27-30 at Oak Hills Country Club here were sold by the San Antonio Golf Association to WOAI-TV for $1,200. Radio rights for the golf tournament have been offered for $300 but no takers have appeared.

CBS Television City's KABC-TV Alumni Assn.

The program department at CBS-TV's Television City in Hollywood is beginning to look like the KABC-TV alumni association headquarters, what with Peter Robinson now joining the CBS-TV setup there as associate director of program development under Hunt Stromberg Jr.

Latter, of course, was program chief at the ABC o&o in Los Angeles before moving crosstown to CBS. Robinson, the new replacement for Bruce Lansbury, who last week became director of daytime programs in Hollywood, succeeded Stromberg as KABC-TV program boss and more recently was v.p. in charge of programming for Selmur Productions, the American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres production subsid headed by Selig Seligman, who also heads up KABC and KABC-TV.

Lansbury, who joined CBS a year ago as Stromberg's assistant in program development, had been a KABC-TV producer-writer, working on such properties as "Day in Court."

set designer, but the boy hadn't enough money or position to satisfy her mother. Crisis came when the guy took a job in Scotland, and the threatened separation led Diane to appeal to the courts for permission to wed. If parents disapprove, a magistrate can reverse their decision. In this case, he did not, the boy went off, and the girl was left to sweat it out resentfully with her parents.

But the boy clicked, was interviewed on tv, and his play came to London. This changed mother's mind. She began to think he was a good catch for her daughter after all. But by this time the boy had had second thoughts, and Diane was left to weep on her lonely bed.

That was the gist of it. Cooper tricked it out with some social parallels which weren't sufficiently developed to provide the necessary depth. For instance, Doris had a slatternly sister who didn't care that she'd stayed working-class, and a social-climbing sister whose daughter had hooked a tycoon's son. The point he tried to make was that young people shouldn't be forced to accept their elders' preconceived ideas, but it was blunted by too glib comparisons.

The acting was first-rate, with Mona Washbourne excellent as the mother who kidded herself she was doing what's best and Lola Brooks notably appealing as the frustrated girl. Sturdy support same from Geoffrey Frederick as the young man, and Sheila Burrell, Charles Lamb, and Arthur Lovegrove etched in neat cameos. Tania Lieven provided a production that never went off the domestic key, and the hour was a telling, if modest, contribution to slice-of-life drama. Otta.

Timex's Gleason Spec Buy; Beats Speidel to Punch

CBS-TV made a $275,000 "save" week with a fastmoving sale to Timex of the 90-minute Jackie Gleason special, "The Million Dollar Incident." Timex will sponsor the show April 21, a Friday, at 8:30-10 p.m.

The special was taped last August and kept on the shelf until last week, when some sales interest began to generate after some seven months of gathering dust. Speidel, which sponsored Gleason in a one-hour variety special last fall, had some money to spend and asked to look at "Incident."

Meanwhile, Timex was slated to sponsor its second one-hour Red Skelton special of the season on April 21, when word came through from the Coast that Skelton had decided not to do the show, on advice of doctors. Comic has just returned to his weekly show after an operation for hernia, and medics figured the added work of the special would be too much.

So Timex, in looking for a replacement, asked to view "Incident," took 48 hours to decide, and told CBS it would buy it, even though it involved purchase of another half-hour of time as well as a higher production nut. Actually, Timex won't be paying the full $275,000 tag, but CBS will probably recoup that entire nut via sale in Canada, since Timex bought only the U.S.

Though "Incident" was made last August, it hadn't been shown on Madison Ave. at all until the past couple of weeks. Web's policy was to keep it under wraps until there was genuine sponsor interest, rather than simply curiosity by sponsors with no money to spend, or agencies who wanted to see it for unnamed clients.

Idea was to avoid the pitfalls encountered by NBC with its "Moon and Sixpence" special a year ago. In that case, despite the brilliance of the production, every agency man became a "critic" and NBC had a tough time selling the show.

mitted to do several pictures for Columbia Pictures (one is done), he put in a bid last week to purchase WNTA-TV, on Channel 13, N. Y. His apparent intention to manage a station, if he wins the bidding, won't leave him much time personally for network tv production. (Earlier, it was rumored that he was available for a staff program position with CBS-TV, but that seems to have come to nought.)

Once, TA had a staff of about 70 men and women. Only Levy and Susskind know the count today, but this much is known publicly: Rose Tobias, a key casting director there has left to be married and won't return. Bob Raphaelson, a story editor for "Witness," shifted to ABC-TV program staff. Jose Vega, one of the organization's production mainstays, left officially a few weeks ago. (He worked on the Carney shows and, for awhile, at WNTA-TV when TA was involved through Susskind in making stanzas for the station.)

Futures of Audrey Gellen and Jacqueline Babbin, the stardust twins of the company's production efforts, are in question. They'll probably leave in the spring. Miss Babbin for the time being is working on the sci-fi series, and that could keep her there awhile beyond her reported spring departure intentions. Others have already left. There are perhaps six staff people needed to produce "Circle Theatre" on alternate weeks over CBS-TV, which means that if TA doesn't come up with other program sales soon, the subtraction in personnel is liable to be still greater.

There was a letdown at TA recently when the company failed to grab the handsome hunk of production coin tantallizingly held out to Susskind and Levy for next season. NBC-TV was ready to air a taped series for the sponsor, which TA was to make, but the money finally went to Revue film productions to be placed on ABC-TV.

In short, things ain't what they used to be at Talent Associates.

"As a group we would make no unreasonable demands," said Frankenheimer. "We would politely ask that the series be institutionally sponsored rather than as a 'magazine concept' with product sellers breaking in every 10 minutes. We would also politely ask that the hour dramas be given prime time at night and not on Sunday afternoon when nobody's looking and the network gleefully displays the 3.4 Nielsen to prove its unacceptability. If the networks are honest in their intentions to uplift the art of drama they should leap at it. Where could they find a greater collection of creative artists? They'd gladly put any one of them under contract. But they're not for sale. All they want to do is to show their gratitude and help the medium out of its degradation."

Frankenheimer recalled that "Birdman of Alcatraz," which he directed for Howard Hecht, got a fast turndown from CBS when it was proposed for "Playhouse 90." Rod Serling must have a much longer list.

WISH To the Rescue In 'Operation Snowstorm'; Even Helps in Births

Corinthian outlet WISH, Indianapolis, became a 24-hour emergency communications centre recently when 10 inches of unpredicted snow smothered the community.

Station newsmen, assisted by news staffers from sister tv station WISH-TV, set up and manned an emergency five-line phone board, which were placed at the disposal of listeners, police and fire departments, the Red Cross and other community services whose communications were literally snowed under.

WISH aired the fact that it would act as an emergency centre throughout the night. A police announcement over WISH requested emergency situations be reported to the station news staffs, and advised people to stay tuned to WISH.

Phones were kept continuously busy. Within the 24 hours, station broadcasts were instrumental in locating about 300 people reported missing; getting medical aid to a diabetic who was stranded in his home in need of insulin; got assistance to motorists stranded on highways; aided the fire department by supplying directions to homes where the storm had caused power and heat failures; and directed emergency crews with food to a family of 10 stranded on the outskirts of the city. "Operation Snowstorm" kept 10 news staffers busy through the night and day.

And, on the eve after the storm, staffers learned that, by directing police help at the crucial time through its two-way relay system, WISH had aided in the birth of two potential listeners of the future.

NBC-TV Thursday Sked Taking Shape

NBC-TV has chalked in a tentative Thursday schedule (one of the two nights that is far from settled on the web's fall program blueprint) that conists of "Outlaws," the new Groucho Marx half-hour, "This Is Your Life," maybe Tennessee Ernie and Mitch Miller.

"Outlaws," marked for the 7:30-8:30 p.m. period, is most iffy, but so far the network has not been able to find another hour to take the evening's opening slot. "Name That Tune," a revival, was first destined for 8:30, but then Groucho's show ($46,000 net per stanza) took over. Opposed by some of the web brass, "Life" is still a pencil mark at 9. Despite Ernie Ford's desire (like others at NBC) to retrench on the amount of time he spends on the air next season, web is hopefully banking on his return to a full season's sked at 9:30, but things don't look good.

Mitch Miller, being sold to Ballantine and R. J. Reynolds, is a certainty from 10 to 11 p.m. Thursdays.

Metropolitan Broadcasting Corp. stockholders will be asked to change the name of the company to MetroMedia Inc. at the annual meeting March 28. Stockholders will also be asked to increase the number of authorized common shares from 2,000,000 to 3,500,000 to pave the way for additional expansion.

Proxy statement explains that Metropolitan's expansion into outdoor advertising "has rendered the name Metropolitan Broadcasting Corp. inappropriate in that broadcasting now constitutes only 50% of the company's business." Board of directors selected MetroMedia as the new name.

Statement, in discussing the current number of authorized shares and the limited number not outstanding or reserved for stock options or conversions, declared that the present number of unused shares "is inadequate to meet the future needs of the company." Statement explains that "there is no present intention to issue any of these new shares, but it is felt that the company should be in a position to take advantage of attractive opportunities for expansion as they occur."

British Broadcasting Corp.'s "Age of Kings" series will get wide distribution in the U. S. via affiliates of National Educational Television and Radio Center (NET).

Series is slated to bow on etv stations this fall. NET, which secured the series last year, for its 50 affils "waived its rights in New York and Washington, D. C., and thus enabled commercial outlets in those cities to purchase the series from BBC," according to NET's programming v.p., Robert Hudson. In New York and Washington, series is being telecast on Metropolitan Broadcasting outlets, WNEW-TV and WTTG, with Standard Oil (N. J.) as full sponsor. NET, it was added, has no etv outlets either in New York or Washington.

The five CBS-TV o&o stations will launch their third annual pubaffairs program exchange starting April 15, with the exchange this year to run 20 weeks instead of the 13-week cycle employed last year.

Programs to be aired on each of the stations are "American Musical Theatre," out of WCBS-TV, N. Y.; "Keynotes," from KNXT, Los Angeles; "The New Nations," from WBBM-TV, Chicago; "Once Over Lightly," WCAU-TV, Philadelphia; and "Outside In," KMOX-TV, St. Louis.

He was cited specifically for his nation-wide promotion of "Project HOPE," which sent an American hospital ship to the Far East.

of the evening. Prime candidate for 7:30-8:30 is "Frontier Circus," a pilot out of the MCA-Revue lot.

Slotting also means CBS is writing off "Gunslinger" after half a season. Web had high hopes for the Charles Marquis Warren western when it bowed on Feb. 9 in the 9-10 period, but the western hasn't made much of a rating impact and network officials aren't that high on the stanza as a qualitative entry anyway.

Reverse is true for "Defenders," series about a father-son lawyer team, with E. G. Marshall and Robert Reid in the leads. Series was originally slated for Friday 10-11, but the web has now committed itself to the Thursday slotting.

INDIE DISKERS' LEGIT 'PAYOLA'

Everybody Sez 'Wha' Dat' as FCC Turns Payola Spotlight on Frisco, Oakland

San Francisco, March 7.

Investigators of the Federal Communications Commission have been interrogating disk jockeys and station managers in San Francisco and Oakland regarding payola.

Field investigators William Hunter and George Curtis, of the FCC complaints and compliance division, spent three days in San Francisco last week conducting a series of interviews with management and deejays at KYA and KSAN in San Francisco, and KEWB and KDIA in Oakland. These were apparently the only four stations visited. They are currently locked in a struggle for dominance of the afternoon and early evening time ratings.

The FCC investigators queried the stations as to what controls and checks were maintained on deejays to prevent outside influences manipulating record choices for air play and also as to whether any disk jockey had any interest in any specific record distribution firm, any publishing company, label or artist.

Prominent in the subject covered by the FCC team was a now-legendary party last fall at a San Francisco motel which marked the debut of a new record distributorship in the area.

Tennessee Ernie, Now A Coast Resident, Gets 'Day' In Namesake Territory

Nashville, March 7.

Tennessee Ernie Ford took over the State Legislature last Thursday (3), sang "16 Tons" and assured the packed house and gallery that he was living in California only "because they needed a little Tennessee out there." Governor Buford Ellington, who introduced Ernie to the special combined session said that Ford had a greater reception than anybody who ever visited the Legislature.

Just prior to Ford's appearance, Gov. Ellington gave him a special citation for "Outstanding contribution to American life . . ." The Governor also made Ernie a Tennessee Colonel and gave him the original copy of the proclamation which authorized March 3 as Tennessee Ernie Ford Day throughout the state.

The Nashville stopoff followed Ford's return to his hometown, Bristol, Tenn., earlier in the week. Ford returned to Bristol to record an album of hymns for Capitol Records. The album, tentatively titled "Comin' Home," was recorded in a two-day session in the Anderson Street Methodist Church, the Ford family's traditional place of worship and the place where he first sang in public 40 years ago.

Backing Ford on the recording was a 25-voice choir comprised entirely of his "kinfolk." Among the singers were his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence T. Ford, several aunts, uncles and nephews, and a dozen or so first, second and third cousins. The only non-relative participating was Charlie Lawson, regular organist at the church. Lee Gillette, Capitol Records producer, handled the sessions.

Miss Kerr, one of the few femme arranger-composers in the industry, will supervise recording sessions under Atkins' direction. She'll also function as choral director and arranger for vocals and instrumentals.

Gene Pitney Tapped For Pic Soundtrack Duty

Gene Pitney, 19-year-old singer-cleffer on the Musicor label, handled by United Artists Records, has been inked to do the main title theme for the soundtrack of "Town Without Pity," a UA film starring Kirk Douglas. Dimitri Tiomkin wrote the score and the title song which is featured in a jukebox scene.

Pitney clicked with his initial disk, "I Wanna Love My Life Away."

Cap in Spring Package Push Via Discounts

The biggest discount program in its history is being launched by Capitol Records Distributing Corp. this month. The program encompasses a plan whereby record dealers will receive bonus albums equalling one-third of all Capitol and Angel albums purchased under specifications of the March discount drive.

Under terms of the program, dealers will receive one free album for every three Capitol or Angel albums ordered through March 31. Minimum qualifying orders are 100 LPs on the Cap label and 50 packages on the Angel label.

The March program supersedes all previously announced Capitol and Angel programs, including the special Frank Sinatra bonus plan that was announced only last week. In addition, dealers will be permitted to cancel back orders placed under CRDC's February program (and not shipped as of Feb. 28) in order to receive shipment under terms of the new program.

The program applies to all LP and EP albums in Cap and Angel catalogs and includes both standard and new releases in the pop and classical field. It does not apply, however, to four-track stereo tapes or to "compact" 33 rpm doubles.

CRDC's usual 10% exchange privilege and 2% cash discount for prompt payment will continue under the March program. A special deferred payment plan will permit dealers to pay for one-third of their program purchases beginning April 10.

UP CERULLI TO VICTOR'S ALBUM CREATION DEPT.

Dom Cerulli has moved into the production orbit at RCA Victor. He's taken over as manager of editorial and creation services responsible for the coordination of album production and packaging and the development of new ideas for LP production.

Cerulli was moved out of the publicity department to take over the new assignment. Since February of last year he had been administrator of press and information for single records. Before that he had been eastern publicity and promotion director for the Warner Bros. label. Cerulli is also co-editor of the Ballantine Books anthology "The Jazz Word." In his new post, he reports to George Avakian, pop albums manager.

BMI Ups Bradshaw

Justin Bradshaw has been named director of station services for Broadcast Music Inc., working under Glenn R. Dolberg, BMI v.p. over station relations.

Bradshaw has been BMI's field rep in the south for the past eight years.

BUYING TIME FOR AIR PLUGS

With the scramble for disk exposure getting tougher every week, many of the indie labels are paying for air plugs again but this time they're doing it legitimately. In the past several months there has been a growing number of disk companies that have been buying time on radio in key markets to get their record wares heard.

The time buy splurges are evidently an offshoot of the clampdown on payola, the increase of "Top 40"-styled programming and the steadily large number of releases that are bucking each other for air play.

The indies that have gone into the time-buying pitch are shopping carefully and still aren't too sure of whether it's worthwhile. The markets are carefully selected as to their value and as to the type records to be exposed. For instance, many FM stations have won indie interest for exposure of jazz material while the AM'ers are getting the pop, rhythm & blues and country music depending on their areas and their audience.

Already testing the time-buying pitch are the Atlantic, Chess, Checker, Old Town, Warwick and Vee-Jay labels. One indie exec who's been buying time in several areas around the country says it's still an iffy approach to disk merchandising and the results are still

Marek Visions See & Hear Disks As Key Educ. Tool

By ABEL GREEN

George R. Marek, v.p. and g.m. of RCA Victor Records, sees the home phonograph playing an important role in the global campaign for "more education." The recently revitalized respect by Americans for greater learning will witness the springboard in the U. S. for "see-and-hear" techniques of home visual education.

At first it will be via graphs and slides, in accompaniment to the LP platter. Further in the future will come videotape reproduction showing a "Belafonte At Carnegie Hall" concert, for example, reenacted on the home-screen, coincidental with the LP reproduction of the vocalist and orchestra.

Incidentally, separate and apart from the industry's bid to make the 33 rpm speed universal for both pop singles and albums, Marek is not sanguine about the suggestion that the 16⅔ speed might prove better for that vid-tape technique he envisions. He still feels 33 rpm is the most faithful reproduction for everything,

ASCAP Revenue Reaches New Peak Of $32,344,135; Expenses Up to 19%

Hollywood, March 7.

American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers chalked up earnings of $32,344,135 during 1960, an increase of $2,313,168 over 1959, the 350 Coast members of org were notified at semi-annual meeting held here last week (28).

Breakdown discloses $31,963,789 from licensing; interest on U. S. Treasury notes, $349,590; membership dues, $110,775. Though several score songwriters have quit ASCAP for "guarantees" from rival BMI, about 1,200 new members joined ASCAP last year.

After expenses, which included salaries and other expenditures totalling $6,131,445, ASCAP shelled out to its membership in royalties $26,212,689. Percentage absorbed by operating costs of org amounted to almost 19%, slight increase over preceding year.

The total recipts taken in by ASCAP last year is broken down in quarters. In April of 1960 coin distributed among the membership totalled $6,107,829.; July, $6,402,506.; October, $6,183,045., and in December the fourth distribution was $6,532,600.

Set aside for payments to foreign societies for performances of their members' works in the U. S. was $850,716. An additional million for ASCAPers was the distribution of $2,618,549. on Dec. 7, 1960, which represented monies collected for performances of their works in 17 foreign countries. That coin repped money due through 1958.

ASCAP is currently working on a foreign distribution which is scheduled to go out in May and will include only England, Canada and Sweden.

Sidney Mills Rejoins Staff of Mills Music

Sidney Mills, son of Mills Music v.p. Irving Mills, has returned to the Mills Music publishing firm as general mechanical manager. He'll be trying to promote disks on the Mills catalog.

Mills left the company a couple of years ago to go into business for himself with Diana Music. Sidney Music and Diana Records in addition to managing singers Sam Hawkins, Vic Justi and Bobby Hamilton. He'll continue operation of these companies in his new spot.

Victor in 'Circus' Buildup for March Package Program

RCA Victor is launching a half-price album program. For one month starting March 15 dealers will be able to buy any Victor album at half-price for every one purchased at the regular price in the same price range. The entire Victor catalog will be available in this sale promotion.

The half-price program will be promoted under "The Greatest Sale On Earth" banner. According to J. Y. Burgess, veepee in charge of commercial sales, the program has been devised to revitalize the interest of the record buying public and to give record dealers a chance to show customers "that a record shop is still the best place to purchase records."

A circus motif will be used to promote the sale. According to W. I. Alexander, ad-promotion manager, Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey "The Greatest Show On Earth" is allowing the use of their slogan for the first time. Through a co-operative advertising program, it's expected that local advertisers will spend over $250,000 on the program.

GEORGE SIMON TO HEAD NARAS EASTERN DIV.

The National Assn. of Recording Arts & Sciences now has a permanent exec director for its eastern chapter. He's George T. Simon, indie disk producer and longtime music consultant.

For the past year the post had been filled by Lillian Tookman who doubled from her job as pop publicity chief at Decca Records. Miss Tookman will assist Simon in his new assignment.

The exec directorship will now be a paid position at reportedly $10,000 a year. Miss Tookman worked for the org gratis. Simon's chores will include publicity, membership drives and an overall spread of the NARAS gospel on tv, radio, etc.

MGM Realigns Ad-Pub Setup Under Handwerger, Anger to Cover Verve

Two new departments have been set up by Sidney Brandt, veepee in charge of sales operations for MGM/Verve Records, to handle the advertising, promotion and publicity for both labels. Under the new setup, Sol Handwerger takes over as director of publicity, promotion and exploitation, and Harry Anger Jr. assumes the post of director of creative services.

Brandt pointed out that this division of authority and the creation of the new departments stemmed from the necessity for a general coordination of the MGM-Verve operation. Even with the new departments coordinating their push on both labels, Brandt stressed that both lines will retain their separate identity.

Handwerger, who's been with the MGM label since its inception, will concentrate his efforts in the publicity field with special emphasis on developing camgaigns for the established artists as well as the newcomers. He'll also continue to work in artists relations, promotional and exploitation projects.

In his new slot, Anger, who was formerly with RCA Victor and Warner Bros., will be responsible for the creation and development of all advertising, packaging and display material for both lines. He has been handling MGM sales promotion for the past year.

COLPIX UPS PHILLIPS TO MUSIC DIRECTOR

Stu Phillips has been named at Colpix Records to head artists & repertoire activities in both singles and albums.

Phillips recorded "Blue Moon" with The Marcels, which is currently running at a hot spinning pace. He also did the score for the Columbia Pictures' feature "Mad Dog Coll" and will record two versions of the title song. One side will be sung by Hal Waters and the flip will be an instrumental by Phillips. Both are on the film's soundtrack.

Lament By a Rock 'n' Roller

(To the tune of "Too Young")

They used to tell me: "You're too young,
Too young at twelve to have a hit."
They said I'd have to wait
Till at a later date
My singing had matured a little bit.
And so I waited quite a time,
And now my voice is in its prime.
And now at nineteen I am told
To be a star I'm far too old!

Jocks, Jukes and Disks

By HERM SCHOENFELD

Twiliters Orch (Flippin): "INFATUATION" (Village), adapted from the "Fascination" melody, shows up as a neat instrumental slice with strong commercial potential. "TILL I WALTZ AGAIN WITH YOU" (Village) is another oldie nicely executed.

The Brothers Four (Columbia): "FROGG" (Bigaroff) is a winning rewrite of an old nursery tune due for wide plays. "SWEET ROSY-ANNE" (Ludlow) is a charming folk song also rating attention.

Ann Margret (RCA Victor): "LOST LOVE" (Eldorado-Hidlo) boys this promising young songstress in a fine rocking ballad with good potential. "I AIN'T GOT NOBODY" (Mayfair-Vogel*) rocks the oldie in okay style.

Joe Harnell Band (Medallion): "FEVER" (Jay & Cee†) is a powerful instrumental rendition of this recent hit, due for another round via this entry. "NAKED CITY THEME" (Gower) is a fine slow-tempoed instrumental based in the tv show theme.

Dancing Panther Band (Warner Bros): "THE CHARLIE GREEN-SLEEVES MARCH" (Valley Entertainment*) is a striking instrumental conception handled in firstrate style by this group. "53rd & FIRST" (Valley*) is a lush classical-type side.

Johnny Rivers (Chancellor): "I GET SO DOGGONE LONESOME" (Hi Lo), a neat rhythm ballad with a simple message, is effectively handled by this singer. "KNOCK THREE TIMES" (Cigma) is a routine slow ballad.

Art & Dotty Todd (Decca): "CA C'EST LA VIE" (Oakland*), in a nifty ballar ride by this smooth harmony team, should grab plenty of spins. "DRIFTING AND DREAMING" (E. H. Morris*) is another pleasing slice.

Jo Ann Campbell (ABC-Paramount): "MOTORCYCLE (MICHAEL" (Pincus*) is a clever teen-angled entry, projected in this songstress' catchy high-pitched manner. "PUKA PUKA PANTS" (Ross Jungnickel*) is another solid rhythm number.

Rick Kellis (Mala): "EV'RY JACK NEEDS A JILL" (Aim†) is a rocking item slated for good impact in the juve market via this rendition. "LONELY ECHO" (Aim†) is a routine ballad.

Sunny Gale (Warwick): "SUNNY" (Conley-Selma†) is a nifty rhythm idea effectively belted by this songstress. "PLEASE LOVE ME FOREVER" (Tricky†) is an overblown ballad.

Mirriam Johnson (Jamie): "LONESOME ROAD" (Paramount* is a potent, open-voiced rendition of this oldie. "YOUNG AND INNOCENT" (Lindsome) is an okay juve-slanted torch number.

Peewee King (Landa): "SLOW POKE" (Ridgeway), the hit of about a decade ago, comes back with the same singer in pleasant rendition due for another round of spins. "LOOKING BACK TO SEE" (Jamie) is a bright novelty item.

Frankie Yankovic (Columbia): "P.T.A. POLKA" (Dorsey Bros.) is a snappy polka-tempoed slice played by one of the best in the genre. "BRUNO'S POLKA" (Mills) is another bright side.

De Castro Sisters (Capitol): "BELLS" (Criterion*), a ballad with a fresh lyric, makes a good commercial bow for this sister team on the Capitol label. "RED SAILS IN THE SUNSET" (Shapiro-Bernstein*) get a nice rocking-type slice.

Billy Ward & Dominoes (King): "LAY IT ON THE LINE" (Ward†) is a swinging entry delivered in commercial style by this rhythm combo. "THAT'S HOW YOU KNOW YOU'RE GROWING OLD" (Ward) is a solid rhythm & blues item.

Nick Charles (Guyden): "FOR YOU" (East†), a good rocking ballad, is delivered in arresting style for strong impact. "I WONDER" (East-Bais) is a more routine slice.

George Wein to Pilot Jazz at Castle Hill

Boston, March 7.

George Wein, operator of Storyville and director of Newport Jazz Festival, has been inked to direct a jazz concert program for Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. this summer. Spot has 1,700-seat capacity in its Garden, and 4,000 in its amphitheatre.

Richard Russell, prexy of Castle Hill, said "in the 10 years of its existence, the Castle Hill Concert Series has been supported by a loyal core of sponsors. We feel that now the series is ready to expand its sponsorship."

Wein said the Kingston Trio, Duke Ellington, Mort Sahl, the Weavers, Mahalia Jackson, the Modern Jazz Quartet, Odetta, Carlos Montoya, George Shearing, Josh White and Pete Seeger have been signed for Castle Hill.

Album Reviews

Carol Channing: "Show Girl" (Roulette). The current Broadway revue, "Show Girl," toplining Carol Channing with an assist from Jules Munshin and Les Quat' Jeudis, has been turned into a nifty disk package. The material is tuneful and hip and the performances are standout. Highlights include Miss Channing's "You Haven't Lived Until You've Played The Palace," her miniature musical theatre offering, "The Girl In The Show" and "The Inside Story." Munshin, with Les Quat' Jeudis, on "The Girl Who Lived In Montparnasse" and, with Miss Channing, "My Kind of Love."

Jimmie Driftwood: "Songs of Billy Yank and Johnny Reb" (RCA Victor). This is a superlative collection of songs pegged to the current 100th anni commemoration of the Civil War. Jimmie Driftwood is one of the best folksingers on the contemporary scene and in this set, he has come up with a splendid group of his own tunes, several of which could easily step out as single hits. The title song, for instance, is one of the catchiest of the lot which includes standout tunes like "How Do You Like The Army," "Rock of Chickamauga," "Git Along, Little Yearlings" and "Goodbye, Reb, You 'All Come," among others.

"The Blue and The Gray" (Decca). Here is another attractive set of Civil War songs performed by the Lansdowne Orchestra and the George Mitchell Chorale. These are songs from the period in stirring arrangements. The repertory covers familiar numbers like "Dixie," "Battle Hymn of The Republic," "Tenting Tonight" and "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again," together with lesser known songs from both sides of the Mason-Dixon line.

Great Moments At The United Nations" (Signature). This is a fascinating disk documentary covering the history-making highlights of the UN deliberations. Produced by Bud Greenspan and ably narrated by Dave Garroway, the double-LP set opens with the founding of the UN and covers such events as the Korean war, the crisis over Suez, the establishment of Israel, the tragedy of the Hungarian revolution, the Lebanese crisis and the Congo events. The story of the UN is told in large part by the voices of the delegates themselves with Garroway supplying the continuity.

George Shearing-Nancy Wilson: "The Swingin's Mutual" (Capitol). Nancy Wilson, a good blues stylist, steps out in this songalog with a push from the George Shearing Quintet. It's a smoothly jumping set showcasing Miss Wilson's jazz glissando on a half-dozen numbers with Shearing and an equal number of Shearing instrumentals. Vocals include "Green Dolphin Street," "The Nearness of You," "The Things We Did Last Summer" and others. Shearing here reprises his "Lullaby of Birdland" with his trademarked sound.

Chris Connor: "A Portrait of Chris" (Atlantic). One of the top jazz vocalists around, Chris Connor delivers here in her warmest style. Backed by some fine combos, she hits with potent impact on a number like "Harlequin," giving it pop impact. Other standout sides as "Follow Me," "Alone Together," "Day In, Day Out," and "I Got a Right To Sing The Blues."

Netania Davrath: "Behold Thou Art Fair" (Vanguard). This is a collection of songs from Israeli performed by Netania Davrath, a singer with an exceptional lyric voice. The tunes comprise the traditional and the contemporary, including the familiar gamut of romantic, work and military subjects. It's one of the best in the growing stack of Israeli song collections.

Tony Bennett: "Tony Bennett Sings For Two" (Columbia). This is a quiet but quite effective excursion for Tony Bennett. He's paired here only with Ralph Sharon's piano and the two develop a warm and intimate mood that the programmers as well as the home spinners will go for in a big way. Bennett pulls in the listener with ease and his repertoire is made up of songs that can stand spins over and over again.

Buddy Greco: "Buddy's Back In Town!" (Epic). There are enough swinging sounds in this album to continue Buddy Greco's buildup in the LP field. The package is tied in with his dates at the Roundtable (N. Y.), Le Bistro (Chicago), The Flamingo (Las Vegas) and The Cloisters (L. A.) which will probably give the set an extra promotional push. On its own, though, it stands up as a breezy and infectious sampling of Greco's free-wheeling delivery. He's got a habit of inserting the word "pizza" into a lyric that was written before the pizza-pie was invented but his fans will probably eat it up. The repertoire, by the way, is made of standout stuff.

Johnny Desmond: "So Nice" (Venise). Johnny Desmond is a pro singer always dependable for a solid songalog. In this set, Desmond dishes up a smooth program of standards with excellent backing from the Johnny Williams orch. Standout are numbers like "I Can't Get Started," "It Ain't Necessarily So," "That Old Devil Moon" and "There's A Small Hotel."

German State Opera: "The Flying Dutchman" (Angel). Stereo has finally caught up with "The Flying Dutchman" and it should turn out to be one of the top sellers in this year's classical sweepstakes. The German State Opera has an excellent group of artists on its roster who build the stirring Wagner piece into a memorable disk project.

The Grail Singers: "One World In Song" (Spire). An outgrowth of the Catholic Grail movement, this offering is a highly attractive contribution to good will among men. This femme chorus of Negro and white singers deliver an international repertory of folk songs with a charm and simplicity that is too frequently missing from commercial folksinging combos. Tunes include a couple of familiar numbers but most of the selections freshly from Scotland to South Africa with stopovers in Israel, China, Philippines, Columbia and France.

LANGENUS JOINS BIG 3

Alan G. Langenus is now with the Big 3 (Robbins, Feist & Miller), working under Edward J. McCauley, educational director.

For the past several years, Langenus has been active in the music field as an educational representative for major publishing firm. He's the son of the late clarinet virtuoso, Gustave Langenus.

Inside Stuff—Music

With the Oscar nominations of "The Green Leaves of Summer" and "The Second Time Around" as "Best Song," the Big 3 (Robbins, Feist & Miller) now has a consecutive 24-year streak of being represented in the Academy sweepstake. At least one Robbins, Feist or Miller song has been nominated each year since 1936, just two years after the founding of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences. During this period 38 Big 3 tunes have been nominated and five have copped the Oscar. In the "Best Score" categories, the firms also has a streak going via its consistant representation for 23 years. During this period, Big 3 chalked up some 72 "Best Scores" nominations and won 11 Oscars. In the 1960 race, the firm is represented again with musical scores from "The Alamo" and "Let's Make Love."

New song by Meredith Willson will be introduced in "The Kansas Story," the main event to be presented with the Kansas Centennial Celebration in Topeka and Wichita this summer. Willson has tagged the song, "My State, My Kansas, My Home," and introduced it to Kansas by singing it in his "Iowa wolfhound baritone" over long distance to a committee of newspapermen in Topeka last week.

Some years back Kansas legislature adopted "Home on the Range" as the state song, but public gotherings generally ignore it now. Tin Pan Alley had an entry some years back in "I'm from Kansas," but never became part of the state's lore.

MGM Records is hopping on the motion picture theme music bandwagon. Diskery is rushing out three David Rose albums from three current pix, "Exodus," "Cimarron" and "Butterfield 8." The record company is tieing in the three albums with local playdates of the pictures and has instructed its distributors to work with local theatre managers for mutual disk-pic promotion. In the case of "Cimarron" and "Butterfield 8" (MGM picture properties) arrangements are being made to insert album copy in the local pic ads. Special emphasis is being placed on the disk jockey level to feature the three albums as part of paid theatre ads and spots.

RCA Victor has come up with a promotional tie-in with the William J. Burns International Detective Agency to stimulate dealer display of its new line of "Stereo Action" albums. Under the deal arranged by W. I. (Bill) Alexander, Victor's ad-promotion chief, Burns is assigning guards to scout retail locations in 50 major cities. For every different "Stereo Action" album they find in a store window, Victor will send the dealer one free copy. Victor is supplementing this tie-in with color motion displays for dealer windows. Any dealer missed by the Burns guards will qualify for cuffo albums by sending in a photo of his window display.

Story last week erratmed in reporting the Platters had sued Mercury Records for $100,000 in back royalties. Fact is, the disk-nitery act simply wants a determination from the Cal Federal District Court that it, and it alone, is to have say-so as to a lead singer. Situation developed after Tony Williams, who'd been lead voice, ankled the group last year.

The Platters' suit also seeks an audit of the diskery's books, but does not actually allege that the label has defaulted on back royalties.

Besides a jobbery, Kingston Trio now own San Francisco's Columbia Tower bldg., which they recently bought for $350,000. They work with Capitol Records on a 5% royalty and earned $1,000,000 last year from all sources. They intend to quit when they've each socked away $500,000 in tax-exempt municipal bonds at 4%—"that means a tax-free annual income of $20,000."

Stanley Green, author of "The World of Musical Comedy," just published by Ziff-Davis, is starting his own radio program in April over WBAI, N. Y., which will be tied, after his book. The hour program will be flexible to permit commentary, rare musicomedy records, and guest interviews.

Metropolitan Opera's audition for aspiring singers from the Middle Atlantic region will be held March 17 at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. National Council of the Metropolitan Opera pays $300 to winners of regional auditions across the country.

Jack Scott Moves to Capitol; Crusade Ties Frank Gari; Other Signings

Jack Scott, who has already clicked on the Carlton and Top Rank labels, will now record under the Capitol banner. Prior to signing with Cap, Scott bought back his contract from Top Rank, diskery, which discontinued operation two weeks ago. In the deal with Top Rank, Scott got back the rights to three previously released LPs, seven previously released singles, and four unreleased masters. According to Alan Livingston, Cap's veep for creative services, this material will be considered for possible future release by Cap.

Crusade: Frank Gari

Frank Gari, currently riding with the "Utopia" disk, has signed a new five-year contract with the label. A followup single to "Utopia" is due this month and his first album is being readied for release later this spring.

Strand: Mitzi Mason

Mitzi Mason has joined the Strand roster. Singer had previously etched for the MGM and ABC-Paramount labels. Her first sides under the Strand banner are due for release this month.

Everest: Pepe La Staza

LeRoy Holmes, general manager of the Everest label, has signed male vocalist Pepe La Staza. Jerry Lieber and Mike Stoller will produce La Staza's initial single for the label.

Keith Prowse Sells Out Instrument Firm Shares

London, March 7.

Keith Prowse has disposed of its controlling interest in the John Dallas musical instruments setup. Two years ago it acquired a 51% stake in the firm but has now sold out to Gordon Lee, boss of Lee Products, a London radio and electrics concern. Keith Prowse has sold its shares at a small profit.

Lee, Mrs. Joan Lee and Walter Van Francks have joined the board of John Dallas and Peter Cadbury, Keith Prowse topper, and Major M. Soames have resigned.

UA LABEL WINDS UP NAT'L STAFF MEETING

United Artists Records wound up its semi-annual meeting of department heads and regional managers in New York yesterday (Tues.) to kick off the company's spring program. Art Talmadge, UA Records' v.p. and general manager, designed the meet so that regional managers could kick around problems with various department chiefs.

Sales chief Andy Miehle conducted a seminar for distributors around the new "Ultra Audio" packages. Also attending were David V. Picker, UA Records exec v.p.; a&r chief Don Costa, foreign operations chief Sidney Shemel, and ad-publicity director Norman Weiser.

Philly Symph Bids Murrow For Help in Arranging Tour Of So. America; Has 250G

Philadelphia, March 7.

The Philadelphia Orchestra has requested Edward R. Murrow, director-designate of the U.S. Information Agency, to arrange a South American goodwill tour by the orchestra in August and September.

A local industrialist has put $250,000 on the line for such a mission if the Government is willing to equal that amount. Roger Hall, the orch's manager, took the appeal to Murrow to persuade him to use his influence with the State Dept.

Murrow was encouraging, Hall reported, but trips overseas by the Philadelphians want to make are included in the $400,000 Federal budget allocation, which has already been allocated down to the last penny. The State Dept. would have to seek an emergency appropriation from Congress, which is loath to do. The USIA handles all tour details, but can't ask Congress for money. The Philly orch made a European tour including Russia, Romania and Poland in 1958.

New Weill-Brecht Song Gets Pop Single Push

Kurt Weill, who had a posthumous click with "Mack The Knife" a couple of seasons ago, is back on the disk circuit again with another song he wrote for the Berlin theatre in the 1930s. The tune is "The Bilbao Song," which Harms, one of the Warner Bros. music firms, is prepping for a revival.

An instrumental by LeRoy Holmes on the MGM label is already on release and Johnny Mercer has just completed an English lyric for the company to line up vocal disks. "The Bilbao Song" was written by Weill and his lyricist, Bertold Brecht for "Happy End," the production which followed "The Threepenny Opera." Latter production contained the "Mack The Knife" melody. Marc Blitzstein did the English lyric for a revival of "Threepenny Opera" which has been running at the Theatre de Lys in N. Y.'s Greenwich Village for the past five years.

Milw. & Chi Symphonies To Concertize in Pic House

Milwaukee, March 7.

Both the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra and the Chicago Symphony will contract with the Oriental Theatre here for next seasons concerts, providing the city of Milwaukee does not come up with a lessee for the now city-owned Pabst Theatre by March 3.

When Pabst Theatre Foundation, present lessee of the Pabst, indicated operations would end May 31, other showcases were sought by both orchestras. Harold Janecky, Oriental Theatre supervisor, said the March 3 date was set due to commitments of motion pictures and other attraction at the Oriental next season.

J. Emmett Ryan, city real estate agent, working with others appointed by Milwaukee Common Council's joint buildings-grounds and finance committee to develop plans for keeping the Pabst open, indicated doubt about meeting the March 3 deadline. Work on the proposed $6,000,000 Music Hall-theatre has not begun.

Industrial Premium Deals Develop As Coin & Exploitation Angle for Diskers

The disk industry has developed a solid business in the use of records as a merchandising tool by a wide variety of manufacturers. Over the past couple of years, disks have pyramided a wide spread in giveaway, coupon and premium campaigns into a multi-million dollar adjunct to regular commercial disks.

RCA Victor and Columbia Records have been the leaders in the tie-ins but other companies, such as MGM Records, with pressing facilities have also been pitching for this trade. Not only is it profitable to keep the pressing plants working on these items, but catalog and artists are also given heavy promotion as a corollary to the various advertising campaigns where disk premiums are used.

Col has been developing this phase of the business through a separate division, Columbia Records Productions headed by Cal Robert, while primarily RCA Victor has been working its industry tie-ins through the advertising-promotion department under W. I. (Bill) Alexander. Alexander's stress has been on long-term premium deals where the key factor is the extra expected on record for new product and artists. Col has chiefly been supplying manufacturers with material not normally commercially available in regular custom processing deals.

Victor deals have focused on premium samples of new product, covering EP and LP deals which have sold from 25¢ to $1.25. Main consideration for Alexander in entering into a tie-in deal is the amount of advertising coin to be spent by the outside company. In the case of Brooks Stationery the deal involved over $100,000 in advertising in consumer mags and on radio-tv when gave exposure to new disks which Victor could not afford to buy. Victor deals have been arranged through Leonard Feldman Associates, a firm specializing in product tie-ins and tie-in campaigns.

Currently Col is riding with Lucky Strike cigs on one of the largest self-liquidating deals to date, involving the sale of a 12-inch LP, titled "Remember How Great" for $1 plus 10 cig packs. Col has had some striking tie-in clicks starting with a Liberace disk for Guild Films even years ago and extending to a Benny Goodman platter for Texaco, a Tony Bennett platter for Coca Cola (which hit over 1,000,000 in sales), an Auravision paper disks for Remington and a sports disk for Gillette.

In Victor's linkup with Dr. West's toothbrushes to kick off its 33 1pms compact singles, an order of 100,000 disks was placed in front. The manufacturer packaged the toothbrush directly with the seven-inch disk. Victor also has had premium disk deals with Buitoni, Strank Pajamas, Sealina and Northwest Airlines, Studebaker Lark, Heinz, Kellogg's Betty Crocker and Budweiser.

Most recent one involves a deal with Ringling Bros. & Barnum & Bailey Circus. Victor has issued a sampler titled "Greatest Sale On Earth" with a circus imprint. Ringling Bros. will use it in its promotional campaign timed for the opening at Madison Square Garden this spring.

Capitol Branches Into Electronics Via New Subsid

Capitol Records is launching a full-scale entry into the electronics field. A wholly-owned subsidiary, EMI US Ltd., will handle the operation and services of two independent electronics firms, Hoffman Electron Tube of Westbury, N. Y., and the Voi-Shan Electronics Division of Voi-Shan Industries Inc., of L. A.

According to Cap's prexy Glenn E. Wallichs, EMI US has been established for the purpose of manufacturing and marketing a broad line of electronics products in the military, government, industrial and consumer field. EMI (Electric & Musical Industries), the giant British electronics firm, moved into the U. S. disk area several years ago with the purchase of the Capitol label.

Daniel C. Bonbright, Cap veepee in charge of electronics activities, named Bruce Rozet to the post of veepee and general manager of EMI US.

The new company will have four divisions. A broadcast division, which will market studio equipment, professional tape, records and related equipment; a magnetic tape division, which will market video, audio and instrumentation tape; an electronic division, which will manufacture and market the full line of special high-performance electron tubes and microwave instrumentation; and a consumer products division, which will manufacture and market electronics products for home use.

EMI US has retained key per-

Marty Gold to Coordinate RCA's 'Stereo Action' Line

Marty Gold has been set as coordinator of RCA Victor's Stereo Action line. In addition to his new post, Gold will continue as an artists & repertoire director as well as a conductor-arranger and recording artist.

Stereo Action is Victor's "The Sound You Can Follow With Your Eyes" concept. Four albums are already out and the diskery is planning an expanded program in this area. Jack Somer, administrator of Audio-Coordination, who developed Victor's "Electronic Stereo Re-processing" technique, will work with Gold on the technical sound aspects of the project.

ASCAP's D.C. Show

Washington, March 7.

ASCAP staged a variety program featuring songwriter Jimmy McHugh at the American Legion Congressional Night banquet here last Thursday (2).

Program, produced by James S. Rule, coordinator of public affairs for ASCAP, also included Connie Haines, Marguerite Piazza, Don Adams, the Mattison Trio and the Novelites.

SKAFF JOINS KAPP AS SALES DIRECTOR

Dave Kapp is revamping the organizational format of his Kapp Records company. The first step is the appointment of Phillip Skaff as managing director of the sales division. It's a newly designated post for the diskery. According to Kapp, this will be followed by new merchandising, advertising promotion departments.

Before joining Kapp, Skaff had been sales manager of M. S. Distributing Co. in Chicago. One of Skaff's first acts in his new capacity for Kapp, which becomes effective March 13, was to appoint Joe Cerami as label's national sales manager. Cerami, who became a Kapp divisional sales manager out of Cleveland last August, will now be based in N.Y.

Capitol Into Electronics

sonnel of both Hoffman Electron Tube and Voi-Shan Electronics. The Hoffman firm handled distribution of electron tubes and microwave components and for the past three years has been distributing EMI tubes in the U. S. Voi-Shan has been active in the development and manufacture of traveling wave tubes.

The new firm will have its exec offices at the Capitol Tower in Hollywood. In addition, the company will utilize an eastern sales offices in N.Y., manufacturing facilities in L. A., and warehousing facilities in 28 locations throughout the U. S.

Commenting on Cap's entry into the electronics field, Bonbrighd said, "We feel that the formation of EMI/US and the acquisition of two important firms in the electronics field are extremely significant steps in our company's forward progress. Capitol's move into the electronics field is, we believe, a logical step. It allows us to diversify our present activities by moving into an area that is closely related to our primary business, and one in which EMI, our parent company, has already established its eminence as a pioneer and as a major force in the vital area of research and development. We feel that the resulting combination of EMI's superior technical resources and Capitol's highly refined, wide ranging marketing organization will result in a strong competitive position for EMI/US, and will give Capitol a second major area of business opportunity."

Bonbrighd indicated that video tape will be one of the most important products to be marketed initially by EMI/US.

Current Events Blues

It doesn't pay to be too topical on disks. MGM Records, for example, had to go through a reediting and rereleasing process because one of its current issues, Mark Dinning's "Top Forty, News, Weather and Sports," had a reference to Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba who was murdered in the Congo after the disk was released.

The original version had Dinning reporting about "Lumumba doing the rhumba" and the MGM execs felt that the line was inappropriate in view of the events that followed. The company took out the Lumumba line and its re-shipment package advised deejays to use the new version instead of the original.

GARNER DRAWS $6,700 IN CLEVE. ONE-NITER

Cleveland, March 7.

Erroll Garner's concert drew about $6,700 at Cleveland's Public Music Hall last Saturday (4) at $4.50 top. Sponsored by G. Bernardi as part of his Cleveland Opera Assn. series, jazz pianist drew about three-fourths of a house in the 2,000-capacity auditorium. Turnout was somewhat of a let-down compared to Garner's sell-out record at Music Hall last season.

Bernardi, who recently booked Mort Sahl and Shelley Berman here, is bringing in Bob Newhart March 19. Other events on his roster include Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo March 10-12, Jose Greco April 2 and Carlos Montoya April 15.

Impresario made unique tie-up with Higbee Department Store which has hypoed sale of tickets. Store's music department takes phone orders for concert seats purely as a gratis courtesy to its charge-account customers and also plugs Bernardi's musical attractions in daily store ads.

to be determined. And still another exec, who's committed his label to a 13-week skein on a Nashville station plans to pull out when it's over. Also, he's still not sure of whether he'll try a time-buy elsewhere.

The paid broadcasting pitch, whether it be on tv or radio, isn't exactly a new idea. For the past year, Columbia Records has been airing its independently produced five-minute tape strip called "Playback." The show which features Col prexy Goddard Lieberson in a discussion with one of the diskery's artists was tested successfully on WNTA-TV, N. Y., and then booked on to stations in L.A. and Chicago. The Kapp label, too, is happy with its air-time buy on WQXR, N. Y., operated by the Times. According to Dave Kapp, label's prexy, a positive reaction to show has definitely been indicated by upped sales in local retail stores of a specific record album after it's had its airing on the WQXR program.

Marek

whether merely audio or, as and when, coupled with the visual adjunct.

The "how to" appeal makes the wall-screen—or some collapsible device on top of the phonograph—more likely for the foreseeable future. The videotape development has too many legalistic kinks, anent royalties, performance rights, etc., yet to be worked out before it becomes commercially feasible, although much of the technique has long since been resolved in the planning and even the practical model stages.

Getting more portable 33 rpm machines into the field so that "the kids can have them at a price, as when we first merchandized the 45 rpm pop single" is the major problem for the 33 rpm single. As a footnote, Marek also is still not satisfied with the progress made by stereo. There, too, price is a factor if "real stereophonic sound is the aim, not the makeshift machines we now have."

Homegrown Artist Taking Play Away From U.S. Disks in European Market

The foreign record and music industries have caught up to the Americans. U.S. dominance in overseas markets, especially on the disk level, is on the wane, and some execs who represent the Yankee companies on the international scene believe that there won't be a resurgence to the early post-war years when American-made records and music were in overseas forefront.

Not only has there been an economic rehabilitation in Europe, points out Nat Shapiro, director of international artists & repertoire for Columbia Records, but a developing nationalistic sense is giving the homegrown product and performer a better chance there than ever before. Now that they've pulled out from the war debris, says Shapiro, the foreign publishing industry is catching up, the recording industry is catching up and in addition they're now developing a style of their own. And more of this foreign style is beginning to take over in the U.S. as evidenced by the recent clicks of "Calcutta," "Wonderland By Night" and "Sailor."

For a long time, Shapiro points out, France and Italy were the main source of material for a U.S. push, now it's been extended to Germany and England with the Scandinavian countries making some inroads, too. The U.S. publishers are now making a concerted effort to move in on the European scene in a two-fold maneuver—to get material for U.S. publication and to get their U.S. copyrights disked and played.

It's on the U.S.-to-Europe disk level that the natives are taking over. There are still some U.S. performers like Elvis Presley, Connie Francis, Ray Conniff and Percy Faith, especially with his "Summer Place Theme" click, that can't be duplicated, but for the most part the native talent is doing its own versions of the U.S. disclicks and taking the play away from the Yanks.

In England, for example, singers like Lonnie Donegan, Tommy Steele, Marty Wilde, Cliff Richard and Adam Faith are dominating the bestselling charts and pushing the U.S. performers into overset. And in the foreign language countries, the lingo is the important thing so the translated disks by the local artists do better, for the most part than the U.S. versions. Some American performers are doing their songs in several languages now to beat this rap but it's effect is not yet indicated.

Strong Competition

The strong competition against the U.S. made disk cannot be blamed on the foreign publisher, although he's instrumental in getting the cover records. An overseas publisher usually pays between $500 and $3,000 for the rights to an American song and to protect his investment he tries to get as many home-made records of the tune as he can. It's possible in foreign countries to get as many as eight disk versions of songs whereas in the U.S. covering or duplicating practice has virtually diminished.

The press to get local performers on a tune is basic. Most of the broadcasting facilities overseas are government controlled and it's been an unwritten policy to concentrate on local artists. The Americans can get their play through the Armed Forces Network and Radio Luxemburg but more exposure than that is needed for an overseas breakthrough.

Also tv, which is considered highly important now in England in breaking a song, is practically monopolized by the local talent. First, they're available, and second, most of the U.S. performers are priced too high for the shows.

Personal appearances also are of value. Not many U.S. diskers who've come up with clicks hit the overseas trail. Although they're okay for holiday rock 'n' roll shows, most of them are meaningless out of a recording studio.

The performers who do know how to work "live" do get on the jet circuit and their foreign sales point up its value. Connie Francis, for example, is currently on a European trek, and such U.S. diskers as Paul Anka and the Platters consistently rack up strong international sales because they are on a steady in-person global run.

Acquaviva Maps 'Pops' Layout For Carnegie, N. Y.

Tony Acquaviva is planning to launch a N. Y. "Pops" Symphony Orchestra similar to the Boston "Pops." According to Acquaviva, $250,000 has been raised for the project and a schedule is being prepared with Carnegie Hall as the probable home of the orch.

There is also a plan for the orch to perform at the Metropolitan Opera House during the Met's off-season. Country-wide tours are also being mapped out.

Although many of the musicians will be experienced professionals, it is planned to select some from among top students at N. Y.'s leading music schools and conservatories. Another phase of the project will be to set up a series of scholarships for youngsters who will join the orch when their training has been completed. In addition, Acquaviva intends to introduce new works and to restyle a number of standards by Jerome Kern, Cole Porter, etc.

Acquaviva is the husband and manager of singer Joni James.

BRITISH PIC EXHIB MUST PAY PRS FEES

London, March 7.

The High Court has granted an injunction to the Performing Right Society restraining G. S. Smith, of Plaza Cinema, Prestwick, near Manchester, from infringing the Society's copyright in certain musical works by publicly performing them at the Grove Cinema, Stockport, without the PRS license.

Smith had declined to take out a license but performed the music of "First Man Into Space," "Blue Fever" and "High School Confidential" by using the sound track of the films. Smith was ordered to pay costs and the question of damages will be looked into. In the U.S., pic exhibitors were exempted from paying performing rights fees on pic music under a 1950 antitrust consent decree inked by ASCAP.

Trinity Inks Jeff Barry To Exclusive Cleffer Deal

Trinity Music, Ed Burton's fi ., has added Jeff Barry to its writer roster. Barry, who is a singer as well as a cleffer, has "Tell Laura I Love Her" and "Teenage Sonata" to his credits.

The firm already has six of Barry's compositions set for disk exposure. Barry, incidentally, is only 22 years old.

Sam Cerami takes over Marcus' Mercury spot.

Payola Spotlight On Frisco

recompense received for playing records." Les Stein program manager of the KYA said in reference to the FCC quiz. Stein is also a deejay himself with a show called "Johnny Raven and the Birdcage."

"However, we maintain strict control over the records, no record can be played on the station without my personal okay and I listen to them all," Stein said.

"KYA deejays have my fullest confidence. They're my boys. I believe in them. We're not doing anything wrong. I told the FCC that. Hunter asked the questions; Curtis wrote down the answers," Stein said.

At KDIA in Oakland, Walt Conway, station manager, said the FCC investigators had discussed payola and that they took affidavits from his personnel stating they had no outside interests in the field at all. "We were cleared last time and we're still clean," Conway said. "I don't believe there's anything going on."

At KSAN in San Francisco, Don Patterson, station manager and one of the owners, freely admitted that payola was the major subject of the FCC interrogation. "They thought there was payola going on," Patterson said, "but all my boys sign a notarized statement at each payroll period that they're not taking any money and haven't. I was able to show the FCC this. "In addition, Patterson claimed strict control of records programmed by checking other stations and by personal supervision of his wife.

At KEWB in Oakland, station manager Milt Klein echoed the other reports and added that a local distributor, Golden Hit Recording Co., "was certainly mentioned," and that the FCC inquired specifically of a party allegedly given by Golden Hit. "They asked which of my personnel attended," Klein said.

Rumors of Payola

For months now the record business has been alive with rumors of payola in San Francisco complete with stories of call girls, wild parties and free trips for jocks.

Two other station executives also mentioned the FCC interest in Golden Hit. "Golden Hit figured prominently in the discussion," Walt Conway said, and Patterson also admitted he was quizzed on the subject.

San Francisco, which was all but by-passed in the original payola investigation, has seen the rise to radio prominence recently of Peter Tripp, formerly of New York. Tripp is currently scheduled to appear before New York Special Sessions Court on charges arising out of a criminal information which sticks him with 39 counts of commercial bribery.

Tripp is accused of accepting about $35,000 from various record companies in a two-year period in return for his alleged agreement to play certain recordings of those companies on the air.

Tripp in San Francisco last week said "I've had a lot of postponements and my lawyers think there will be more. I have nothing further to say."

San Francisco began to attract attention as Payola City last fall, according to the trade.

Tripp and other KYA jocks, such as Bob Mitchell and Jim Stagg were brought to San Francisco from the Philadelphia area by Les Stein when he became program manager of KYA last year.

Frisco's current reputation as a hot record city wherein hits can be made is new. The trade dates it from last fall and Stein attributes it directly to the influence of Tripp and Mitchell.

Sparked By Rivals

Feeling in Frisco is that the FCC inquiry was sparked by either a rival station or by a disgruntled record distributor unhappy with his showing on the various surveys and with the spins he has gotten on the stations.

The Federal Trade Commission is also rumored interested in the situation here because Frisco distributors also service Reno, Nevada making it inter-state.

Don Patterson at KSAN admits to receiving an anonymous call last fall from a distributor complaining about listings and plays and threatening to go to the FCC. Another anonymous call to a Frisco newspaper reporter from a manufacturer charged certain San Francisco jocks with threatening reprisals against a particular line unless it moved over to the distributorship operated by a friend of the jocks.

"If I didn't do it," the manufacturer said," I would be locked out of airplay. I can't fight it. I have to stay in business, but I am going to hit the next guy who says 'swinging' to me."

As a result of the current FCC probe, stations are tightening their controls. Patterson has issued an order at KSAN forbidding "Fraternization with any distributor. I don't want it," he says, and has set up specific hours and days for visits by pluggers and distribs.

Stein at KYA feels he already has sufficient controls. "I can't help them socializing," he says and admitted that Bob Mitchell, George Goldner, a manufacturer and Bob Krasnau of Golden Hits were out at dinner right that moment.

"What can I do about it?," he asked. "I believe in my boys and no record can be programmed without my okay. I listen to them all." Record promo personnel, however, maintain that at least until the FCC visit, KYA jocks could be approached directly to play disks.

Another object of FCC attention was a disk issued last fall by M-K label and handled by Golden Hit whose president is Bob Krasnau and whose vice-president was, until he resigned recently, Pete Marino. Several local jocks are said to have had an interest in the disk, "Report to the Nation," which was later bought by Roulette. It was a stiff.

Louis Armstrong uses two NORELCO 'Continental' Tape Recorders at home and always takes them with him on his world-wide concert tours. Says LOUIS "I tape phono records and air-shots all the time and if I'm in the room talking with friends, my NORELCOS keep right on copying with the volume turned down." Louis also finds the choice of three speeds convenient, using the slowest, $1\frac{7}{8}$ ips for interviews and speech recordings, the $3\frac{3}{4}$ speed for some music, and the $7\frac{1}{2}$ speed for live recording. He says, "I've tried lots of tape machines since I got my first one in 1948, but NORELCO is the one for me." Recently he picked up two NORELCO 'Continentals' in Copenhagen. Set to run on the European power frequency of 50 cycles, they were reset for 60 cycles when he returned to the United States. Like all NORELCO recorders they can be set in a few minutes for any power voltage requirement anywhere in the world; from 110 to 250 volts. The NORELCO 'Continental' is a product of North American Philips Company, Inc., High Fidelity Products Division, Dept. 1LL3 230 Duffy Avenue, Hicksville, Long Island, New York.

symphonic and concert field during 1960 was $107,250, an increase of $5,000. over 1959.

Aside from the financial report which was handed down by Coast co-chairman Wolfe Gilbert, sitting in for ailing comptroller George Hoffman, other highlights of the meeting were talks by prexy Stanley Adams, attorney Herman Finklestein and Ned Washington, also a Coast chairman. The third Coast chairman, Jimmy McHugh, was absent due to business in N.Y.

Finklestein disclosed that ASCAP had signed new performing rights pacts with both NBC and CBS and was still in the middle of negotiations with ABC. But it is expected that a deal with that radio web will soon be resolved.

Harold Adamson presented Finklestein with a plaque from the Coast members in recognition of his service to ASCAP. Also reported at meeting was the appointment of Charles Brown, former Missouri Congressman, as replacement in seat of deceased Paul Cunningham.

Cuffo Talent at Disk Jockey Hops Faces AGVA Crackdown on Coast

San Francisco, March 7.

A crackdown on the practice of using free talent at so-called "record hops" in the Bay Area has been kicked off by Phil Downing, branch manager here for AGVA.

"I have served notice that these people must be paid our minimum wage and must sign contracts," Downing says.

"I ran into one case last week. A young kid came up from L.A., paid his own way and was supposed to appear at a record hop and he wasn't going to get paid one cent. I was able to stop that."

Record hops in the Bay Area are currently being run by Bob Mitchell and Jim Stagg, both of KYA.

"I've told Mitchell and these people that I am going to start closer surveillance of these hops," Downing said. "We feel if someone is good enough to make an appearance, he's good enough to get paid. If the disk jockey is going to make a buck, everybody concerned has to, too."

Record hops, under criticism in the record business since the FCC payola probe last year all but disappeared locally until Mitchell and Stagg started operations this winter.

"I've complained bitterly," says a plugger for a major label. "We bring up one of our artists and drag him around to two and sometimes as many as four hops on one weekend. The artist doesn't get paid at all and in addition we're asked to furnish 25, 50 or 100 free records to be given away free at the hop. If we didn't the jockeys give us static about not playing the records on the air."

"I view this as an imposition on kid performers who don't even know they're supposed to be union members or get paid," Downing says. "It has to stop. From now on they've got to check these things with us, just like they have to hire a union band."

Hops are frequently held in San Leandoro, Redwood City, San Jose and other suburban Frisco cities. On occasion they have drawn as many as 4,000 kids at $2 a head. "All the jockeys do is rent the hall and pay the band," the plugger says. "The rest is gravy."

Denies Problem

Mitchell denies any AGVA problem at all. "I talked to Phil Downing," he says, "but he didn't tell me of any AGVA ruling on this matter. Everybody who makes one of these hops gets paid. The band gets paid and so do the others. How much? Well, it'd be a personal matter. But they get more

Phony Stock Sales Get Ex-Singer Al Shayne Yr. In Jail on Tax Evasion

Al Shayne, a former radio singer who was billed as America's "Ambassador of Song" in the 1920s and '30s, last week was sentenced to a year in prison on charges of income tax evasion. He pleaded guilty in N.Y. Federal Court Dec. 5 to understating his 1954 and 1955 income by $74,583 and failing to pay taxes of $10,500.

In imposing the sentence Federal Judge Alexander Bicks pointed out that Shayne had run up his bundle by selling phony stock as a salesman for two Canadian over-the-counter securities houses. "Everybody who ever had any business with him was trimmed," the court said.

Shayne was given the jail term despite pleas of lenience on his behalf by a number of persons prominent in the theatrical profession. Among them was raconteur Harry Hershfield who was in the courtroom at the time of sentencing. The judge rejected a defense request that Hershfield be permitted to intercede in court for Shayne.

Judge Bicks, who emphasized that Shayne's business was selling a "sucker list," added that he took into consideration the pleas of Hershfield and other theatre people in making the sentence one year. Shayne could have received a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $20,000 fine. The defendant, who is 60, will start his term April 1.

Bill Would Forbid Bias At New Hampshire Spots

Concord, N.H., March 7.

No one would be barred from an amusement establishment or other public place of accommodation in New Hampshire under a bill filed in the Legislature here by Rep. William H. Craig Jr., of Manchester.

The measure states briefly, "No person shall directly or indirectly discriminate against any religious sect, class or nationality, or against any member thereof, as such, in the matter of board, lodging or accommodations, privileges or conveniences offered to the general public at places of public accommodations."

P.R. Union Wants Island Show Biz To Accent Natives

By AL DINHOFER

San Juan, P.R., March 7.

The Puerto Rico Assn. of Artists & Technicians (PRAAT) has called for legislative action requiring employment of at least 50% Puerto Rican talent as a condition of any Commonwealth government loan to showmen. PRAAT also asked for amendments to the tax exemption law to require at least 50% local talent be used in radio-tv shows, night club acts, and Spanish language films produced in P.R.

In a new and accelerated effort to encourage the hiring of more island talent, the local artists' union also proposes the extension of tax exemption to film houses and legit theatres that employ at least 75% local talent.

PRAAT's proposals were made in a nine-page memorandum to the head of the House of Representatives Labor Committee.

The goal of wider autonomy for Puerto Rico is the goal of PRAAT, the memo said. But such a move would not necessarily include any "radical divorce" from mainland entertainment unions.

Antonio Torres Martino, head of PRAAT, said this week: "Our goal of autonomy without a rupture with the various mainland entertainment unions is 'the essence' of the recent conflict with the San Juan Drama Festival (which concluded March 5) and the current dispute with San Juan resort hotels and AGVA.

The strike by PRAAT members last January in front of the Tapia Theatre, where the Drama Festival was holding forth, ended in a temporary agreement on dues and jurisdictional matters with Equity.

8 PHILLY NITE SPOTS IN CITY TAX SQUEEZE

Philadelphia, March 7.

Eight midcity night clubs were faced with closing when Revenue Commissioner Mortin E. Rotman asked the Department of Licenses & Inspections to revoke the amusement licenses of the spots for failure to make tax returns in the last year.

The city levies a 5% amusement tax on gross receipts and the midtown spots were among a total of 21 in Philadelphia which had neglected to make returns. The cafes are Gay Nineties, Chassey's, Tahiti, Moravian Bar, Orchid Lounge, the Bar X, Tally's Paradise Cafe and Bar Cel Inc.

Sammy Davis Set For 2-Weeker In London

Sammy Davis Jr. has been booked for a two-weeker at the Royal Theatre, London, Aug. 21. Bob Melvin is among those on the bill with him. Following the Royal Theatre stand, Davis and the troupe will do two weeks of one-nighters in the provinces.

William Morris Agency' British agent, Harry Foster, is routing the tour.

Judy's Concert Swing

Judy Garland is being booked on a concert tour which will include a Carnegie Hall, N. Y., appearance April 23. Her manager, Freddie Fields, and David Negelman will sponsor this event.

Miss Garland's tour will include Rochester, Buffalo, Washington, Birmingham, Atlanta, Greensboro, Charlotte, Philadelphia, Chicago and Cleveland. She's currently filming "Judgment at Nuremberg" for Stanley Kramer.

A.C.'s Big Splurge On Tourist Lures

Atlantic City, March 7.

The boardwalk division of the Greater Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce will ask the Hotel-Motel Assn., Chamber of Commevre directors and other local business groups to get behind a subscription plan which would raise $46,000 to stage events to bring more visitors here through 14 off-season weekends.

Part of this fund would go to pay a salary for an entertainment director whose responsibility would be to plan and stage the affairs, which would range from theatre and cultural attractions to sports events.

For any part of the $46,000 taken, the subscriber would be given an allotment of coupons to be used to purchase tickets to any or all events at discounts, with the tickets to be disposed of any way the subscriber desires. The project would be handled by the Off-Season Attractions committee which for several years was responsible for legitimate shows at the now demolished Warren Theatre.

The group would stage weekend events on such periods as Halloween, Thanksgiving, Palm Sunday and Mothers Day, bringing in an attraction which would be strong enough to draw tourists for a two or three day stay. It would seek to work out a "package plan" which would include, for one price, the planned attraction plus hotel or motel accommodations, meals at two or three top restaurants, rolling chair rides, horse back rides, a motion picture visit, plus a night at the 500 Club or any similar nitery.

A. L. Roth, division chairman, said the major purpose of the fund is to enable the director to plan and arrange comprehensive programs five to six months ahead of time so that hotels, motels and the city can promote the event in their advertising.

More Promotion

It will cost more than $12,000,000 to operate this resort city this year. Real estate taxes will contribute around $6,500,000, the remainder coming from dozens of sources. For instance holders of licenses to sell alcoholic beverages will pay $136,000 and visitors will drop $1,600,000 into the city's coffers in the form of luxury taxes.

The resort will spend more than $402,640 through its press bureau to stage promotion events, buy advertising space and pay the salaries of its staff. The bureau lists 20 items to cost $315,600 in this year's budget, largest of which is newspaper and magazine space and promotional advertising which will cost $190,000. Special features and promotional events will cost $40,000 more.

Radio and television shows which include programming, production and line charges will cost $25,000. An additional $13,500 is earmarked for concerts on the Garden Pier. Such events as pageant promotion, hydrangea festival week, honeymoon week, headliner award weekend, etc., are also listed.

Webster Exits GAC

Dick Webster, of the Coast office of General Artists Corp., resigned last week. Plans were not announced.

Webster had been serving at the Beyhills office as liaison with other offices in GAC.

GAC to Be Part of Baldwin-Montrose Chemical Co. Under Proposed Merger; Deny Reports Agency's Up for Sale

General Artists Corp. is slated to become part of a large industrial complex. The board of directors of the Montrose Chemical Co. and the Baldwin Rubber Co., together with Centlivre Brewing Corp. of Fort Wayne, Ind., have approved plans for a merger

Stockholder approval, felt to be only a formality, remains before the consolidation becomes effective. GAC is part of Centlivre. Meeting of the Centlivre board was held Thursday (2) in New York.

At the same time, rumors that GAC was about to be spun off by its parent, were hotly denied. Reportedly, several groups were attempting to raise about $2,000,000 for the purchase of GAC. However, a company spokesman in Philadelphia explained that controlling interest in GAC's parent, Centlivre, is not available to the public since more than 51% of the stock is dominated by Herbert Siegel, the new GAC boss, and the Reuss Family of Fort Wayne, from whom Siegel obtained the brewery.

Had $70,524 Loss

Centlivre, incidentally, reported a $70,524 loss in 1959, before it obtained control of GAC. No new figures are yet available. At that time, 656,544 shares were outstanding. Centlivre stock sold for around $7 when it started to take over GAC, but is now around 15¾. It's traded on the Midwest Stock Exchange. The Internal Revenue Service must also render a favorable ruling before consolidation can become final.

Under terms of the amalgamation, Baldwin stockholders will receive one share of a new convertible preferred for each share of common held. Montrose stockholders will get seven shares of a new convertible preferred for each 10 shares of common held. Centlivre shareholders will get one share of new common for each common share held.

Fiscal Details

The surviving company, to be known as the Baldwin-Montrose Chemical Co., will invite tenders to new convertible preferred from other shareholders at $21.50 per share. It will buy up to 50,000 of these shares. There will be about 740,000 shares of convertible preferred in the new company and about 760,000 shares of common stock. Conversion privilege of the new preferred will run for 10 years. There is the possibility that the surviving firm's label will eventually be changed to Centlivre Inc.

The approximate combined 1960 sales for all three companies was about $30,000,000. The new com-

Book Mahalia Jackson For European, Israel Tour

Gospel Singer Mahalia Jackson has been lined up for a tour of Europe and Israel. She starts her junket April 7 at Albert Hall, London and continues in major cities during that month and thence for a trip to Israel, plus appearances for U. S. Armed Forces units.

Mildred Falls, Miss Jackson's accompanist, will make the trip with her.

Offbeat Concepts Put Merc Artists In Concert Field

Mercury Artists is moving into new areas. According to Arthur Treffeisen, percentery's exec veepee, an agency must present the offbat and the unique in order to exist today.

Following this line, Trieffeisen took off for Europe Monday (7) to iron out the wrinkles for the upcoming tour of the Katanga Dancers and Singers in the U.S. and Canada. The trupe, which is due for a Toronto breakin about Aug. 15 (an originally planned March start had been postponed), will be presented by Mercury Artists. It will be the agency's first attempt in this concert presentation area. The 50 members of the Katanga company are now touring Europe.

During his overseas stay, Treffeisen will also go to South Africa to look over the Johannesburg-Durban axis for which Mercury recently obtained exclusive booking privileges in a deal with Klissen Promotions there. Mercury already plans to book a new attraction into this circuit every month.

Also on Treffeisen's agenda are talks with the D'Oyly Carte Co., which he represents, for a U.S. tour in the fall or early next year.

INK TENNESSEE ERNIE AS CNE HEADLINER

Ottawa, March 7.

Tennessee Ernie Ford will head the grandstand show at the 1961 Central Canada Exhibition in Ottawa. CCE has announced no other names for the revue, which will operate nightly Aug. 21 to 26 although the fair is set for Aug. 18 to 26. It has been customary to book separate items for the Friday and Saturday openers.

Last year a rock 'n' roll revue filled the first two slots, followed by a Hamid-produced revue topped by Dorothy Lamour.

Power Blackout Lights Staging Idea for Eddy

Cleveland, March 7.

Nelson Eddy and Gale Sherwood will always remember Cleveland as the big blackout burg that nearly sabotaged their act. On their last night at the Alpine Village an icy snowstorm knocked down the powerlines and extinguished all the nitery's lights, a few minutes before their performances.

Herman Pirchner, ingenious manager of club, quickly ordered waiters to fire up all the table candle-light stands and placed a score of them around stage. Nelson and his partner put on two shows by candlelight, drawing terrific ovations from sellout crowd.

"Unique candlelight effect was so stunningly dramatic in showmanship," Eddy said afterwards, "that I may work it into my act as a novelty stunt. It might also relieve business recession problems by putting more candle-makers back to work."

AFM Withdraws Ban On Mex Tooters, Permits Dunes' Restaurant Bow

Las Vegas, March 7.

The Dunes opened its ultra-plush new restaurant, The Sultan's Table, Friday (3) but a hassle with the musicians union almost prevented it.

Major Riddle, hotel prexy, insisted that a group from Mexico City, Arturo Romero and The Strings of Villa Fontana, be installed as permanent entertainers—in fact the room was designed with Romero & Co. (3) in mind. Two pianos are in the eatery's center with 11 pin spots from the ceiling illuminating the 11 violinists circling the 88ers.

Up until two days before the skedded opening, the American Federation of Musicians nixed the hiring of the Mexicans, holding out for U. S. musicians. Riddle said the restaurant would not open without Romero & Co., and threatened a $500,000 suit against the union.

Hours before the opening, Jim Murray of the local MCA office, repping the Mexican group, announced that the union has given in, and would permit the Mexicans to work here. Murray said permission was given because "it was pointed out that this was a unique group which could not be duplicated in the U. S."

Puerto Rican Talent Union Ousts Prez For Inciting Anti-American Riots

San Juan, March 7.

An official of the Puerto Rican Assn of Artists & Technicians (PRAAT), accused of instigating anti-American sentiment at the strike against the San Juan Drama Festival, early in January has been forced to resign by fellow-PRAAT members.

Jose Antonio Diaz Velazquez, a local radio announcer and PRAAT director representing radio artists, submitted his resignation to Antonio Torres Martino (PRAAT prexy) this week. He was strongly criticized for provoking catcalls of "Yanqui, Go Home," in front of the Tapia Theatre, Olo, San Juan, during the strike.

Torres reportedly refused to accept the resignation during a union meeting this week when the radio announcer rose to say he believed it was generally felt his political views would embarrass the union in its dealings with management here as well as with other talent unions on the mainland.

Popular vocalist and songwriter Bobby Capo (founder and ex-pres. of PRAAT) vehemently demanded the offer be accepted.

The English language daily San Juan Star quoted Capo as saying:

"You can't convince the people we are an honorable organization when our facade is dirty and ugly-looking, just as you can't convince a prospective tenant to walk into a luxury apartment house when its front is not neat and up to standards. Diaz Velazquez is an agent for Prensa Latina (official propaganda agency for the Fidel Castro government), and was the instigator of the anti-American slogans shouted in front of the Tapia. We cannot afford to be misrepresented by someone who pushes his political feelings into union affairs."

In temporary balloting that followed the resignation, Camilo Fratecelli was named to succeed Diaz as radio announcers' rep until formal elections are held later this year.

Farrell, Jonas Merge

Two vet indie agents have formed a personal management partnership. Dave Jonas and Phil Farrell, who had been sharing offices, decided to make the sharing situation much wider by amalgamating their firms.

New firm will be known as Farrell & Jonas Associates.

KY. CHURCHMEN RENEW WAR VS. NIGHT SPOTS

Cincinnati, March 7.

A renewed attempt by Northern Kentucky churchmen for a cleanup of Newport and Campbell County hot spots seeks to oust eight high officials for "gross neglect of duty" in enforcement of gambling, prostitution and liquor laws.

The charges, filed in an affidavit with Governor Bert T. Combs, had no immediate effect on operations, but did bring a prompt rejoinder by one of the accused, Campbell County Judge A. J. Jolly. He contended that the Kentucky governor cannot remove a judge from office.

Among ten clubs accused in the ministerial affidavit of being "large and public gaming dens" were niteries Tropicana Club, the former Glen Rendezvous, in Newport, and Beverly Hills, in Southgate. Exhibits offered with the affidavit as proof that conditions were common knowledge included Saturday Evening Post and Esquire articles on "Kentucky's Open City" and "Sin Town" labeling for Newport.

Navajos Seek to Scalp $3,000,000 Tourist Loot

Albuquerque, March 7.

The paleface tourists have plenty of loot, and the Navajo Indian Tribe (in the four corner area of New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado) are hoping to separate them from much of it as the result of hypoed tourist facilities on the reservation.

They're anticipating an annual income in excess of $3,000,000 from facilities around Glen Canyon Reservoir (in northeastern Arizona) when it's completed in 1964. The area is expected to be a big recreation area.

This was the word last week from Paul Krause, range conservationist for the Navajos, at a conference on economic development of Indian reservation resources in Albuquerque. He said the annual expected tourist income equals all the income from the reservation's livestock agency in its best year.

Oldtime N. Y. Agent Patient At Bellevue Hospital

Tom Fitzpatrick who is one of the oldest practicing independent vaude and cafe agents, was taken to Bellevue Hospital, N. Y., (Ward A-4) suffering from pernicious anemia. He's reported in serious condition.

In the early days, Fitzpatrick represented some of the top people including Jack Benny, George Burns, among others.

Mpls. Expanding Stadium For New A.L. Ball Team

Minneapolis, March 7.

Minneapolis city council has okayed a pact between the Minnesota Twins, American league baseball entry, and the Metropolitan Sports Area commission freeing $2,000,000 worth of city general obligation bonds. Release of the bonds, final step in paving the way for the start of major league ball here next month, will permit expansion of Metropolitan stadium in suburban Bloomington from its present 21,000-seat capacity to 30,000.

Pact also covers division of revenues from stadium concessions and parking. City council voted to leave the stadium rental fee of 7% open to renegotiation in case the American league decides to change its formula in the future. Aldermen further moved to require a monthly budgeted statement from the ball club.

Casting Completed For 'The Kansas Story,' Will Mark State's Centennial

Wichita, March 7.

Expo producer Wayne Daillard of Los Angeles has completed casting of "The Kansas Story" to commemorate the state's centennial. Spectacle is slated for two weeks at Wichita and a like run at Topeka beginning June 13 and running through July 18.

Daillard's budget for the two stands is $428,000 above the line and $200,000 for production. Daillard will produce and Meredith Willson is composing original music. Performance will be taped as a possible network special.

Lucille Norman of Hollywood will have the singing lead. Others engaged include Stephen Kemalyan, baritone; Christopher West of London's Covent Garden as assistant director to Val Rosing; Tom Brown Henry, narrator; Ruth Page of Chicago Opera, choreographer; Patty Klekovic and Kenneth Johnson of Chicago Ballet Opera; Pat McGeehan, director of the sound cast. Cast, including 700 from the state's colleges, will total 1,300.

Daillard, who produced "The California Story" for four years, and the Oregon Centennial, is now negotiating with two other states for commemorative spectacles.

Clyde Beatty Hurt

Honolulu, March 7.

Clyde Beatty suffered a serious eye injury while nearing the end of a performance with the E. K. Fernandez circus. He was the victim of his own whip, the solid end of which jabbed into his eye while while he was maneuvering his animals.

Beatty completed the act holding a hand over the injured eye before being rushed to a hospital, where he was confined for about a week.

than adequate pay, sometimes more than what I understand is the AGVA scale.

"The hops don't always make money. I was in Newark last week and only had 180 kids and the nut on a thing like this is from $400 to $600.

At last week's record hops, Mitchell presented The Crescendos, Richard Berry, Tony Boy, Jerry Norman, and the Al Lewis band.

"I give Berry $125 when he makes a hop for us," Mitchell says.

Downing, however, states flatly that AGVA contracts have not been filed in the past for Mitchell's promotions. "They haven't filed and I'm going to insist upon it in the future," Downing said. When informed that Mitchell denied being warned by AGVA, Downing said, "He misinterprets our conversation to his convenience."

Among other artists recently presented by Mitchell at record hops are The Pentagons, Googie Rene and Bobby Day, all of Rendevous Records.

"I told Downing if he wants these people to join AGVA, get in touch with them directly. I told him I'd cooperate but what right do I have to tell these people to join AGVA?"

WINTER DID SNOW JOB ON A.C. LUXURY TAX

Atlantic City, March 7.

The January and February snowstorms, which nearly closed the resort for most of those two months, cost amusement and hotel interests here untold thousands of dollars. The loss is being reflected in luxury tax returns, 90% of which are collected from the visitor.

While the January loss was not too bad, during February the tax collections dropped $13,923 with the city collecting $50,764 as against $64,687 last year for the same month. Collections for the first two months were $120,731—compared with $124,214 a year ago, a net decline of $3,483.

Hotel St. Regis, N.Y.

Felicia Sanders (with Irving Joseph & Trio); Milt Shaw Orch (9) and Walter Kay Trio; $2 and $3 cover.

After this season rolls by the Maisonette management of the Hotel St. Regis will probably have reason to heed an old show biz adage, "Never rewrite a hit." For some false reason of economy, coupled with still another idea to "get the kids trade," the twice-shifted management of this posh 55th & 5th Ave. hostelry (long a personal citadel of the late Vincent Astor), subjected this class room to sharp changes. Not for the better.

Current bookng of the professionally competent Felicia Sanders is an accumulative observation ever since last fall's reopening of this class room. Neither she nor Diana Trask nor Marti Stevens nor Bud & Travis, to name some of the "new idea" bookings to attract the socalled "younger" trade, is too blame. It would be analagous perhaps to deciding to jazz up the Met and booking them there. Besides which, the "kids" can't afford St. Regis or Met prices.

The Maisonette and certain specialized thrushes, usually of Gallic leanings, are mated as close as Lea & Perrins or Park & Tilford and any attempt to rewrite the script so far as this class boite is concerned has invariably met with indifferent to disastrous b.o. returns. None knows this better than the waiters, and the class staff here is unique in its personal service and an attitude about its clientele which is also unusual. About this more anon.

There are no circumscribed horizons to any of these acts and it is not conclusive that certain singers are "more Blue Angel" or "more Bon Soir" than something else, but the St. Regis just happens to be that peculiar exception with result that, no matter the vocalistic competence of Miss Trask (the last thrush caught by this reviewer) or the incumbent Felicia Sanders, it is professional talent lost when it comes to a Maisonette booking. It is to the credit, on the other hand, that Miss Sanders maintains the balladeering mood as she did on the second (Friday midnight) day of her four-week stand. Miss Sanders has been singing all around the town, including one session at the Waldorf-Astoria. Vocally, she has made good in all these precincts, and including this room.

Backed by husband-accompanist Irving Joseph and a swinging trio, she ranges the top ballads interlarded with a "Fair Lady" medley in compelling manner topped by the "Moulin Rouge" theme which established her initially via a Columbia platter.

Switch in bookings, by settling Dorothy Louden's contract and bringing in Patachou is a dating that is back in the Maisonette's Gallic groove. Room is finaleing the spring season with Dorothy Shay ("the Park Ave. hillbilly"), the neo-Ozark chirper with the Gotham style who is invariably also good b.o. here.

On the personal service end, missing all of a sudden is maitre d'hotel August, 25 years of his 34 years with the St. Regis in the Maisonette. He is suddenly out. A personality host, well-known to and well-liked by the spending clientele of the St. Regis, he was as much part of the front-of-the-room scene as, for instance, the perennially favorite Milt Shaw, the dansapation maestro. August is now comfortably esconced at the cross-55th St. class L'Aiglon restaurant so, essentially, the change is one of emotional reflexes. This is no reflection on George, his long-time aide-de-camp, who is the successor maitre, and of course the continuing competent staff long here. Abel.

Sahara, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, Feb. 28.

Eleanor Powell, Dare Barry, Win Karish, Moro-Landis Dancers (16), Louis Basil Orch (17); produced by Stan Irwin, staged by Nick Castle, conducted by Richard Prebor; special material, Jack Brooks; costumes, Bill Campbell; lighting, Nick Castle and Floyd Tadlacka; sound, Joe Tritsch; stage direction, Sy Levin; $4 minimum.

The much-heralded, long-planned nitery debut of Eleanor Powell, after 14 years of retirement, can't honestly be called an unqualified smash—at least from a microscopic view of the first performance. However, the ingredients are there, and there's no reason to believe the act, which was tweaked by normal opening-night static, won't develop after a couple of nights' polish into a strong attraction for any room, anywhere.

Miss Powell looks magnificent; she dances with the same skill that made her name synonymous with tap terping; the Berman gowns by Bill Campbell are incredibly beautiful and a big plus for the turn; the staging by Nick Castle is of top level brilliance; "Her Gentlemen Friends" (Jerry Madison, Jim Harris, Gordon Cornish, Tom Gleason, are an ideal balance with their vocals and footwork; and there's an interesting combination of nostalgia and up-to-the-minute Broadway and Las Vegas flavor in the festivities. Nostalgic atmosphere was magnified when first-nighters gave Miss Powell a standing ovation.

Star gets fascinating effect by changing hairpieces for each number, topped by a colorful salute to "The Matador." Jack Brooks deserves extra credit for the clever special material.

When comedy star Dave Barry preceded Miss Powell in the show, he opened with, "I don't know why I'M nervous — I'm breaking in an OLD act." Then he went on to uncork a mostly new turn, with some of the best one-liners he's ever delivered here. Barry's topical gags ("Metrecal this year won the no-belly prize") keep him fresh, and always welcome as a yock-getter in Vegas.

New Moro-Landis production number, a 1961 tab of "Oklahoma!," features the "Most American Girls In The World" (16) and the splendidly robust voice of Win Karish, a singer of star calibre. Louis Basil's orch (17) backstops the Stan Irwin production, in for four weeks. Duke.

Society, London

Lita Roza, Gypsy Adam's Orch (5), Tony Scott's Orch (7) $3.50 top.

Lita Roza is a cute brunette thrush who is having a two-weeks limber up at this small, smart rendezvous before leaving March 20 for a date at the Sands Hotel, Las Vegas. She may well have to broaden her act for the American stint but, on this showing, she is fully capable of holding a supper audience for 30 minutes, with her smooth songs, mainly about love, its problems, frustrations and joys.

Maybe a little special material could well be worked into her act, but meanwhile she gives a neat new look to several pops. Teeing off with "It's the Wrong Time and the Wrong Place," Miss Roza continues with "A Certain Smile," a brisk version of "Just in Time," "You're the Only Man for Me" and "Who's Sorry Now?" Still with the accent on sex, she winds up with "Thursday's Child," "Do I Love You?," "The Other Woman" (which doesn't come off) "All of Me" and the hoary old cabaret payoff, "The Party's Over."

Miss Roza shows herself able to handle any hecklers with a neat line in goodhumored squelches. "Breathe in," commanded one woman in the audience. "I don't have to," the singer pointedly replied. Some of her linking patter is a shade untidy, but, overall, it's a peppy act, with Les Sands a deft accompanist and there's some good backing by part of Gypsy Adam's combo. The complete Adam outfit and Tony Scott's orch look after the dancing in lively fashion. Rich.

Prince George, Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 28.

Ruben Rivas and Quartet; no cover.

With Ruben Rivas from Mexico City the hottest Latin-American singing stylist locally, the guitarist is being sought by Toronto bonifaces for follow-up dates. Rounding out the quartet are pianist Darwyn Aitken; with Terry Forster on bass and Nay Belmonte, drums.

Rivas can drop the theme song from "Exodus" as being too lugubrious for fun-lovers out for a night on the town, along with his tooraucous "Jungle Birds" effects. But his 40-minute sets, three times nightly, are admittedly up the customers' alley.

Undoubtedly Rivas lures the city's femme customers. But he also has a robust singing voice that brings an enthusiastic reception that includes the male audience. until March. 11. McStay.

Eden Roc, Miami Beach

Miami Beach, March 1.

Joe E. Lewis with Austin Mack, Frances Faye with Jack Constranzo 4, Raye & Roman, Mal Malkin Orch; $6-$7.50 minimum.

One of the best cafe packages to play the circuit here this winter is current at the posh Cafe Pompeii in the persons of Joe E. Lewis, longtime staple at this room come height of season, and Frances Faye, who hasn't appeared in these precincts for nearly a decade. It's a rollicking coupling of two uninhibited saloon vets; the company they're keeping reflects the hold on the sophisticated and the hip sets who make up in big-tabs what they may, of recent years, lack in numbers.

Lewis, per every annum, comes in with a raft of new material, none of it tailored for the maiden aunts, all of it aimed at—and scoring with—the legion of faithful he attracts, plus the first-time-heard-him group from which the future fans must be built. The puckish pundit of the leerics and topical lines is in fine fettle, spinning out a yock-filled set of waggery on names in the news. He concentrates on the Kennedy clan, with a classic lampooning to special lyrics of the President, capped by a hilarious "lullaby" he might sing to his newborn son. It's delivered tongue-in-cheek, the edge taken off by Lewis' soft delivery and wide-eyed mien.

He works over Sinatra and the inn where he's playing opposite, in a set of darts that hit true to the aud's risibility centers. There's the lyric-tales on the wars between the sexes, on the fillies, equine and in lovely human shape; the ramblings round ringside for the "Post Time" pickups of libations that is his trademark. The banter with the ringsiders leads to a laugh-filled series of one-liners and ad-libs. Lewis, on for nearly an hour has to beg off.

Miss Faye precedes, and only a Lewis could follow the smash impact she makes on the customers. That hip-in-cast doesn't hinder her wayward song-tales and big-beat arrangements, once she's set at the 88. Accomped by show-stopping bongo-playing aide Jack Constanza and a high-riding trio of musical aides on the rhythm, plus Mal Malkin's fine batoning and orch, the Faye patterns embrace the recording standards she's associated with, the funny, adult-only angled chatter interjects during a riding arrangement. The big-vocability projects her up-tempo themes to all corners of the room to growing excitement and sustained approval that begins from first number. She makes the big 750 seater an intimate room, turning the stint into one big house party. Here, too, there's a begoff wind.

Raye & Roman, a handsome young pair of ballroomologists, work out in classy style, a series of adagio lifts and one-hand-balancing spins that paces what's to come via sock reaction. Austin Mack, per always, is the invaluable aide-de-piano to Lewis.

Due March 12, Marlene Dietrich and Morty Gunty for a five-day date, with Edye Gorme and Steve Lawrence following. Lary.

Harolds Club, Reno

Reno, Feb. 28.

Rusty Draper, Judy Lynn Berne (6), Donn Conn Orch (5); no cover, no minimum.

Rusty Draper and Judy Lynn are both regulars in this intimate room, and in this playback it's basically a carbon of prior shows. And from aud response there's no great reason for either to make any drastic changes in format. The Lynn offering, however, shows some changes in staging from last time around, and the difference is attributed to Nick Castle, whose efforts result in more immediate rapport with tablers.

Draper, with a talent on the guitar that matches his vocal ability, mixes his offering with more comedy stuff than in other prior local dates. But his strongest appeal still lies in his songalog, with self accomp. He has a robust style enhanced by an infectious stage personality, and he reaches into the far corners with little trouble.

Backed by the capable Don Conn orch, he makes his way through such as "St. James Infirmary," "Hound Dog," "Freight Train," "Just Bumming Around," and "Please Help Me I'm Falling." Singer works well in this intimate room, and full turn draws good attention.

Miss Lynn, a blonde looker in western togs, essays the country things to good effect, and fills in with comedy by Smokey Fletcher on corn field yarns. Much of the accent is on guitars and fiddles, with Miss Lynn nicely handling the vocals. She also proves good at yodeling. Offering is mostly up-tempo, with no lulls. For act's particular appeal, grading is much above the average. Long.

Holiday House, Pitt

Pittsburgh, March. 3.

Abbott & Candido, Terri Stevens, Chucho & Furn, Del Monaco's Orch (10); $1.50 cover.

The packed house here that greeted Abbott & Candido's (New Acts) night club debut were entertained with another good show at the Holiday House. The comedy team worked in three spots and closed the show.

Cucho & Furn, one of the top terp teams to play this area, keep the show going at jet speed after the A&C opening. Team was especially strong in its "Roaring Twenties" number. Terri Stevens, a fave in this room, is the other act on the show and she added luster to her spot. After an especially arranged opening to settle the crowd down after the boffs garnered by A&C in the "Lemon Drop" scene, Miss Stevens moves into the femme version of "Thank Heaven for Little Girls" from "Gigi." She follows with "Give the One You Love a Flower," "Faith," "Day In, Day Out," "Without You" and off real big with "Sing You Sinners."

Del Monaco's orch do their usual excellent job in cutting the show while Monaco also fills in once as a straight man for A&C.

Layout stays until March 11. Vagabonds move in on March 13. Lit.

Champagne Room, D.C.

Washington, March 1.

Julie Gibson, Everett E. Everett, Frankie Richardson, Alverda Ross, Mary Thiel and Charlie Parrish Orch; $3-$4 minimum.

Champagne Room has had its ups and downs in recent years, but currently is striving for recognition as a bonafide nitery sans stripper bills. Credit Buddy Ottenberg, booker and manager since first of year, when new policy was inaugurated. Ottenberg, ex-owner of the Rathskeller and Wedge in Philly and savvy showman, has pulled together one of the biggest nitery revues in this early-to-bed community—a five-acter.

Featured is comely Julie Gibson, billed euphemistically as an interpretative classical dancer, but more realistically is an exotic dancer. As they say: "a stripper by any other name . . ." Not to say she isn't well versed in modern dance and endowed with undoubted talent.

Moreover, although she sheds virtually all her costume, Miss Gibson spurns the baser stripper technique and offers an inoffensive, very diverting performance. This despite the provocative title of her act, "The Bashful Bride," her standard.

Frankie Richardson, an oldtime vaudevillian on a comeback and a sleeper lifted the patrons from their chairs with renditions of oldie song-and-dance routines. With a vibrant and powerful voice remarkable for his years, he clearly won the crowd-pleasing honors and is the best of his genre to wow this city in many a moon.

Alverda Ross, a trim brunet, does an Indian (East) dance, purportedly of a ritual nature. But it would cause lifted eyebrows in the temples, and authenticity, as well as art, takes a back seat to s.a. She looks nice in a gleaming silver get-up.

Mary Thiel is a statuesque torcher whose singing is passable but secondary to her blonde good looks.

Everett E. Everett is the funny man, who doubles as m.c. He's of the pre-Sahl-Berman-Newhart era and refreshingly traditional. No cynic or wise guy, he went over well.

Charlie Parrish orch does pro job in providing accompaniment and dance music.

Room is attractively laid out, but stage should be lifted to furnish all patrons better vantages. With luck, know-how and zest, this room could provide real competition to the few other D.C. niteries. Jay.

Additional Night Club Reviews On Pages 66 and 67.

Palmer House, Chi

Chicago, March 3.

Liberace (with Gordon Robinson), Clifford Guest, Betty Pasco, Ben Arden Orch (10) with Sylvia; $2.50 cover.

The Empire Room is nothing small, and Liberace had it crammed full opening night (Thurs.) in his first Windy City date in about two years. Three fan clubs turned out, but in the majority the payees were unsubscribed admirers, family trade, and the star kept them fascinated a total of 75 minutes with ornate pianistics and marshmallow charm.

If opening night's indicative, Liberace's a smash this time around. The notable change is that he's wearing his hair slightly shorter than before, but the rest of it is that same topflight showmanship, rococo and saccharine, that made him the rage of the matronly set some years back, and it still clicks in spades.

The gray-haired boyishness, the self-amused vanity ("Well look me over, I didn't get dressed like this to go unnoticed"), the keyboard ripples and glissandos and the gamut of body English all tote up to what the devotees crave, and more.

He delivers a large repertoire, two sets per show with a costume change between (from gold lame to diamond studs), and even though it all comes out filigree there's enough variety in type and tempo to sustain almost a concert hall appreciation.

By whatever spell, he makes the capacious room intimate and, betokening his influence over the crowd, gets full-voiced cooperation on a group-sing of "You Made Me Love You." Ranging from "Waltzing Matilda" to Tschaikovsky, he gives them plenty and leaves 'em wanting more. Gordon Robinson conducts for him.

Clifford Guest, working the costume-change interim—a rough assignment considering he follows the initial impact of the star—does a crackerjack job holding the fore with some imaginative feats of voice pitching. Turn is a ventriloquist's tour de force, simulating echoes, voices descending from the sky, a crying infant and tricky telephonics.

Dazzler is a fox hunt routine, with barking dogs, galloping horses and shouting huntsmen pitched in the distance, drawing closer and passing by. Withal, a witty and wholly satisfying stint.

Betty Pasco, a shapely dish garbed in tights, proves a good warmup for the bill with her aerial ballet from a specially installed chandelier. Working chiefly with double rings and trapeze, she evokes a gasp or two from footholds and a one-legged catch, and total response is solid.

Ben Arden orch cuts the show smoothly, per usual, and gives out inviting dance sets. Solo violinist, Sylvia, heralds the show with "Jalousie."

Bill is in through March 25 when house goes dark for Holy Week. Joey Bishop relights it April 1. Les.

Stein & Sirloin, Phoenix

Phoenix, Feb. 28.

Ann Richard, Joe Kloess Trio; $2 minimum.

Boniface Sonny Malcoff has brought leggy, bountifully stacked Ann Richard into his new Stein and Sirloin for a two week stand. The brisk palming awarded her vocal efforts preem night, would indicate that she is just what the jazz aficionados, who call the Stein their home-away-from-home, ordered.

This canary, a graduate of the Stan Kenton organization (he married her), has the smokey, sultry vocal technique typical of Kenton's femme alumni, e.g., Anita O'Day, Chris Connor and June Christy. She has a cheerful, I-want-to-please attitude.

But, unfortunately, her lush arrangements at times tend to be over orchestrated, simply beyond her timbre and range, leaving the thrush no place to go but flat. When she is warbling within her ken however, she must be marked with the stamp of approval.

"Jurdu" and "Three Little Words," from her Capitol album, and "Unrequited Love," "Glad To Be Unhappy" and "Lover Come Back To Me," subtly backed by the talented Joe Kloess trio, are her most potent lures.

Fontainebleau, M.B.

Miami Beach, March 1.

Frank Sinatra, Buddy Lester, Brascia & Tybee, Len. Dawson Orch; $17.50 cover plus $6 minimum opening night; $10 minimum thereafter.

Prexy-booker Ben Novack's season-saver at the b.o. is back for his annual two-weeker and, going on turnout for the sky-high priced preem session and midnight show at the 850-seater (over 900 when tables are squeezed, as in this case), Frank Sinatra remains the most potent name to play this jaded resort area in terms of gross-toes.

It's a more subdued Sinatra the crowds are seeing, in contrast to the ring-a-ding approach of former outings here. In turn, the appreciation at show caught was as strong as ever, but also, on the subdued side. End-effect was that of a hugely satisfactory performance in content, delivery and auditor acceptance, but it lacked the hullabaloo aura engendered before.

Midway in his two-week stand, Sinatra reverted to type, came up the carefree, free-wheeling, gag-ad-libbing topper with a book of request tunes that the high-tabpayers came to hear. At first staging, he purveyed a set of upbeat tunes with the brass, woodwinds and percussion sections of the expanded Len Dawson orch. Midway, a wide-screen was removed to unveil a full blown string-section complete to harpist, for a set of arrangements concentrated on ballads—torch, romantic and blues. Final segment had the upbeat mixture as before. It's all been changed since, with a carefully blended book of cannily timed up-tempos, identified with hits and the ad libbings that mark Sinatra's continued rapport with the auditors. On for nearly an hour, he could stay on longer if it were left up to the pounding tablers.

Buddy Lester is in a tough spot—it isn't easy on a comic to garner immediate laugh returns when the crowd's waiting for a topper of Sinatra's stature. Credit the fast working Lester with a click, thanks to the continued punching, the grabbag of weird hats around which he pegs his zany characters and finally, the "Africa" routine, updated and mirthful as ever.

Brascia & Tybee are tops in the terp department. They set matters off at a winging pace with their original turns on torrid sexy choreography, on the Flamenco theme, and the basic Latin beat they stress in their patternings. A class duo, they off to wham reception.

Len Dawson's crew abetted by Sinatra's pianist, conductor and rhythm are a plus to the proceedings.

Due March 14, Dean Martin.

Edgewater Beach, Chi

Chicago, March 4.

Yonely, Hal Loman & Playmates (2), Kenny Black Orch (5); $2.50 cover weekends, $2 weeknights.

After an embarrassing unveiling of a unit dubbed "The Little Revue" three nights earlier, the Edgewater's Polynesian Room last Friday (3) went back to a straight nitery format with two seasoned and proficient acts and need no longer apologize for the couvert.

"Little Revue," with a cast of four tyros who might just as well go unnamed, purported to be a sophisticated, satirical tab show but was strictly bush league. The material was milkwater and the performances desperate, and the first night house met it all with only a stunned silence. Foursome was paid for two weeks and dropped forthwith.

Hal Loman & Playmates was salvaged from the debacle (act had been incorporated in the revue for terp variety) and comic Yonely rushed in to make a show of it. It's now a more than presentable nitery offering.

Yonely, whose forte is musical absurdity, keys the crowd to expect a surprise a minute and satisfies virtually by the clock. He works first in panto, pretending a dead mike, and then with speech—and it's well he does, because he scores with both.

It's a zany turn in which he issues music from assorted midget instruments and plays those of orthodox size in unorthodox fashion, interlarding the stunts with low-pressure wit and out-of-pocket gimmickery. Lacking a bow, he plays the violin with a tambourine; and when he sits down to the piano it's with a pair of indoor softballs. The resulting music is always good for a burst of incredulous applause.

Yonely is such a unique act, and funny enough from his own resources, that he'd do well to jettison two minor bits of business that are clearly trademarked by others: Irwin Corey's note-reading pantomime and Mort Sahl's line about the fellow without the navel representing "the ultimate rejection of mother." Yonely act doesn't depend upon such material, and he's far better off without it.

A showmanly dance team, Hal Loman & Playmates (Bobby Alexander and Barbara Maye) arrest the audience for the first half of the bill with three eye-filling numbers, scoring particularly with a "Peter Gunn" showpiece. There's also an effective Boy Meets Girl terp drama. Miss Maye, who's identified early as Loman's spouse, turns out to be a very classy tepper, and a looker to boot. Three mesh nicely, and their dances are well conceived.

Kenny Black turns out a surprising lot of music with his five piece unit, both in showbacking and for the dance sets.

Bill is in till Holy Week, and house is giving up acts for a brief period.

Chardas, N.Y.

Laureanne Lemay, Nejla Iz, Tibor Rakossy, Elemar Horvath, Dick Marta & Bill Yedla; $3 minimum.

Yorkville, the most international neighborhood in New York, is an artistic melting pot of all language entertainment. The format of the Chardas, for example, calls for a background of languorous Magyar music, but chantoosies come from all parts of the globe. It's especially true in this instance when a Turkish soprano and a French singer constitute the major elements in the floorshow.

Nejla Iz, from Turkey, has an International viewpoint. She opens with a pair of tunes in her native tongue, including the w.k. "Uska Dara" but winds up with renditions in other languages including "Sorrento" and "Felle de Cadiz." Miss Iz has an amiable delivery, sustains herself well hitting the big ones and makes a favorable impression.

Blonde Laureanne Lemay, representing the Gallic school of thought, does a wide variety of songs in French and English. Her magnum opus is a tuneful impression of a lovesick girl on the tipsy side. She carries this off quite well and gets a strong mitt for the effort.

The other elements in the show continues to be Tibor Rakossy, the perennial emcee who trots out a colorful tzigane song for strong accolades; Elemar Horvath, who plays an eloquent gypsy fiddle, and cymbalom players Dick Marta & Bill Yedla, who get a lot of music out of pounding the strings.

Ritz Carlton, Montreal

Montreal, March 3.

Virginia de Luce, Johnny Gallant, Paul Notar Trio; $1.50-$2 cover.

Playing her first Montreal engagement at the handsome Ritz Cafe of this notable inn, Virginia de Luce exhibits possibilities as an intimery thrush. Backed with several seasons of musicomedy and a film ("New Faces"), this blonde looker should do well with added experience and polish.

At moment, femme needs more individual material; something not necessarily blue, but special items more fitting to her personality. Pacing throughout present offering is effective and Miss de Luce can belt a standard such as "Hard-Hearted Hanna" with the best of them.

A number called "I'm Basic" showed possibilities but indifferent lyrics failed to get song out of the just-average groove. A brief attempt to inject a few lines of French in "Man Around the House" was appreciated and could be extended.

On night caught Miss de Luce was garbed in a tight-fitting white sequin affair that revealed an okay figure and kept ringsiders attention. Songstress is backed by pianist Johnny Gallant plus the bass player and drummer from Paul Notar's group and combination, as usual, is excellent.

Miss de Luce is in until March 14.

Chi Chi, Palm Springs

Palm Springs, March 1.

Mort Sahl, Birk Twins, Ketty Lester, Bill Alexander Orch (7); $2 cover.

Not since James Thornton used to walk out on a vaude stage with a newspaper in his hand has anybody got as much out of the prop as Mort Sahl. But whereas Thornton was funny, rarely sober and could sing, Sahl is funnier, sober and can't sing a note. His spray-gun humor, which has the continuity of a wild dream, presupposes a hip audience or one which has at least read the news in the last few months.

Out of this knowledge he weaves his rugs like a modern Omar, feeling certain that the bureaucratic frailties, both public and private, will guarantee his laughs. That all governments, all enterprises and practically all people are crazy and will laugh if this is pointed out to them is Sahl's constantly replenished arsenal of humor.

This was his first appearance at the Chi Chi Starlite room and he did good biz. He may have felt that something happened in the room or to himself before he came on but actually for this boite, which is infamous for its malaise, he got good mileage out of his rambling and "Where was I?" travelaffs.

It didn't hurt to be able to point out in the day's paper that the President's father had just arrived in town and was bivouacing at Marion Davies' place while ex-President Eisenhower was only a few miles away. He thought that between Joe Kennedy and his business connections and General Sarnoff's and his, they could work up a sponsor for the Prez's press conferences.

But then, according to Sahl, the Prez could not mention the U.S. or Russia as that would be propaganda and verboten over the cabled conversation pieces. He knew. He had used the word, "integration," and found you could not use it in a comedy routine. That's why he walked off the Art Carney show.

Bill opens with Birk Twins, a handsome pair of acro-dancers and old faves in Palm Springs. They're followed by Ketty Lester, a shapely songster whose versions of "My Man," "An Old Fashioned Girl" and "Hard Hearted Hannah" were well received. But this biz of taking an encore for granted and telling the customers the performer is not going to walk offstage just to be called back is getting to be a big bore.

Bill Alexander's orchestra works well with the Birk Bros and Miss Lester. Sahl gave them nothing to do.

Earl's, Dallas

Dallas, March 3.

Sylia Saynt, Earl Humphreys, Ernie Johnson Trio; no cover or minimum.

Local singer Earl Humphreys, after three years as singing host at the plush 3525 Club and giving up the bandleading slot at the Statler-Hilton here after seven months, finally had his own privatery. It was built to order five years ago by a previous operator; physical setup is ideal for an intimery.

Petite Sylvia Saynt, headlines the opening fortnight and clicks neatly with "Birdie With a Yellow Bill," and exhibits powerful pipes with "Mr. Wonderful," where her phrasing and intonation is outstanding. She bounces ringside with "A Good Man Is Hard to Find" and gets ringside rapport with "Down By the Riverside." Gets off with "Bye Bye, Blackbird" to lusty mitting.

Humphreys gets off his fine vocals with "Manhattan," "Chicago" and "Laura." Ernie Johnson's trio is expert at showbacking and dansapation.

Next up are The Three Heartbreakers, March 15, for two weeks.

Latin Casino, Camden

Camden, March 1.

Johnny Mathis, Sammy Shore, Moro-Landis Dancers (16); Marty King Orch (21); Jack Curtis, $5-$6 minimum.

Johnny Mathis is a singer with a gimmick. He just sings.

A onetime star high jumper who probably could be a great dancer if he tried, he does no dancing, tells no jokes, keeps his introductions to an absolute minimum. If he says 100 words during a performance, that's a lot.

But he does a tremendous amount of singing and he has to beg off. A romantic with a style which gets to the females and doesn't antagonize the males, he mixes up his record hits like "Chances Are" with unfamiliar production numbers and standards and comes up with a well-balanced program.

Mathis could lay off some of the vocal tricks but his fans, especially the girls of all ages, like him as he is.

Comic Sammy Shore, a Miami comic with an easy style, makes his Latin Casino bow to a good response. His routine is not particularly original, but he pleases with comments about sports cars, Arthur Murray, Dick Clark, Khrushchev, and President Kennedy and his cabinet. Handy with a trumpet, he does an effective Satchmo bit.

The Moro-Landis Dancers work hard in a Spanish production number and veteran Jack Curtis does a good job as emcee.

The augmented Marty King orch (21), including a five-piece string section, gives good backing to Mathis, who has his own special arrangements and conductor. Mathis also carries his own rhythm section to give just the proper touch to his backgrounds.

A strong spring lineup is ahead, including Harry Belafonte, Joe E. Lewis, Dick Haymes-Fran Jeffries, Sophie Tucker-Ted Lewis, Milton Berle and Louis Prima-Keely Smith.

Steve Gibson & his Red Caps, featuring Romaine Brown, currently are featured in the Latin lounge.

Barclay Hotel, Toronto

Toronto, March 1.

Taylor & Mitchell, Will Gaines, Bob Arlen Dancers (7), Ronnie Hall, Percy Curtis Orch (3); $1.50 cover.

Taylor & Mitchell, just back from a seven-weeks' tour of Australia, prove themselves a very funny pair of fellows with their zany clowning, story-telling and film impersonations. With customers never knowing what to expect next, pair interpose song and dance in their 35 minutes when caught, but their crazy antics immediately register and team finally had to begoff.

Will Gaines, eccentric tap dancer and muscle controller, works up to a fast and furious acrobatic finale. Ronnie Hall, singing emcee, also participates in Bob Arlen's two production numbers to "A Night With Gershwin" medleys.

As choreographed by Arlen—with his wife Joni designing the gorgeous costumes — girls are garbed in pink for the first scene and silver-sequined gowns for the second. Dancers are neatly staged, with use of dry ice giving a further bounce to the finale.

But whole bill, though giving occasional sparkles of flash, is a professionally mediocre floor show, with Taylor & Mitchell supplying the only belly-laughs of the evening. Percy Curtis orch lends expert backgrounding to all acts and plays for the dance sessions.

Acts are in till March 11.

GAC Merger

pany will also have a controlling share in an affiliate with 1960 sales of an additional $18,000,000. This is presumed to be GAC. However, a company spokesman said he could make no statement because of SEC requirements.

Montrose in the year ended May, 1960 reported earnings of $902,284 or 95c a share on sales of $3,642,184 with 946,500 shares outstanding. Baldwin, in year ended June 30, 1960, had a net income of $588,071 on sales of $20,962,028. It had 437,907 shares outstanding, earning $1.34 per share.

Siegel, who is the major Centlivre shareholder and board chairman of GAC, also owns considerable stock in the Seeburg Corp. which manufactures jukeboxes. However, this is not aligned with his Centlivre holdings.

Meanwhile, the SEC has okayed distribution of an undisclosed block of Centlivre stock to a group of GAC employees, including officers and some executives who had resigned. All those included in the SEC ruling will be getting their stock certificates in about three weeks. Larry Kanaga, GAC president who had been on a Caribbean tour, returned to the office yesterday (Tues.).

Roosevelt Grill, N.Y.

Jimmy Palmer Orch (14), Al Conte Trio; cover after 9:30 p.m. $1.50-$2.50.

Tipoff to the lure of the Jimmy Palmer orch was the fact that even Guy Lombardo was on the floor dancing at session caught last Thursday (2). Lombardo, who is virtually synonymous with the Roosevelt Grill, closed a three-month run there just a few days before but the Palmer beat brought him back for some play on his night off.

Lombardo apparently isn't the only one who finds the Palmer beat attractive and easy to dance to. The maestro lays it down in simple terms that the non-pros, too, can follow with enjoyment. The style is a lot like Lombardo's, sliding saxes, muted brass, etc., with a peppy Palmer touch added. The arrangements are fashioned along breezy lines and the book is made up of a standard catalog that keeps everyone happy through every set.

Palmer helms a crew of five brass, four reed and three rhythm that builds a sound that's just right for the room's easy terp atmosphere. The floor, by the way, is one of the best in town, providing plenty of space for the dancing couples to move around.

Bill Dyer comes on every now and then for a vocal stint and his soft style excellently complements the orch backing. In one of the sets, Palmer dished out a medley of Carmen Lombardo's tunes. It was quite appropriate.

Al Conte's trio (drums, bass, piano) came to Grill's podium in 1955 and has been playing there about eight months a year ever since. The long run is understandable. The three pieces deliver a beat that draws the terpers, too, and with an occasional vocal interjection it adds up to a bright interlude.

Palmer is set through April 1 and may stay longer.

Adolphus Hotel, Dallas

Dallas, March 2.

Dink Freeman, Don Brooks Three, Joe Reichman Orch (7); $2-$2.50 cover.

Dialect comedian Dink Freeman is back for his third local date (second in the plush Century Room, and this time as headliner). His multiple-dialect yarns keep the laughs rolling. He's adept and tasteful, smartly pacing his 30-minute stint.

Don Brooks and partners, Peggy Barnes and Mike Bennett, make a fine opening with Brooks' imitations of famous dancers. Miss Barnes does a neat solo vocal of "Do It Again," and the trio inserts a slick terp reprise of the Black Bottom and Charleston before leading an aud singsong of "Saints Go Marching In" for a fine exit after 25 minutes.

Reichman's band capably backs the dual acts and, per usual, loads the floor at dance time.

Sophie Tucker replaces the show March 9 for two frames.

Caucus Club, Det.

Detroit, March 2.

Barbara Streisand, Matt Michaels; $1.50 minimum.

Barbara Streisand has a natural talent as a ringer-performer which was recognized when she broke in at the Bon Soir, N. Y., last September. She's now only in her 11th week of singing professionally.

Her voice is strong and of good pitch; her mannerisms and facial expressions uninhibited and unusual. She is striking, rather than beautiful, with a classic profile accented by an elevated hairdo. She dresses simply but effectively.

For this engagement, Miss Streisand has chosen songs appropriate for the sophisticated audiences of the Back Room of this posh downtown spot. She opens with "Lorelie," adding plenty of body action to capture interest, following with "Sleepin' Bee" and "When the Sun Comes Out." Vocally, her best number is "Cry Me a River," which brings her back with an encore of "Lover Come Back to Me."

Miss Streisand lacks polish, which will come with experience and direction which she needs to reach her potential. She impresses as a youngster who will succeed in intime spots and, perhaps, musical comedy later on. Her accompanist, Matt Michaels, provides expert backing.

Latin Quarter, N.Y.

E. M. Loew & Ed Risman production of "Vive La Femme." Produced by Ron Lewis. Music and orchestrations, Tom Joerder, Bill Jacob. With Rowan & Martin, Chop Chop & Charlene, The Therons (6), Harrison & Kossi, Latin Quarter Sextette, Dorothea MacFarland, Gloria Le Roy, Ron Lewis Line (30); Jo Lombardi Orch, Buddy Harlowe Orch; $7 minimum.

Messers E. M. Loew and Ed Risman have parlayed three new acts into their long-running "Vive La Femme" revue with such ease that it plays almost like a fresh show. Top new entrant, comedy team of Rowan & Martin, is making its Broadway nitery debut with this engagement. And it's a far cry from their original act, some eight years ago, when they decided to abandon comedy writing and become do-it-yourself purveyors of the laugh stuff.

These California lads score first with an easy-to-take delivery. Leaning on the simple comedic formula of doing three routines but putting them across solidly, they measure up to their best tv efforts. No. 1 bit concerns tv commercials, which is only a warm-up for the later two routines. Their tv personality interview sketch has announcer-interviewer Rowan prepping Martin (the to-be-interviewed celeb) prior to the telecast and on the air. The latter makes the perfect tongue-tied intellectual.

Payoff skit is a concept on of Sir Laurence Olivier doing Shakespeare in a Las Vegas nightspot while being heckled by an intoxicated patron. Martin, as a drunk from Akron, O., makes a production of his beer bottle antics and caustic comments. While some of this is familiar, it is put across so deftly that it winds the act uproariously.

The Therons, three girls and three mates, are topnotch cyclists. They open garbed as French Legionnaires even down to the rifle slung over their shoulders and doing cycling routine. One of the men, made up like Groucho Marx, shoots off the front wheel of a bike while the cycle is in motion. There are feats on unicycles of various heights. Climax is when the tallest male rides a bicycle so tiny it is carried in an airplane travel kit. A fast, audience-pleasing group.

Chop Chop & Charlene, billed as the Charlie Chan of Magic, is another sock addition to this show. He clicks with the cigarets appearing out of the air bit, the magico dove producing and disappearance routine and the climatical live-flame swallowing stint. Charlene is his comely Oriental assistant. Nicely-paced, this act has been around and continues a sturdy novelty.

Current revue still has Harrison & Kossi, adagio dancers, for an early Apache number and later performing acro routines. This costly, handsome show continues to please with the semi-nudity and daring dances in the "Images of Paris" and "Carnival in Rio" production numbers. The Latin Quarter Sextette is a neat change of pace with its operatic arias.

Jo Lombardi cuts a sharp show for this rather lengthy production as well as playing for patron terping. Buddy Harlowe combo alternates for dancing. Gigi continues as the maitre'd. Wear.

Eddys', K.C.

Kansas City, March 3.

Betty Johnson, Lou Marsh & Tony Adams, Billy Williams Orch (6); $1.50-$2 cover.

Singer Betty Johnson is making a repeat date, having first appeared here about two years ago. Coupled with her is the comedy team of Lou Marsh & Tony Adams, this being their first in the Eddy Restaurant.

Since her previous appearance Miss Johnson has heightened her following with tv dates with Jack Paar, and as a result biz looms good for the fortnight here. Marsh & Adams adds an important ingredient to the bill, with Billy Williams in his usual forte as emcee and orch leader.

Two turns round out an hour-long show that moves nicely, with the comics taking the first session. Tony Adams leads off, warbling a tune, cracking a line or two and bringing on Lou Marsh for a line of chatter, series of impressions and ribbing of radio and tv. They raise a strong line of laughs with their Amos 'n' Andy bit, clown out a terp routine and wind tootling a pair of trumpets dixieland style for a solid hand.

Miss Johnson warbles a wide-variety of tunes, from faves and established numbers to originals, and of course her Republic record hits. Opener, "I Love Everybody," is by now known from her Paar appearances, and she also has "Never Kiss" as a neat novelty original from the Bart Howard pen.

She also has a Howard medley, along with "Wait Till You See," "Let Me Love You" and "The Party's Over," "Little Blue Man" and "I Dreamed" are crowd pleasers, and she closes with a warm "'S Wonderful." Her half hour shows much polishing since her previous stand, and the whole turn has a well rounded, beautifully sung quality. Well-filled house responds with strong approval.

Show stays through March 16. Quin.

Bon Soir, N.Y.

Karen Chandler, Del Close, Hal & Bryna, Jimmie Daniels, Three Flames; $5 minimum.

This Greenwich Village cellar keeps rolling along. With a regular format of comedy and song, room has developed a following of regulars and has won a rep among tourists as a spot to be visited.

The setup this sesh, which gives way to headliner Phyllis Diller tomorrow (Thurs.) coming in for a month's run, is mainly designed to display Karen Chandler in an intimate atmosphere and to showcase the comedies of newcomers Hal & Bryna. Rounding it out are some wry observations by Del Close, the showtune singing of host Jimmie Daniels and the happy musical beat of the Three Flames.

Miss Chandler, who cracked into the bigtime several years ago via the disk route with her Coral etching of "Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me," is a solid singer who doesn't have to worry about getting out of a recording studio and up on a stage. Her pipes are potent, her manner appealing, and her arrangements, supplied by her husband Jack Pleis who also takes over the piano for her turn, are topflight.

Her opener, a nifty version of "I've Got To Crow," gets the audience on her side from the start and she seldom loses 'em. There's a lapse now and then when she tackles a slow ballad, or when she refers to her disclick or to deejay Dick Clark (some people in the audience didn't know who she was talking about), but when she gets on a belting kick she really stirs up the house. It's a long set. However, it's nicely varied and it indicates that she could do well in any sort of surrounding.

Del Close is a thoughtful comedian who worries about a lot of things. The style is slow but the observations are precise and the audience doesn't have to dig for hidden meaning. He's in the egghead class, but any layman will know what he's up to. His throwaways hit the mark and his dissertation on objects like doorknobs, beer-can openers, etc., that are out to destroy humanity is a classic bit in its genre.

Hal & Bryna are similarly oriented but not quite so successful. The team is reviewed under New Acts. Gros.

Tidelands, Houston

Houston, Feb. 27.

Jorie Remus, John Gary, Don Cannon Orch (6); no cover or minimum.

Jorie Remus is a wild one; not too far out, just wild. Gangling comedienne comes out in black pedal pushers, a white and black boa and sequined spectacles. She uses those props to fullest, then climbs on a piano, but not a la Helen Morgan. She sits, squats, kneels and sprawls on the 88, and somehow, every move draws yocks.

A huge string of add-a-pearls is good for several laughs, and her not-quite-party-songs bring good returns. Titles run something like, "I Go Home to Mother on Mother's Day" and "Never Kiss a Man Who Talks." In a naturally low voice, she is good on impression of Carol Channing doing mimic of Marlene Dietrich. Act timed at 30 minutes.

John Gary, young lyric baritone who has had some tv shots on the Paar show, is effective in opener, but more on him in New Acts. Don Cannon and his big bores (meaning high calibre musicians) again are first rate in backing chores. Skip.

Sands, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, March 1.

Nat King Cole, Corbett Monica, Garr Nelson, Copa Girls (12), Antonio Morelli Orch (21); produced by Jack Entratter; choreography, Renne Stuart; $4 minimum.

Nat King Cole, one of Jack Entratter's best Copa Room magnets, is back at the mike with those mellow sounds, which means casino biz should be extra-brisk for the next two weeks. Show's comedy star, the smooth & handsome Corbett Monica, is icing on the cake.

Cole varies his turn this time with some freshies including Mack David & Jimmy Van Heusen's "Where Did Everyone Go" and Johnny Burke's "Don't Put Her Up on a Pedestal." But he wisely clings to many evergreens with which he's identified, such as "Unforgettable," "Mona Lisa," and his famed bowoff, "Joe Turner." As usual, his first night audience begged him to more than his allotted time.

Monica, one of the fast-rising young standup comics, clicks with his stories that get extra big yocks because they strike close to home—in fact, they're stories of home life with emphasis on wives and children. Monica shows here again that he's a valuable asset for any program.

Two festive Renne Stuart production numbers are held over from the previous bill. Entire package is expertly backed by the Antonio Morelli orch (21).

Gordon & Sheila MacRae open March 15. Duke.

Flame Room, Mpls.

Minneapolis, March 3.

Kim Sisters, Lenny Espisito, Danny Ferguson Orch (8); $2.50 cover.

Korea's Kim Sisters are knockouts. It's a bit surprising to find so much talent and versatility under three ponytails, but this doll-like trio packs entertainment galore into a 50-minute routine with the kind of performance that brings patrons back for more.

The girls had their appreciative, opening-night audience shouting for encores with renditions of such fine, old Oriental numbers as "Y' All Come," "Tennessee Waltz," "Shanty in Old Shanty Town" and "Dinah." Cuties' ability to handle the widest variety of musical instruments seen anywhere outside a pawn shop keeps tablesitters wondering what's coming next.

Sock finale, "When the Saints Go Marching In," in which the gals become a 100-piece band, had this sedate, sophisticated room in the Hotel Radisson rocking. It's a stint of master showmanship.

Drummer-conductor Lenny Espisito gives the act fine rhythm support and Danny Ferguson's band, in a sometimes difficult assignment, does an outstanding job backing the girls. Kim Sisters should be the third straight moneymaker for bonitace Guy Lombardo, following heavy grossers Kitty Kallen and Carmel Quinn.

They're in through March 15 with Don Cornell following for nine days. Rees.

Basin St. East, N.Y.

Gene Krupa Quartet with Eddie Wasserman, Anita O'Day, Pat Harrington Jr.; $3 cover.

On a quick interim bill, Basin St. East has a highly diverting set of entertainers. The event is distinguished by the return of Gene Krupa to his labors after a lengthy hospital siege, for the second run of Pat Harrington Jr. in New York and the chirping of Anita O'Day.

From the days of his indenture to Benny Goodman to his present eminence, Krupa has been a skilled skin specialist. In the beginning he used a powerful physique, but this style has been gradually changed to a mature viewpoint. There are parts of his beating in which he doesn't spare himself.

There are also moments of controlled rowdiness and flashy showmanship. But for the main part his beats are strong and assertive without being blatant. His major moment comes when his colleagues on the bandstand desert same to give Krupa an exclusive on the spotlight for a lengthy and showmanly session. His fellow musicians, headed by Eddie Wasserman on sax, give him staunch support.

Pat Harrington Jr. is gaining in stature and experience with each subsequent visit in town. This is a good scene for the scion of the late comic of the long defunct Club 18. He has the right kind of audience and setting.

His delineation in Italian dialect of the various golf clubs in unlikely places, and his aping of a southern politico, with its single epithet of which the use is questionable, are strong routines. Another attention-getter is his impression of a headwaiter presiding at the tape of an early mass, which is non-offensive even to religiosos. He's a clever lad who is gaining in savvy and projection.

Miss O'Day is vet singer, with a manner and style. She's a performer of solidity who departs from the script upon occasion to give her an unusual technique without changing the composer's intent. She's an entertainer of charm and ability who can make good in virtually any situation. Jose.

Bali Hai, Portland

Portland, Ore., March 1.

The Crosby Bros., starring Phillip, Dennis, Lindsay; with Fred Otis and Lloyd Morales, Pat O'Neal Orch (9); $2 cover, $3 Sat.

The Crosby Bros. (3) did turnaway business opening night and the reservation book indicates this plush showcase is set for more of the same during their entire eight-day stay. Trio prove they are top entertainers as they sing, dance, clown and romp through 40 fast minutes with solid results.

Lads dish up a major league stint with special material and fresh style. They harmonize well on standards and folk stuff. Casual selling and interesting change of pace keep the customers off their mitts throughout.

Phillip, Dennis and Lindsay get hefty assist from exciting arrangements of their piano-conductor Fred Otis and artistry of their drummer, Lloyd Morales. Boys beg off gracefully. Pat O'Neal and his expanded crew get the dancers on the floor for the terp seshes and do a fine job backing the show.

Jane Russell opens March 9th. Fore.

Carnival, Phoenix

Phoenix, March 2.

Mints (4), Carol Jayne, Al Robinson, Hal Sunday Orch (3); $3 minimum.

The classy Mints are undoubtedly the best chancers to play Eddie Baile's saloon—and could conceivably hold their own against most of the more publicized blockbuster vocal groups around today. Their turn has class, and slick pacing. From bow-on to curtain, they build to solid outfront returns.

These Louisiana defrocked gospel singers, anchored by Al Warr, with brother Gene and Roz Stevens and Jim Wilson (managed by Louisiana's Gov. Jimmy Davis) are four fresh-faced, nattily attired youths. With a remarkably strong distaff appeal, they market a snappy songalog of cagily arranged evergreens.

A begoff is a rare item in this room but their piping of such numbers as "Mood Indigo" and "Save The Last Dance For Me" bring one about.

Terper Carol Jayne, well stacked, connects with her Arabian turns, while Al Robinson is a holdover from the last bill. Hal Sunday's crew gives the opener strong showbacking.

This bill is in for an unprecedented four frames. O'Haf.

Shamrock Hilton, H'ton

Houston, March 2.

Carmen Cavallaro, Sloan-Krueger Orch (11); no cover or minimum.

Carmen Cavallaro holds opening-night auditors for 63 minutes, then begs off while way ahead. Billed as the poet of the piano, he is actually more magician than poet, his unbelievably agile fingers strumming the keys sometimes softly, sometimes frantically, but always faultlessly.

Cavallaro, in addition to the fine Bert Sloan-Dick Krueger Orch, is backed by his own trio, Bob Emerson on Bass, Jimmy Norton on guitar and Vince Lateano on skins.

Numbers include many piano standards: "Begin the Beguine," "Body and Soul," "Just One of Those Things," "Warsaw Concerto," and an Eddy Duchin medley. Of all the magic Cavallaro produced at the keys, none was more impressive than fact he held near-capacity room in complete silence for more than hour.

Show plays two frames. Skip.

Waldorf-Astoria, N.Y.

Denise Darcel (with Bobby Kroll); Emil Coleman and Theo Fanidi orchs; $3-$4 cover.

Denise Darcel gets lots of mileage out of her songalog, a canny admixture of surefire French favorites (not forgetting a sentimental salute to Maurice Chevalier, with his trademarked medley to match) and Broll Bldg. standards. The blend is undeniable.

An engaging and warm personality, she projects as much on charm and visual appeal as in her professional singing prowess; in fact the physical gets the shade over the vocal.

Miss Darcel has applied herself well to insulating her Waldorf-Astoria debut with (1) trained-down appearance; (2) some Ell Basse special material; (3) the special assist from her personal composer-conductor Bobby Kroll; (4) a smart idea with a hidden mike so that amplification for the spacious Empire Room is unimpaired by the conventional p.a. setup. Above all she knows how to kid herself; her voluptuousness which the skillful cut are not quite concealed, and she makes no secret of it; and her general Franco-American approach to the pops. Result is that Miss Darcel is constantly commercial, plays the standard class hotels and niteries, and is guaranteed to appeal generally to the customer.

Utilizing a somewhat variation of the Joe E. Lewis drunk-at-the-table (with her it's champagne, natch) it is a pleasant interlude between numbers. Her repertoire runs the gamut from the opener "Mon Menage a Moi" to "Blues of the Blues," from "They Look Me Over" (Lucille Ball's lent musical excerpt, with special material by Basse-Kroll) to "Never On Sunday," from "Mastapha," (first on the Algerian hit parade, it's sweeping the Casbah and it's time the Casbah got swept," she cracks) to the "Alouette" finale. She is very effective in "Sunday" and the Algerian item, and in fact improves as she generally rewards.

Songstress, who still gets lots of mileage from her yesteryear chore in Metro's "Battleground" is effectively backed by the Emil Colemanites under Kroll's baton for the show. Coleman's compelling dansapation goes with the Waldorf base and Theo Fanidi's relief music is effective, both for the dinner music and the alternate Latin-waltz, etc. sets. Preem polled new Waldorf fiscman Frank Wangeman, Joe Binns is now prez of the new New York Hilton-Rockefeller hostelry in Radio City) and banquet manager Clyde J. Harris and, of course, maitre d'hotel Louis Siccardi runs the room with usual charm and efficiency. Abel.

Village Vanguard, N. Y.

Miles Davis Quintet, Lee Konitz & Jim Hall; $2 cover.

Trumpeter Miles Davis, who has an exclusive New York booking arrangement with this Greenwich Village spot, is in a return stint supported by a new and unusual jazz duo featuring sax man Lee Konitz and guitarist Jim Hall.

Davis is still persistent in the showy gimmick of walking off the floor between trumpet and flugel horn choruses. It's won him a lot of critical attention, both irate and defensive. But, besides the print space it has commanded ("call me anything but call me"), he can't really be blamed, because nothing much is happening while he's away.

Quint launched the set caught with an exciting instrumental round on "If I Were a Bell." After that the excitement rapidly dissipated via lengthy, undisciplined soloing that taxed audi attention (volume of chatter was on a steady rise). Davis appeared for an occasional bit, including a virtuoso solo on "Funny Valentine," which, for all its skill, was pretentiously over-arranged. Sidemen, who are all technically excellent if effortless to distraction, are Paul Chambers, bass; Jimmy Cobb, drums; Wynton Kelly, piano; and Hank Mobley, sax.

Group was only an hour late on night caught, which, in the light of genius, should be enough to placate the aficionados.

Konitz & Hall collaborate sans rhythm backing on a richly inventive and melodic catalog of standards. It's a unique blend, and would provide first rate interlude music for any intimery as well as listening stuff for auds that dig. Bill.

House Reviews

Apollo, N. Y.

James Brown & The Flames (4), Etta James, Pigmeat Markham & Co. (2), Sugar Pie De Santis, Capris (5), Herschel Thomas, Curley May, Reuben Phillips Orch; "College Confidential" (U).

The Apollo's bill has no tremendous distinction save in its mobility and Pigmeat Markham's old reliable brand of humor. The layout is in the rock 'n' roll genre with the bulk of the acts presenting offerings in that direction without expressing anything new.

Pigmeat provides the major excitement on the show. This baggy-pants comic with bluster gets the major reaction from the audience. With the aid of emcee Chuck Thompson and a minor contribution from Edna Mae Harris, he knocks off a sketch in one that has the theatre rolling in short order.

The headline turn is James Brown & The Flames, backed by seven musicians. It's a bright and splashy act, with Brown and his comparatively large staff working feverishly for audience approval. Of course, there's always the probability that it's the house, but except for a few kids in the front row, he didn't generate the kind of excitement that would have been the case in the former era.

It could be that through the years, the bulk of the Apollo regulars have grown accustomed to this breed of song selling. The novelty and upbeat have worn off, through no fault of Brown's except for his period in history.

There is another rock act, the Capris, five youths in need of experience and knowhow when caught, turn's two tries failed to get them off the ground. Another new singer, although afflicted with uncertainties, is Herchel Thomas, but there is a wider range of interest in his stint.

A performer of excitement is Curley May, who wields an electric guitar as though it were a baton. He gets some weird effects out of it both from a visual and aural viewpoint and the crowd likes him. His singing, however, is much too weak to stand up to his pluckings.

There are a pair of femme singers on the layout of which Etta James makes a standout hit. A blues belter with showmanship, she gives a lowdown rendition and makes off to a few bows. Sugar Pie De Santis, a shapely miss, does fairish in three tunes. Reuben Phillips showbacks well. Jose.

Vieux-Colombier, Paris

Paris, Feb. 28.

Leo Ferre, Jacques Loussier Quintet; $3 top.

Leo Ferre is a singer-cleffer who has made his way in specialized boites and nabe vauders. He now does a one-man show in which he branches out into troubador ranks in putting noted poets to music as well as doing his own ditties.

He shapes an offbeater, with definite values for more pop following here. He also has a potential for literate niteries but mainly abroad.

Ferre is balding, gaunt and myopic and has worked his quavery voice into a controllable pair of pipes. He rarely extends his limited lung range. His unusual looks help give weight to his anarchic and poetic songs.

His own songs have bite and passion as he castigates all that interferes in man's right of liberty or self esteem, and his poems set to music touch on more incisive aspects of the human spirit and psyche.

Problem is that Ferre does not have the showmanship and projection for a whole evening. It leads to too much lighting effects and a feeling of repetition in the subdued melodies to the poetry of Rutebeuf, Aragon, Rimbaud, Verlaine, Baudelaire and others. He looms more for a headline vaude show where he can mix his poetics and personal numbers for greater effect.

But Ferre has shown that poetry can be given new facets and flair in putting them to song, and he has built a specialized following. Barclay Records has picked him up from Odeon and his disks are beginning to sell. A regular headline stint at the Alhambra is due later this month. It may all go to prove that poetry is pop. Mosk.

Bobino, Paris

Paris, March 1.

Bob Azzam Orch (7), Jacques Meyran, Mathe Altery, Janine Wolf, Gatos (3), Morways (2), Jean Davis, Wang-Hong-Shu (3); $1.50 top.

Bob Azzam is a mild pleasant looking fellow who essays intricate saccharine arrangements and renditions of oriental type songs or sweetened western fare. He uses feedback echo aspects, too, but has an ear for music which gives it all a commercial sheen.

Orchestra also chorals behind Azzam, who has an okay pair of pipes, and there is a well stacked girl who shimmies about during numbers, Miny Gerard. In short, this combo could play intime danseries. But otherwise it's primarily a sleek combo for foreign spots.

Jacques Meyran is a canny patter comedian with good blue material that is tastefully told. He gets laughs, and his timing, poise and punch line deliveries are flawless. Mathe Altery is a svelt, tall blonde with an operetta voice who is reviewed under New Acts. Ditto the hard working special material purveyor, Janine Wolf.

Gatos are a bouncy acro trio with deft pacing, expert balancing and hand-to-handing that make it an asset to any vaude program. Morways is a do-it-yourself teeter-board act as a man hops on a board to send the girl soaring and catch her with one hand or two or by the head. It is an excellent filler.

Jean Davis is an okay magico with the familiar card turns helped by smooth talk and a personable personality. Wang-Hong-Shu Trio does gymnastics and juggling of plates, sticks, etc. for an easy-on-the-orbs filler. Well programmed shows looks in for 10 days of good biz at this nabe house Mosk.

New Acts

ABBOTT & CANDIDO
Comedy
42 Mins.
Holiday House, Pittsburgh

There's good news from Pittsburgh. Bud Abbott is back with a new partner, Candy Candido, and it's as close as it could possibly be without the late Lou Costello. The same routines that made the old team famous are used, Candido doing a letter-perfect impression of Costello and retaining his own identity by doing a spot before the classic "Who's On First?" This is no fare for the modern hip nitery as the boys play it for the clean bellylaugh. They use the burlesque method of presenting three different scenes during the course of the show. Each scene is a blockbuster with the "Lemon Drop" bit taking the longest, around 18 minutes. Since it would be difficult to top each scene, this method of presentation is best for this turn and can be used to great advantage on any tv variety show, musical comedy or revue and any film or tv series.

When caught, the youngsters filled the room with their laughter at what was new to them and the adults were roaring at the familiar material so perfectly delivered. Lit.

JOHN GARY Songs
25 Mins.
Tidelands, Houston

John Gary, a young lyric baritone, has looks, pipes and knowhow, having begun his career as 9-year-old boy soprano. He has variety in act, presenting pops, show tunes, folk songs and even a caricature of a rock 'n' roller.

Pipes are okay and Gary brings out guitar for self-accompaniment on couple of tunes, particularly folk songs. Vocalist has full control, can drop to whisper, and although voice isn't overpowering, can belt to good effect. Skip.

HAL & BRYNA
Comedy
28 Mins.
Bon Soir, N. Y.

Hal & Bryna have some comedic concepts but they have not yet been fashioned into a well-rounded routine. Act, for the most part, has an espresso house quality with its offbeat and far-out observations which limits its spread out of Greenwich Village spottings. The public is accepting eggheadery more than ever before but laughs must be attached and that's where this boy-girl team is lacking.

An interview with an eight-year-old, parents with a lip-sucking child problem, a takeoff of "Hiroshima Mon Amour" are good basic ideas but they don't quite come off because they aren't developed properly and run overlong. A blackout bit about a girl whose toe is stuck in a bathtub drain is fast and funny and its surrealistic closer can be understood by all.

A bit more soul-searching and material developing may help in getting the act through. Gros.

MATHE ALTERY
Songs
20 Mins.
Bobino, Paris

Mathe Altery is a tall, sleekly coiffed and gowned blonde. She has a sugary operetta voice that can do good scale balancing on old Viencse-type staples. But she can also modulate her pipes for acceptable pop ballads. She looks primarily a bet for intime rooms, outside of operetta stints, where her looks and restful but uninspired repertoire would be acceptable. Otherwise she appears limited, due to a fairly slushy songalog.

Miss Altery has a chic Parisienne look and stance which, with her pleasant voice, could be utilized in musicals. She records for Pathe-Marconi here. Mosk.

JANINE WOLF
Songs, Impressions
15 Mins.
Bobino, Paris

Janine Wolf is a pert, saucy songstress who adds dance and impressions to her turn. She is best when doing a series of interpretations of various types of national songs and has an okay voice that can belt when needed. But there is no personal feel to her songalog and she appears more a singer with terp backgrounding for musical comedy use rather than for standup singing chores. But her few specialized bits can be worked into an okay nitery act if honed and worked out more clearly with some of the excess mugging held down.

At any rate she is one of the few zesty, dynamic songers here and with more work and more songs could develop into okay staple songstress. Mosk.

PONI TAILS (3)
Songs
30 Mins.
Holiday, Reno

Pony Tails are young and enthusiastic and show much potential in the vocal department. And the full turn is neat in the presentation.

Girls' coiffs are suggested by the act's name and the gowning is selected to retain the image. Albeit ages and hairstyling indicates an appeal to the younger set, it's not necessary so. Songalog includes a variety of titles and tempoes. And a bit a scat singing (on "Side by Side") is fitted nicely into the turn. White gloves are expertly used on "You Need Hands" offering to full effect via luminescence.

Trio is right for smaller rooms and lounges. Long.

NEWHART BIG $131,500 In 23 COAST DATES

Chicago, March 7.

Bob Newhart's 23 concert whirl on the west coast has grossed $131,500, with second shows added in the Santa Monica and Pasadena engagements. Coast tour ended a week ago Saturday (25) in Pasadena, following which the comic came east for a shot on the Ed Sullivan show.

Midwest cycle of the concert tour begins tonight (Tues.) at the U. of Minnesota.

Gwen's April Gambol

Dancer-actress Gwen Verdon has been named guest of honor for the annual Spring Gambol of the Lambs' Club, N.Y., to be held at the clubhouse, April 8. Ducats have been pegged at $50 per person with attendance limited to 300.

Talent that will appear at the Gambol thus far includes Vivienne Della Chiesa, with others being lined up.

Femme Aerialist Recovering

Milwaukee, March 7.

Bettina, an aerialist who was injured last week while doing her "slide for life" with the Shrine Circus (Hamid-Morton) at the Milwaukee Arena, is still hospitalized. She suffered a concussion when a braking device on her equipment failed to function.

Performer, whose real tag is Mrs. Betty Boatright, is reported in good condition. However, she won't be able to resume her act for several weeks.

Local Angels Covered 100G Loss On Shakespeare Festival's Tour

By JESSE GROSS

Underwriting by individuals in the various cities played absorbed a substantial chunk of the operating loss on the recently-ended initial cross-country tour of the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre Co. Over $100,000 is figured to have been dropped on the venture, which represented an unusual-for-legit demonstration of financial cooperation by professionals and laymen at national and local levels.

A tour of 18 cities had originally been planned for the Shakespeare troupe, which began its hike with two productions, "Midsummer Night's Dream" and "A Winter's Tale." The latter play was dropped soon after the start of the hinterland trek, which was eventually reduced to 13 cities for a total run of 22 weeks. The company, with Bert Lahr headlining, opened last Sept. 26 in Boston and closed Feb. 25 in Washington.

Capitalization for launching the project totaled $113,000, exclusive of pledged underwriting against operating losses. Managers and owners of out-of-town theatres booked by the troupe advanced $73,000 and another $40,000 was contributed by the Independent Booking Office, the Council of the Living Theatre, the American Theatre Society and the American Shakespeare Festival, each putting up $10,000.

According to Gordon A. Rust, executive vice-president of the Festival Theatre & Academy, the money advanced by those connected with the hinterland theatres has been repaid through an arrangement whereby the local theatre managements got $5,500 of the initial boxoffice income. The other $40,000 represents unrecouped funds.

Besides the $40,000, around $60,000 more in guaranteed coin from local underwriting is figured to have been drained for the project. At this point, Rust thinks it unlikely that an additional underwriting guarantee of $25,000 pledged by Festival trustees will have to be tapped. But, he emphasizes, that will depend on the results of a final accounting, not yet completed.

The ASFT tour was managed by the production department of the American Theatre Society, with Emmett Rogers as managing producer and Warren Caro of ATS, as executive producer. The offering was booked as a Theatre Guild - American Theatre Society subscription entry in most cities where the underwriting was obtained by locally - organized Shakespeare Festival committees. The guarantees were provided in most instances by groups of individuals and in some towns by single supporters.

Operating costs ranged from about $28,000 - $30,000 weekly. Profitable stands, according to Rust, included Boston, Baltimore,

Scalpers in Mex Get Jail Terms

Mexico City, Feb. 28.

Ticket brokers are the latest target of Mayor Ernesto P. Uruchurtu's drive to "protect" the public. From now on brokers who handle seats for legit, musical, variety theatre, sports events, bullfights, etc., are out of business.

Affected are some 85 agencies which had been licensed by the Federal District Government to sell choice seats at a 20% markup. However, the public had been chronically complaining that brokers correred all the best seats and

A Grim 'Macbeth'

Honolulu, March 7.

It was double, double, toil and trouble the other night during a Community Theatre performance of "Macbeth." An actor playing two minor roles tore a ligament in his left leg and was hospitalized.

One of the three witches suffered a nine-foot fall, breaking her pelvis. Following night's performance went on with only two witches before the harassed troupe could recruit a replacement.

ATPAM Members Had Lean Going (Mostly) in '60

Earning a living as a member of the Assn. of Theatrical Pressagents & Managers isn't easy. Jobs over which the union has jurisdiction provided a source of income last year for only 377 of a total membership of 600. Making the picture even darker is an ATPAM report that individual earnings from such employment during 1960 ranged from under $1,000 to less than $5,000 for 156 (41%) of the 377.

A further breakdown of income from employment under union jurisdiction in 1960 reveals that of the 377 so employed, 82 (nearly 22%) earned $5,000 but less than $7,500; 62 (over 16%) earned $7,500 but less than $10,000; 48 (almost 13%) earned $10,000 but less than $15,000; 23 (over 6%) earned $15,000 but less than $20,000; five (over 1%) earned $20,000 but less

NLRB Nod to B'way, Road Theatre Points To a Fight Over Union Rules; League Letter Cites Stage 'Abuses'

The recent recognition of the Broadway and road theatre by the National Labor Relations Board has brought to a boil a long-simmering managerial revolt against certain legit union demands. These conditions, regarded by the producer and theatre owner membership of the League of N.Y. Theatres as being unfair, may be construed as such under the Labor Relations Management Act, administered by the NLRB.

A confidential report issued last week by the League to its members lists a number of provisions in current union contracts regarded as being illegal under the National Labor Relations Act. Among the abuses cited are featherbedding, closed shop, "hot cargo" and secondary boycott provisions, plus illegal union security and hiring hall clauses.

Of the nine unions with which the League has contracts, only one, Theatre & Amusement Service Employees Union (cleaners and porters), is off the hook in the League report. The others are all tagged as having one or more illegal provisions in their contracts with the League. Burton A. Zorn, attorney for the League, is to meet soon with the unions to discuss the agreements.

The labor organizations involved are Actors Equity; Assn. of Theatrical Pressagents & Managers; Theatrical Protective Union No. 1, N.Y. local of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees (stagehands); Local 802, American Federation of Musicians; International Union of Operating Engineers; Ushers & Doormen's Union, Local No. B-183, IATSE; Theatrical Wardrobe Attendants Union, Local 764, and the Treasurers & Ticket Sellers Union, Local 751, IATSE.

A charge of possible featherbedding is leveled in the report against only one union, Local 802, which is also fingered as one of three labor organizations with contracts containing illegal closed shop provisions. The other two are the engineers' union and the treasurers and ticket sellers' organization.

5 Unions

Illegal union security clauses are contained in contracts with five of the unions, according to the report. The organizations are Equity, ATPAM and the unions covering stagehands, ushers and doormen and wardrobe attendants.

Trade Favors Twofers—And Why

By HOBE MORRISON

The theatre, which dives on publicity, often has difficulty organizing public relations on its own behalf. The present furor about two-for-one ducats for Broadway shows is an illustration.

Despite indignant comment from lay journalistic observers, twofers make trade sense. They are unquestionably an imperfect solution to uncomfortable situation, but they're not illegal or immoral or even, as has been proclaimed, inevitably destructive in the long run. One thing its evident—twofers work.

In a luxury business like the Broadway theatre, squeezed between spiraling costs of production and operation, and limited revenue, twofers demonstrably provide a shot-in-the-arm for fading shows, in some cases extending runs many months and bringing employment and royalties to hundreds of people. They do not, as a rule, earn much profit to management or investors.

One thing the disapproving commentators seem to overlook is that the public, with a minority of loud exceptions, likes twofers. In fact, as has been noted a good many times, the bargain come-ons tend to have their own public, in many cases comprising people who rarely if ever attend the theatre otherwise. In other, plainer words, far from alienating faithful theatre patrons, twofers generally retain their own special public and, many theatre men believe, recruit new audiences.

Unquestionably, twofers are a gimmick, a novelty with a special appeal to the get-something-for-nothing urge in human nature. As the current Broadway situation shows again, twofers stimulate attendance where a frank reduction in the boxoffice scale may tend to be taken as a confession of weakness, and thereby hurt trade. Thus a non-habitual theatregoer may assume that a price cut means the show is no good, whereas he's more likely to be attracted by a twofer.

On that basis, twofers are unquestionably tricky. Also, there is some merit to the argument that twofers constitute a breach of faith with patrons who may have paid full boxoffice prices for seats in the same part of the theatre for the same performance. That claim is truer in theory than in practice, however, as it's generally common knowledge nowadays when shows are on twofers.

Different Audiences

The fact is that generally the regular-price audience and the twofer public are different and distinct, with little overlapping. Most regular theatregoers prefer to see a show early in the run, long before it has tapered off in performance quality and attendance. It's also true that most regular-price patrons insist on the better-located seats, which are not ever available on twofers. Finally, the regular theatre public won't go through the "ordeal" of standing in a long line in the lobby in oder to make use of twofers.

Boxoffice men naturally hate twofers, since they involve more work under comparitively frantic conditions, and dealing with a more exacting and frequently less informed or less reasonable public. (Ticket brokers loathe twofers, of course.) Most important, at least in some cases, is that when a show goes on twofers there's little opportunity for "ice," as the illicit income from scalpers is called. It is true, therefore, that boxoffice personnel dislike the whole setup of twofers, would prefer to have shows close, and in some instances do what they can to discourage twofer patronage.

Seat Locations

On the other hand, the theatregoing public, probably even more than filmgoers, sports fans and others who buy tickets for public events, tend to be hyper-finicky about seat locations and attending a particular performance, and are often almost pathologically touchy and suspicious. In the case of the twofer trade, they frequently seem either not to take the trouble to read the specifications on the widely-circulated ducats or to regard them as unjustifiable.

There's no reason why someone with a twofer should think he has a right to get a ticket for any certain, specific performance. He would hardly walk up to the boxoffice of "The Sound of Music" or "Do Re Mi" and demand to buy seats in particular locations for that night's performance. Yet he's outraged and writes irate letters to the newspapers and frequently to the N. Y. City License Commissioner, if all the seats in the twofer section of the house are sold out for the performance he specifies and he's offered full-price seats in the front section of the theatre, or even twofers for a subsequent performance.

There simply are not enough seats in the theatre for everyone to see the most popular shows at the desired performances, whether the popularity is at the beginning of a run when regular scales apply or after many months, with the stimulus of twofer. Some people are prone to see a conspiracy when tickets aren't available for the show they want to see at the time they want to see it. Although they don't expect to sit in the best seats at the opening of the World Series, or the Army-Navy game, they are incensed and protest to the authorities and enlist the support of curiously naive editors when they can't get bargain-priced seats on short notice for a twofer-primed Broadway sellout.

Twofers Helped

The inside dope in managerial circles is that the Shuberts, who operate approximately half of the theatres on Broadway, have issued instructions to all boxoffice personnel to do everything possible to accommodate twofer patrons and avoid incidents and complaints. Theatre owners, as well as producers, dislike the outcry of angry ticket applicants, and no one in the trade wants to have a situation that will bring the License Commissioner down on their necks.

Boxoffice people, with astonishingly numerous exceptions, can be rude, uncooperative or perhaps merely obtuse. Moreover, producers are frequently unimaginative, creatively or artistically timid, and sometimes not very smart in business matters. But in the case of twofers, they aren't engaged in a plot or conspiracy and they're not bilking the public or undermining the theatre.

In some circumstances, twofers are effective in a way nothing else is—including openly announced price cuts. And contrary to common deduction, they do not prove the possibility of generally lower ticket prices. The whole subject of twofers is coming out into the open these days. Maybe it's time for producers and theatre owners to deal with the situation more frankly and help it clarify it publicly. They might start by educating some of the glib theatrical commentators.

PAT MUNSEL IN 'KING' AFTER COAST'S 'WIDOW'

Patrice Munsel, who clicked last summer at the Music Theatre, Highland Park, Ill., in "Kiss Me Kate," will return next Aug. 8 as star of "The King and I." She'll play the Hero Rogers operation after the completion of "Merry Widow" engagements in Los Angeles and San Francisco under the auspices of the local Civic Light Opera groups.

The Highland Park booking is for three weeks instead of the fortnight usually played by shows presented at the spot, which starts its season June 20 with "Guys and Dolls." Rogers, who also operates the Tenthouse Theatre in Highland Park, left for Chicago last Sunday (5) to audition talent for the Music Theatre. He's due back in Manhattan next week.

The staff for the Music Theatre includes Julian Barry, director; Gordon Mumford, musical director; Joel Schnee, choreographer; Nate Caldwell, stage manager, and Vernon Taylor, general manager. The Tenthouse begins its season of straight plays June 13 with Sid Eden as director. The semester at each of the theatres will run about 12 weeks.

EMMETT ROGERS BACK TO B'WAY PRODUCTION

Emmett Rogers has resigned as managing producer of the American Theatre Society production department to resume his own production activities in New York in partnership with S. Stanley Gordon, a Coast business executive.

During his year's tenure with the ATS production department, Rogers managed the recently-ended tour of the American Shakespeare Festival Theatre Co.'s presentation of "Midsummer Night's Dream," starring Bert Lahr. Rogers succeeded Jerry Leider, who resigned as managing producer of the ATS unit after its first season of operation, during which it was responsible for the road hike of "The Visit," costarring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

The ATS production department was established to increase the supply of shows for the road. Prior to taking on the ATS assignment, Rogers had been involved in the presentation of several Broadway productions, the most recent of which was "Tall Story," which he co-produced with Robert Weiner in 1959. The newly-formed Rogers-Gordon partnership will operate out of the Broadway offices formerly occupied by Rogers when he was associated with Maurice Evans in the production of "No time for Sergeants."

The office space was recently vacated by Edward Padula, formerly general stage manager for Rogers and now producer of the Broadway hit, "Bye Bye Birdie."

Guild-State Dept. Touring Troupe Scores in Tune-Up Stand in Wash.

The Theatre Guild-American Repertory Co. is, of course, a special group embarked on a special mission. The State Dept. sponsored production of three American plays for overseas tour is a pioneer U. S. cultural effort. As such, the stakes transcend those involved in the ordinary legitimate production, generally a matter of professional reputation and money.

This sense of special significance appears to have influenced everyone in this triple presentation of "The Skin of Our Teeth," "The Miracle Worker" and "The Glass Menagerie." In the pre-Europe trial at the National Theatre in Washington last week, an awareness that the productions were of an unusual import also colored audience reaction above and beyond its appreciation for the intrinsic presentations.

Virtually all roles were performed with earnestness and zeal that infected the audience and paid off in rousing ovations from the National's usually reserved clientele. The word spread rapidly, and after the second performance of "The Skin of Our Teeth," the remaining performances were s.r.o. (There were three performancs of "Skin," one of "Miracle Worker" and three of "Menagerie.")

This enthusiasm is given its freest expression in "The Skin of Our Teeth," a rare, wild play demanding an illusion of abandon in performance. "The Miracle Worker," in contrast, gets the confined, intense dramatic treatment called for by William Gibson's emotional tour-de-force.

The necessary subtle touches make "The Glass Menagerie" emerge the haunting, slice-of-nostalgia created by Tennessee Williams. All three plays make their own peculiar and stringent demands on producer, director and performer, and the American Repertory group meets them surpassingly.

Helen Hayes, who plays Mrs. Antrobus in "Skin," is most effective as the Mother in "Menagerie," giving the role new dimensions. The virile talents of Leif Erickson are best displayed in the Mr. Antrobus role, although he plays the Gentleman Caller in "Menagerie" with a neat balance of heavy-handed bluffness and gentleness. He does well in the less demanding role of Helen Keller's father in "Miracle."

June Havoc excels in the antic part of Sabina in "Skin," and does justice to Helen Keller's mother. Helen Menken, who also receives star billing, isp roperly eerie as the fortune teller in "Skin."

Of those billed as featured players, Barbara Barrie as Annie Sullivan of "Miracle Worker," Rona Gale as the girl Helen Keller, and James Broderick as the son in "Menagerie" win most acclaim.

Marcella Cisney's direction of "Skin," which could be either a staging nightmare or bonanza, is standout. So is the scenery and staging of the same play by Paul Morrison. The scenery, props, lighting gear, etc., have been ingeniously designed for airlift and adaptibility for houses of all sizes, and are therefore somewhat frugal and unelaborate.

The spirit of mission that sets the tone of these presentations makes flaws seem minor. The company was assembled and broke in at Palm Beach, and the 17-nation Europe-Near East tour opens tonight (Tues.) in Madrid. Jay.

Wonders Why Producers Don't Revive Other Old Boucicault Melodramas

New York.

Editor, VARIETY:

News stories about the recent Phoenix Theatre revival of "The Octoroon" did not mention the 1949 Equity Library Theatre production, called "Life in Louisiana," Dion Boucicault's alternate title. Elaborate by ELT standards, the revival was presented at the then Central Highschool of Needle Trades, N.Y. It featured a corps of dancers and a musical score by G. Wood. In the lead was Alice Ghostley as Zoe. Also in this cast were Claude Marchant as the Indian, Wah-no-tee, and Rosetta LeNoire as Minnie.

The "Octoroon" productions (Phoenix, ELT, and one in 1929) are among the few revivals in recent years of Boucicault's huge output of plays. A 1950 London staging of "The Shaughraun" is of little interest, except that Dirk Bogarde appeared in one of the secondary roles. Before this were Herbert Berghof's 1947 N.Y. City Center presentation of "Rip Van Winkle," with Philip Bourneuf, and a 1937 revival of "London Assurance," with Ethe, Barrymore Colt.

It was a 1931 revival of "The Streets of New York," originally "The Poor New York," which had the sort of star cast with which the Boucicault plays were often produced in the 19th century. In the 1931 company were Dorothy Gish, Romney Brent, Moffat Johnston, A. P. Kaye, Rollo Peters, Fania Marinoff and Jessie Busley.

The only considerable financial success of a Boucicault play in the last quarter-century or so was during the 1928-29 season in Hoboken, N.J., when Christopher Morley and his partners revived "After Dark." It ran for weeks, and for many New Yokers a trip to Hoboken became essential. Coupled later with a non-Boucicault revival, "The Black Crook," these old plays put Hoboken on the theatrical map, at least for the season of 1928-29.

Looking back at this Hoboken success, it seems curious that so few other outskirt entrepreneurs have attempted similar revivals. From the Boucicault plays alone, if the scripts can be located, there are dozens of melodramas just as good, or bad, as "After Dark."

Take Your Choice

The N.Y. Journal-American had another one of those days last Friday (3) when a reader could take his choice of two contrasting opinions of the previous night's Broadway opening. In what appears to be becoming routine, the situation involved the reactions of the paper's drama critic, John McClain, and syndicated Broadway columnist Dorothy Kilgallen.

McClain, in covering the musical, "13 Daughters," at the 54th St. Theatre, called it "big and rollicking and tuneful," adding, "It purports only to be good family entertainment—and it fills the bill wonderfully well." Miss Kilgallen, on the other hand, devoted three paragraphs in her column to rapping the Don Ameche-starrer, which she labeled, "The greatest disaster the theatre has seen in many a moon."

Hawaii probably won't secede from the union because of "13 Daughters," but the musical which opened last Thursday night (2) at the 54th Street Theatre certainly provides the islands with a grievance. It's no bargain for Broadway either.

There are energetic, rousing dances in the show, as well as lavish scenery and colorful costumes. In fact, the audience response for several of the settings and the almost delirious enthusiasm that erupts at several of the dance numbers is something of a tip-off to the tedium inspired by the book and the nondescript music.

Don Ameche is the Chinese-born Hawaiian parent of the baker's dozen girls in this ponderous yarn, apparently with a genesis in native folklore, about the schemes to corral husbands for the giggling, squealing, cavorting but too infrequently dancing maidens. The ex-film star plays the wily papa as a sort of cheerful cherub in a succession of elaborate costumes, pattering mincingly

White Mink But No Manners

Engagements at the Royal Poinciana Playhouse, Palm Beach, have become a legend among actors in the last several years, though the Arabian Nights atmosphere has never been adequately publicized. One of the first airings of the subject appeared recently in the Washington Daily News, in an interview by columnist-drama critic Tom Donnelly with June Havoc. The actress played the Florida resort recently as costar with Helen Hayes of a State Dept.-Theatre Guild-American National Theatre & Academy troupe that after a week's stand in Washington, embarks on an international tour with a repertory of "The Skin of Our Teeth," "The Miracle Worker" and "The Glass Menagerie." The column, titled "Hitting the Beach," follows:

"June Havoc has got her vocal chords uncrossed, is pretty much recovered from her exposure to the gaudy splendors of Palm Beach, and otherwise feels in proper shape to play Sabina at the National in 'The Skin of Our Teeth,' one of the three plays the State Department is sending to the major capitols of Western Europe, the Near East and Latin America. (The Theatre Guild and the American National Theatre and Academy are also in on this package, wrapped up for the President's Special International Program.)

"The troupe opened in Palm Beach, and that, Miss Havoc says, was an experience of outrageous fascination, especially if you like white mink. Palm Beach audiences are the oldest and richest in the world, she believes. The ladies, have to be carried to their limousines by their chauffeurs, and at a matinee the audience is a sea of white mink, with accents in sable and ermine. The ladies, if frail physically, have very vigorous voices, and they think nothing of talking during a performance.

"At 'The Miracle Worker' half the audience was explaining to the other half what was going on on the stage. 'You see Maude, the little girl is deaf and blind and that's why the woman is slamming that suitcase down. So the girl can feel the vibrations. She isn't doing it because she's mad at the little girl.'

"Most of the audience missed the second act of 'The Skin of Our Teeth,' but not because they didn't like the play. The audience was out in the lobby, appearing on television. Opening night audiences at Palm Beach are crazy about tv. About being interviewed on it, that is. The first act is generally delayed for an hour because the customers are in the lobby, telling the world how happy they are to be attending the living theatre.

"I gather that by the time the third act rolls around everybody has already been interviewed, so there's nothing left to do but go take a look at the play. There is a bar at the theatre, and the customers bring their glasses with them when they go inside. Those actors who have never worked the night club circuit now know how it feels to be accompanied by a chorus of clinking ice.

"Miss Havoc was sitting in a restaurant, minding her calories, when three Palm Beach ladies sat down at her table. One said, 'I just loved you in 'The Skin of Our Teeth,' Miss Havoc. Didn't like the play, tho.' Another woman said, 'Well, yes, we didn't, but anybody who was interested in the human race would probably like it.' Miss Havoc swears this lady wasn't kidding. She was simply expressing the true spirit of Palm Beach.

"On Saturday, Miss Havoc lost her voice. A Palm Beach doctor prescribed a week of rest in Jamaica. Miss Havoc explained, in a whisper, about the show going on. The doctor seemed to think she was being whimsical, but he gave her some pills which knocked her out for a considerable period, and now the tension has left her vocal chords.

"Miss Havoc said: 'If you're going to put all that in about Palm Beach, don't be one of those newspapermen who cut quotes. Like don't have me saying nobody liked 'The Skin of Our Teeth.' Those people liked it as much as they like anything. Except being on tv of course'."

At least in the matter of location, off-Broadway has now moved right into the Broadway neighborhood. But quality-wise, as the ad agency boys would say, it's still some distance away.

"Roots," a slice-of-seamy-life English drama by Arnold Wesker, premiered last Monday night (6) as the initial legit presentation at the Mayfair Theatre, in what was once Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe cabaret in the basement of the Paramount Hotel, just off Duffy Square in 46th St. That is in the heart of the Broadway theatre district, but as a play, "Roots" is very mid-1930's Clifford Odets and as a production it's frankly off-Broadway.

Irving Maidman, the realty operator who has considerable property in the west side of midtown Manhattan (and in Rockland County, where he lives), now has the converted Mayfair, in addition to his Maidman Playhouse in West 42d St. a few blocks away, and is constructing two additional bandbox legiters on the same site. The Mayfair, in a hotel basement, taking over the name from the former film house at 7th Ave. and 47th St. (now the DeMille), is brightly colored, if not exactly tasteful, with the advantage of convenient location. Smoking at intermissions with patrons refusing to move from dangerously curving stairway may be a serious operational problem.

It still takes a good show to create a theatre, however, and "Roots" is a spotty evening, at least in this ineffectual production. The play reveals Wesker as a very angry, very young man, but as an author of considerable vigor, with a fair talent for characterization and an ability to build action to a strong finish. It also exposes him as a playwright with little sense of dramatic form, not much capacity for selection and a tendency toward garrulousness.

"Roots" is located in rural Norfolk County, England, and the characters are crude, unthinking, unfeeling farm workers. The exception is the youngest daughter, who has been living in London and has been exposed to new people, new experiences and new ideas. Back home for a holiday, she spouts endlessly about her lover, an ardent young socialist who has awakened her mind and whom she hopes to marry.

When she receives a letter cancelling their plans for him to come there to meet her family and breaking off their affair, she angrily berates them as obtuse, insensitive and self-satisfied, and rails at society in general as being vulgar and without roots. In the shock of the moment, however, she suddenly is transfixed with the realization that she has at last been able to express herself and has taken a step toward feeling and thinking and being articulate. It's at least a start, she says with an exaltation that is affecting.

On the most basic level, there's room for question of Wesker's choice of characters. Not the heroine, who is a rather familiar theatrical figure and a provocative and, despite her loquaciousness, a likeable person. But the members of the family are commonplace and, what's infinitely worse, dramatically dull. They think in trite trivialities, are capable of only the most primitive ideas and their conversation consists of crude jokes and inane gossip.

The numbingly talky, slow first act could probably be eliminated almost entirely, perhaps retaining a few lines for use elsewhere for

Asides and Ad-Libs

Elia Kazan will direct no more for Broadway, he says. "I came to an end and so just quit." So W. J. Weatherby quotes the film-legit director-producer in the Toronto Star. "It wasn't only what Broadway represents—the working conditions, the kind of play generally done there, the obsession with success like a crap game. There was my fear of repeating myself." Kazan revealed, however, that he'd like to do "an unusual production" at Lincoln Art Centre, "something greatly worthwhile." He's announced as artistic director of the repertory company to be part of the Center.

According to a Warner Bros. handout, Onslow Stevens, who appears in the film, "The Couch," plans forming a five-actor troupe to tour in a Shakespeare repertory, opening with "Richard III" and ultimately including all 29 plays on a rotating schedule . . . Judith Crist, drama editor of the N. Y. Herald Tribune, will substitute for drama critic Walter Kerr in covering the opening tonight (Wed.) of "Mary, Mary," by Jean (Mrs. Walter) Kerr.

"No Legs No Jokes No Chance" is the title of a short, bright piece in the current (March) Harper's Magazine recalling the pre-opening tensions involving the first Rodgers-Hammerstein musical, "Oklahoma." The author, television scripter Helene Hanff, was at the time assistant to Joseph Heidt (identified merely as "Joe"), then pressagent for the Theatre Guild, the show's producer. Heidt is currently p.a. for the Cass Theatre, Detroit.

"There have been an inordinate number of definitions of the quality that determines stardom. It has been called 'it,' 'sex appeal,' 'personality' and 'magic.' I have no definitions for it. I can, like everybody else, only guess that this star quality is a kind of biological mystery—a strange emotional and electric current which passes between an actor and an audience. It can come at the most unexpected times. It can happen even in a bad film or play. I mention this in an effort to scotch the argument that 'anybody can be great in a great part.' It isn't necessarily so. Ezio Pinza once described this star quality as a 'motor,' a self-generated hum that allows an actor to reach out and touch an audience. They know and understand him. He is merely a good actor when he makes an audience believe him; he is a star when he makes them care about him."—Film and legit author-director-producer Dore Schary, in an article in the Atlantic Monthly, based on a talk given at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

"If you are lucky enough to last through to the final tryouts, the management will keep you standing in line for as long as half an hour while they discuss your relative merits. During this ordeal, try not to lose your faith in God, and remember: if a girl, you can always marry and have children; if a boy, you can change jobs. You are strong. Truck drivers get three times the pay of dancers."—Choreographer Agnes de Mille, in an article, "To a Young Dancer," in the Atlantic Monthly.

"Broadway's become very expensive for a poor man like me. I've been up to bat four times in the past four years: 'Oh, Captain,' 'Juno,' 'Edwin Booth' and 'Andersonville Trial.' Each one was a disaster. If you direct a failure in Hollywood you get paid for the time you work. In New York, you don't get paid. The fact is, I worked on Broadway continuously for 20 years. I worked very hard and very long in the theatre and I got off my chest more or less what I wanted to do."—Director-actor Jose Ferrer, as quoted by Joe Hyams in the N.Y. Herald Tribune.

Legit Followup

My Fair Lady
(HELLINGER, N.Y.)

The New York production of "My Fair Lady" will be five years old next Wednesday (15). On Broadway that represents old age, one of the symptoms being a slowdown in boxoffice activity. It's evident that "Lady," now selling tickets at discount, is suffering from that ailment. The condition in this case involves the attendance rather than the show itself running dry, however.

Despite having lost some of the spark and excitement of its youth, the musical is still one of the best buys on Broadway, and at cutrate prices it's a steal. All that would be needed to get the voltage up would be a return of Rex Harrison and Julie Andrews in the costarring roles they originated. Their electric performances (preserved in part in the original cast album) aren't duplicated by the current leads.

The comparison of the current headliners, Michael Allinson and Margot Moser, to Harrison and Miss Andrews isn't exactly fair, since the former were on hand at the beginning of a bonanza while the latter are in on the tapering-off. Allinson, who's been playing Henry Higgins for a little more than a year, is suitable for the part and his acting and handling of the songs are good.

Miss Moser, a newcomer as Eliza Doolittle, isn't too appealing as a cockney, but is okay once past "The Rain in Spain." She's particularly strong in the Ascot sequence and the showdown scene with the prof at his mother's home.

Allinson is the Broadway production's third Higgins, having succeeded Edward Mulhare, who followed Harrison. Miss Moser, the first American to play Eliza on the Main Stem, is the fourth to undertake the part at the Hellinger Theatre. Her predecessors, after Miss Andrews were Pamela Charles and Sally Ann Howes. In other major assignments, Ronald Radd is fine as Alfred P. Doolittle, Melville Cooper satisfactory as Col. Pickering and Margery Maude likeable as Mrs. Higgins.

Aside from the performances, the musical remains a powerhouse combination of book and songs. The Alan Jay Lerner-Frederick Loewe adaptation of Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" retains the brightness of the original work, and also offers a succession of smash numbers. For sock eye appeal there are the Oliver Smith sets and Cecil Beaton costumes.

Only one other Broadway musical, "Oklahoma," has outdistanced "Lady" and with a little bit of luck the Herman Levin production is likely to pass the high mark of 2,176 performances set by the Rodgers & Hammerstein classic. As of last night (Tues.), "Lady" had registered 2,065 performances. At the rate of eight performances weekly it will have to run until June 10 to tie the "Oklahoma" record. Jess.

Concert Review

Marriage Contract
(TOWN HALL, N. Y.)

As often with organizations whose musical director is basically more the musicologist and less the conductor, program-idea is promising on paper but somehow falls short in performance. So it was with the Little Orchestra Society's performance of the concert-versions' operatic gem "La Cambiale di Matrimonio" written by the 18-year old Rossini. Only 75 minutes long the work is attractive, lively and might be effective. Unfortunately almost everything got in the way of purely tuneful, if superficial, young Rossini. Saving grace was the enchanting Reri Grist whose singing was delightful, agile, fresh and accurate and who deservedly brought down the house after her main aria. Also Ralph Herbert as the old suitor and the young suitor had moments of real humor as sung and played by Loren Driscoll.

But the staging which had the mezzo (Ruth Kobart) as a maid dusting off the orchestra member's attire and the conductor's bald pate was on the coy side. Scherman's own translation (sample: "Macchiavelli" rhymes with fishy and smelly"!) was dubious. Orchestra outweighed the singers constantly, and lagged behind. This created a general lack of elegance, finesse, effective humor and a complete absence of brilliance, flexibility in tempo, dynamics and rhythm. Most of the acting was "hammy" and either overplayed or over-coy. Goth.

Jack Davies Estate's Commish Claim on Gwen

Papers have been served on actress-dancer Gwen Verdon by attorneys for the estate of the late Jack Davies, asking for examination before trial of a $50,000 suit on file.

The estate claims that since the recent death of Davies, who had been Miss Verdon's agent for some years, the dancer-singer has failed to pay commissions on bookings obtained by the agent. Miss Verdon was in "Redhead" when Davies died, and he had made other commitments for her, it's alleged.

'Twilight' Curtain Boom for Road?

Ottawa, March 7.

Fred Cuneo, here as manager of the "Fiorello" road company, is convinced "twilighters" are paying off for touring musicals and legiters. Cuneo pointed to the Ottawa one-nighter when the "Fiorello" company did shows at 5:45 and 9:15 p.m., the early one catching office workers plus home types unable to get late baby-sitters. For its pair, "Fiorello" collected an attendance of more than 4,500 at $5.50 top.

Harvey Glatt, who brought "Fiorello" into the Capitol, uptown filmer, as Ottawa's first pro musical in 10 years ("Brigadoon" was here in 1951), is bringing another tune show for a similar two-shows-in-one-night operation, April 4. Show will be "Once Upon a Mattress," with Imogene Coca and Edward Everett Horton billtopping.

Others: Jyll Alexander, Adele Baker, Jeremy Brown, Alice Cannon, Alice Evans, Maxine Foster, Barbara Gregory, Betsy Hepburn, Grace Ann Hays, Evelyn Keller, Beverly Morrison, Barbara Newborn, Ann Nunnally, Gloria Shepherd, Sally Ann Sherrill.

Musical numbers: Preludium, "Sound of Music," "Maria," "My Favorite Things," "To Re Mi," "You Are Sixteen," "Lonely Goatherd," "How Can Love Survive?" "So Long, Farewell," "Climb Every Mountain," "No Way to Stop It," "Ordinary Couple," Processional, "Edelweiss."

The touring company of "The Sound of Music," which preemed last week at the 2,700-seat Riviera, is an excellent and beautiful production. Every detail of a major musical presentation voices, music, naturalness of the performers, orchestra, scenery, lighting and direction which provides cohesiveness, are amply provided. Moreover, there is a beauty beyond mere professional polish to this production.

Florence Henderson scores as the postulant, Maria Rainer. In voice, in acting, in appearance, she is the girl. Her interpretation of the role is right for her and illuminates the character she is portraying. John Myhers, as Capt. Von Trapp, also achieves a brilliant characterization in both singing and acting.

The children, Imelda deMartin, Ricky Wayne, Melanie Dana, Richard Carafa, Nita Navy, Linda Ross and Christopher Morris, seem to be the result of a compromise, but a happy one. The quality of their voices apparently was sacrificed for the quality of their acting ability and the result is naturalness. They sing well enough, but above all else they are believable.

Beatrice Krebs brings to the role of Mother Abbess the mezzo-contralto voice, the appearance and the acting ability that makes her contribution memorable. Her solo, "Climb Every Mountain," is perfect. The others in the cast are right and good.

Director Vincent J. Donehue, the stager of the musical numbers, Joe Layton, scenic designer Oliver Smith, costumer Lucinda Ballard, lighting designer Jean Rosenthal and musical director Salvatore Dell'Isola merit ratings of excellent.

The producers, Leland Hayward, Richard Halliday, Rodgers and Hammerstein, have another hit in this road company version of their Broadway success. Tew.

Max
Los Angeles, March 7.

Mark Lorna presentation of two-act (12 numbers) revue with sketches, music and lyrics by Max Rubinchik. Staged by Harold Innocent, Max Rubinchik; choreography, Roland Dupree; settings, Glenn Holse; costumes, Floydine Alexander. Stars Dick Kallman, Beverly Gregg, Bill Bixby, Grace Gaynor, Eddie Carroll. Opened March 1, '61, at the Coronet Theatre, Los Angeles; $3.90 top.

This new revue needs considerable brightening and the addition of stronger numbers before it can rate as more than barely passable. Occasionally spritely in the second act, after an opening half distinguished only by the enthusiasm of its young performers, the show lacks the professional touch and emerges pretty much on the amateurish side. There's one smutty line that must come out.

The musical by Max Rubinchik opened last Wednesday night (1) at the film-to-legit-converted Coronet Theatre for an indefinite stand, dependent upon how much suitable revamping can be done. The show takes its title from an unexplained character by the name of Max, who appears between sketches apparently to explain how the following number came to be written from his own collection of notes. It's wispy treatment, but all that strings the various numbers together.

Besides the dance and musical numbers, there are broad attempts at comedy which don't always come off. One of the best is the lively "The Bandit," with Bill Bixby, as a Zorro-type bandito, pouring out his heart to a nifty blonde analyst, played by Beverly Gregg.

Dick Kallman and Grace Gaynor also score in a number reminiscent of Judy Garland's "A Couple of Swells," and there's a movie set episode worth a few laughs until Miss Gaynor, as a film star, kills it with the blue line. Eddie Carroll is on for some haphazard comedy, too. Buck Young portrays title role.

Roland Dupree seems to have given the choreography indifferent attention and the co-direction of Harold Innocent and Rubinchik requires strengthening. Whit.

Another play about Abraham Lincoln. This one is George Ford's account of events before and after the assassination. It opened a three-week run Feb. 20 at Actors' Studio "M" in Coral Gables. It's suspenseful history, uniquely told, que way.

As the curtain rises, two Federal soldiers (who narrate the play) are seen speculating on the $100,000 reward they hope to receive for "capturing" the shot and charred corpse of John Wilkes Booth found in the tobacco shed which had supposedly become his last refuge. The militiamen are examining the few effects found on the remains. These include the pictures of four women, a map and a diary. As they muse over the latter, the drama unfolds in a series of vignettes, 17 in the first act and 14 in the second.

Booth, famous actor of his day (Edwin's brother) and infamous assassin, is the lead character. First act sees motivation and people leading up to his Big Scene. The second act depicts Booth's attempted escape, handicapped by a broken leg. He first receives medical help and shelter at the home of Dr. Mudd (who only recently died in Key West, still a Federal prisoner). Booth holes up until he can make his way South, along a prepared route. Gradually he is deserted by all of his accomplices except the pimp, David Herold, a degenerate tied to him by both love and fear.

Ruth Foreman has done a notable and imaginative job in directing and producing the play within the confines of a miniature stage. Each series of scenes opens with an effective tableau, seen through a gauze curtain.

Ralph Marino makes a believable Booth—handsome, posturing, always at least partially drunk and nursing a neurotic hatred of "that ape in the White House." Jim Rowe is outstanding as the burly Lewis Payne who sways Booth from kidnaping the President, as originally intended by the plotters, to murder. Jack Metzger, who stuck with Booth to the end, has some fine moments, especially in the last scene.

Author is the grandson of Harry Ford, the original owner of the Ford Theatre where Lincoln's murder took place. Culm.

Roots

plot purposes. Even portions of the second act could profitably be cut, although the action finally gets moving then, and gathers momentum to the potent third act finale.

A more skillful production would probably disguise or minimize these flaws. Under the slack direction of Mark Rydell, the first act seems endless and occasionally pointless, with the heroine and her married older sister exchanging vapid banter and gossip, punctuated by almost incessant, unmotivated laughter. Whole performance lacks compression and tempo.

In the key role of the girl, a showy but tricky part offering pitfalls for an inexperienced actress, Mary Doyle lacks variety, doesn't pace herself, and is too "busy," but has vitality that gives a spark to the big scene at the end. Joan Plowright played the part in the original production at the Royal Court Theatre, London.

As the uncomprehending mother, Katherine Squire has a veteran player's sense of timing and repose, and she shrewdly saves herself for her major scenes in the third act, and William Hansen has authority and ease as the miserly, frightened father. Gene Wilder is well cast as the bumpkin son, but Janet Ward lacks the proper earthiness for the placid older daughter and, doubtless following direction, keeps using a meaningless giggle.

Stefan Gierasch as an oafish son-in-law, George Mitchell as a senile hayseed roue, Mary Mercier as an outspoken daughter-in-law and Noam Pitlik as a heartless farm superintendent personifying wicked employer, give acceptable portrayals. Zvi Geyra has designed a simple scenic arrangement to represent three humble country interiors, and Marion Lathrop has provided homespunish costumes.

Off-Broadway producer Norman Twain is presenting the play, which was a critically "interesting" item when originally done by the English Stage Co., but a failure when moved to the West End for a commercial run. Hobe.

The Death of Bessie Smith

Theatre 1961 (Richard Barr & Clinton Wilder, producers, in association with John Eyre) presentation of one-act (seven scenes) drama by Edward Albee. Staged by Lawrence Arrick; music, William Flanagan; settings, lighting, costumes, William Ritman. Opened March 1, '61, at the York Playhouse, N.Y.; $4.90 top Friday-Saturday nights, $3.90 weeknights and Sundays.

Father ..... Roberts Blossom
Nurse ..... Rae Allen
Jack ..... John McCurry
Orderly ..... Harold Scott
Second Nurse ..... Helen Page Camp
Interne ..... Lee Richardson

The coupling of Edward Albee's "The Death of Bessie Smith," in its U.S. premiere, with the author's well-received "The American Dream," which opened earlier last month, should prove to be the right combination for its producers, Richard Barr and Clinton Wilder, who have been having trouble balancing the double-bill at the York Playhouse. The two debit entries were "Bartleby" which, unlike "Dream," received a cool reception and closed after 14 performances; and the Valerie Bettis Dance Theatre "Domino Furioso" which followed it in a "limited engagement."

Like "The Zoo Story," the first Albee drama here, "The Death of Bessie Smith," had its world premiere in 1960 in Berlin, where it is still playing. The story is based on the true circumstances surrounding the death, in 1937, of Bessie Smith, the Negro blues-singer. She was injured in an auto accident outside of Memphis, was refused admittance to a white hospital and died enroute to another.

In its essentials, the drama is primarily a series of verbal conflicts between the admitting nurse, interne, and orderly of the hospital to whose doors the singer's body is brought by her companion. These exchanges, provocative in their ironic contents, ringing with truth, in their bitterness—illustrate the time, its tenor, and the tensions which contributed to the tragic episode.

Albee brings his considerable skill to establishing a tense and at time, chilling mood, starting with the curt and ominous opening scene between the neurotic nurse and her disagreeable father. Once established, the vague feeling of foreboding is not always sustained, owing largely to the characters' sometimes unchecked verbosity.

The sheer volume of the individual speeches, especially the nurse's, tends to diminish the drama's impact in a number of the scenes. But its total effect remains impressive and memorable.

Rae Allen, in the focal part of the sadistic, prejudiced nurse, is fine most of the time, except in the loaded-with verbiage sequences, where she becomes detached and brittle. Lee Richardson's idealistic interne-interpretation needs more beefing up, in what on the opening night was a largely unresponsive performance. John McCurry as the luckless Jack, Bessie's companion, is warm and believable.

Harold Scott plays the knowing and compliant Negro orderly a bit too silkily. Roberts Blossom bristles well as the nurse's grumpy father and Helen Page Camp is an acceptable Second Nurse. Lawrence Arrick directed briskly with good attention to detail, blending well with William Ritman's good setting and lighting. William Flanagan's moody music is effective.

"The Death of Bessie Smith" will appeal to a "special" audience, but judging from the successful trend of "The Zoo Story," "The Balcony," and such offerings, no means a limited one. Jaal.

Double Entry

Albert C. Lasher, Paul Lehman & the Happy Medium presentation of "The Bible Salesman" and "The Oldest Trick in the World," with book, music and lyrics by Jay Thompson. Staged by Bill Penn; settings and lighting, Howard Becknell; musical direction and arrangements, Thompson; pianists, Brooks Morton and Rita Segree. Features Rosetta Lenoire, Doreese DuQuan, Ted Lambrinos, Garrett Morris, Jane Connell. Opened Feb. 20, '61, at the Martinique Theatre, N.Y.; $4.95 top weekends, $4.60 weekdays.

THE BIBLE SALESMAN
Grandmother ..... Rosetta LeNoire
Leroy ..... Garrett Morris
Man ..... Ted Lambrinos
THE OLDEST TRICK IN THE WORLD
Madame Scarlatina ..... Rosetta LeNoire
Enid ..... Doreese DuQuan
Miss Spencer ..... Jane Connell

Two delightful capsule musicals, with book, music and lyrics by Jay Thompson, are being presented at the Martinique Theatre, N. Y., under the title of "Double Entry." The vividly contrasted pieces, "The Bible Salesman" and "The Oldest Trick in the World," they form an entertaining showcase.

First in order of appearance is "Bible Salesman," based on a short story by Alma Stone. It is a brief, sentimental piece in which Garrett Morris, as a young Texas Negro, feels the "call" and decides to leave home to become a Bible salesman. His aging grandmother, soundly played by Rosetta LeNoire, tries to change his mind and then to prepare him for the inevitable hardships he'll face.

Thompson has refrained from sentimentality, writing a simple and concise libretto which is natively charming and direct. His lively scenes with the boy playing a bright tune on a set of glass bowls blend with the somber passages in which the old woman sadly reminisces over her lost family. Also entertaining is a short interlude between the boy and a Bible distributor. The music is complex sometimes but generally dramatic.

In "Oldest Trick in the World," Thompson turns to musical comedy. Spiced with clever one-line s, the piece deals with the manipulations of an Eighth Avenue gypsy fortune teller in her dealings with her "clients" and her efforts to school a lazy, naive girl in the tricks o fthe trade. LeNoire portrays the seer with raucous delight, belting out her theories in amusing tunes and charmingly cavorting to her own, as well as audience, amusement.

Doreese DuQuan is her disinterested pupil who sums up her attitude toward life pleasantly in "Kinda Sorta Doin' Nothing." Jane Connell bubbles over with enthusiasm as a seemingly naive client, especially in a wild "Fandango" in which she and LeNoire speculate on her romantic future.

As in "Salesman," Thompson's keynote for "Oldest Trick" is simplicity. His score is bright and crisp and his book and lyrics are witty and clever. Bill Penn directed both pieces with rapid-fire pacing, and Howard Becknell's settings and lighting provide appropriate atmosphere. Brooks Morton and Rita Segree perform Thompson's arrangements pleasantly on duo pianos.

"Double Entry" is being presented by the combine of Albert C. Lasher, Paul Lehman and The Happy Medium. The latter is the name of a Chicago cabaret-theatre operated by Oscar and George Marienthal, who are co-sponsoring the musical under that banner. Among Thompson's credits is material he provided for the Chinitery. Kali.

Irish Washerwoman ..... Nancy Andrews

Others: Inia Gabriel, Dodie Marshall, Susan Perkins, Jane Ross, Nancy Saloman, Jean Stringfellow, Elaine Tara, Judy Tara, Jon Frosher, Joe Herron, Richard Krisher, John Loose, Richard Mazza, Gerald Plano, Charles D. Tomlinson.

Musical numbers: "We Were Born by Chance," "Flirtation Waltz," "Honeysuckle Vine," "Flowery Waltz," "Travelling Song," "Razz-Me-Tazz-Jazz," "Tiger Rag Blues," "What Is Good for Depressions," "Apache," "Slewfoot Sluefie," "Rhumba," "Tango," "Irish Washerwoman's Lament," "My Father Was a Peculiar Man."

One of the dominant features of off-Broadway theatre is the preponderance of adaptations from a wide range of literary sources which are presented. The latest rewrite victim is the Oedipus myth, which has been modernized and set to music by Seyril Schochen and Kenneth Garburo and is being offered at the Cherry Lane Theatre.

A complex task in and of itself, the chore has been complicated further by the addition of a vaudeville format within which the story is told. As a result, there is a triple line of action throughout "Tiger Rag" and it seems to be too much for the musical to carry. The concept is an interesting one and perhaps with lighter subject matter would work better, but "Oedipus" is strained on the vaudeville boards.

Schochen's book is faithful to the myth. The book has recreated almost every major incident practically as Sophocles did in 400 B.C., but this places an awkward strain on portions of "Tiger Rag" which account for its slow exposition and decreasing effectiveness toward the end as the plot is tidied up.

Most interesting of the triple parallel is the use of the vaudeville theme. The acts are entitled "Follies of the Twenties," "Scandals of the Thirties," and "Fantoms of the Forties" and are subdivided into numbers which, through their content and certain recurrent characters, tell the story. The attractive designs and lighting by Robert Soule and Jules Fisher, help bring off this concept.

As the Jocasta of "Tiger Rag," Patricia Roe gives a sporadic performance, only occasionally coming to grips with the depth of her role. Brennan Moore is credible as her husband, but has difficulty with his vocal chores and Carlton Colyer is a generally effective Oedipus figure.

Logan Ramsey vocalizes well and does nimble footwork as a foppish opportunist and Joan Anderson is a cute secretary. Nancy Andrews gives an outstanding performance in a variety of roles, and belts out "Tiger Rag Blues" with delightful polish.

Ella Gerber has directed imaginatively within the intricate framework and Peter Conlow has designed bright, interesting choreography, including a clever "Apache," atmospheric "Razz-Me-Tazz-Jazz" and an appealing "Flirtation Waltz," Gaburo's music is pleasant but seems overpowered by Schochen's sometimes-strained lyrics and book. His melodies are arresting but soon forgotten. Bobb Nichols has provided an assortment of flashy and appropriate costumes. Kali.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Broadway set designer Ralph Alswang, working in collaboration with Chicago architect Mason Rapp, is executing the stage layout for Detroit's new Fisher Theatre. The legiter, scheduled to open next fall, is located in the skyscraper Fisher Building in the area, formerly occupied by the old Fisher Theatre, erected in 1929 as a vaude and picture house. The old theatre is being stripped completely and it's estimated that over $3,000,000 will be spent on construction of the new spot, which will have a seating capacity of 2,200 for musicals and 1,600 for straight plays.

Innovations include a large orchestra pit, half of which will be under the forestage with an accoustical shell extending behind the musicians to preserve tonal quality. Because of this setup the first row of the orchestra will be only seven feet from the forestage. The reduction in seating capacity for straight plays will be achieved by lowering a wall through a slot in the ceiling above the balcony. The theatre and building are owned by the Fisher Bros., the automotive body family. The house will be managed by David T. Nederlander and his sons, Joseph and James. The Nederlanders currently operate the Riviera and Shubert theatres in Detroit. Both houses will fade as legit showcases when the Fisher opens.

Crest Theatre's 100th production in its eight-year Toronto life is current: Ruth and Augustus Goetz' "Heiress," in for three weeks. Crest is the only company, either English or French-speaking, to achieve such a record of continuous operation, with a staff employed 40 weeks a year. It's built up a steady audience of more than 2,000, despite increasing competition from Royal Alexandra Theatre and O'Keefe Centre. This season's successes have been O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night," "Long and Short and Tall" and "Marriage-Go-Round." Next season will have Arnold Wesker's "Roots," the Australian "Shifting Heart" and two Canadian originals. Crest was founded by Murray Davis, currently its managing director; his brother Donald Davis, was in the off-Broadway "Krapp's Last Tape," which he has since relinquished; and their sister Barbara Chilcott, who now acts mostly in London. Well-bankrolled to start with, they've lost money every season so far; Crest is now partly publicly-owned.

The McKnight Foundation of Minnesota will establish a fellowship program for the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre, scheduled to open in Minneapolis the spring of 1962. An annual scholarship fund of $10,000 for Minnesota Univ. graduate students will be started by the foundation this year, which means that $20,000 will be available when the repertory theatre opens in 1962.

Ground-breaking ceremonies for the theatre, to seat 1,000 for proscenium-style presentations and 1,450 for in-the-round offerings, will be held March 28. The non-profit Tyrone Guthrie Theatre Foundation of Minnesota, formed to manage the theatre under a long-term lease from the T. B. Walker Foundation, has launched a public solicitation campaign to raise over $1,000,000 for the construction of the theatre.

The solicitation is in addition to a $400,000 grant from the Walker Foundation, which also contributed the half-acre site on which the theatre will be constructed.

The play licensing firm of Samuel French Inc. is conducting its ninth Annual Collegiate Playwriting Contest to promote the study and practice of playwriting in American colleges. The deadline on the submission of scripts is May 5. Any student registered in a U. S. college or university during any part of the 1960-61 school term is elegible to enter the competition.

In the full-length play category, the first and second awards are $350 and $100, respectively, plus possible publication. The 1961 judges are Broadway producer Fred Coe, Associated Press drama editor William Glover, and Professors Herschel L. Bricker and Barnard Hewitt, of the Univ. of Maine and the Univ. of Illinois, respectively.

Show on Broadway

about the stage and delivering an assortment of fractured Confucius says adages in a Charlie Chan sing-song. Give him credit—he plays the silly piece for all he's worth.

Cabaret singer Monica Boyer portrays the sultry island princess he married, thereby incurring the wrath of the native gods and being doomed to have only daughters. Although she doesn't change perceptively over the years, despite all that maternity, but seems pretty morose about the whole thing—and why not? Sylvia Syms scurries about as a rolly-polly distaff major domo, smiling, offering suggestions about luring the elusive male and singing a song or two.

Ed Kenney, last seen on Broadway as the juvenile lead in "Flower Drum Song," gives pretty much the same performance as an island prince in love with the wrong daughter and ready to sail away for reasons not very clear. Richard Tone is an agile, sinewy dancer, with an acceptable assist from Isabelle Farrell as the tomboy daughter. Stanley Grover gives a stereotype thin-lip portrayal of a New England missionary. George Lipton offers a sort of Billy Gilbert impression of a Hawaiian king, and Gina Viglione and Diana Coroto are the more amorous daughters. As it happens, the girls are generally lookers, which is a relief during the interminable plot sequences and songs.

If there are any hit tunes in the show it'll take plenty more plugging to register them. Rod Alexander's dance direction is an asset, including several routines of presumably island derivation, and others more in the usual musical comedy idiom. The George Jenkins settings are sumptuous and handsome, notably a multi-doored and balconied house, but neither they nor the lighting seemed to work too well opening night. Alvin Colt's costumes are decorative.

Eaton Magoon Jr., described in the program as a native Hawaiian who attended Yale, wrote the book, music and lyrics for "13 Daughters" and must take the major rap, but someone named Leon Tokatyan is listed as an accomplice on the book.

According to preliminary reports, much of the show's financing was raised in Hawaii. It must represent quite a few pineapples. Hobe.

Scalpers in Mex

then charged far above the officially approved commission.

The matter came to a head about a fortnight ago because of broker maneuvers in monopolizing best seating at bullfights. There were many charges and counter-charges, with the principal squawk that scalpers competed in buying up the supply of seats when cards featured big names, and then gouged the fans. Mexicans take bullfighting seriously, and raised a howl when deprived of the sport.

Authorities have been notified to crack down all along the line, covering all entertainments and public sports. Licenses of brokers have been revoked. There were originally about 125 ticket agencies here, according to records of permits authorized in the 1946-52 period. Since then there has been a slow drop off in total. From now on the public will presumably be able to buy tickets at the boxoffice at prices fixed by the administration.

There still may be undercover attempts to corner seats for the more spectacular sports events and shows. But violators will be fined $240 or given 15 days in jail for the first offense, with repeaters subject to jail terms up to two years.

B'way Slugged, But 'Do Re Mi' SRO, Comedie Francaise Record $73,100; Ameche $23,809 in 5, 'Horn' $19,532

Broadway was back in the dumps last week as business sagged for practically all productions. Of the 29 regular entries, "Do Re Mi" was sellout and 10 others had discount tickets in circulation. A notable exception to the downward movement was the Comedie Francaise, which set a house record for a legit offering at the City Center.

Last week's grosses for "Do Re Mi" and "Camelot" were cut by deductions to cover refunds to patrons unable to attend performances several weeks ago because of blizzard conditions. "All the Way Home" and "Miracle Worker" have instituted Sunday matinees instead of Monday evening performances.

Local O'Keefe Joke

Ottawa, March 7.

Michael Flanders & Donald Swann tossed in a local nifty last week when doing their "Drop of a Hat" at O'Keefe Centre, Toronto, which was built by O'Keefe Brewing Co.'s parent Canadian Breweries Ltd.

During their hippopotamus song, whose chorus begins "Mud, mud, glorious mud!" Flanders remarked, "The O'Keefe management wanted us to change that to 'Beer, beer, glorious beer!'"

GUILD-AMERICAN REP $37,687 FOR 7 IN D.C.

Washington, March 7.

The Theatre Guild-American Repertory Co., which began its overseas tour of three plays last night (Tues.) at the Teatro Espanol, Madrid, grossed a healthy $37.687 last week in seven performances at the National Theatre, Washington. The potential was $45.254 for the stand, in which the individual takes were $12.939 for three performances of "Skin of Our Teeth," $6,238 for one performance of "Miracle Worker" and $18.510 for three performances of "Glass Menagerie."

The company, headed by Helen Hayes, Leif Erickson, June Havoc and Helen Menken, left last Sunday (5) for Madrid, the first step on its tour of Europe and the Near East.

Shakespeare Tour

Wilmington, Philadelphia and Washington. Losses were incurred in Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Los Angles, Salt Lake City and San Francisco, and the breakeven level was hit in St. Paul and Denver.

Rust points out, however, that the losses were well-protected except in L. A., where there was no underwriting. The operating loss there on a three-week stand was over $20.000. All losses, incidentally, are tax deductible, since the Festival is a non-profit educational institution.

Lengthy advance preparations for the tour included the organization of the Shakespeare Festival Committees, usually a representative group of 25 or more leading localites, and the setting up of student audience by Richard Kirschner, director of the Festival's school audience program. Rust, who has been director of national development for the Festival, feels that certain gains were made as a result of the tour.

He cites the employment for the company, general critical and audience acclaim, increased national identification for the Festival and the establishment of a basis for national organization through active committees. Rust also stresses that the company played to a combined audience of over 200,000, of which about 25% were students, for a total gross of over $600,000.

His belief is that it will take time to condition hinterland audiences to Shakespeare plays and that the situation on the road is not the same as exists for the Festival on home ground in Stratford, Conn., where there are special summer vacation appeals contributing to the healthy patronage.

The Festival is not planning another tour for next season, Rust says, but he thinks it possible the company may go out the following semester, possibly to universities and colleges.

'Sound' $76,805 for Det. Opening, Two-Man 'Hat' $61,675 in Toronto, 'Fiorello' $60,702 in Split Week

The road was big in spots last week. The standout grosser was the two-character revue, "At the Drop of a Hat," which played to wow business in the initial stanza of a fortnight's booking at the O'Keefe Center, Toronto. Also registering strong was the touring edition of "Sound of Music" in its getaway frame in Detroit. "Fiorello" racked up a sock split-week take and the major city touring edition of "Once Upon a Mattress" in Boston had one of its best weeks to date.

"Big Fish, Little Fish" started slowly in the first week of its Philadephia tryout stand.

Estimates for Last Week

Parenthetic designations for out-of-town shows are the same as for Broadway, except that hyphenated T with show classification indicates tryout and RS indicates road show. Also, prices on touring shows include 10% Federal Tax and local tax, if any, but as on Broadway grosses are net: i.e., exclusive of taxes. Engagements are for single week unless otherwise noted.

CASTING NEWS

Following are available parts in upcoming Broadway, off-Broadway, and touring shows, as well as ballet, films, industrial and television shows. All information has been obtained directly by the VARIETY Casting Department by telephone calls, and has been rechecked as of noon yesterday (Tues.).

The available roles will be repeated weekly until filled, and additions to the list will be made only when information is secured from responsible parties. The intention is to service performers with leads provided by the managements of the shows involved rather than to run a wild goose marathon. This information is published without charge.

In addition to the available parts listed, the tabulation includes productions announced for later this season, but, for which, the managements, as yet, aren't holding open casting calls. Parenthetical designations are as follows: (C) Comedy, (D) Drama, (MC) Musical Comedy, (MD) Musical Drama, (R) Revue, (Rep) Repertory, (DR) Dramatic Reading.

'Illegal' Union Rules

The League of N. Y. Theatres in a confidential report to its members (see separate story) has cited "illegal" conditions of existing contracts between the producer-theatre owner organization and various legit unions. The League's stand, stemming from the recent recognition of Broadway and road legit by the National Labor Relations Board, is based on provisions in the Labor Relations Act. Principal issues involved and a summary of the applicable regulations in the act follow:

Closed Shop and Hiring Hall Arrangements

The "closed shop" is outlawed in a provision prohibiting employers from hiring only persons who already hold membership in a labor organization. This makes it unlawful for an employer to refuse to hire a qualified applicant for a job because he does not belong to a union. The provision also prohibits discriminatory hiring hall arrangements by which only persons who have "permits" from a union may be hired.

Labor organizations are also forbidden to cause or attempt to cause an employer to engage in discrimination against an employee which tends to encourage or discourage union membership. This bars contracts requiring an employer to hire only members of the union or persons "satisfactory" to the union.

Featherbedding

"Featherbedding" is prohibited under a provision barring labor organizations from causing or attempting to cause an employer to pay or deliver or agree to pay or deliver any money or other thing of value, in the nature of an exaction, for services which are not performed or not to be performed.

Union Security

The act permits a union and employer to make an agreement requiring all employees to join the union in order to retain their jobs, except in states where such agreements are specifically forbidden. The maximum form of such a union-security agreement permitted by the act is a requirement that employees acquire membership in the union within a "grace period" of 30 days following the beginning of their employment or the effective date of the contract, whichever is later, except in the building and construction industry. An agreement, which provides a grace period of less than 30 days is invalid.

Under a valid union-security agreement, an employee may be discharged for lack of union membership only when it results in his failure to tender on time "the periodic dues and the initiation fees uniformly required."

"Hot Cargo"

The provision covering "hot cargo" prohibits contracts whereby an employer "ceases or refrains or agrees to cease or refrain from handling, using, selling, transporting or otherwise dealing in any of the products of any other employer, or to cease doing business with any other person." There are exceptions to this rule for the garment and building-construction industries.

Secondary Boycott

Secondary boycotts and certain types of strikes and picketing are unlawful under a provision by which labor organizations are forbidden "to engage in, or to induce or encourage any individual employed by any person engaged in commerce or in an industry affecting commerce to engage in a strike or a refusal in the course of his employment to use, manufacture, process transport or otherwise handle or work on any goods, articles, materials, or commodities or to perform any services."

The provision also forbids unions to "threaten, coerce, or restrain any person engaged in commerce or in an industry affecting commerce" for the purpose of forcing any employer or self-employed individual to join a labor or employer organization or to enter into a "hot cargo" agreement.

Legit Under NLRB

Equity and the Ushers & Doormen's union. The Equity agreement is also listed in the report as containing an illegal "hot cargo" provision, which is also found in the stagehands union contract, along with an illegal secondary boycott clause.

The National Labor Relations Board asserted its jurisdiction over the operations of the League in an advisory opinion handed down last January. The decision was based on the League's interstate business activities, which annually exceed the minimum requirement of $50,000 to qualify for NLRB jurisdiction.

During its contractual dispute last summer with Equity, the League filed charges of unfair labor practices against the union with the NLRB. But at that time it was not determined whether the theatre came under NLRB jurisdiction.

The national board's assertion of jurisdiction over Broadway and road legit stemmed from a petition filed by the League as a result of legal action taken by the Society of Stage Directors & Choreographers to place the Broadway theatre under the jurisdiction of the N.Y. State Labor Relations Act. The League has refused to recognize the society on the basis that directors and choreographers are independent contractors. The society is now seeking NLRB certification.

A standing labor committee, under the chairmanship of Broadway general manager Herman Bernstein, has been established by the League to study problems as they arise. Also on the committee are general managers Jack Schlissel and Max Allentuck, producer Robert Griffith, City Playhouses executive Raymond E. Broeder, St. James Theatre executive Samuel H. Schwartz, and touring producer Martin Tahse.

B'way, Coast Directors Set Affiliation Talks

Hollywood, March 7.

Talks on affiliation of the Society of Stage Directors and Choreographers with the Directors Guild of America will start in earnest following the windup of the latter group's negotiations with the networks on new contract, starting March 15, according to DGA president Frank Capra.

Introductory talks have been held, sparked by the visit here 10 days ago of Shepard Traube, prez of the New York outfit. Sessions will start in New York and continue on both coasts. Capra is an exponent of the idea that all directors should be "under one roof."

ATPAM Members

than $30,000, and one unidentified member earned over $30,000.

Besides those working in ATPAM jobs, another 114 members were employed outside the jurisdiction of the union. There were six members, who, although holding active cards, were retired. Another 13 were ill and two others were employed as paid officers of the union. There were 88 members, excluding the retired and ill, who were not employed during the year either under ATPAM's jurisdiction or outside its jurisdiction.

The 377 members who worked under union jurisdiction were engaged for a total of 11,137 weeks making an average of 29½ weeks for each. The work weeks for a little over 40% of the 377 ranged from one to 26. The average weekly income for the 377 was $124. The minimum wage for ATPAM members during the latter part of 1960 ran from a low of $177.12 for house managers and company managers of dramatic shows in New York to a high of $289.27 for road pressagents.

This adaptation of an Aldous Huxley original is strong, heady, scalding stuff. A black, broody, devil's brew of sex, sin, religious fanaticism and suspected witchcraft, the work is the firstever modern play presented by the Stratford-on-Avon Co. Adapter John Whiting is an actor-turned-dramatist whose earlier plays ("Saints Day," "Penny For A Song," "Marching Song") gleamed with sometimes fitful promise. He was commissioned by Peter Hall, director of the Stratford Memorial Theatre. Production occupies Aldwych Theatre, Stratford's London home.

Based on Huxley's book "The Devils of Loudun," Whiting's splendidly written, terrifying and terribly moving play has to do with a real life case of suspected diabolism in 17th century France.

In the small town of Loudun the people whisper about Father Urbain Grandier, their parish priest. He is a handsome intellectual who combines his spiritual mission with some ill-concealed wenching. Fascinated by what she has heard about the lecherous cleric, the young Prioress of an Ursuline convent succumbs to sexual hysteria. Her faith is not strong enough to prevent her giving way to something that is a mixture of the natural desire of the flesh and the sort of frenzied adulation a modern teenager might give to a pop singer she had never met.

Soon other young nuns in the convent—all as lacking in true religious vocation as their Prioress—are similarly infected. The hysteria is attributed to demoniac possession and Grandier, branded by the Prioress as the devil's instrument, is tried, condemned, tortured and burned at the stake. Not for licentiousness, of which he is guilty, but for sorcery, of which he is not.

The script as it stands could do with some pruning and Peter Wood's otherwise taut-reined direction slips badly in two scenes. One in which the paroxysms of the jigging, sex-crazed nuns arouse misplaced laughter and the other containing a torture sequence too harrowing for normal tastes. But these lapses cannot mar the power of the play to sweep across the audience like a purging fire. Nor can they blunt its warning for an era which has also known its witch-hunts.

Although himself possessed by a demoniac flu' germ at the first night, Richard Johnson's performance, as Grandier, matches the play's stature. And in the scene near the end when, hounded by a superstitious Church and a scheming State, he comes to terms with himself and God, he delivers the best speech of the play with a touching wonder and humility.

Dorothy Tutin's performance as the Prioress is a revelation. Miss Tutin could charm. Miss Tutin could touch hearts. But nobody had suspected until now that Miss Tutin could also terrify. Here is an actress who has grown an extra dimension.

The rest of the long cast acquit themselves well, particularly Max Adrian, as the serpent-like smeller out of devils. And Sean Kenny's harsh set, in which the actors are hemmed in by a forest of crosses, aptly suggests the twisting of religion into a prison for men's minds. "The Devils" might be a standout for Broadway, but it will be a brave producer who tackles it, because of the nuns. Nash.

A remarkable study in powerful, controlled villainy by Robert Shaw is a highlight of the Royal Court's production of "The Changeling" a Jacobean melodrama of ugly lust and murder. The show could prove raw meat at a less specialized theatre, but at the Royal Court should prove a boxoffice draw. It's a 17th century work by Thomas Middleton who has, somewhat extravagantly, been compared to Shakespeare. This work does at least demonstrate that the author could hold his dialog and situations.

This staging assignment by Tony Richardson, with which he returns to the theatre after making a couple of films, is believed to be the first professional production of the play since the end of the 17th century. For those who may not know the piece it deals with a young woman who is affianced but loves another.

She plots with one of her father's servants to murder the unwelcome lover. Then she finds that the servant's price is higher than she expected to pay, namely, sharing her bed on her wedding night. Such a situation could end only in death for them both.

There is also a rather obscure sub-plot set in a fantastic madhouse, which gives the play its title, but has little to do with the main theme. It was apparently written only to heap horror on to horror in this dark work.

Richardson has staged the play with no holds barred. Murder, near-rape, cuckoldry, lunacy, sadism, treachery are all thrown in, even to a scene where a finger is sawn off a corpse to gain a trinket. But though the play often repels, it always grips.

Robert Shaw, as the servant dedicated in his desire to possess the heroine, gives a brooding, dominating performance of great subtlety and fascination. Mary Ure seems frail and slight as the heroine, but gradually as she finds herself involved more and more in the inevitable tragedy she grows in stature.

Jeremy Brett is a jaunty hero as the man she loves. Norman Rossington, alternately funny and evil as a jailer. Annette Crosbie, Robin Ray and Zoe Caldwell all contribute in their several ways to the effectiveness of "The Changeling."

But it will be Shaw's performance and excellent settings by Jocelyn Herbert that will be most remembered about this production of a play that has been buried in obscurity for too long, even though the madhouse sequences are often unnecessarily hard to stomach. Rich.

Pools Paradise

London, Feb. 18.

Toby Rowland Ltd. (in association with Pertpic Ltd. & Cedric B. Levitt) presentation of a three-act comedy by Philip King. Stars Pat Kirkwood, Hubert Gregg, Henry Kendall; features Claude Hulbert. Philip King, a proven provider of yocks for escapist audiences, has done a slender job in "Pools Paradise," and it may have trouble in standing up for a West End run. The play certainly isn't a prospect for export.

The new comedy is a certain boxoffice winner for stock theatres. The ingredients that King has worked into the play are the too familiar comic maid, spinsterish neighbor, clergymen losing their pants, etc. It's all been done before and more adroitly.

Mirror-Odhams Colossus

Personnel slashes and possible discontinuance of some publications are expected to follow the acquisition last week of Britain's Odhams Press by the Daily Mirror publishing group. Headed by Cecil Harmsworth King, the Mirror organization paid around $99,400,000 for the Odhams holdings. The purchase price was largely in the nature of an exchange of Mirror stock for Odhams shares.

The two giant publishing combines had long completed with one another for readers in many fields. For example, The Daily Mirror turns out such mags as Woman's Weekly, Woman's Companion and Woman's Mirror. Odhams, on the other hand, publishes Woman, Woman's Realm and Woman's Own, among other publications. It's felt that the merger will tend to streamline the overall setup and bring about sizable economies in paper and other production costs.

Consummation of the deal, of course, ended plans of (Roy) Thomson Newspapers to buy Odhams. A proposed merger of the two firms was disclosed in January. But shortly thereafter King stepped in with an initial bid which he later raised to a point that the Odhams board regarded as "fair and reasonable."

Two left wing tabloids with extensive readership are under the Daily Mirror group's banner. They include The Daily Mirror, with a circulation of 4,648,768, and The Sunday Pictorial, with a circulation of 5,461,091. Odhams Press gets out The Daily Herald, a pro-Labor party sheet, and The People, a Sunday publication with a circulation in excess of 5,250,000.

Consolidation has brought about what may be the biggest global newspaper and mag combine with assets believed to be more than $280,000,000. The Mirror organization also publishes more than 130 periodicals, technical journals, etc. along with scores of trade directories and yearbooks. Likewise, Odhams publishes more than 150 mags and periodicals.

The new enterprise, incidentally, appears to be considerably larger than the Time Inc. publishing empire whose assets were $216,480,399 at the end of 1959. Later figures are unavailable. A comparison of the Mirror-Odhams group with Time Inc. also has another interesting facet in that both are sparked by striking personalities.

Henry R. Luce has long been the dominating force behind Time Inc. The dignified Cecil Harmsworth King not only expanded The Daily Mirror over the past decade but acquired other papers and bought a 9.3% interest in Associated Television. A nephew of the late Alfred Harmsworth, the first Lord Northcliffe, who controlled The Times of London, he is famed for his shrewdness and a ruthless technique in administrating his holdings.

More Paperback & Pix Tieups

Value of tieups between film companies and book publishers is pointed up anew by the activity of Popular Library, paperback publisher, which has six pieces of joint promotion in work. PL is mapping a biz campaign in connection with 20th-Fox's film version of Robert F. Kennedy's bestseller, "The Enemy Within," which goes before the cameras this spring.

Also on tap are Louis de Wohl's "Francis of Assisi," recently completed by Plato Skouras for 20th-Fox release, and "The Greatest Raid of All" by C. E. Lucas-Phillips which 20th will shoot in England. Book version is due for July release. Three other tieups include PL reprints of "Devil at Four O'Clock," "With Lawrence in Arabia" and "Tammy Tell Me True." Columbia will release "Devil" and "Lawrence" while "Tammy will be distributed by Universal.

Mabley's Chi Shift

Jack Mabley, onetime tv critic who for the past four years has penned a general trouble-shooting column for the Chicago Daily News, made a surprise switch to the competing afternoon paper, the American. Reportedly, the lure was an annual salary of $25,000. Mabley was with the News 22 years and covered television in the early 1950s.

John Justin Smith, former first asistant city editor, takes over the column vacated by Mabley.

O'Shea's Memoir

Fountainhead Publications will publish legit press agent Michael Sean O'Shea's initial literary tome, "I've Been Where I'm Going—A Rememberance." It covers the past quarter of a century, with accent on show business. With a foreword, glossary, index and illustrations, the book will be in 26 chapters subtitled, "The A to Z of things, people and places." It is promised as an early 1962 release.

Although O'Shea has served as a ghost writer for other scribes through the years, this will mark his first entry into the literary fold as an author.

'Garbo' Biog

nam: $4.50) is written by a Swedish actor, described as a "friend and former colleague" of the star. Understandably partisan in tone, the book adds little to information about Garbo which is already in print. Author attempts to solve the enigma of the actress' personality in several rhapsodic flights of deduction, but he is not really successful.

There is good material about Garbo's childhood in Sweden, and first-hand reporting on her return to her native land. Work is liberally springled with quotes about Garbo from the great and the unknown. Some of her own reflections on life, acting, directors, and co-players are entered, and there is an appendix listing the six films the actress made in Europe, and the 24 she did for MGM in the U.S. between 1926 and 1941.

Maurice Michael's translation does not always achieve grace in readability, and despite Billquist's devotion to his subject, Garbo can remain for the reader only on the same inscrutable pinnacle as before. Rodo.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Palm Springs.

Contemplating a trip from the French Riviera to New York 30 years ago with a bride whose early English had been lost after years of living on the Scandinavian Peninsula, I had to decide whether to teach her by going back to Chaucer and working up to Strachey or by cutting to the chase and teaching her from copies of George Ade and VARIETY. The latter course seemed the more sensible because she would be likely meeting show people and their idiom in their own field was as supreme as the gold standard in world finance.

Today, such a choice would hardly be necessary. Anyone can pick up a current copy of VARIETY and understand every word of it. A half century ago its language was limited to Broadway and the various vaudeville circuits. Today, thanks to television, radio, legit and the merger of slang with pure prose, VARIETY's English is not much different from J. F. Kennedy's.

Of course it might be argued that the Prez's English isn't pure Harvard, having been varnished by the prose of a father who had merged Wall Street and Broadway.

Up to quite recently the editor of VARIETY was frequently asked to write a piece for other publications, explaining what VARIETY's prose was all about. This phase of the entente cordiale is over. No prose-gap seemingly, remains.

As an example here is a paragraph reviewing "Sanctuary" in the Feb. 22 issue. It reads:

"Little more than the skeleton of its complex but perceptive sensational but poetic, source material remains in the Richard D. Zanuck production of William Faulkner's Sanctuary."

Nearly two columns of this prose follow. It is signed Tube (Larry Tubelle).

How anyone on the Atlantic could distinguish this prose from its own staffers is small proof of the change that has come over VARIETY in the years between 1920 and today.

Of course there's a lunatic fringe, which is known as the Beatnik Set, and their prose is presumably way out, even for VARIETY. But, in the main, Beats take simple words like "cool," "dig," "the most" and in a short while these words wear their edges round and their jive prose walks on its heels like a stumblebum.

Actually there's no such thing as a square when applied to a head. All heads, as any painter will tell you, are eggheads.

In that era there lived a specialist in slang, George Ade by name. Born in Kentland, Indiana, a year after the close of the Civil War, he wrote fables in slang for nearly 50 years. They were as short as a butt in a gutter, and their terseness was something VARIETY must have liked when Sime first founded the publication in 1905.

His slang has stood up remarkably well. You can read of his describing a baseball fan as "a rooster from the days of underhand pitching and a walking dictionary of all the glass arms in the universe."

Back in 1899 Ade was writing about a dame who had scared all the red corpuscles out of the 2-by-4 midget who rotated around her limited orbit and was known by courtesy as her husband. "Her clothes were full of pinholes where she had been hanging medals on herself.

He had a fable about the Unintentional Heroes of Centerville "who went to Cuba to shoot at everything that looked foreign." They returned to their jobs acclaimed as heroes. One of them asked the other if he believed it. "No matter what I believe," said the hero picking up the janitor's mop, "I'm going to let them have their own way. I may want to run for supervisor some day."

Sometimes Ade makes a reference that is lost today. Who, for instance, was Pauline Hall? Ally Sloper? And what were Hemp cigarettes?

A reference to people who Rush the Can would be lost today because beer is no longer served to little Lizzie in a can for a nickel over at the Dutchman's.

Then he made some observations about the preacher whose pewholders were not tickled "because they could understand everything he said and they began to think that he was common." When he changed his act and began reading from an Icelandic Poet, Ikon Navrojk, concluding by breathing heavily from his nose like "Camille" in the third act, the parishioners decided that he was hot stuff. Ade's moral was to "give the people what they think they want."

He told one fable of a vaude team named Zoroaster & Zendavesta. They began in a circus but were too good, they thought, to show under a round top. So by utilizing two of Pat Rooney's songs and stealing a few gags they put together 17 minutes and began to play dates and combinations. They were the hired girls' treat.

"Occasionally they would put a card in the Clipper (VARIETY's ancestor) that "they were the best in the business, bar none, and good dressers on and off the stage. Regards to Leonzo Bros.; Charley Diamond please write."

They had a scrapbook with a clipping from a Paducah paper which said they were better than Nat Goodwin. Whenever a critic said they ought to be on an icewagon instead of on the stage they always brought out that Paducah notice. They played the same sketch for 17 years, and in all those years they kept telling people how good they were and couldn't understand why the public stood for Mansfield when they could get Zoroaster & Zendavesta.

The manager would put them between the trained ponies and a legit with a bad cold. "When a legit loses his voice," wrote Ade, "he goes into Vodeville." They ended their days doing two supper turns to the piano player and the day watchman, still insisting they were the best in the business and being used dead wrong. To the end they derived comfort from reading the Paducah notice.

Ade was early in the field of satires on divorce and told one about a member of the peroxide tribe who told her story in "a tremulous Viola Allen kind of voice while her lawyer wept."

According to Ade, this lawyer would weep for anyone who would hand him $8. "Afterthought—make it $7.50."

As the case developed Chemical Flora said everyone agreed she had talent "I once went to Rockford and recited 'The Tramp's Story' at a club social and I got a lovely notice. I'm especially good at dialect recitations."

"Humorous?" asked the court.

"Yes sir. But I can turn right around and be pathetic all of a sudden if I want to be."

She told the modern Solomon that her husband begged her not to make a show of herself and for God's sake not to tackle anything humorous. But this wouldn't stop her and the judge said he'd believe her even if she wasn't under oath.

As for the husband's story, though he was a bookkeeper for a gravel roofing concern he always thought he could write. He and a friend who worked in a hat store composed a comic opera. He thought his friend had more musical ability than Victor Herbert and his friend thought the lyrics were the best since 'Erminie.' In fact everybody liked my book," said the husband.

"Except your wife?" suggested the court.

"That's it, exactly. I wanted sympathy and encouragement and she gave me the metallic laugh. Whenever I started to sing she would talk in a loud voice. I think the bleach affected her head."

The court wanted to know if the opera had been produced.

"No, the eastern managers were all tied up with Harry B. Smith," the husband replied. "Then there's a prejudice against western talent."

The judge ended by giving them a divorce and required each to pay the other $25 a week. "And if either of you ever marries again he or she will be jerked before this tribunal and sentenced to 10 years of hard labor in some penal institution."

To show you that things have not changed much since, the court then took a noon recess for three and a half hours.

The only difference today it would all cost more.

Film Stocks Star In Wall St.

250 to 300 pictures, carried on the books at $1 each, and representing a potential of $3,000,000 to $10,000,000 in gross. This is product which AA owns outright, as distinguished from certain films in which outside participants held the rights, or acquired same, and peddled to video.

If AA can ultimately rake in up to $10,000,000, it's obvious that Metro, Paramount, 20th-Fox, et. al., can draw multiples of that amount. And, financially, all extra-curricula.

Now, to get back to "money is looking for a place to go." The Wall Street hipsters relate that the pension funds, investment outfits and foundations are eager to buy "growth" companies. They're loaded with cash and are impelled to invest, though some analysts insist the country is in the midst of a near-recession. The popular utilities and industrials are highly priced within that term of reference. So these wealthy buyers are turning to the moderately-valued securities of the film corporations.

'Growth' Allure

They and individuals are intrigued by the growth prospects, and an added inducement is the multi-million aura of the roadshow entries. Latter add up to a combination of glamor and commerce. Exec of a leading downtown concern said this week he thought United Artists "beautiful," taking into consideration that UA has three "best picture" Academy Award nominees. Fact that UA is the big contender in the Oscar sweepstakes is not meaningful in itself; an Oscar winner can be a boxoffice loser. But the Wall Streeters see it as showing that UA is going in the right quality-pic direction.

American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres hit a new high of $52 last week. The tv progress has been a stimulant, but theatres business is going unusually well. In the week ended Friday (3), Columbia rose $6.87½ per share, which is truly rare, hit a new high of $32.50. The Screen Gems subsidiary is doing well enough to pay the dividend freight, and the theatricals, which are promising, are so much gravy.

Walt Disney climbed back to $40 per share, after being $20 just a few short months ago. "101 Dalmatians," "Swiss Family Robinson," among others in current marketing, and the likelihood of at least a couple of upcoming money-makers are behind the upswing.

Upward Drift

Decca Records, major owner of Universal, has shot up from a low of $17.37½ to a high of $39.75 and is now at the $35 trading level. U's picture advancements have been the reason.

Loew's Theatres made a remarkable jump of $4.25 per share last week (ended Friday—see Wall Street chart in today's issue for closing prices yesterday). Metro went to a new high of $55.25, from a low of $24.87½. Paramount zoomed to $70.50 per share, from a low of $39.50. The bulk of optimistic concern re Par centers on theatricals, plus the guessed-about future of home tollvision in the form of the wholly-owned International Telemeter.

Aforesaid Allied Artists, on the erstwhile "curb," increased to a new high of $6.75 on the basis of the tv capital gains plus some interesting theatricals, including Western Hemisphere distribution rights to Samuel Bronston's "El Cid."

Twentieth-Fox is near high at $43 and Warners has gone from $37.37½ to a high of $60.25. Big item at WB is the fact the company has been able to buy in almost 450,000 shares of its own stock at prices of up to $55 per share, reflecting an unusually sound cash position. Also, an insider said WB ought to earn $10 to $12 per share next year, what with its theatrical and tv interests.

UA has gone from $23.62½ to a new high of $38.37½. MCA hit the top at $58 per share, from a low of $22.25.

Thus it's been up and up, almost fantastically. There's lots of investment money around, and it's going in the direction of Hollywood.

UA Unfretted

A Bache & Co. market letter figures United Artists is headed for its most profitable year in 1961, with the company's Academy Awards entries meaning "just so much icing on the earnings cake."

Bache is fond of UA, has been for a long time, but still has a reservation about the outfit's equity financing of pictures, submitting that the practice holds the net down. UA execs pay little attention to this kind of comment.

Melina Mercouri

Louella Parsons Friday (3) to bemoan fact that Miss Mercouri this year won out (in the nominations) over Doris Day (for "Midnight Lace"). Wrote Miss Parsons:

"Last year, Hollywood voted its top acting honor to a foreign star, Simone Signoret in 'Room at The Top.' Are we going to keep on doing this above our fine American actresses?

"If European countries would return the compliment, it might not be so bad.

"American movies compete in many foreign 'film festivals'—and seldom win anything. I think it's high time the Academy listed and voted on foreign entries in a foreign film category."

While at first glance this sounds slightly chauvinistic, the Parsons beef may contain some high-protein points anent incongruities and inequities in Academy rulings. Several years ago, Swedish director-writer Ingemar Bergman won an Oscar for his written-in-Swedish screenplay for "Wild Strawberries," over domestic entries, while the Bergman films themselves had to compete in the foreign language category.

For years, British stars and British films have competed on an equal footing with U.S. product, but this year marks the first time that an acting nomination has been won by a performer in a pic which might ordinarily be expected to compete in the foreign language category (though most of "Never on Sunday" actually is in English and, of course, it was directed by an American, Jules Dassin).

According to Miss Parsons, Academy originally intended to classify "Sunday" as a foreign entry, and, she added, "this should also apply to the actors."

Miss Mercouri's winning a nomination over Miss Day may also be said to represent the triumph of vice over virtue, seeing as how Miss Mercouri's role was that of a high-flying and totally unrepentant prostie, while Miss Day played a rich, sweet, brave, all-American wife.

Spy Mania Sweeps

attributed this decision to the new spirit in Washington. It was right at that time that Kennedy's government demanded the text of Admiral Burke's speech and deleted several anti-Soviet remarks contained in it. The newspapers agreed that if a television company, which in the past had been frequently distinguished for its provocational broadcasts, had decided to come to its senses, there was more in it than met the eye.

"However, this conclusion was premature. A few days passed and CBS announced that 'The Spy Next Door' would be put on after all. And on Feb. 15 American television viewers were forced to become acquainted with this program, which a good businessman would not even let in a circus sideshow."

Izvestia, which apparently had a spy next to somebody viewing the show, reports, "The first people to appear on the screen were some sort of hoaxed Americans, who were, however, passed off as Soviet spies. Then the viewers were shown the photographs of Soviet citizens who had left the USA at various times after they had been faced with completely false accusations of 'intelligence activity.'"

Show should have been called, says Izvestia, "Provocateurs Are Next to You." The provocateurs, says the paper, are from CBS, "with their unworthy methods, rented from the department of irreplaceable Allen Dulles."

Izvestia, while saying that CBS had worsened the situation that already had given the web a bad reputation among viewers, expresses disappointment over American video's lack of censorship. Apparently, the hopes that were entertained that some sort of limits would be imposed on their harmful activity were not justified, and these persons, enjoying influential support still have freedom of action. This is not apparent on the television screen itself. But what goes on behind the screen?"

The story signed by M. Mikhailov, starts with a general blast at American tv: "Whoever has been in America and has spent at least one or two hours in front of television set cannot help but sympathize with the Americans who are frequently fed a horrible mixture of criminality and advertising, low-quality shows and radically cut films."

Cartoon with the article title, "Television Program for an American Family," shows a human shadow behind a tv set labeled "Cold War Propoganda," and a furiously-frowning set shrieking at two viewers, "A Spy Is Next to You."

Negro Comics Query

Negro talent viewpoint, the Gregory phenomenon is not due to any especially unique or superior talent as much as the rather lucky timing of his Playboy Club booking and the Time mag spotlighting.

He got booked into the Playboy at the very time that integration was frontpage news, and his material (which is nothing new on the Negro circuit) had a certain shock value to the avant-garde cabaret set.

Seasoned Names

Colored entertainers point to such seasoned sepia standuppers as Timmie Rogers (who is booked for two shots on the Ed Sullivan Show), Redd Foxx, Willie Lewis, Slappy White, Nipsey Russell, George Kirby and Allen Drew, all of whom have used integration themes.

Tradesters recall that Rogers has worked small white supper clubs in New York and has made the Catskill circuit for many years. Rogers and Lewis are considered the most prolific creaters of material in their bailiwick, with their routines often ending up in some other colored or white comic's act. Several of the Negro comedians have done network television and many have played the white clubs on occasion, but they're mostly confined to the Negro circuit. None has broken the race barrier to the extent of the succession of first-rank white nitery dates set for Gregory.

White was once a featured act at Mr. Kelly's here and Russell played the Chi Cloister when it was a chichi room, but none have caused the vibrations set in motion by Gregory. Again it's apparently a matter of timing ,with talents at least equal to Gregory's limited to the colored clubs as he rides the integration wave to the choice niteries.

Chi deejay Daddy-o-Daylie reports that a current complaint against Gregory by Negro entertainers is his use of gags about narcotics and his overuse of hip jargon. The feeling is that both of these are overworked and unrepresentative stereotypes that work negatively against colored entertainers.

Whether Gregory's success will provide entree for other Negro comics into the choice white clubs is being closely gauged. Evidently there is a wealth of comedic talent available if and when this vein is tapped.

Carnival Season

eye level through the main streets of the merrymaking town.

The posters, printed in mournful black letters against a symbolically pure white background, were released to coincide with the Fasching season—and announced dramatically, "Thou Shalt Not Commit Adultery."

Next church attack came against the hit record brought out by German comic Willy Millpwitsch to be sold during the carnival season. It's titled "Schnaps, Das War Sein Letztes Wort" (Brandy, That Was His Last Word) and it's about the fellow who collapses, happily, after celebrating the carnival. The amusing record has sold 500,000 copies.

Now, though, two leading Frankfurt posters have raised an outcry against Ariola, the firm releasing the popular platter, against Millowitsch and against composer Guenther Schwenn of Munich who wrote the lyrics.

Deacon Heinrich Seesemann and Father Carl Zeiss of the Protestant Church have protested, in a story widely circulated through the papers, that the song is immoral and dangerous in that it makes fun of heaven and implies that the man who collapses, either dead drunk or dead, is lost for eternity and is poking fun at religion.

Diskery's Denial

An Ariola spokesman stated in rebuttal that the record company carefully considers all its platters and felt that this was not a particularly dangerous song.

Final word on the issue came from the composer, who noted in the German press that it would be just about impossible to buy alcohol in Germany, or elsewhere in Europe, if it weren't for the wonderful brands that are put up by the monks at the various cloisters, who specialize in secret recipes for their fine brandies and liqueurs.

With Germany's booming economy, thousands of high-spending natives handed out their money for champagne, lobster dinners and expensive costumes. And only a few of the smaller gasthauses and bars were crying the blues, blaming both the influence of the church in cutting their crowds, and the newly-rich Germans who had turned to more costly nightclubs and pubs for their Fasching fun.

But at least one German community had no complaint. In Mainz, which attracts millions of visitors for its famed four-hour-long carnival vaudeville show, "Mainz, how it sings and laughs," the giant hall was sold out months in advance. Television rights were sold in Germany, Austria and Switzerland, and the performance was also filmed and shown in movie houses.

The theatres were sold out as soon as tickets went on sale, every restaurant and bar with a television set reported booming business during the time of the airing, and the town's hotels were jammed with visitors attending the event.

Usher for Stand-In

ing admission, is limited to whites. Negroes have said that it is difficult to see and hear in the balcony.

—And In San Antonio

San Antonio, March 7.

An estimated 35 members of the Students for Civil Liberties held their second peaceful demonstration in two weeks at the Majectic Theatre here March 5. The demonstration again failed to alter the theatre's policy on segregation. Neatly dressed white and Negro college students assembled at the theatre at 4 p.m. and dispersed at 6:45 p.m.

Joined by onlookers at times, the students took turns asking theatre officials about the theatre's segregation policy. Lone Castaillo, who led the demonstration, said the stand-in was held to "help speed up desegregation."

He noted the group, which held its first demonstration on Lincoln's birthday, has received several letters of encouragement from various organizations.

During the demonstration, a loudspeaker intoned "immediate seating inside if you are not opposed to this theatre's policy on integration. It is not necessary for you to stand in line." Officials quickly substituted "segregation" for "integration" after a smiling Negro student approached Lynn Krueger, manager of the Majestic and said: "I'm not opposed to a policy of integration. How about selling me a ticket."

Negro youths staged similar demonstrations in Dallas, Houston and Austin.

Bob Hope

Youngman and Jack Carter also were on hand.

Except for Hope, the real big names of show biz were missing from the dais, but there was partial compensation in that Carter is a very big talent. Repeating his strongly humorous performance for a recent Ed Sullivan testimonial, he broke up the 1,000 or so celebs who realized that they were finally getting more than the run-of-the-mill dinner jokes.

Perhaps the sincerest of accolades came from Hope's old friend, Sen. Stuart Symington. Nice words were passed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, with whom Hope has worked many times over, in and out of the MOD campaigns he's been involved in for two decades; from Basil O'Connor, one of MOD's guiding lights; and from Gen. Omar Bradley, honorary chairman. Spyros Skouras, 20th-Fox prexy, opened the night with a speech marred more by his heavy cold. Eric Johnston, MPAA topper, had something to say too.

The dais was loaded also with McCann-Erickson's C. Terence Clyne and Emerson Foote; American Broadcasting's Leonard H. Goldenson; CBS-TV's James T. Aubrey; NBC's Robert W. Sarnoff; Bryan Houston of Fletcher, Richards, Calkins & Holden; RKO's Harry Mandel, plus Wall St. and industrial giants.

The NBC film cameras were spotted around, picking up personages in the audience, most notably Joan Crawford. Hope, who is so highly professional that he never seems to misstep even in telling the disturbing truth about his "shill" status, singled out John F. Royal, a kind of dean emeritus of NBC and a former vaude administrator, as "one of the greatest showmen of our time." He noted, too, that Royal gave him his start way back in the '30s.

Hope, like Milton Berle, is among the trade-sier of the comedians, and naturally some of his lines—even in the properly subdued state as Friday's guest-of-honor—brought appreciative yocks from a trade-studded house: "Jessel—Manischevitz's answer to Alistair Cooke." Bob Sarnoff—"I've always understood (his) problem; (he) televises mine"; Johnston—"the Mr. Clean of our industry . . . He's here at a great sacrifice tonight; he could be seeing a dirty movie." To Bradley, the chairman of Bulova, he said: "I wear a Bulova—ever since my experience with Timex."

"They always have to have a shill," Hope said. He carried it off well by adding, not without affection, "Last year Jack Benny won the award. That'll give you an idea."

He was right; most everyone appeared to be going through his paces—a little like stock characters at a church social.

Marie Torre

dancer Gwen Verdon as its focal point.

Miss Torre's night drew one of the largest crowds of the season, with the hall filled with newspapermen, network execs, and possibly a few ex-cons in honor of Miss Torre's recent incarceration for 10 days for refusing to reveal the source of her information. She was dubbed the "Peter Zenger of the Powder Room" by toastmaster Walter Kiernan.

The entertainment also comprised one of the better (and shorter) shows and was unconsciously themed around the columnist's stay in the pokey when she refused to say in a Federal courtroom who provided the information on a story she ran on Judy Garland. There are references by comic Jack Carter who delivered a scream-filled 10 minutes, and a special material tune by Dorothy Collins who touched on the same subject. Perhaps doubletalker Al Kelly mentioned it too—nobody knew for sure.

Also a strong comedy turn was the session by Sam Levenson on sex education for children. Singers on the occasion included two warblers of excellence, Anita Darien, who impressed as one of the more talented singers around, and Val Valente, who tenors with class and authority. Jose.

OBITUARIES

GEORGE FORMBY

George Formby, 56, British comedian, died March 6 in Preston, Lancashire, England. He had appeared in vaude, films and tv.

His specialty was singing songs like "Chinese Laundry Blues" and playing the banjo and ukelele. His father, also named George, was a Lancashire comedian who appeared in old music halls. The son began his show business career as George Hoy so that no one could accuse him of cashing in on his father's name.

STEPHEN THOMAS

Stephen Thomas, drama director, died Feb. 23 in London. He was director of the drama department of the British Council, which he joined in 1944. He studied piano at the Royal College of Music and acted with Fisher White and Dion Boucicault.

For 10 years Thomas was actor and producer at the Lyric, Hammersmith, and, after producing many plays and operas throughout the world, he joined the BBC and became a senior tv producer. He later switched to the British Council.

Survived by his wife, poet Sarah Jackson.

WALTER PLANT

Walter Plant, 44, tv film salesman in the midwest and onetime manager of the old Horace Heidt troupe, died in Chicago Feb. 23 of a coronary. Associate of Mickey McGuiran, he worked variously for TPA, ITC, Programs for Television Inc, and National Telefilm Associates when Sillerman was associated with those firms.

At the time of his death, Plant was midwest manager of Sillerman's present company, Programs for Television Inc. He had represented Heidt in the '40s and again in the mid'50s.

Wife and children survive.

FRANK GAGLIANO

Frank Gagliano, 74, longtime Milwaukee nitery operator, died Feb. 26 in that city following a heart attack. A native of Italy, he owned and operated the old Miami Gardens in the Little Italy section of Milwaukee from 1925 to 1933. He later ran the Caruso Restaurant and the "706 Club."

Surviving are a son, Steve who operates the Cafe Espresso No. 1; four daughters and a brother.

ELEANOR MOORE

Eleanor Moore, woman's director and continuity director for WSBT Radio & Television, South Bend, Ind., died March 1 in La Porte, Ind., with WSBT since 1942, she conducted the radio program, "Timely Topics."

She formerly wrote, produced and announced a prize-winning women's show called "The Time, The Place and The Tune."

DIANA MORRIS

Diana Morris, 54, former actress who was one of the original Wampas Baby Stars, died of throat cancer Feb. 19 in Hollywood. She had lived in retirement for 25 years.

Surviving are her husband, Stanley Opeger; son, Michael; film lab technician; and brother, Thomas Morris, camera operator.

ALFONSO ZAYAS

Alfonso Zayas, 51, veteran film actor who went before the cameras some 15 years ago, died of a heart attack last week in Mexico City. His last role was that of the manager in a picture titled "I, Too, Was a Champion."

Surviving are a son, Alfonso Jr., a television actor, and a daughter. His wife died two weeks previously.

EDDIE GAMBLE

Eddie Gamble, 68, vet theatrical agent and showman, died of a heart attack Feb. 26 in Hollywood. He had been in show biz on the Coast since 1906, when he launched his career as a vaude actor. Later, he became an outdoor producer before turning to agentry.

His wife survives.

ROBERT SPYERS

Robert Spyers, 93, former actor, died recently in London. A onetime barrister, he became an actor with the Tree and Benson companies in 1896.

He turned schoolmaster, returned to the stage with Benson again and with Oscar Asche, then resumed schoolteaching.

Pools Paradise

established part of the British way of life that they are oldhat as a subject for legit entertainment. The skimpy plot consists mainly of the attempts of a clergyman's wife to conceal from her non-gambling husband that a syndicate, consisting of herself, her maid and the latter's sweetheart, have won a fortune on the pools. It is a tiny idea, sparsely eked out over three acts, and with a minimum of wit or comic ingenuity.

A stalwart cast helps the proceedings from becoming unbearable. Pat Kirkwood makes her debut in a straight role as the ex-musicomedy actress married to the pompous clergyman, played by Hubert Gregg. She is a sparkling personality, but in this case plays with a tongue-in-cheek technique which seems to be a fairly shrewd comment on the material at her disposal.

It never seems logical that she and the husband would have married in the first place and, anyway, as played by Miss Kirkwood, the character is too spirited to be dominated by a husband's crackpot prejudice. Hubert Gregg plays the parson in a straightforward fashion, but also appears to have little confidence in the role.

Joan Sanderson extracts a few laughs as the bleak co-sufferer neighbor and Claude Hulbert struggles grimly with the part of a visiting clergyman. The maid played by Vivian Pickles and her beau, portrayed by Patrick Blackwell, are desperately overdrawn both in the writing and acting.

The most rewarding few minutes are provided by a third act performance by Henry Kendall as a bishop. But the cast throughout is forced to struggle, and Kendall's direction while brisk, cannot hide the limpness of the action and the dialog. Ken Calder's set is adequate, but the overall effect of a dim evening is hardly that.

FAIREST 'LADY' OF THEM ALL

'Make Shoddy Films Unprofitable'

Berkeley, Cal., March 14.

Methodist Bishop Gerald Kennedy, of Los Angeles, wants to make "shoddy pictures unprofitable." This was the gist of his message in an interview at Berkeley's Epworth Methodist Church, en route from Hawaii back to Los Angeles.

"The film makers are in business to make money," he said, "and they'll continue putting out shoddy movies unless we make it unprofitable. "Another danger in distorted films is the image they give America abroad, where 50% of the movie money comes from. Foreigners who see a film like 'Elmer Gantry,' for instance, get the idea that religion here is a racket.

"The Broadcast and Film Commission of the National Council of Churches which I head is trying to help the industry police itself. I also feel that some kind of grading of films is needed so that certain films which are intended for an adult audience will not be seen by children."

Defense Opens Battle Vs. Cameras At Eichmann Trial; Govt. for Them

Tel Aviv, March 14.

The Israeli court, which will judge Nazi Adolf Eichmann next month, in its first preliminary session heard the objections of Eichmann's counselor, German lawyer, Dr. Robert Servatius, against the use of cameras in the courtroom during the trial. Gideon Hausner, Israel's Attorney-General, presented the government's view because of this trial's historical importance, and hence should have as wide publicity as possible and at the same time be preserved for future generations.

Both can be attained, he said only if a documentary film is made for tele, pictures and radio. Such arrangements and for the same reasons were made under similar circumstances during the Nuremberg trials. By coincidence, Dr. Servatius was a lawyer for the defense at the Nuremberg trials, too. He defended Fritz Sauckel, the boss of slave labor in the Third Reich, who was condemned to death.

The Attorney General has invited the three judges to visit the courtroom where the trial will be held in order to realize, that the

Gate, Dublin, Folds

Dublin, March 14.

Dublin's famous Gate Theatre was shuttered last Saturday (11) though it is hoped that the closing down may only be temporary. The news surprised both staff and patrons, since a recent meeting of the directors held out optimistic hopes that the theatre would survive.

For some time the theatre had largely been subsidized by the Earl of Longford who died last month. His successor, the seventh Earl, stated that he would do everything possible for the theatre, but could not afford to put money into it.

Reich Stations Ban 'Presleyized' Old Folk Songs

Frankfurt, March 14.

Elvis Presley, who stirred up thousands of West German newspaper controversies during his tour of duty near here, has created a different kind of crisis. This time it's his RCA record "Muss i denn" which has caused all the trouble. Title of the U. S. version is "Wooden Heart."

To date, the controversial record, from Presley's new Paramount film "GI Blues," has been banned by the West Berlin and the Bavarian government radio stations from being played on the air.

The number, "Must I leave, must I leave, the little town," started as a Heidelberg student's drinking song, and originally referred to the nostalgia that the students felt when they finished their education at the University in the quaint old city. The Presley platter has already sold over 400,000 copies in

Coney Island's Mustard Up In Hot Dog-Eat-Dog Battle Over New Circular Weenie

By NAN JOSEPH

Coney Island, March 14.

The shadow of fright hangs over the elongated "canus calidus Americanus" (hot dog). Its future is threatened by the insolent arrival and premiere of a round frankfurter on a hamburger roll or, far worse, a bagel.

In the world of the hundwurst, the circular weenie has been described as a "bagfurter." Those with sturdy bicuspids have dubbed it a "fragel." The perpetrators of the round dog, however, with a shrewd eye to cornering the out-

$48,000,000 TAKE AN ALLTIME HIGH

Evidence continues to mount that "My Fair Lady," which completed its fifth year at the Mark Hellinger last night (March 14) is the top musical comedy hit of all time, the most profitable and the most widely circulated. Since Herman Levin presented Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe's lyric version of Shaw's "Pygmalion" on Broadway on March 15, 1956, it has played to more than $17,000,000, a sum far in excess of that ever played to by any stage attraction in New York, regardless of length of run. ("Oklahoma," which ran for five years and nine weeks at the St. James—March 31, '43 through May 29, '48—grossed approximately $7,000,000 at a $4 top. "Lady's" top is $7, tax excluded.)

Since its opening at the Auditorium, Rochester, on March 18, 1957, the national company has played to $14,650,000, despite a 10-week recess (April 10-June 18) last year to play eight weeks in Russia with the blessings of the U.S. State Department and the U.S.S.R. Ministry of Culture. ("Lady's" players were guests of the management at the ceremonials in Red Square on the May Day morning that the U-2 tumbled out of the skies over the Urals.)

In its four year tour this duplication has combed the continent from Vancouver, British Columbia, to Miami; from San Diego to Montreal. Because it often plays auditoriums and opera houses with as many as 3,500 seats—the Hellinger's capacity is 1,551 and its maximum boxoffice take $69,500—this company had 24 weeks of better than $100,000, 10 of them in twice-visited San Francisco.

Smallest city to reward "Lady" with a $100,000 gross? Calgary, Canada, pop. 180,000.

Wynn's list of "true funnymen" includes Sid Caesar, Red Skelton, Jerry Lewis and Jackie Gleason. He doesn't count the current crop of rib-ticklers. "Mort Sahl can put me in hysterics, but I don't think

Patron-Performer Tensions Anew As Mathis, Nina Simone Walk Out

By JOE COHEN

Performers are starting to talk back to audiences in an ever increasing number. Following two widely scattered incidents last week, an indication seems to be emerging that performers are demanding more respect from audiences and will take active steps to get it. Nina Simone at the Roundtable, N. Y., refused to sing during her entire engagement at the cafe, and Johnny Mathis walked out of the Club Tropicoro of the San Juan Intercontinental, San Juan, Puerto Rico, when heckling started in the audience.

Miss Simone, regarded as a rising young singer, opened at the Roundtable last Monday (6) with a trio of musicians behind her. Aware that the audience was still in a dining mood and was on a generally noisy level, she started throwing cracks at the crowd.

She did several instrumentals while at the piano and backed up her group, but refused to sing. She repeated the process Tuesday and Wednesday nights. By this time General Artists Corp. reps, who handle her, conferred with the management and the engagement was cancelled by mutual agreement. The Stylers replaced her.

In Puerto Rico, Mathis hied himself out of the date. Lou Holtz, who

'U.S. Lags on Culture'

Albuquerque, March 14.

"America can lead the western world into a golden age of culture, if the Government will develop a strong program to encourage the arts."

So said violinist Isaac Stern, in town last week to guest with the Albuquerque Civic Symphony.

While praising President Kennedy for the interest he has shown in the arts, he noted that the Soviets have taken full advantage of the historical musical gifts of the Russians "which were there before Communism was a gleam in Karl Marx's eyes."

The Reds give an added incentive to their artists by paying them better than the average citizens, he commented.

'Fireside Chats' For JFK Stir GOP To 'Equal Time'

Washington March 14.

President Kennedy is doing some serious thinking about requesting television and radio time for fireside chats," and news of it has given Republicans an "equal time" headache of massive proportions.

GOP leaders feel they will be compelled to demand equality at the hearth, but politics is never simple. In this instance, it is almost too complicated.

Assuming the networks gave the Republicans equal cuffo time to answer, which Republican would answer Kennedy? That's what a lot of Republicans would like to know. And it is something on which most Republicans might never be able to agree.

If Kennedy used the "fireside chat" routine developed by the late FDR to sell certain items in his legislative program before Congress, the GOP leaders of the House and Senate (Charles Halleck and Everett M. Dirksen, respectively) might be seriously considered. But they are both conservatives on homefront bills, and their views, as the party line, might not conform with those of either N.Y. Gov. Rockefeller or ex-Presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon. Also, Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) has a wide following as a conservative, and he sits in Congress. His disciples would want him to answer Kennedy.

If Kennedy went on the air on global foreign policy issues where there is a domestic controversy involved, there might be even a big-

Moses' Anti-Showmanship Stance at '64 N.Y. Expo Disturbs Many Realists

Board members of the upcoming 1964 New York World's Fair express themselves disappointingly about Fair prexy Robert Moses' preconceived ideas to keep this essentially an "industrial fair." Businessmen, who would be partial to the "industrial" aspect, however, are realistic that showmanship, ballyhoo and carnival-type glamor is what makes or breaks a fair or an exposition. Science, business and industrial progress can't make it alone.

These same businessmen, who are on Moses' board, have advanced sundry show biz ideas, with recollection that one Sally Rand or one Aquacade did more to lure the masses than all the "American progress" industrial displays.

There have been several ideas advanced to beef up the show biz aspect which, for the time being anyway, Moses seems to ignore. These ran from giant bowling alleys, keyed to the current upsurge of bowling, tabloid legit musicals (David Merrick's name was advanced to supervise these), jazz festivals, and other frankly amusement ideas. Unless Moses does an aboutface chances seem nil for much of this "show biz hoopla."

Near-Capacity Marks Circuited Bout; $2,800,000 National Gate Estimated

Closed circuit boxoffice for the Patterson-Johansson Monday night (13) fistics was big—pointing now, on basis of prelim returns from key cities, to a gross of perhaps $2 800,000.

With something like 800,000 theatre and arena seats, it's figured from first reports that approximately 650,000 were filled. Plus at least another 50,000 homescreens via community antenna feed.

For the theatre-arena setups, tariffs mainly were in the $4-$5 bracket. New York charged 'em somewhat higher in most locations, with a few seats getting as much as $7.50. Los Angeles posted the top theatre admission, $11.

Generally on a cross-country average, theatres did the best of it, the majority reporting at near capacity, and a sizable number hitting SRO, including some large-seaters. Situation as to auditoriums was more spotty, as for instance the N. Y. area. Elizabeth, N. J., Armory reported only 30% of capacity, with benefit crowd in attendance. Madison Square Garden in Manhattan, showing bout as a Heart Assn. benefit, was maybe half of its 20,000 capacity, with many of the $100 per pews vacant. But for that matter, lots of balcony seats also went unused.

Weather apparently wasn't much of a factor. In Detroit, for example, heavy rain was no bar to biz, and ditto Milwaukee, where sleet and snow were mixed in.

If that projected $2,800,000 gross holds up, it will be almost on-button with the calculation of Irving Kahn, TelePrompter prexy, who figured his ancillary right for a close to $3,000,000 gate.

Following are key-city b.o. reports:

L. A.: Good, But Empties

N.Y. Capitol Theatre May Serve New Americana Hotel for Delegates

A sample of the theatre-and-hotel coupling for industrial exhibition and kindred business conventions, banquet catering, etc., which the Tisches plan under their new Loew operation, will see the greater utilization of the Capitol, the Loew's Broadway deluxer, in relation to the just building Americana Hotel. In fact, the Capitol may undergo name change to the Americana for more direct lookup if the industrial convention-and-showbusiness warrants.

The Cap thus would be available to industry for morning business sessions, closed-circuit television hookups, industrial traveling shows (a la GM's Motorama), with the

Air Force Removes 'Lovely Cuba' Film

Wiesbaden, March 14.

Special Services officials have just announced that they have removed a 10-minute travelog that had been playing at the Army and Air Force film theatres throughout Europe.

The film, titled "Below the Keys," shows lush colorful scenes of the gay exciting life in the Cuban sunshine, with the narrator emphasizing that American visitors would find a warm welcome on the glamorous Cuban shores. The windup of the 10-minute guided tour of the delights of Cuba pointed out that no vacationer from the U. S. could do better than selecting a pleasant, happy trip to Cuba.

The picture, which dated from the pre-Castro regime, had been making the military theatre rounds, to the delight and amusement of the military personnel.

"We didn't realize from the title that it might be unsuitable," a military spokesman explained.

R.C. Prexy Gus Eyssell Urges $100,000 Kitty To Lure Foreign Tourists

A $100,000 fund to create a favorable climate of spending for foreign visitors was requested last week by G. S. Eyssell, president of Rockefeller Center, N.Y.; who was elected president of the N.Y. Convention and Visitors Bureau, succeeding Hilton Hotels Corp. veepee Joseph P. Binns.

In an address at the Bureau's annual luncheon meeting at the 21-Restaurant, Eyssell stressed the need of greater promotional activity to attract increased visitor trade, not only as a matter of good business, but as a national necessity to counter the upwards of $2,000,000,000 spent by Americans abroad.

At the same time, it was disclosed by J. Stewart Baker Jr., group's treasurer, that last year, New York's convention business accounted for 3,259,600 visitors who spent $202,658,780. There were 180,000 more visitors than the previous year.

Executive officer of the organization, Royal W. Ryan, stressed increased emphasis on the encouragement of foreign groups to hold conventions in New York. He declared that it was the bureau's intention to send a representative abroad to solicit this business. The city's Summer Festival Queen is likely to be sent on a 12-nation European tour.

The Bureau is also urging the creation of a national tourist office by the Federal government with a $500,000,000 budget to generate new tourist revenues in the U.S.

Castro Jokes No Laughing Matter

Mexico City, March 14.

Octavio Peredo, head of the Office of Public Entertainments, has ruled that comics may not poke fun or joke about national or international politicians, nor present any skits depicting these gentlemen in an "unfavorable light."

The office has sent a circular to the National Assn. of Actors as well as to all theatre managements indicating that "all persons engaged in acknowledged political activities, living or dead, national or foreign" are "forbidden subjects" for the pointed barbs of comics. It is claimed that comics have been "abusing" politicians in order to put across their jokes.

Official action is outcome of an incident involving comic Marco de Carlo who was beaten up by four rowdies after leaving a vaude house where he had done some running patter on Fidel Castro. It could not be said that he pulled any punches, for he presented the Cuban dictator in quite a ridiculous light. In the same sketch comic also took cracks at President John Kennedy, and former Mexican Presidents Miguel Aleman and Adolfo Ruiz Cortines.

Basic point of skit, with comic using other actors, was a satire on how world peace could be achieved. Office of Public Entertainments found the "name dropping" or use of living persons in the sketch "out of line" and "neither funny nor comical."

Strain of New Casino Fells London Boniface

London, March 14.

Leslie Romain, boss of the Mayfair Club, and the first to take advantage of the new gaming laws by opening a casino in his saloon, collapsed last week at the Dorchester Hotel and was rushed to a hospital.

It is thought that his illness may have been caused by the strain of the all night sessions that the gambling tables attracted, and also by worry over several bad debts that have accrued since he started the casino.

A couple of weeks ago Romain revealed that in one week he had handled bad checks for such sums as $2,800, $2,240 and $2,260. He said then: "This shows where the Gaming Act falls down. It should be made legal that a debt is recoverable in law on both sides."

Sheen's Spain Billing: 'Bishop of American TV'

Barcelona, March 14.

"The Bishop of American TV" scored an enormous success in a series of lectures coinciding with the observance of Lent. So-billed was Bishop Fulton J. Sheen, who made religious talks in various churches, auditorium and arenas. He also appeared on tv during his five-day stay.

Spain has tv programming only here in Barcelona and in Madrid but the audience for the American prelate, who was widely heralded, was obviously vast.

N.Y. Can't Remember Such Pans As Given to Ranald MacDougall

Film trade in Manhattan last week stirred with the effort to recall prior instances of a major release being so badly reviewed in the dailies as was Ranald MacDougall's adapted-and-directed feature for Metro, "Go Naked in the World." Two worst notices were typed by Bosley Crowther in the N.Y. Times and Archer Winsten in the N.Y. Post.

As is usual for the picture critic of the Times, most attention and conversation centered there. He opened his indictment with the question: "What sort of idiots does Ranald MacDougall take us all to be?" Goes on, "he assaults our decent instincts with this claptrap."

Detailed dissection of the script and the production leaves almost nothing unpanned in an all-out attack which may have set a new high in Manhattan excoriation. The direction gets it in the kisser almost as bad as the writing, per this Crowtherism:

"And the people! Well, Gina Lollobrigida, in tight, slinky gowns and red hair, is the least hard to take and credit because she frankly acts what she's supposed to be. But Mr. Franciosa as her playmate and Ernest Borgnine as his old man are so uncouth, unattractive and unbelievable, with their shouting and blubbering, that they're likely to make you cringe. And Nancy R. Pollock as the hero's mother and Luana Patten as his sister are in the same groove of eleborate overacting of inflated, unconvincing sentiments.

"Mr. MacDougall, who wrote the screen play and directed, used to write a great deal for radio. Maybe that explains his wild confusion when he got loose with color, wide screen and dirty words."

Aussie Drive Vs. Pvt. Club Striptease Shows

Sydney, Feb. 21.

The Australian Vice Squad under the direction of Police Chief Delayney is on a vast cleanup of this key city's shady night spots in the King's Cross and other suburban spots where undercover striptease shows have been operating on a $10 per admission setup, and no questions asked by the operators and the girls themselves.

Police spokesman said an edict had been issued to smash the clip joints pronto. "We'll have no 'Barbary Coast' imported from the U. S. in this sector. The big drive is on right now and so-called nightclubs will be shuttered and their operators given a jail term."

VARIETY understands that approaches had been made to agents on the U. S. West Coast to sign up striptease talent for playing here, but with little success. Switch was then made to the Far East for girls, but strict immigration laws here have nixed this move so far. Young local girls have been used in these q.t. spots; hence swift police action on a general wipeout of the so-called clubs.

Police alleged that during the show, an "Arabian Slave Market" was operated whereby the gals were sold to the highest bidder among the male audience.

Skouras' Red Cross Feed; Reveals Soviet Besting U.S. on Medical Help

20th prexy Spyros P. Skouras Thursday (9) hosted (and personally picked up check for) lunch at the St. Moritz Hotel in New York to launch film industry's 1961 Red Cross campaign. Principal speaker was national Red Cross president Gen. Alfred Gruenther, who stressed the need for the U.S. to meet the Soviet challenge in the number of doctors available.

International importance to fact that the Soviets have 350,000 to our 245,000 doctors, said Gruenther, is that when an underdeveloped area such as Morrocco or the Congo asks for medical aid, Soviets rush in and take care of the problem all by themselves, thus extending their influence in the very way U.S. should be doing.

Dais guests included Thelma Ritter, Theodore Bikel, Shelley Winters, Carol Lynley, Ina Balin and Julie Newmar. Food was Greek from soup (avgolemono) to dessert (baklava), prompting Skouras to note that this was what Aphrodite prepared before entertaining Apollo.

Newhart Forced to Return To Cafes' Alcoholic Haze For New Album Material

Minneapolis, March 14.

Comic Bob Newhart, who disdains nightclub appearances because he doesn't like to perform for noisy drunks, may have to return to the bistro circuit in order to make new disks to follow up his current best-selling albums. Newhart pointed out that he tapes his disk material before live audiences. Recording his routines during concert engagements, which he prefers to working the niteries, has proved unfeasible.

"It's hard to get the sound of 3,000 people on a tape, and an audience that size changes your pacing," Newhart said. "There are longer waits for laughs. It sounds all right when you're sitting in the auditorium, but not when you're sitting at home listening to a record."

The comedian says he'll con-

SKOURAS' NEW STAR BOARDERS

7-Yr. Rackmil-Decca Pact Up April 11; Sweetened by 35,000-Share Option

That Universal's momentum is still building is borne out in the latest earnings statement for U and parent Decca Records. Corporate income is at a record level, but almost anti-climactic as news.

President Milton R. Rackmil has a new seven-year deal with his company dated last Feb. 7, calling for the same joint administrative salaries, but enhanced with a juicy option on 35,000 Decca shares. U's reason for the secret is that the pact still has to pass stockholder muster at the annual meeting in N. Y. April 11.

The corporate story, contained in the annual report sent to shareholders over the weekend, is a tale of peaks. In sum, the Decca-U parlay soared to a new earnings high in calendar '60 by more than doubling the previous year's net, and is especially impressive for topping the previous best year of '56.

It also marked the 24th consecutive year of dividend payments.

Net for 1960 hit a record $5,524,757, equal to $4.29 a share on 1,285,701 shares outstanding as of last Dec. 31. The 1959 tally, by contrast, was $2,321,923, or $1.81 per share yield for the like number of outstanding shares. Report shows that joint income from film rentals and disk sales rose to $85,408,692 from the $79,181,724 notched in '59. (No breakdown as between the two entities.) At the same time, sales, amortization and other costs were cut from $46,145,174 to last year's $41,640,695.

What further makes the corporate outlook sanguine is the year-end earned surplus figure of $23,224,555—up by $4,046,201 from Dec. 31, '59.

It's also a matter of cogent note to the picture industry, if exacerbating exhibition anxieties, that last year's U income was helped along by more than $3,000,000, pro rata, from television fees for U's pre-'48 backlog. Report discloses that since July 1, 1957, when U opened its product vault to tele, income from that source stood at $9,557,692 as of last Dec. 31. That would hardly be news to the TOA-Allied States chaps, but certainly freshly foreboding in print.

In all the mathematics, there's hardly any question but that U's contribution to the family coffer is the more significant, spotlighting again, as it does, the U comeback a la the reorientation primarily effected initially by the Ross

Quite A Trick

Hollywood, March 14.

Norman Maurer, producer of Columbia's "Three Stooges Meet Hercules," which rolls early May, is inventor of new animation process Dynatoon which he says photographs live action and automatically converts action to cartoon without aid of artist or artists.

Maurer, prexy of Process Illustrated Films, Inc., stated his attorneys Lyon & Lyon had heard from patent offices in Washington he would be issued 12 claims in patent in June. Inventor also asserted he had been working on patent for past three years.

Possibility exists he may do a Stooges film in Dynatoon and color after "Hercules."

3 Asst. Generals In Paramount's Sales Echelon

Paramount's domestic sales organization, in a major change since Jerry Pickman was named in charge under global sales v.p. George Weltner, has been reorganized under three assistant general sales managers. New setup is designed, says Pickman, to coincide with the policy of marketing each picture individually and on an area-by-area basis.

Realignment has Hugh Owen in charge of the national sales department, Sidney Deneau in charge of the homeoffice sales department and Howard Minsky in charge of the sales administrative department. All three assistant general sales managers will continue to headquarter in New York.

Owen's national sales department will be responsible for the sales and administrative functions of Par's 28 branches and will supervise branch selling at the local level. Deneau heads Par product sales to national and other major theatre outlets across the country. Minsky's is a sales support unit which will coordinate the efforts of the field sales organization.

Owen had been v.p. of Par Distributing in charge of the eastern division. Deneau was ditto in charge of the west, and Minsky was assistant to Weltner.

Par's five division managers in the field, now designated as regional sales managers, are John G. Moore, Boston; W. Gordon Bradley, Atlanta; Alfred R. Taylor, Chicago; Tom W. Bridge, Dallas, and H. Neal East, Los Angeles.

These five will be freed from administrative responsibilities and thus will be enabled to give more time to "constructive planning," according to Pickman.

Exec added that the new personnel structure will mean more effective marketing of films in all types of theatres and will allow for closer coordination between sales and the ad-pub departments.

LOEB & GOULD AS 'INFLUENTIALS'

By VINCENT CANBY

A new, and perhaps most significant, chapter in the corporate history of 20th-Fox was begun last week with the election to the 20th board of brokerage house reps John L. Loeb, senior partner of Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades & Co., and attorney Milton S. Gould, for Treves & Co.

Their election, first predicted in VARIETY in late January, thus gives voice to a powerful and sure-to-be articulate group of 20th shareholders who have been dissatisfied with some recent 20th policies. It's estimated that Loeb-Rhoades and Treves control about 400,000 shares of 20th stock, in addtion to which other brokerage houses, which also have been buying up 20th stock in last 18 months, control another 400,000 which will vote with the Loeb-Rhoades-Treves directors.

This would give the two new 20th directors representation for approximately 800,000 shares of common, or over one-third of the company's 2,338,536 shares outstanding. To accommodate Loeb and Gould the 10-man board was increased to 12.

How much power will the new men have? The answer would seem to be considerable. As one insider put it, control of one-third of the stock of a company might not be significant if management has been successful in bringing up the profits, but this has not been the case at 20th in last two years. Company's net dropped from $7,582,357 in 1958 to $4,163,135 in 1959. In addition to which, 20th reported a $5,000,000 loss after taxes on studio activity in 1959. Although the preliminary figures on 1960 will not be available until March 31, it's been rumored that the company sustained another sizeable loss on studio activity last year.

A Fat Corpus

Reason for the brokerage houses interest in 20th is simple: the company, despite production losses, still is a very rich corporation. In 1959, for example, all departments, with the exception of the studio, were operating in the black. Also, 20th has a large group of "fringe" assets—real estate both here and abroad, film backlog, etc.—which may eventually be spun off to the shareholder's advantage.

Spokesmen for the Loeb-Rhoades-Treves combine deny any intention of trying to unseat present 20th management or desire to take part in managerial decisions. However, corporate policies are certainly due for careful scrutiny. Perhaps the first indication of the latter was the announcement Friday (10) by prexy Spyros P. Skouras that negotiations looking towards 20th's acquisition of National Telefilm Associates had "collapsed."

Reason for the "collapse," it was

Massachusetts Investment Trust Credited for Sharp Paramount Rise

Paramount stock on the N. Y. Stock Exchange had an extraordinary rise over the past week. The common issue jumped to $80 per share, an all-time high in the company's history. Earlier in 1960 it was $39.50. In the single week ended Friday (10) there was an advance of $10.62½ per share as 47,400 shares exchanged hands.

The upbeat was specifically attributed to the Massachusetts Investment Trust, open-end operation, which bought heavily and set off a chain reaction. This big-money outfit bought in on the theory that the Par shares are undervalued in relation to other listings in other industries.

Other investors followed suit, although obviously there were not too many of them. The 47,400 volume was short of unusual; the fact stands out that the buyers by far outdistanced the sellers and thus the startling jump quotation.

N. Y. Times story on Saturday (11) had it that VARIETY's analysis of what's going on in Wall Street was responsible for the rise in film prices. Actually, the story served to focus attention on the growing awareness of the "growth" possibilities of numerous pic corporations and the increasing interest in same.

Contrasts

Interesting to Massachusetts Investment, and others, is the fact that the film business was a $1,700,000,000 business in 1947, and it went down to $1,000,000,000 in 1956, and it's now back to $1,300,000,000. This goes hand in hand with the aforementioned "growth."

Metro soared to $57.75 per share last week, for another new high.

The bulls of Wall Street, looking for good things in an inflationary period, are turning to Par, M-G and other film outfits because of the earnings vis-a-vis stock price ratios which are attractive. Also to be considered are what the downtowners call the "hidden values," i.e., strong assets such as the film backlogs and real estate which are carried on the books at little more than token entries.

Echoes of Royalty

Honolulu, March 14.

With the possible exception of Alaska, Hawaii may be the only state that doesn't have a showhouse with the almost-inevitable name of "State theatre."

Honolulu theatres bear such names as Princess, King, Queen and Palace—reflecting Hawaii's heritage as a monarchy before annexation by the U. S.—but there's no State theatre. Royal circuit plans to call its new Waikiki showhouse the Royal State, however, if and when it decides to go ahead with the project.

L.A. Itself Blah But Film Labor Data Cheering

Hollywood, March 14.

Despite Los Angeles continuing as one of the 25 critical unemployment sectors in U.S., number of theatrical and video film employes on payrolls during February set another 12-year high, figures culled by California Dept. of Employment reveal.

Preliminary figures for last month were most encouraging in number of jobs, the tally reaching 43,100, according to Gaylord Pitts, area analyst for the state headquartering in Los Angeles.

The final tabulation for January also showed a surprising boost in number of employed. As it now turns out, last month also perked to 42,700 on payrolls instead of 100 less. The 42,600 was an initial estimate, but the final and official figure also established a new high by bettering the 42,600 for December.

Average weekly and hourly earnings for January were down slightly due to spread of employment, Pitts stated. The final figures for February are not yet in, altho they appear encouraging in comparison to preceding month.

Officially, January average weekly earnings were $174.14 as compared to December at $152.70. Average hourly earnings for January were $3.58 as compared to $3.61 for previous month. Average hours per week by employes in production amounted to 41.1 in January against 43.3 last December.

Studios continue at day and night pace in production, both for telefilms and theatres. This activity is encouraging in face of government reports of layoffs in auto, construction and food processing industries in California and increase of 12,600 in insured unemployment for week ended Feb 25.

Janet Leigh's 'Dark John' Gets Judicial Heave-Ho On His $2-Mil Action

Merced, Cal., March 14

Superior Judge Gregory P. Maushart doesn't think the fact that actress Janet Leigh was, briefly, a teenage bride is worth $2,000,000—or $2.

He said so in throwing out of court a libel suit filed by Miss Leigh's quondam husband, salesman Kenneth Carlisle, against the actress, Fawcett Publications' Motion Picture magazine and Shroeder News Co., a magazine distributor.

Carlisle had sought $2,000,000 for libel and invasion of privacy because fan mag last December published a piece entitled "I Was a Child Bride" under Miss Leigh's by-line. The article identified Carlisle merely as "a dark boy we'll call John." Carlisle stepped forth and identified himself, saying he and Miss Leigh, both teenagers, eloped in 1942 and that the marriage was annulled later that year. Then he sued.

Said Judge Maushart: "Let's be reasonable. I don't think this is a matter for a jury, and I don't think it is worth $2."

The case was tossed out of court.

20th Quarterly 40c

Board of directors of 20th-Fox last Wednesday (8) declared a regular quarterly dividend of 40c a share on the common stock.

Dividend is payable March 31 to stock of record March 20.

ANITA LOUISE ADLER SELLS 45,000 SHARES

Hollywood, March 14.

Block of 45,000 shares of 20th-Fox stock owned by the late Buddy Adler were sold in January by his widow, Anita Louise Adler.

Sale believed took place last week of the month when market price varied from $43 to $47 per share.

Brazil Retrospective of Frank Capra-John Ford Via Modern Art Museum

Hollywood, March 14.

Government of Brazil, through country's Modern Museum of Art, will stage an eight-week "Capra-Ford Film Festival" this summer in various Brazilian cities in honor of vet directors Frank Capra and John Ford. Beginning in August, many of duo's top productions will be screened in such cities as Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo and Brasilia.

Some of the films to be played, according to advices to two screen toppers, will be Capra's "It Happened One Night," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "Lost Horizon," "You Can't Take It With You." For Ford: "The Quiet Man," "The Informer," "Arrowsmith," "Tobacco Road."

Both directors will fly to Brasilia, capital city, sometime during summer to receive personal honors from the President.

Biogs on Loeb & Gould

Two newly elected directors of 20th-Fox, John L. Loeb and Milton S. Gould (see separate story), are men of extensive experience in corporate affairs. Loeb goes on the board as rep of Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades & Co., of which he is senior partner; Gould as rep of Treves & Co., a correspondent company of Loeb-Rhoades. Attorney Gould is a member of the law-firm of Gallop, Climenko and Gould.

Both men have reputations as trouble-shooters with special talents for putting distressed companies back on their feet. Liquidation or "quick buck" operations are not in their line.

Loeb, a prominent investor, graduated from Harvard in 1924 and was associated with the American Metal Co. until he became a partner in Loeb-Rhoades in 1931. He was named senior partner in 1955. From 1951-55 he served on the N. Y. Stock Exchange board of governors. He's also on board of Continental Device Corp.; Distillers Corp.-Seagrams Ltd.; Dome Petroleum; Empire Trust; Natus Corp.; Texas Butadiene & Chemical Corp. and Union Texas Natural Gas Corp.

Gould has been engaged in general law practice with special emphasis on utilities, securities and corporate litigation. He was formerly associated with Federal Judge Samuel Kaufman and has served as a director of a number of publicly-owned companies such as Pittsburgh Railway, Lanston Industries, Western New York Water. Presently he's on boards of Citizens Utilities and Pex-Star Oil & Gas.

Drop 14 of 30 Hands At NSS, Los Angeles

Los Angeles, March 14.

National Screen Service sliced 14 off its exchange staff of 30, mostly among shipping and clerical personnel, in an economy move.

NSS, with its headquarters building on Film Row condemned by state to make way for the new Olympic Freeway, must now find other quarters. Remaining staffers must vacate by May 1, and have been notified by eastern toppers they probably will move into the Paramount exchange.

THE LARK AT DAWNING

Juliet Prowse Faces Her Unamused Masters—Out

Hollywood, March 14.

Juliet Prowse can't get along without her own makeup man and personal secretary in Hawaii, so Paramount and Hal Wallis will get along there without Juliet Prowse. Another actress will get the role with Elvis Presley in "Blue Hawaii" due to roll in the 50th state on Friday (17).

Actress had, through her agent, rapped her home lot, 20th-Fox, for failure to protect her interests on the terms of the loanout. Only peep from that source indicates they await official word on her balk before placing her on suspension. Miss Prowse had anticipated this, previously stating she would go to Manhattan and wait it out a la Marilyn Monroe.

It's Still Africa

Howard Hawks is in the midst of producing-directing "Hatari" in East Africa.

Shooting schedule is unusually extensive and Hawks was asked why. He replied: "The rhinos didn't read the script."

Credit Card: The Funny Side

Hollywood, March 14.

The new Great American Pastime — flashing credit cards — is beginning to get quite a play in upcoming production plans. Following last week's Columbia Pictures' disclosure that it would make "The Diners' Club Man," Samuel Goldwyn Jr. now reports he will film, under title of "Live Now, Pay Later," the experiences of Joseph Miraglia, who last year went on a credit-card spending spree.

Miraglia, later hauled up before N. Y. police when he failed to pay after being dunned, consequently "told all" in a Life mag article. It was reported at the time that the coin received from mag enabled him to square up.

Col's plans brought an immediate protest over title from indie producer Alex Gordon, who claimed a 1958 title registration with MPAA of "The Diners' Club," on which he maintains he still holds straight priority and for which he has a screen treatment near completion.

Diners' Club last week, however, advised Gordon it would not grant him permission to film firm's operation, on grounds it already had closed a deal with Col for a comedy treatment of operation and on which club prexy Al Bloomingdale has given assurance of full cooperation during production.

Gordon, who plans a dramatic approach to subject, voiced intentions nevertheless of maintaining his priority on 1958 tag pending outcome of any negotiations with Col. Producer has a multiple-pix deal with company.

Toronto Set for Sunday Films; May Change From Hicksville

Toronto, March 15.

By third week in April, film houses in Province of Ontario will be open on Sunday, according to an amendment to the Lord's Day Act introduced by the Ontario Legislature. This will implement referendums conducted by Toronto and 14 other Ontario communities and permit houses to open at 1.30 p.m. Sundays and close at midnight. Premier Frost described the new measure "as giving the people what they want."

A section in the Theatres Act will be repealed but an amendment will provide that children under 12 cannot attend a theatre afer 7:30 p.m. unless accompanied by a person at least 16. (At present, children under 14 cannot attend a theatre on weekdays after 6 p.m. unless accompanied by an adult.)

Such chains as Famous Players (Can.), Odeon Theatres (Canada) and Twentieth Century Theatres, plus independents, favored Sunday showings; ditto the Motion Picture Projectionists Union which passed unanimous resolutions prior to the two-to-one vote of citizens.

The Sunday trade is expected to compare favorably with the traditional big biz on Fridays and Saturdays, besides augmenting the tourist trade hitherto scared away from "dull" Torono, the Canadian equivalent in jokes to the proverbial Philadelphia.

Lombardo Due In U.S.

Rome, March 14.

Goffredo Lombardo, Titanus prexy, leaves Rome March 19 for New York, accompanied by Franco DiSimone. He plans a week's stay in Gotham on company biz including production plans and U.S. handling of Titanus' "Girl With a Suitcase."

Lee Steiner, Yank rep for Italo company, then accompanies both men to Coast for further talks; they'll be at Beverly Hilton.

Japanese Form Firm to Distrib In Yank Market

Hollywood, March 14.

Trio of Japanese film figures have set up Data International Films Ltd., for purpose of purchasing films for distribution in both U.S. and Japan. George Fukuda is prexy; Dr. Wallace Nagata, v.p.-director; David T. Yokazeki, secretary-treasurer.

Initial American release will be "White Snake Enchantress," feature cartoon produced by Toei Film Co., Tokyo. Negotiations also are on with same firm for a second cartoon, "Sayuku."

Future co-production deals are being sought between Japanese and American companies for worldwide distribution. Data also is seeking pix for tv and theatrical distribution in Nippon.

Caldana (Kidder & Co.) Sees AB-PT Climb

P. L. Caldana, investment researcher with A. M. Kidder & Co., likes the appearances of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres which, he says, has "significant appreciation potential."

The Wall Streeter sees a possibility of AB-PT earnings reaching $5 to $6 per share by 1963, and if this comes to be it would be a spectacular climb. Corporation last year earned $1.92 per share, up from the previous year's $1.40. Analyst also cites the possibility of a dividend increase.

Key factor behind Caldana's bullishness is the growth of AB-PT's tv business, which has shown a 500% expansion since 1953.

He notes that when AB-PT was formed in 1953, 68% of its business was in motion picture theatres. The situation is much healthier today, with theatre properties having been cut from 708 to 498 sites, with theatre receipts amounting to $91,000,000, and accounting for 32% of the AB-PT busines. Theatre earnings have gone up as the costs, along with the physical structure, were cut. Most of the remaining theatres are operating at a profit.

Technicolor Purchases Marshall-Burns, Chicago, In 'Diversifying' Action

Hollywood, March 14.

Technicolor Inc., via an exchange of 135,000 shares of company stock, has acquired by outright purchase Marshall-Burns Inc. and Affiliated Companies, national merchandising firm headquartered in Chicago.

Move marks a step nearer to Tech's planned consumer marketing of a new-type home movie projector and new film. Color concern has been readying sales of this new product through its Consumer Photographic Products Division, and it's expected that marketing assistance of M-B will greatly strengthen sales efforts by CPPD.

Principal activity of Marshall-Burns, which will continue to operate under its present name as a division of Technicolor, is distribution of specialty products through super-markets and drug chains. Sales for year ended Dec. 31, 1960, were $9,018,946, and profits before taxes amounted to approximately $600,000, net after taxes approximately $312,000.

Joe Vogel in Europe

Joseph R. Vogel, president of Metro, off to Europe over the past weekend to join Robert H. O'Brien, v.p.-treasurer, and Maurice Silverstein, v.p. of Metro-International, who went ahead.

Execs will tour Rome, Munich and London on production matters, reportedly including the acquisition of new pictures.

RISE OF THE CATHOLIC CRITIC

Hollywood 'Purer' Than Paris?

Sidney and Shurlock Seem Miles Apart—Producer Wants to Give Europe the Black-Eye

Perhaps Columbia producer George Sidney, now touring the country promoting his "Pepe," and Geoffrey Shurlock, head of the Production Code Administration should sit down for a long chat. In the public prints of late (including VARIETY, March 1), Sidney has been sounding off on the unfair competition to U.S. films provided by foreign imports which, made outside the U.S. and the Production Code, can treat just about any subject they want as long as they are called arties.

Hollywood, said Sidney during a recent Minneapolis stopover, is now taking the blame for all the sexy imports. As a result, he would like the Customs authorities to crack down on the imports, or make it mandatory for all imports to be passed by the PCA.

Interesting angle is that the PCA's Shurlock has gone on the record numerous times to say that as the Code is now written, almost any subject, with the exception of perversion, can now be handled by Code producers, as long as it's handled in good taste. (And there are some observers who would add that even perversion has gotten by in Code films.)

So, What's His Point?

Considering that Hollywood has been able to turn out such pix as "Suddenly Last Summer" and, more recently, a flood of films having prostitutes or high class call girls as their heroines ("Go Naked in The World," "World of Suzie Wong," "Butterfield 8," etc.), Sidney would seem to be objecting more to the frank treatment of sex in foreign films, rather than to subject matter. However, there would also seem to be room for argument about the quality of domestic vs. imported "treatment."

Roman Catholic Legion of Decency last year found that 24.33% of all domestic product fell into the B (objectionable in part for all) category, compared with 18.87% of the imported films. The LOD takes into consideration treatment as well as subject matter.

Sidney would seem to be on firmer ground when he pinpoints the irony in the fact that the frank foreign films shown here to general audiences are classified for adults only in their home countries. It's true that while foreign producers have, comparatively speaking, "carte blanche" in this country, American films often must undergo rigid censorship in other countries before they are released.

However, this premise might lead to the assumption that U.S. product stands in need of being cleaned up, in one way or another, so as not be censored abroad, or that some sort of film classification procedure should be instituted in the U.S. market.

In any case, it seems an oversimplication of a serious and complex problem to state that foreign films are responsible for the U.S. film industry's current public relations woes.

Perennial Mobsterism

Popularity of the "Untouchables" teleseries is prompting some theatres to cash in—or at least that's the hope—by coupling a pair of last year's hot shoot-'em-ups in the same genre.

Getting the package treatment are "Al Capone" and "Purple Gang" (both AA), and in some cases "Legs Diamond" (WB) is being tacked on for good rat-tat-tat measure. Gimmick, of course, is to highlight the "Untouchables" angle in filmpage advertising. Allied States Assn. is especially high on the trio as a program, and is so alerting its membership.

Screen Credits: Make 'Em Simple

Martin Davis, chairman of Motion Picture Assn.'s ad and publicity directors committee, has issued a new call to Hollywood guilds to join coordinated effort to uncomplicate the billing problem. He is asking Screen Directors Guild and Screen Actors Guild, and others, to join his committee in a study of entire situation for quick solution.

Contractual requirements for specific credits should be simplified in advertising material, TOA bulletin to members and trade press states. Such a move would make it easier for film advertising departments to create more interesting ads.

TOA's reps on Ad Coordinating Committee are already pledged to work towards this goal.

'Candy From Stranger's' Special Legion Rating, Though Nixed by MPAA

The British-made "Never Take Candy from a Stranger," which was turned down for Production Code approval, is not regarded as "morally offensive" by the National Legion of Decency. The Catholic reviewing organization gives the picture a separate classification, meaning it's okay so long as there are safeguards against wrong interpretations or false conclusions.

Subject matter concerns the molestation of small children. Legion notes this is a perennial sociological problem "treated with moral caution and without sensationalism." However, says the Legion, it could have a harmful effect upon the very young accompanied by a parent, and it's pointed out that the pic's advertising underlines that children will not be admitted unless accompanied by a parent.

Legion also this week offered a rave notice for Walt Disney's "Absent Minded Professor," recommending the comedy for the entire family and billing it "superior, wholesome entertainment."

STARK'S 3 NEW TALES

Set Writers on Scripts Derived From Novels

Hollywood, March 14.

Ray Stark's World Wide Productions has activated three story properties for indie filming this year and next, and signed as many writers to work on screenplays.

Trio include "Rampage," novel by Alan Caillou, on which Marguerite Roberts is scrivening; Guy Endore's novel, "King of Paris," which author is doing screen treatment; and "Assault on the Queen," Satevepost serial by Jack Finnet which Liam O'Brien is scripting. "Rampage" will be lensed in Malaya, and "King" entirely in Paris. Eliot Hyman's Seven Arts Productions shares screen rights on latter.

STEVE TRILLING CHORES

Follow Changed Status When Way Cleared for Orr

Hollywood, March 14.

Steve Trilling, who stepped from associate production head of Warner Bros. to special production projects following elevation of William T. Orr to overall chief early this month, has been handed two pix for first duties under new setup.

He'll supervise production of Meredith Willson's "The Music Man," being produced and directed by Morton DaCosta, and also will produce "8th Air Force," James Stewart starrer, as his first actual producer assignment.

RAP JOLLY PRIEST & BIBLE ORGIES

By ROBERT J. LANDRY

The Roman Catholic critic of the popular arts in America, a multiplying species within the hierarchy, shows himself anew, and in distinctly modern idom, in an often caustic, bunk-free, light-throwing just-published volume, "Movies, Morals and Art." The key word, of course, is central to the title and the church: morals.

Morality to Catholic critics and non-Catholics does not differ so much, save perhaps as regards, say, divorce and birth control. In any event what the Catholic voices say against film content and emphasis nowadays is not their comment alone.

Apparently Catholic critics are being encouraged. They appear, too, to be improving in style, balanced statement and mdepth of penetration. One of them, John E. Fitzgerald of Our Sunday Victor was the Screen Producers' Guild's "Critic of the Year" two years ago. Criticking is another aspect of the church's latterday interest. It follows classification, parish pledges, film study groups, college courses, Father Keller's Christopher awards to the arts, and so on.

Suffice that the latest book of Catholic analysis of motion pictures has the first requisite of good criticism: readability. It is a joint venture of a layman, Frank Getlein, and a Jesuit priest, Harold C. Gardiner. It is intellectually arresting that both men drip scorn on that hokum barrel fellow, "the jolly priest," including Bing Crosby as a principal offender in "Say One for Me" (20th-Fox). To quote Getlein, the jolly priest pops up intermittently in some "immensely meretricious movie." The type is, he declares, "almost purely an economic phenomenon" and in dubious compliment to Hollywood he adds, "to some degree Catholics are being bought off by the jolly priest movies." Unmentioned but presumably included in the scoffing would be nuns who play baseball, tennis, water polo or hockey. Again quoting, "The message of all these films is that religion can be fun. It can't."

"Movies, Morals and Art" is a third book (Sheed & Ward, $3.50) in a series which started with Edward Fischer's "The Screen Arts" and was followed by Father William F. Lynch's "The Image Industries." All three books, and more in prospect, are fruitage of the late Pius XII's admonition to the faithful to study the pop arts, and particularly the theatrical feature film.

It will come as no great surprise that the two co-authors substantially agree, though considerable reader interest lies in their contrasting examples and emphases. The priest offers a broader philosophical sweep. Unchastity and immodesty are stressed, as is typical, but Father Gardiner deplores the bad example of soft living, chi-chi settings, pervasive triviality. These are familiar echoes in the analysis of fiction, radio, television, stage drama and ad-copy in our time, and hardly faults unique to the screen.

Mention is made of "such undoubtedly funny films" as Alec Guinness' "The Lavender Hill Mob" and "Kind Hearts and Coronets," the cleric commenting, "I have nothing against films that can find a comical side to thievery and murder; all I am saying is that the moral climate in which they are so readily and gladly accepted is a climate in which human life has come to be thought of as worth very little."

Interestingly, Father Gardiner passes the following judgment as to Tennessee Williams' "Suddenly Last Summer":

"This sombre story is a deeply impressive commentary on the doom that lies in wait for the transgressor" . . . and it is . . . "immeasureably more

Last-Minute Downfall of Sin, Aggression and Sex Fantasies Cited Against Films & Video

Washington, March 14.

A Senate investigation into crime and violence in juvenile behavior vis-a-vis crime and violence in motion pictures and television shapes as one of the unhappier prospects on the Congressional horizon for both industries.

The probe appears to have been triggered primarily by a report to the Senate Juvenile Delinquency Subcommittee which rapped both media for overlong children with product spurring "aggressive and sexual fantasies."

The report compiles the findings and recommendations of the Conference on Impact of Motion Pictures and Television on Youth held last June in New York by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency. The Ford Foundation financed the conference.

(It was not made clear why the Council sat on the report until now unless it was to obtain the publicity advantage of releasing it before a well-covered Senate hearing.)

Sen. Thomas Dodd (D-Conn.), Chairman of the Subcommittee, said after the windup of a two-day set of hearings on juvenile delinquency that his group would launch an investigation into tv and pictures. "Everybody is up in arms about crime-and-violence," he was quoted as saying.

The report, given the subcommittee by Milton G. Rector, executive director of the Council, began with the premise that tv and films are powerful shapers of the child's mind—for good or evil—and had these kind words before launching the attack:

"These modern media represent a significant contribution to culture and entertainment. New windows to the world have opened to children and adults. Knowledge has generally been advanced for millions.

But it went on to say: "The amount of time and number of tv programs involving crime, horror, violence is conspicuous. Rather than diversification and balance of 'menu' there appears a preponderance of such programs . . . .

"Public concern has been expressed about the bad effects of the horror, crime, violence and sex movies and tv shows on the youth of the nation and its relationship to juvenile delinquency."

Stereotypes

The report said tv and pictures have an effect of "creating and reinforcing certain stereotypes, antisocial attitudes and behavior patterns" which are "intensified by dramatization and glamorization." As examples, it gave:

"1. The weak, comic or brutal father and his representatives, the stupid, ineffectual, callous police as well as other authority figures such a judge, law enforcement personnel and institutions in our society.

"2. The well-meaning but ineffectual or naive mother and her representatives, the teachers or social worker.

"3. The teenager devoted only to pleasure- seeking and depicted largely as a non-contributing, if not actually dangerous, member of society.

"4. The criminal who has prospered for many years before his downfall in the last three minutes of the program."

The two media, according to the report, also have what it termed "effects on reinforcement of reality—fantasy confusions," and explained:

"Whether because of a normally immature capacity to separate reality and fantasy or because this function of their mental development is poorly developed, the constant viewing of programs . . . present these children with too large quantities of material which

Canadian Eagle-Eyes

Regina, Sask., March 14.

Canadians have spotted a couple of bloopers in 20th-Fox's "The Canadians," filmed in Saskatchewan.

Near the end of the film, Burt Metcalfe, who portrays an ambitious young constable, is reprimanded by the sergeant for slouching in his saddle and having his collar open. Overlooked by the sergeant is the fact the guy's hat is on backwards.

In an earlier scene, badman Jack Creley refers to badman Scott Peters as Billy. But Peters' name is Ben.

Metro-Kalvar In Photo Products Co.

Metro and the Kalvar Corp. have joined hands on a 50-50 basis in the formation of a new company which has the exclusive rights to the development and marketing of Kalvar photographic products in the motion picture, television and still amateur photo fields.

Kalvar, whose president is Alfred Jay Moran, is working on a new type of film which does not require chemical processing; photography would be taken out of the dark room. Film is exposed by light to form the image and heated to develop the image.

Commercial use of the process to date has been limited mainly to the copying of microfilm images for industry and government. Idea now is to extend the process into the various other forms of photography. Object being quality, speed and lessened costs.

M-G technicians are working with the Kalvar specialists on development of the system.

New Before-Trial Quiz Of Martin Starr Thurs. At Ferguson's Request

Martin Starr, longtime radio commentator on matters cinematic, makes his third pre-trial appearance before defense counsel on Thurs. (16) in connection with his $200,000 defamation action against United Artists and Roger Lewis and Columbia Pictures and Robert S. Ferguson, severally and jointly.

Sidney Shreiber, special counsel for Ferguson, requested this repeat performance by Starr. Setting is the N.Y. offices of Schwartz & Frohlich, representing Columbia. Arthur Schwartz of the latter law firm extensively examined Starr at previous before-trial sessions.

Present at the new questioning will be Gerald Phillips and Donald J. Wollins, representing United Artists and its ad-pub veep, for Phillips, Nizer, Benjamin, Krim & Ballon.

Starr's attorney is Harry Heller of Brooklyn. His action stems from Starr's firing some years ago by WOR after, he charges, Lewis and Ferguson rapped him to management there.

With "One-Eyed Jacks," Marlon Brando adds another character to his list of respected histrionic achievements, but this time he has ranged beyond the limited sphere of the actor to assume directorial controls and guide an entire process of creative interpretation with meticulous, dynamic intensity and integrity. In striving above all for clarity, honesty and dimension of characterization, he has constructed a compelling experience out of a serviceable work of adventure fiction.

With a reputed $5-$6,000,000 at stake Brando gives Paramount's full-house prospect for its gamble. The Pennebaker production, produced by Frank P. Rosenberg under the executive aegis of George Glass and Walter Seltzer, is, in short, of whopping wicket potential.

The production, framed against the turbulent coastline of the Monterey peninsula and the shifting sands and mounds of the bleak Mexican desert, is notable for its visual artistry alone. There is an appreciation of color and of nature that is a credit to the remarkable VistaVision-Technicolor camera virtuosity of Charles Lang Jr. The superior visual aspect is backed up formidably by the balance of the film's photographic crew: second unit photographer Wallace Kelley, special photographic effects man John P. Fulton and process photographer Farciot Edouart. Comparable plaudits must go to the art directing team of Hal Pereira and J. McMillan Johnson for the flavor and authenticity they have instilled in their interior sets and for the part they have played in selection of outdoor locale.

Charles Neider's novel, "The Authentic Death of Hendry Jones," is the source from which Guy Trosper and Calder Willingham penned their tellingly direct screenplay. It is the brooding, deliberate tale of a young man (Brando) consumed by a passion for revenge after he is betrayed by an accomplice (Karl Malden) in a bank robbery, for which crime he spends five years (1880-1885) in a Mexican prison. His vengeful campaign leads him to the town of Monterey, where Malden has attained respectability and the position of sheriff, but romantic entanglements with Malden's stepdaughter (Pina Pellicer) persuade Brando to abandon his intention until the irresistibility of circumstance and Malden's own irrepressible will to snuff out the living evidence of his guilt draws the two men into a showdown that is fatal to the latter.

It is an oddity of this film that both its strength and its weakness lie in the area of characterization. Brando's concept calls, above all, for depth of character, for human figures endowed with overlapping good and bad sides to their nature. In the case of the central characters—his own, Malden's, Miss Pellicer's—he is successful. But a few of his secondary people have no redeeming qualities—they are simply arch-villains. It is here that Brando appears to contradict his basic purpose.

In spite of the familiarity of his mannerisms as an actor, in spite of the handicap of serving as his own director, Brando creates a character of substance, of its own identity. It is an instinctively right and illuminating performance. The character makes sense, and undergoes a considerable transition of nature in the course of the film, which has captured to an astonishing degree the gradually changing quality of events in a novel.

Another rich, vivid variable portrayal is the one by Malden. Katy Jurado is especially fine as Malden's wife. Outstanding in support are Ben Johnson as the bad sort who leads Brando to his prey, Larry Duran as Brando's doomed Mexican buddy, and Slim Pickens as a sadistic deputy. Others who score in prominent secondary roles are Sam Gilman, Timothy Carey, Miriam Colon, Elisha Cook, Rudolph Acosta and Ray Teal. Pretty Miss Pellicer, who makes her screen bow in this film, does a sensitive, sympathetic job.

"Jacks" is a long film, but it is credibly and tautly knit by editor Archie Marshek. Hugo Friedhofer's melodically romantic strains are a delight to the ear. Soundwork by Hugo and Charles Grenzbach is excellent. Tube.

Le President
(FRENCH)

Paris, March 14.

UFA release of Cite-Fides-Terra-CESI Films production. Stars Jean Gabin; features Bernard Blier, Renee Faure, Louis Seigner, Henri Cremieux, Alfred Adam. Directed by Henri Verneuil. Screenplay, Michel Audiard from novel by Georges Simenon; camera, Louis Page; editor, Jacques Desagneaux. At Paris, Paris. Running time, 110 MINS.

Emile	Jean Gabin
Philippe	Bernard Blier
Milleran	Renee Faure
Governor	Louis Seigner
Minister	Henri Cremieux
Francois	Alfred Adam

This film is mainly a vehicle for actor Jean Gabin. After a happy tramp, an old drunkard, a broke Baron, now he is an elder statesman in this pic. Living in retirement, he has one last chance to make himself felt by preventing somebody from taking office before passing into history. Film is stolid and talky, but has some solid characterizations and an interesting look at pre-war French politics. But it looks like a limited foreign item.

Gabin's solid thesping and the crusty, crochety, sincere quality of the character weld well to have him dominate this sketchy pic and make it the main appeal. He is shown via flashbacks in a few situations of government and in his retirement receiving visitors or writing his memoirs. A young aide who had crossed him is kept from forming a new cabinet by Gabin's wrath at his past perfidy.

Film is overlong and verbose but in its favor are the restricted use of stock shots and isolated acting strength. Director Henri Vernueil has subordinated all to Gabin's powerful presence. It looms a good entry here. Technical credits are fine. Mosk.

Operation Eichmann

Heavyhanded study of one Nazi chieftain's infamous deeds. Mild b.o. splash via saturation is likely, but unsatisfactory film's impact should be short-lived.

Hollywood, March 2.

Allied Artists release of Samuel Bischoff-David Diamond production. Stars Werner Klemperer, Ruta Lee, Donald Buka. Directed by R. G. Springsteen. Running time, 92 MINS.

In their haste to capitalize on a topic of global import and immediacy, producers Samuel Bischoff and David Diamond have failed to come up with the sort of distinguished, meticulous and penetrating analysis that would justify a decision to risk aggravating the desirable climate of objectivity sought for the imminent trial. "Operation Eichmann" is a heavyhanded film that sheds virtually no insight on the character of the man and fails to convey the air of authenticity that is mandatory for a picture dealing so intimately with an inflammatory slice of modern history. It emerges a rather unsavory attempt at fast-buck exploitation.

Since it is ticketed for mass exhibition shortly before the outset of the trial itself, the Allied Artists release seems certain to generate some swift, though likely short-lived, wicket activity. But customers will go to see the film primarily out of curiosity to learn something of the man behind the beast, and it is here that "Operation Eichmann" will prove most unsatisfactory to them for, not only does it fail to penetrate, it has an emotional tendency to distort the issue. This factor may have a somewhat damaging effect on the picture's ultimate boxoffice.

The film, written by Lewis Coppley, begins with a questionable "prologue" in which Eichmann, played by Werner Klemperer, rants and raves at the audience in Hitleresque fashion over the travesty of justice, the "circus" of a trial he must endure before a smug world. First half of the picture is devoted to illustrating his activities as the grotesque monster responsible for extermination of 6,000,000 Jews in two years, second half centering on his post-war efforts to sustain Nazism while feverishly avoiding capture by the Jews. The film ends with the ultimate capture.

The hasty nature of the project is all too apparent in the patchwork dramatic quality. There are long, verbose lags and a number of mechanical oversights or inconsistencies. Film clips of shocking atrocities are incorporated for no absolutely pertinent reason, giving the picture, directed by R. G. Springsteen, an even more staccato pace. And most of the characters are so nebulous, so superficially drawn, that they defy audience identification. This is particularly damaging in the cast of the Israeli pursuers, who are almost entirely devoid of personality.

Klemperer, in undertaking a role of frighteningly distasteful proportions, acquits himself well. So does Ruta Lee as his mistress, in spite of the fact the character never comes into focus. Donald Buka is passable in the bland role of Eichmann's most tenacious pursuer. Others who attract attention, more or less favorably, are Lester Fletcher, John Banner, Hanna Landy, Jim Baird, Luis Van Rooten, Paul Thierry and Rudolfo Hoyos Jr.

Of the crafts, Joseph Biroc's camera efforts and Rudi Feld's art direction are most proficient. Roy Livingston's editing is not always as taut and smooth as desirable. The Alex Alexander-June Starr score is unobtrusive, and there is additional music in the form of a brief cabaret song by Franz Steininger and Gustav Heimo and a prayer sung by Cantor Sholom Katz. Tube.

Paris, March 7.

Clavis film production and release. With Herbert Wochinz, Jean Negroni, Christian Blech, Jean-Marie Serreau. Directed by Armand Gatti. Screenplay, Gatti, Pierre Joffroy; camera, Robert Juillard; editor, Yvonne Martin. Previewed in Paris. Running time, 100 MINS.

There has been increased filmmaking interest in the Nazi crimes during the last war. This is a French film that deals with an ideological struggle between a young French Jew and a German anti-Nazi in a concentration camp. It is a reserved look at the camp horrors and dwells on the outlook of these martyred men. It looms a downbeat affair with mostly specialized chances but is of interest and worth careful placement in the light of the importance and treatment of this subject.

The camp's destruction of human values is depicted and then it concerns a cruel plot to make a hardened German anti-Nazi talk about a resistance plot among the prisoners by throwing him into an enclosure with a young Jew and telling the two that if only one survives he will not be killed.

The film covers the attempts to help them by the resistance group as well as the growing awareness of each other culminating in the Jew's sacrifice to help the German escape. If this lacks the epic sweep to make its human point more forceful, it at least has a harsh, sharp flair for men-in-crisis and makes a point about the infamy of Nazi terrors. Its stark lensing and location shooting in Yugoslavia also help.

Acting is good except that sometimes the roles become symbols rather than humane in great crisis. But this is forceful and not evasive. Mosk.

Posse From Hell

Classic chase western hampered by moral and social overtones that slow the action and make types of the characters. Striking scenic views and star names should make it successful b.o. candidate.

Universal's "Posse From Hell" is a picture-postcard western in which the picture, a sweeping Eastman Color Panorama of Lone Pine country where Mt. Whitney rises out of Death Valley, is eminently superior to the postcard. Release bogs itself down with sociological implications instead of sticking to action essentials.

Although Gordon Kay's handsome production is shy the story and character stature or novelty to please the discriminating patron, it will be appetizing fare for that legion of less selective, less critical filmgoers for whom escape and pictorial majesty are enough of a cinematic virtue. The names and performances of Audie Murphy and John Saxon should be an additional wicket stimulus to boost the film into a satisfactory boxoffice sphere.

Clair Huffaker adapted the screenplay from his own novel. Murphy plays a young gunslinger-turned-deputy who leads a small posse from a town named Paradise (despite the "Hell" of a title) in pursit of a quartet of killers who murdered some of the townspeople, robbed the bank and departed with the prettiest girl on the premises, Zohra Lampert. For one reason or another, the posse dwindles to a threesome, which nonetheless proves sufficient for the task of destroying the astonishingly inept foursome of baddies, who unaccountably but helpfully elect to double back to the scene of their crime instead of logically) high-tailing it out of the territory with their booty.

Huffaker's screenplay dwells at length on issues such as prejudice, cowardice, false fronts and moral courage. It attempts to glorify the classically humble, soft-spoken, regular-guy approach to life, which is fine but, in so doing, creates a filmful of distorted character stereotypes to make its point. Thus an earnest attempt to bring additional meaning to an essentially simple western backfires and becomes ludicrous.

Murphy, whose heroic exploits in real life make him ideally suitable for, and extra-believable in, super heroic roles, does his usual commendably restrained job. Saxon is outstanding here, creating the picture's most colorful character as a saddle-sore dude from New York who rises to the perilous occasion. Miss Lampert is pretty, but not consistently persuasive, as a fallen woman "had" by all four thugs. Among those in support, most lasting impressions are made by Rudolph Acosta, Ward Ramsey, Royal Dano, Lee Van Cleef and Vic Morrow, latter utilizing a kind of neo-classic Brando scowl to good effect as a heavy.

Herbert Coleman's direction rises in partnership with Clifford Stine's astute and agile lensmanship, but falls in association with Huffaker's uneven source material. It is Coleman's bow as a motion picture helmsman and there is evidence he has an uncompromising taste for realism, notably in the explosive way in which his characters are shattered by gunfire and the gasping way in which they die.

Frederic Knudtson's editing is efficient, and sets designed by Alexander Golitzen and Alfred Sweeney have the proper frontier flavor. Tube.

National Boxoffice Survey

Biz on Downbeat; 'Exodus' Still No. 1, 'Pepe' 2d, 'Alamo' 3d, 'Impostor' 4th, 'Cry' 5th

Seasonal influences, Lent and approaching income tax deadlines all are being blamed by exhibs currently where an offish tone has developed. Some key cities covered by VARIETY still are enjoying solid biz but many others admit to a definite downbeat. Irregular weather, with rainstorms, hailstorms and snow are sloughing some keys.

"Exodus" (UA) again is finishing on top, same as for last two sessions. It again is way out in front like it was a week ago. "Pepe" (Col) is edging up to second position. It was third last round.

"The Alamo" (UA) is finishing third, only a little behind second-place winner. "Great Impostor" (U) again is winding up fourth, same as last stanza.

"Cry For Happy" (Col), only out to any extent this session, is finishing fifth. "Spartacus" (U), long high on the list, is capturing sixth money. "Suzie Wong" (Par) is winding up seventh.

"Ben-Hur" (M-G) will be eighth mainly because playing in only 11 key cities covered by VARIETY. "101 Dalmatians" (BV), seventh a week ago, is finishing ninth.

"Where Boys Are" (M-G) will be 10th while "Never On Sunday" (Lope), a runner-up pic last stanza, is capturing 11th place. "Gorgo" (M-G) rounds out the Top 12.

"Misfits" (UA), high on the weekly lists for many sessions; "Tunes of Glory" (Lope), "Millionaires" (20th) and "Ballad of Soldier" (Kings) are the runner-up films.

"Make Mine Mink" (Cont), hotsy in Chi, shapes boff in Minneapolis and okay in K.C. "Sanctuary" (20th), one of the few newcomers, looks lightweight in Chi, lean in Minneapolis, sluggish in N.Y. and fair in Seattle. "Go Naked in World" (M-G), which has proved highly disappointing for a major production in recent weeks is so sluggish currently it fails to win rating. It's barely okay in Detroit, slow in Omaha, light in N.Y., dull in Frisco and bad in Seattle and Philly.

"Breathless" (Films Around World) continues great on its extended-run at the arty Fine Arts in N.Y. "Wackiest Ship" (Col) is rated loud in Cincy. "Virgin Spring" (Janus) looms torrid in Frisco and big in N.Y.

"Hoodlum Priest" (UA), not appearing in many keys so far, shapes neat in Minneapolis, good in Louisville and fine in St. Louis. "Entertainer" (Cont), okay in Chi, is good in Washington.

"Two-Way Stretch" (Indie), just getting around, looms trim in Toronto, brisk in Boston and big in N.Y. "Fast and Sexy" (Col) is rated neat in Chi.

"Village of Damned" (M-G), wow in Detroit, looks fair in St. Louis. "Fever in Blood" (WB), fair in Washington, looms hot in Boston. "Facts of Life" (UA) still is fine on extended-run in N.Y.

Film Row Landmark Gone

Los Angeles, March 14.

Historic Film Exchange Bldg., which Mike Gore built in the '20s on Film Row, has been sold to K. F. Zane, board chairman of Liberty National Bank, as future site for that institution. Sale of property involves an estimated $500,000, including contemplated improvements.

Since its foundation, structure has housed at one time or another the majority of film exchanges and theatre owners of L. A.

The Secret Partner

Absorbing but deviously-plotted mystery. Lacks premium b.o. attributes, but will fit fine as a supporting number.

Hollywood, March 1.

Metro release of Michael Relph production. Stars Stewart Granger, Haya Harareet. Directed by Basil Dearden. Screenplay, David Pursall, Jack Seddon; camera, Harry Waxman; editor, Raymond Poulton; art director, Alan Withy; music, Philip Green; assistant director, George Pollock. Reviewed at the studio, March 1, '61. Running time, 92 MINS.

Considering its great popularity as paperback and television fare, there has been a surprising scarcity of mystery fiction on the theatrical screen of late. Since Metro's "The Secret Partner" falls into that rather neglected category, it would appear to be a promising candidate for boxoffice success. But it isn't. The British-vintage Michael Relph production is engrossing, but is neither ingenious enough nor tidy enough in retrospect to fully satisfy or excite an audience as an "A" attraction. The picture appears destined for the rear end of twin bills where, in spite of its 92-minute bulk, it will serve as above-average support.

The rather wobbly yarn is the original screenplay effort of David Pursall and Jack Seddon. Stewart Granger essays its central role, that of an ex-con, now shipping exec, who is pinned with the rap for a $250,000 robbery of his firm's vault.

Balance of the film details Granger's, and the law's efforts to uncover the masked thief, introducing several likely candidates in the persons of suitors of Granger's estranged wife (Haya Harareet), who is revealed as working in cahoots with the crook. The surprise ending fails to properly justify the crime schematic in terms of strength of motivation, soundness of anticipation, or ultimate decision to own up to the law. Equally disturbing in retrospect is the fact that when the thief is not attempting to baffle the police, he appears to be purposely misleading the audience, which is an unpardonable pitfall into which film mysteries seem irresistibly inclined to fall.

Although a bit lax in minor detail (which can be anything but minor in a mystery picture), director Basil Dearden has done a generally businesslike job, even to the extent of injecting an occasional dash of humor. But some of his attempts to heighten tension have a contrived "pulp" look about them. Slicker qualities are incorporated through Harry Waxman's lensmanship, Raymond Poulton's editing and Alan Withy's art direction, but Philip Green's music has a tired and intrusive "Dragnet" air about it.

Granger does a thoroughly competent, polished, aggressive job in the key role. There is outstanding support from Bernard Lee as the sharp and conscientious chief sleuth, and others whose featured efforts are beneficial to the film are Hugh Burden, Lee Montague, Melissa Stribling, Conrad Phillips, John Lee and Norman Bird. Miss Harareet is a disappointment. She plays with one rather blank, frozen expression, as if the slightest glint in her pretty eyes or tilt of the head will give the whole mystery away. Tube.

Azahares Rojos
(Red Blossoms)
(MEXICAN—COLOR)

Mexico City, March 7.

Peliculas Nacionales release of Rosas Priego production. Stars Francisco Rabal, Teresa Velazquez; features Hector Godoy, Silvia Fournier, Roberto Canedo, Domingo Soler, Maria Eugenia San Martin. Directed by Alfredo B. Crevenna. Screenplay, Julie Alejandro and Edmundo Baez; music, A. Diaz Conde. At Roble and Coliseo theatres, Mexico City. Running time, 90 MINS.

This picture is based on a novel "My Frivolous Wife," written by an unknown writer whose pen name was "The Audacious Gentleman." Tome caused adolescents to blush here some two decades ago.

Translated to the screen, under the capable direction of Alfredo Crevenna, story turns out to be a rather good comedy based around the yarn of a young miss who calculatingly marries for gain, without love. The borderline passages of the book were cleaned up by writers Julio Alejandro and Edmundo Baez. But film still has a "for adults only" classification.

Tere Velazquez, being groomed for starring parts, still lacks assurance and experience. But she does what she can with the role of the girl who marries the man of money (Francisco Rabal) who has been formerly her very good friend. She embarks on this matrimonial venture to save her family from financial reverses. Story line is developed against the background of Mexico City high society. Situation comedy and misunderstandings are quite good. A rather melodramatic finale leading up to the birth of true love is the only jarring note.

Technically, the picture is high grade, has good atmosphere, city backgrounds, excellent and luxurious sets. Rabal performs in his usual competent manner, with this possibly showing the acting inexperience of Miss Velazquez. She is very comely, however. As for the others, Roberto Canedo overacts just a shade, while Domingo Soler, Hector Godoy, Silvia Fournier and Maria Eugenia San Martin do good work in their roles.

A more ambitious film than many other light comedy attempts, this has been doing good business and appears to be slated as a moneymaker in Latin American and possibly in European markets. Emil.

Days Of Thrills And Laughter

Third in Robert Youngson's series of silent screen tidbits. A diverting collection, serviceable as a spot filler attraction.

Hollywood, March 10.

Twentieth-Fox release of Robert Youngson production of old silent clips. Narration written by Youngson; music, Jack Shaindlin; sound effects, Alfred Dahlem, Ralph F. Curtiss; narrated by Jay Jackson. Reviewed at the studio, March 10, '61. Running time, 93 MINS.

A fascinating reminder of the screen's speechless, but anything but tranquil era, "Days Of Thrills And Laughter" is the third in producer Robert Youngson's series of antique celluloidal compilations, first of which appeared early in '58, second earlier this year. There is no reason to suspect just yet that Youngson may be overplaying his hand, for he is dealing in cinematic art and automatic nostalgia, a powerful combination.

Among giants of filmdom's great comedic period who are on display in this collection are Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy (prior to their merger), Houdini, Pearl White, Harry Langdon, Ben Turpin, Charlie Chase, Snub Pollard, Fatty Arbuckle, Mack Sennett and his Keystone Kops and Bathing Beauties. Chaplin's pre-eminence is undeniable, but there's no shortage of talent and inspiration in any of the many clips that have been bound together in a valuable volume and spared disintegration on the dusty shelves of time. Included in this anthology are a montage of serial climaxes and several reels of the hair-raising variety to go along with the purely comic samplings from the past. The thrillers, however, emerge just as funny as the comedies, thanks to the sophistication of retrospect.

Although the narration, written by Youngson and delivered by Jay Jackson, has considerable explanatory value, there is simply too much of it. Intrusive, superfluous and condescending verbal descriptions of the action (which almost invariably speaks for itself) will annoy many patrons. Jack Shaindlin's score, orchestrated by Ted Royal, effectively incorporates the styles and musical themes of the bygone time on display, but lacks distinction and genuine creativity. Sound effects by Alfred Dahlem and Ralph F. Curtiss seem to take something away from the original charm rather than adding to it.

Over and above its value as a cross-section of the early cinema, "Days Of Thrills and Laughter" is an enchanting glimpse of the frenetic, light-hearted personality of a far more comprehensible world than the one we live in now. It also brings closer to us the identity of today's 70-year-old, for whom these vestiges are something more than curiosities. Tube.

Flucht Nach Berlin
(Escape to Berlin)
(GERMAN)

Berlin, March 7.

Stun-Flim production. With Christian Doermer, Susanne Korda and Narziss Sokatscheff. Directed and written by Will Tremper. Camera, Guenter Haase; music, Peter Thomas; editor, Ulivelli and Dayan. Previewed in Berlin. Running time, 112 MINS.

Claus Baade ..... Christian Doermer
Doris Lange ..... Susanne Korda
Hermann Gueden ..... N. Sokatscheff

In some respects, "Escape" is an unusual German pic. It was made without the backing of a distributor but financed by the American firm, Unexcelled Chemical Corp., and its Swiss affiliate, Unexcelled International, Zurich. Stun-Flim, producer of the film, is a subsid company of the latter. This has a theme usually regarded as taboo by West German filmites the divided Germany. Subject has been considered as boxoffice poison here.

"Escape" is based on actual happenings, the flight of East Germans to West Berlin. Within the postwar years, nearly 3,000,000 Germans have fled the Commie regime in East Germany. Politically speaking, "Escape" is no doubt the most anti-Communist West German film since 1945.

Whether the German cinema patrons will appreciate this subject remains to be seen. But apart from being a political film, this is also a thriller. Hence, large segments of the action trade may go for it. Lacking star names, pic needs selling on its plot, which can be exploited. Film has good foreign selling points, too.

Technically, this is well made and the score by Peter Thomas (who contributes the theme song, a catchy march) and camerawork by Guenter Haase are praiseworthy. Artistically, the film commands less attention. Although 32-year old Will Tremper directed this film (incidentally, his first directorial job) with obvious care and devotion, he concentrated chiefly on its thrilling elements. There are some implausibilities in Tremper's script and some character motivations are sketchy. But it is a suspenseful and politically interesting film.

"Escape" has only three principal players: Christian Doermer, as a young East German Commie functionary, Narziss Sokatscheff, as an East German farmer and Susanne Korda as a Swiss femme journalist. Doermer comes with other Commies into an East German village whose inhabitants, all farmers, have not still "voluntarily" surrendered to the Soviet-style colchos (collective) system. Sokatscheff has quarrels with Doermer and flees. On his flight to West Berlin, he is given a lift by Miss Korda on the highway. Doermer for some reason is dropped by his Commie friends and decides also to head for Berlin. The three principal characters run into each other shortly before they reach Berlin.

Unusual angle of this film also is that the cast is composed mostly of amateurs. In fact, almost everyone who's associated with this production appears in it. Of the professional players, Doermer is the best known, with a dozen pix to his credit. As a young Commie, he turns in a believable performance. Sokatscheff, the farmer, a newcomer, is a handsome and talented chap who should go places. Miss Korda is less effective but is saddled with the least rewarding role in the film. Film only cost around 500,000 D-Marks ($125,000). It could stand some cutting but not particularly necessary. Hans.

The Rebel
(BRITISH—COLOR)

Funny first appearance of one of Britain's top tele comedians; stylish comedy which though slow at times earns plenty of laughs. Little doubt of it being a big U.K. success, but American audiences may need time to appreciate Tony Hancock.

London, March 7

Warner-Pathe release of an Associated British (W. A. Whittaker) production. Stars Tony Hancock; features George Sanders, Paul Massie, Margit Saad, Gregoire Aslan, Dennis Price. Directed by Robert Day. Screenplay, Alan Simpson, Ray Galton, based on an original by Hancock, Simpson and Galton; camera, Gilbert Taylor; editor, Richard Best; music, Frank Cordell. At Plaza, London. Running time, 105 MINS.

The slideover from tv stardom to success on the bigger screen has been a hazardous one for many of Britain's television comedians. Tony Hancock, one of U.K.'s hottest tv comics, has waited his moment cautiously. Apart from a minor appearance in an unimportant farce some years ago, he has shuffled uneasily away from pix. But, with "The Rebel," his takeover bid can be rated a reasonable success. In Britain, his reputation is such that, though this film is a fairly lightweight affair, it should be a big boxoffice click. He may not find immediate stardom abroad as a result of "The Rebel." But a U.S. booking should find plenty of word-of-mouth support. One adverse point, the title hardly suggests a comedy.

Hancock's tv writers, Alan Simpson and Ray Galton, have scripted this, and they know their man's idiosyncracies intimately. Hancock is a wry, deprecating personality. He's not simply a comedian but a very good actor who sparks off humor from an ordinary situation or verbal gag. He's the little man, slightly at war with himself and his fellows, but quick to grasp an opportunity for getting on.

In "Rebel," he is a downtrodden London city clerk, fed up with the daily round, and with a yen to be a sculptor. Unfortunately, he's very unskilled. Eventually, he blows his top, throws up his job and sets up shop as an existentialist painted in Paris. He talks himself into being accepted on the Left Bank as the leader of a new movement in art. Then an art connoisseur boobs. He exhibits the paintings of Hancock's roommate, thinking they are Hancock's work. The mistit becomes a national figure till, in the end, everything blows up. And, contented, he returns to obscurity in London and his private daubing.

This is a sly dig at some of the fakes who pretend they understand the avant-garde work of the untalented, and the flimsy framework is mainly an excuse for some orthodox situations to which Hancock lends his shrewd sense of character-comedy.

Among several amusing scenes are those when Hancock revolts against his office boss, an existentialist Left Bank party, Hancock's visit to the yacht of a Greek millionaire where he is commissioned to sculpt the tycoon's vamp wife, a colorful carnival party aboard the yacht and Hancock "painting" a picture by daubing paint on a canvas and then bicycling over it.

Well photographed mainly in Paris and on the Riviera, "The Rebel" is a good technical job except that the ending shows signs of over-ruthless cutting.

The ever-dependable George Sanders is a debonair figure as the art connoisseur and critic. Gregoire Aslan plays the millionaire with sure touch. Irene Handl is a tower of strength. Margit Saad whips the sex-appeal around with abandon. Paul Massie, as the frustrated artist with whom Hancock shares a garret, has an almost completely straight role and plays it with charm.

Among the minor roles, Mervyn Johns, Peter Bull, John Le Mesurier, Marie Burke and Nanette Newman give useful support. Dennis Price is a standout in a smallish, irrelevant role which looks suspiciously as if it had been based on the eccentricities of Salvador Dali. Rich.

L.A. Off Sharply Albeit 'Cry' Nifty $20,000; 'Sundowners' Fine 23G, 2d, 'Alamo' Giant 22G, 'Pepe' Sick 12G

Los Angeles, March 14.

First-run trade is down sharply this stanza, with the overall setup quite spotty. Only a few situations are garnering much biz. "Cry For Happy" is rated nifty $20,000 in three theatres but reissue of "Peyton Place" looks only thin $7,000 in two houses.

Regular holdovers are headed by "Sundowners" which looks busy $23,000 for second week in six spots. "The Alamo" continues big $22,000 in second round at Hollywood Paramount on grind run.

"World of Suzie Wong" still is showing power with a hefty $10,000 likely in 13th round at the Chinese. "Great Impostor" is rated okay in second session at two houses.

"Pepe" looms breezy $12,000 in 11th frame at Warner Beverly. "Exodus" is rated solid in 12th week at Fox Wilshire while "Ben-Hur" shapes plump in 68th session at Egyptian.

Estimates for This Week

Hillstreet, Pix, Wiltern (Metropolitan-Prin-SW) (2,752; 756; 2,344; 90-$1.50)—"Cry for Happy" (Col) and "I'm All Right, Jack" (Col) (1st general release). Nifty $20,000. Last week, Hillstreet, Pix, "Wackiest Ship" (Col), "Sword Sherwood Forest" (Col) (3d wk), $5,800. Wiltern with Warren's, Hollywood, "Great Impostor" (U), "Wings of Chance" (U), $20,900.

Los Angeles, Hawaii (FWC-G&S) (2,019; 1,106; 90-$1.50)—"Peyton Place" (20th) (reissue) and "Circle of Deception" (20th). Thin $7,000. Last week, Los Angeles, "Can-Can" (20th) (2d wk), "Don't Bother to Knock" (20th) (reissues), $4,100. Hawaii, "Psycho" (Par), "Vertigo" (Par) (reissues), $3,500.

Warren's, Hollywood (B&B-FWC) (1,757; 756; 90-$1.50)—"Great Impostor" (U) and "Wings of Chance" (U) (2d wk). Okay $9,000.

Vogue (FWC) (810; 90-$1.50)—"Can-Can" (20th) (m.o.) and "Let's Make Love" (20th) (reissue). Dull $2,600. Last week, with State, "Where Boys Are" (M-G) (1st general release), "Man Without Star" (U) (reissue) (1st wk), $9,200.

State (UATC) (2,404; 90-$1.50)—

'Cry' Lusty $12,000 In Mpls.; 'Boys' Hefty 8½G, 'Impostor' Nice 8G, 2d

Minneapolis, March 14.

Reopening Thursday of the Mann Theatre, formerly the Pan, with the preem of "Spartacus" gives the city three hard-ticket showhouses on the mainstem. Other current hardticketers are "Exodus," socko in seventh round at Academy, and reissue "Cinerama Holiday" which shapes so-so in 12th chapter at Century.

Only other fresh entry this session is "Cry for Happy," sock at State. Nabe first-run newcomer, "Make Mine Mink," shapes lush at Suburban World. "Where Boys Are" at Gopher and "Hoodlum Priest" at Lyric, both playing second weeks, are proving strong coin-getters. "Great Impostor," also in second at Orpheum, looks fancy.

Estimates for This Week

Academy (Mann) (947; $1.75-$2.65)—"Exodus" (UA) (7th wk). Little change from week to week. Strong $14,000, same as last round.

Century (Cinerama, Inc.) (1,150; $1.75-$2.65)—"Cinerama Holiday" (Cinerama) (reissue) (12th wk). So-so $6,500. Last week, $7,000.

Gopher (Berger) (1,000; $1-$1.25)—"Where Boys Are" (M-G) (2d wk). Hefty $8,500 this chapter after $10,300 opener.

Lyric (Par) (1,000; $1-$1.25)—"Hoodlum Priest" (UA) (2d wk). Nifty $7,500. Last week, $9,000.

Mann (Mann) (1,100; $1.75-$2.65)—This completely revamped house reopens Thursday (16) with "Spartacus" (U) on hard-ticket.

Orpheum (Mann) (2,800; $1-$1.75)—"Great Impostor" (U) (2d wk). Nice $8,000. Last week, $11,000.

'Alamo' Sockeroo $20,000 in L'ville

Louisville, March 14.

Perfect springlike weather helped the opening of "The Alamo" at the Mary Anderson. This one is going great guns, and bringing in patrons who have been slowly finding their way back to theatre row, after alternating snows and heavy rains. Saturday (11) had almost continuous lines. Also new, "Hoodlum Priest" at the Brown, is fair. House is primed for preem of "Spartacus" skedded for Thursday.

"Misfits" in third at United Artists is fair. "Suzie Wong" in sixth at the Kentucky looms sturdy. One block area on the main stem had return of Negro picketing, concentrating on the first-run wickets. Circles and lines of colored youths, singing songs, and carrying placards, carried on their protestations, with an absence of violence. All houses had merchant police on hand to keep down trouble.

Estimates for This Week

Brown (Fourth Avenue) (1,100; 75-$1) — "Hoodlum Priest" (UA). Fair $4,500. Last week, "Upstairs and Downstairs" (20th) and "Male War Bride" (20th) (reissue), $4,300.

"Spartacus" will preem Thursday (16).

Kentucky (Switow) (900; 75-$1)—"Suzie Wong" (Par) (6th wk). Sturdy at $4,000. Fifth week was $4,400.

Mary Anderson (People's) (900; $1-$1.50)—"Alamo" (UA). Had terrific opening and lines. Upped scale should boost this one to mighty $20,000 or near. Last week, "Auntie Mame" (WB) and "Time For Sergeants" (WB) (reissues), $4,500.

Ohio (Settos) (900; 75-$1)—"Savage Innocents" (Par). Light $4,000. Last week, "Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (7th wk), $5,000.

United Artists (UA) (3,000; 75-$1.25)—"Misfits" (UA) (3d wk). Fair $6,000 after second week's $11,000.

'Dalmatians' Big 16G, Port.; 'Alamo' Hot 12G

Portland, Ore., March 14.

Mainstem is loaded with strong product currently and it's keeping biz in high gear. "The Alamo" is wow in opener at Orpheum. "World of Suzie Wong" is rated lusty at Paramount in first. "101 Dalmatians" in the Fox is great on initial round. "Ben-Hur" at Hollywood on first-run at pop prices is rated tall.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (983; $1.50-$3)—"Spartacus" (U) (6th wk). Steady $6,500. Last week, $6,400.

Fox (Evergreen) (1,600; $1-$1.49)—"101 Dalmatians" (BV). Great $16,000. Last week, "Village of Damned" (M-G) and "Legions of Nile" (20th) (2d wk), $5,600.

Hollywood (Evergreen) (900; $1.25-$1.49)—"Ben Hur" (M-G), on popscale. Tall $8,000 or over. Last week, second-run policy.

'PEPE' BRISK $17,000, CLEVE.; 'SAVAGE' 6½G

Cleveland, March 14.

Business at first-runs is in high gear here this stanza. The few newcomers, however, are not doing much. Best of these is "Cry For Happy," rated fair at the Hipp. "Savage Innocents" is weak in first round at State.

"Pepe" still is big in second stanza at Allen. "Spartacus" looms okay in 12th session at Palace.

Estimates for This Week

Allen (SW) (2,862; $1.25-$1.80)—"Pepe" (Col) (2d wk). Still big at $17,000. Last week, $22,000.

Continental Art (Art Theatre Guild) (800; $1.25)—"Never on Sunday" (Lopert) (m.o.). Good $3,000 after doing 10 weeks at Heights Art. Last week, "Carry On Nurse" (Indie) (m.o.), wound up 18 week run with $1,500.

Heights Art (Art Theatre Guild) (925; $1.25)—"Virgin Spring" (Indie) (2d wk). Excellent $4,800 after $5,000 in opener.

'Alamo' Boffo 23G, Tops K.C.; 'Suzie' 8G, 6th

Kansas City, March 14.

"Alamo," the only new picture in town, is socko at the Plaza, with a price hike helping. It's due to stay for a spell. List of holdovers likewise holds some sock figures. "Spartacus" being strong in third week at Capri and "101 Dalmatians" being great in third at the Uptown-Granada. "Great Impostor" is strong in second round at Paramount. "Suzie Wong" shows good staying power at the Roxy while "Exodus" is rated steady lick at the Empire.

'Exodus' Sock 15G, D.C.; 'Alamo' 10G

Washington, March 14.

Not much excitement on mainstem this session. Hottest number is "Exodus" which shapes socko in third Uptown lap. Initialers are okay to dull. "It Happened in Broad Daylight" at Apex looks oke while "No Morals" is rated brisk at the tiny Plaza.

"Spartacus" is keeping its legs at the Warner on eighth stanza. "Fever in Blood" looms no so hot opening at two spots. "Misfits" shapes fair in sixth at Keith's "Alamo" is rated good for third at Palace. "Pepe" looks nifty in fourth at Trans-Lux.

Estimates for This Week

Ambassador-Metropolitan (SW) (1,490; 1,000; 90-$1.49)—"Fever in Blood" (WB) and "No Time For Sergeants" (WB) (reissues). Fair $9,000. Last week, "Great Impostor" (U) (2d wk), $10,000.

'Exodus' Sock $12,000. Seattle; 'Alamo' 8G, 3

Seattle, March 14.

Trade shapes quite uneven this round, with small help coming from new entrants. "Go Naked in World" is very bad on first week at Music Hall while "Sanctuary" is only fair at Coliseum on initialer. "Exodus" still is big in second round at the Blue Mouse. "Cry For Happy" shapes nice in second at Fifth Avenue. "The Alamo" looks good in third at Paramount.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (738; $1.50-$3)—"Exodus" (UA) (2d wk). Big $12,000. Last week, $12,800.

Coliseum (Fox-Evergreen) (1,870; $1-$1.50)—"Sanctuary" (20th) and "King Rope" (20th). Fair $6,000. Last week, "Look in Any Window" (AA) and "Plunderers" (AA), $5,800.

Music Box (Hamrick) (739; $1.50-$3)—"Spartacus" (U) (12th wk). Fair $6,000. Last week, $6,800.

Music Hall (Hamrick) (2,200; $1-$1.50)—"Go Naked in World" (M-G). Bad $3,000. Last week, "Grass Is Greener" (U) (2d wk), $4,400.

Paramount (Fox-Evergreen) (2,300; $1.50-$1.75)—"Alamo" (UA) (3d wk). Good $8,000 or near. Last week, $10,500.

Hub OK; 'Fever' Fairish $9,500; 'Impostor' Slick 17G, 'Pepe' Rousing 11G

Boston, March 14.

Biz continues good here despite a snowstorm last Wednesday night, which sent intowners scurrying home, but failed to dent trade on the weekend. Scanty new product, but many new arrivals are okay. "Millionairess" looks slight at the Met. "Fever in Blood" is fair at Paramount. "Naked in Night" is oke at State.

Holdovers again dominate the scene. "Great Impostor" continues smash at Memorial in fourth round. "Where Boys Are" is strong at Orpheum in second. "Pepe" is holding well at Gary in fourth. "Spartacus" looms robust in 20th Astor session. "Exodus" is rated stout for 12th round at the Saxon.

Estimates for This Week

Chi Helped by New Pix; 'Impostor' Boff $35,000, 'Cry' Bangup 25G, 'Sanctuary' Mild 21G, 'Spartacus' Smash $14,500

Chicago, March 14.

After a three week scarcity of newies, Main Stem this round is getting a terrific hypo from six newcomers, nearly all of them big or socko. "Sanctuary" is hitting a slow $21,000 or less at Woods.

"Great Impostor" looks sockeroo $35,000 or near at Roosevelt. "Cry for Happy" looms big $25,000 in Oriental initialer, while "Millionairess" looms big $12,000 at Esquire. Loop tandem of "Female and Flesh" and "Wicked Go to Hell" shapes okay. "Fast and Sexy" paired with "As Sea Rages" at Monroe is neat.

"Make Mine Mink" continues brisk in third week at Cinema. "Pepe" rates strong in fourth Chicago frame.

"101 Dalmatians" is dandy in fifth State-Lake term. "Entertainer" looks tidy in fifth week at World. "Misfits" is holding trim in sixth round at United Artists.

Of hard-ticket pix, "Exodus" is playing to near full houses in 13th Cinestage session. "Spartacus" is staunch at McVickers in 22d frame, while "Ben-Hur" continues big in 64th Todd round.

Estimates for This Week

Carnegie (Telem't) (495; $1.80)—"Rikisha-man" (Fave) (6th wk). Steady $3,500. Last week, $3,900.

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 90-$1.80)—"Pepe" (Col) (4th wk). Solid $33,000. Last week, $38,000.

'Ship' Lofty $9,000 In Cincy; 'Pepe' Hot 15G On H.O., 'Alamo' 8G, 12

Cincinnati, March 14.

Film biz here at mid-Lent stage stacks up okay. Firm entries and holdovers are favored by weather improvement and Oscar halos for some. "Wackiest Ship in Army" shapes fast in launching at Keith's. "Pepe" remains hotsy at Capitol as town topper for second session. "Suzie Wong" is a potent fifth-weeker at flagship Albee. Hard-ticket "Alamo" and "Spartacus" retain strength nearing end of their runs. Windup of high school, college and pro basketball season in this hotbed of the sport is welcomed by exhibs.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; $1-$1.50)—"Suzie Wong" (Par) (5th wk). Potent $8,000. Last week, $9,000.

Capitol (SW-Cinerama) (1,400; $1.25-$1.80)—"Pepe" (Col) (2d wk). Hotsy $15,000 after $18,000 bow.

Esquire Art (Shor) (500; $1.25)—"Never On Sunday" (Lope) (8th wk). Tall $1,500 following last week's climb to $2,000 on Academy nomination which prolonged engagement.

Grand (RKO) (1,300; $1.75-$2.75)—"Spartacus" (U) (12th wk). Okay $7,000. Last week, $7,400.

Guild (Vance) (300; $1.25)—"Man In Cocked Hat" (Indie) (2d wk). Oke $1,900. Last week, $2,200.

Hyde Park Art (Shor) (500; $1.25)—"Happened In Broad Daylight" (Indie (2d wk). Fair $900. Last week, $1,300.

Keith's (Shor) (1,500; 90-$1.25)—"Wackiest Ship" (Col). Lofty $9,000. Last week, "Flaming Star" (20th), $5,000.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; $1-$1.25)—"Millionairess" (20th). Okay $8,000. Last week, "Gorgo" (M-G) (2d wk), $7,000.

Twin Drive-In (Shor) (600 cars, west side, 90c)—"Misfits" (UA) and "Pork Chop Hill" (UA) (subsequents). Mild $2,500. Last week, "Prisoners of Congo" (Indie) and "Amazing Mr. Callaghan" (Indie), $2,000.

Valley (Wiethe) (1,200; $1.50-$2.50)—"Alamo" (UA) (12th wk). Good $8,000. Week extended to 10 days for March 22 opening of "Exodus" (UA). Last week, $6,400.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i.e., without usual tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include U. S. amusement tax.

'Pepe' Potent 14G, Balto; 'Alamo' 11G

Baltimore, March 14.

"The Alamo" is sockeroo in second week at the New after a great opener. B'way Biz Limping; 'Naked' Slight $22,000, 'Facts' Fancy 27G in 5th, '101 D's' Fat 18G, 'Sanctuary' 21G

Lent and nearness of both Federal and N. Y. state income tax deadlines are making for a rather dreary boxoffice picture at Broadway first-runs this round. Rain, sleet and snow on Wednesday (8) sloughed trade generally while rain on Monday (13) and yesterday (Tues.) was no help to business. There's only one important newcomer, "Go Naked in World," and it is only slight with $22,000 likely for first session at the Capitol.

"Facts of Life," one of few pictures to weather seasonal tendencies, looks like fancy $27,000 in current (5th) stanza, day-dating the Astor and arty Beekman. "101 Dalmations" still is lively with $18,000 likely in fifth round at the Palace.

"Cry For Happy" is heading for a solid $24,000 in second frame, day-dating the Forum and the arty Trans-Lux 52d Street. "Swiss Family Robinson" looks like good $8,000 in 12th session at the Embassy.

"Cimarron," with stageshow, is heading for a mild $90,000 in fourth-final week at the Music Hall. Easter stageshow with "Absent-Minded Professor" opens tomorrow (Thurs.). "Sanctuary" is lightweight $21,000 in third stanza at Paramount and arty Trans-Lux 85th Street.

"Breathless," in fifth round at the arty Fine Arts, and "Never On Sunday," in 21st session at the arty Plaza, both continue great. "Love and Frenchwoman" shapes sock in second round at the arty Paris.

Still leading the hard-ticket pictures is "Exodus," with a wham $47,000 or near likely in present (13th) stanza at the Warner. "Pepe" was good $19,000 or close for 11 performances in 12th week at the Criterion. "Ben-Hur" is rated sturdy $24,000 for 11 shows in 68th session at the State.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (City Inv.) (1,094; 75-$2)—"Facts of Life" (UA) (5th wk). Current stanza winding tomorrow (Thurs.) looks to land fancy $18,000 after $22,000 for fourth.

Capitol (Loew) (4,820; $1-$2.50)—"Go Naked in World" (M-G). The first week ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks light $22,000 or near. In ahead, "Misfits" (UA) (5th wk), $23,000.

Criterion (Moss) (1,520; $1.50-$3.50)—"Pepe" (Col) (13th wk). The 12th session finished last night (Tues.) was good $19,000 for 11 shows after $16,000 for 11th week, which was only nine performances.

DeMille (Reade) (1,463; $1.50-$3.50)—"Spartacus" (U) (23d wk). This frame ending today (Wed.) is heading for good $17,000 after $18,500 for 22d week. Continues.

Embassy (Guild Eenterprises) (500; $1.25-$2) — "Swiss Family Robinson" (BV) (12th wk). This session ending tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like good $8,000 after $9,000 for 11th week. "Shadows" (BL) opens March 21.

Palace (RKO) (1,642; 90-$2.50)—"101 Dalmatians" (BV) (5th wk). Current round ending tomorrow (Thurs.) is heading for solid $18,000 after $23,000 for fourth week. "Great Impostor" (U) is due in on March 29.

Forum (Moss) (813; 90-$1.80)—"Cry for Happy" (Col) (2d wk). First holdover week winding tomorrow (Thurs.) looks like fancy $18,000 or near after $22,000 for opener. Continues until "Raisin in Sun" (Col) opens March 29.

Paramount (AB-PT) (3,665; $1-$2)—"Sanctuary" (20th) (4th wk). Third session ended Monday (13) was light $17,000 after $22,000 for second week. "All Hands on Deck" (20th) opens March 24.

Radio City Music Hall (Rockefellers) (6,200; 90-$2.75)—"Cimarron" (M-G) and stageshow (4th-final wk). This frame finishing today (Wed.) is heading for a mild $90,000 or near after $97,000, below hopes, for third. Easter stageshow and "Absent-Minded Professor" (BV) open tomorrow (Thurs.).

Rivoli (UAT) (1,545; $1.50-$3.50)—"Alamo" (UA) (21st wk). The 20th stanza ended last night (Tues.) was mild $13,000 or near after $14,000 for 19th week. "King and I" (20th) opens hard-ticket run March 23.

State (Loew) (1,900; $1.50-$3.50)—"Ben-Hur" (M-G) (68th wk). This round winding today (Wed.) looks to hit sturdy $24,000 for 11 shows after $25,500 in 67th week for same number of performances. Holds, natch!

Victoria (City Inv.) (1,003; 50-$2)—"Take Giant Step" (20th) (2d wk). This week winding tomorrow (Thurs.) is slipping to drab $8,000. First week, $11,000. "All in Night's Work" (Par) opens March 22. Current round would be lower excepting for addition of fight pix, starting last night (Tues.).

Warner (SW) (1,813; $1.50-$3.50)—"Exodus" (UA) (13th wk). This session finishing tomorrow (Thurs.) is heading for wow $47,000 after $48,000 for 12th week. Matinees continue a bit offish, hence, pic is not entirely sold out every day. Stays with applications now being made for dueats to the end of the year.

First-Run Arties

Baronet (Reade) (430; $1.25-$2)—"Modigliani" (Cont) (3d wk). Second round completed Monday (13) was nice $7,000 after $8,500 for opener.

Fine Arts (Davis) (468; 90-$1.80)—"Breathless" (Films Around World) (6th wk). Fifth stanza ended Monday (13) was smash $13,400 after $14,200 in fourth. Stays indef at this gait.

Beekman (R&B) (590; $1.20-$1.75)—"Facts of Life" (UA) (5th wk). This week winding tomorrow (Thurs.) is likely to hit big $9,000 after $10,000 in fourth. Holding.

Fifth Ave. Cinema (R&B) (250; $1.25-$1.80)—"Virgin Spring" (Janus) (m.o.) (5th wk). This frame ending tomorrow (Thurs.) is headed for nice $4,500 after $5,000 in fourth. Continues.

55th St. Playhouse (Moss) (253; $1.25-$2) — "Don Quixote" (M-G)

Snow Sloughs Toronto; 'Cry' Good 15G, 'Suzie' 10G, 'Impostor' 8G, 3d

Toronto, March 14.

With a midweek snowstorm denting trade and only two newcomers, trade is a bit spotty currently. "Cry for Happy" looms good at Imperial. "Shepherd of Kingdom Come" is off to a good start at three theatres. Holdovers are leading the city.

"Misfits" in fourth frame at Loew's looks hefty. "World of Suzie Wong" in sixth stanza at the Hollywood is hefty. "Spartacus" is rated big in 12th round at Uptown.

Estimates for This Week

Ed Wynn

he is a funny man. He and the rest of those fellows just stand there and tell jokes. Simply causing laughter doesn't make anyone a comedian."

The light comedians, like Cary Grant, David Niven, Jack Lemmon, cause plenty laughter, but they also do not figure on Wynn's scoreboard. "There's a rule in show business—the light comedian always gets the girl. The eccentric funnyman never does."

How did he rate people like Danny Kaye, Eddie Cantor and Al Jolson? "I'd say they were entertainers, great entertainers." What about Jack Benny? "I'd call him a reaction comedian," Wynn said. "He gets the laughs as Rochester cracks the jokes."

The current vogue for the humor or insult, as practiced by Jack E. Leonard and Don Rickles, left him unmoved. "They're both funny fellows," he admitted, "but that's not my style. Personally, I believe caustic humor is the easiest kind to write and do."

Wynn came back to his native city to receive an award from his alma mater, Central High School. "My name went up in lights in 1905," he said. "That was the year I would have been graduated if I hadn't quit after my freshman year."

vivid advantage that the Americana Hotel is just a short block away for the social appurtenances that go with all such powwows.

In the new concept of keying theatre operation to more realistic overheads, both Larry and Bob Tisch are (1) surveying for new theatre sites, to be built as part of huge apartment houses or hotels; (2), keeping them down to less wieldly 600-1,000 capacities, meaning curtailment of the big overheads; (3), automatically attracting a class trade with selective single-features; (4), utilizing the turnstile-cashier system, a la Trans-Lux, as a step in the overhead curtailment, applying the cost-control versus overhead technique of hotel operation to theatre operation.

'Impostor' Loud $15,000, Buff.; 'Gorgo' Fine 13G

Buffalo, March 14.

Some new product, most of which is strong, is helping to boost trade generally here this round. "Great Impostor" is standout with great takings at Lafayette. "Gorgo" is rated fancy at the Buffalo but "Underworld U.S.A." lasted only five days for sad returns at Paramount. "Cry For Happy" looks okay on opener at Century.

Defense vs. Cameras

cameras, as they are intended to be placed, will not disturb the proceedings. Dr. Servatius argued, that the presence of the cameras would influence the witnesses because they would be concerned with impressing their audience. Moreover, witnesses would be compelled to retell whatever they have beforehand told their friends, notwithstanding if it was the truth or not, because they would know that their friends are watching and listening to them. Finally, Dr. Servatius based his objection on the assumption, that filmmaking is not honorable to the court. Mr. Hausner answered that he was not less concerned with the honor of the court than Dr. Servatius.

The court will announce its decision within a few days. It's forecast that the court will agree to the presence of cameras, though it will stipulate that in no way may they disturb the proceedings.

The court also will give its decision as to who may have cameras at the trial. The government has signed an agreement giving exclusive rights to Capital City Broadcasting Co. of New York. Competitors objected to this agreement though it assures equal rights to everybody who wants the tape. The biggest obstacle was presented by local cameramen, who represent foreign tele companies here. They have fought the agreement in court, claiming that it infringes on their right to work. But this obstacle was removed this week, when Capital City gave assurances, that it will employ as many of them as possible on its local technical staff.

MINNEAPOLIS

New York Sound Track

Director Henry Levin in N. Y. to huddle with Metro execs on Joe Levine's "Wonders of Aladdin." He goes back to Rome this week for editing and dubbing . . . Henry Rosenberg and Dan Talbot (New Yorker Theatre) have taken over the Charles Theatre, N. Y. lower eastside Spanish pix house. It'll hence play U. S. and foreign revivals . . . Their uptown showcase, incidentally, snared American preem of the Polish "Kanal," via Jay Frankel, commencing May 9. Understood Kingsley-International will handle national release . . . Diplomat-decked "Man from Embassy" (Pictures) depositing leatherette attache cases at Manhattan tradepress offices. Each case disgorged promo material on "Fabulous World of Jules Verne" and "Bimbo the Great," Joe Levine combo which Warner's is handling.

Helen Bower, for the past 15 years film critic for the Detroit Free Press, retired last week after 47 years as reporter and critic for the newspaper. She was honored at a luncheon, sponsored by the Variety Club of Detroit.

Michigan Kroll, formerly in charge of women's programs at CBS, more recently writing documentary films, quitting N. Y. Hospital this week following surgery . . . Authors Guild hosting cocktail party at Lotus Club on East 66th Street this (Wed.) afternoon, 4-6, for visiting book reviewers from all over U. S.

Helping traffic-weary showfolk get in and out of Manhattan and environs these days is a somewhat offbeat transportation operation known as The Air Taxi Company, the nation's largest air taxi service run by an ex-Navy flyer, James Loeb. With headquarters in Red Bank, N. J., company's main business is in the feeding of passengers to regularly scheduled airlines, but it also undertakes longer journeys around the country. Among its "I-have-to-get-there-in-a-hurry" patrons are Spyros P. Skouras, John Daly, Toots Shor, Van Cliburn, Joe Mankiewicz, George Jessel and Miss Rheingold.

Cy Harvey, Janus Films, expects to bring over director Michelangelo Antonioni and star Monica Vietti for opening of the Italian-made "L'Avventure" at the Beekman. Meanwhile, Janus' French import, "Bernadette of Lourdes," in dubbed version, will bypass the arties for a general release starting next month. Daniele Ajoret, who plays Bernadette, is doubling in brass by promoting the pic in course of her current tour this side as a member of the Comedie Francaise troupe.

Ever since the N. Y. Sunday Times magazine had a layout on "decor in the modern living," utilizing the Mo Rothmans' 5th Ave. apartment as a theme, their friends want to audition the new digs. Result is that the Columbia Pictures International prexy is throwing a big cocktailery for the "preview" and also a quasi-bon voyage, since he's taking off St. Patrick's Day on one of his periodic European o.o. quickie flights.

Aaron Copland will compose the score for the UA-Prometheus (Jack Garfein-Carroll Baker) release, "Something Wild," which was shot entirely in N. Y. . . . Importer Ed Kingsley, prexy has more pix first-run in N. Y. right now than some major distribs—"Love and the Frenchwoman," "League of Gentleman" and "Ballad of A Soldier." Exec called attention to this situation, plus fact that he'll soon also have "La Verite" on display, in a half-page ad in Sunday's (12) Times . . . Yul Brynner is scheduled to fly in from Europe for the March 23 benefit opening of "The King and I" in Grandeur 70 at the Rivoli.

"Go Naked in the World" at Capitol for three weeks, marking time till "One-Eyed Jacks". . . Howard Hawks in from Africa locationing of "Hatari". . . Martin Davis back at the Paramount homeoffice after Acapulco loafing.

Teresa Stratas, soprano born in Canada of Greek parentage and cast as an Indian (sic) in 20th's "The Canadians" starring Robert Ryan, sang the slave girl in "Turandot" at the Met Opera March 9.

Rep. James C. Corman (D-Calif.) urged U. S. House and Senate members last week, in a Congressional Record insertion, to watch the Academy Awards presentation on television on April 17, climaxing a "hallmark year" for the film industry. Congressman, whose district includes most studios, called U. S. motion pictures the "finest in the world" and said they are "America's best known export."

Pandro Berman formed Roxbury Productions as new banner to make two pix for Metro, initialer to be "Sweet Bird of Youth," Richard Brooks to direct . . . Berman cancelled plans for producing "Turning of the Wheels," Stuart Cloete novel of Africa which was to have been second film, due to trouble on Dark Continent . . . Dean Jagger inked for Metro's "Honeymoon Machine". . . John Beck bought film rights to "Weekend Father," novel by late Dane Lussier, for indie production . . . "Morouf," novel by Benjamin Baland, acquired by Eugene Lourie, who produced "Gorgo" last year, for co-production with Unidex of Paris in India and Rome this summer . . . John Cassavetes cast Seymour Cassel, his aide, for a top role in his upcoming Paramount release, "Too Late Blues," starring Bobby Darin and Stella Stevens.

Recently he was named a Commander of the Order of the British Empire, and now he's named, via the Italian consul in L. A., Commendatore of the Ordine Al Merito. And at the same time Jack L. Warner is relinquishing the theatrical production reins. The backslapping derives from his contributions to international understanding through motion pictures.

A first novel, as yet untitled and unfinished, by Mrs. Elsie Mack of London, Ont., has been accepted by Doubleday, and is being glommed by 20th-Fox. It's based on the New Testament story of the woman caught in adultery, whom Jesus protected from a miniature lynch mob, with the words, "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

Joseph T. Lissauer, gen. mgr. of Skirball Bros. theatres headquartered in Cleveland, is flaunting a letter from Al Boudouris of Theatre Operating Co. of Toledo hailing remodeled Pantheon in latter city as "asset" to Toledo and further proof that film biz is "one of finest to be in this world."

Bud Yorkin and Norman Lear, as Tandem Productions, have purchased "Girl in the Turquoise Bikini" for lensing next spring. Their first, "Come Blow Your Horn," current Broadway comedy, goes before the cameras this fall, with Paramount to release . . . Maria Schell and G. W. Fischer are costarred in a German version of "The Four-Poster," now shooting . . . Larry Moss, veep of B. S. Moss Enterprises, on a swing of circuit operations in the south . . . Robert Mitchum gets "Personality of the Year" honorarium from Maryland Theatre Owners Assn. . . . FILM BIZ WOES MOSTLY COPY?

To an important extent, the increasingly articulate criticism of the trend toward adult-themed pix is not prompted by the films themselves so much as their ad campaigns. A large number of do-gooders, defenders of the public morals, taste-watchers, etc. never bother to go to the movies.

Because of this, it's extremely necessary at this time for filmmakers to make sure that their ad campaigns are not only lively and provocative, but honest and tasteful, a true presentation of the product at hand. Point was made in New York last Thursday (9) by Al Geto, industry ad man who, with Walter Blake, has just formed a new copy-art office known as The Freelancers.

Geto, who has served in the creative departments of the Monroe Greenthal Agency and Donahue & Coe, and recently completed a public relations stint with the Motion Picture Assn. of America, also puts it this way: "The poetry has gone out of advertising."

Tired Precedents

Today, he says, the man who designs a film's ad campaign faces an accumulation of problems, including the need to get away from the heritage of ad cliches which have been handed down from pic-to-pic ever since films went to feature length. Also, given a truly adult-themed pic (and, he points out, this need not only mean sex-themed), the ad man must come up with an approach which tells the facts, but still doesn't alienate.

The reasons for the over-use of sex in advertising is understandable, he continues, because sex does have a certain attraction. Too often, however, it has boomeranged, either because it was too blatant, or because it actually wasn't a key or representative element to the film being sold.

A classic "boomerang," he noted, was a film released several years ago which dealt with the life of one of the greatest painters of all time. The distrib was scared of it and decided to go all-out on the sex-sell. The boxoffice result was disaster. According to Geto, the distrib, by denigrating both the subject matter (the great painter) and the public, the distrib did even worse than was absolutely necessary, alienating that part of the public which resented the sex-sell as well as others who might have been interested in a serious film bio of the painter.

Why Clutter?

The film ad man, he says, sometimes gets caught in the middle, since he has not made the film and is only presented with a fait accompli with which to work. Taking note of the increasingly attractive, uncluttered and stylish art work being used by publishers of paperback books and manufacturers of record albums, Geto pointed out that these items are around in stores for months or even years, with a slower "payoff."

Motion picture ad men haven't yet displayed the consistent taste shown by these other products, but then the picture people have to get in and sell fast, because the product is gone within a short period of time. It's not always easy to create a vivid and tasteful image, he indicated, adding, however, that because of business and public relations pressures, it's vital that it be attempted.

Geto paid special praise to the stylish and offbeat ads now generally used to promote foreign product, at least in New York. But these pix, if they are hits, also get a slower playoff than the general run of domestic hits, and thus, perhaps, their distribs can afford this taste and style.

Geto's Freelancers group is offering to design basic campaigns on pix, including art and copy, as well as tv and radio spots and related promotional work. Group has offices in New York and Hollywood.

Soviets Shrewd Showmen?

Did They Guess Success of 'Cranes' and 'Ballad' In U.S.—Though Neither Rated High in Russia

The two most highly praised (by U.S. critics) of recent Soviet films —"The Cranes Are Flying" and "Ballad of A Soldier"—are not fit for "home consumption" from the Soviet point of view, according to an article entitled "Soviet Motion Picture Requirements" by Arkady Gaev. Gaev is a former Soviet journalist who now writes for the Institute for the Study of the USSR, made up of scholars who have left the Soviet Union.

Despite the fact that "Cranes" and "Soldier" were not overly well received at home, the Soviets chose to export them to the West because of their lack of revolutionary romanticism and Communist patriotism. However, just because they were free of political and ideological overtones, says Gaev, "these movies could not be considered by Soviet critics as art, which must be 'rich with bright events—the affairs of the remarkable Soviet people.'"

He adds that any film that even vaguely violates this rule requiring such "brightness" is accused of idealism, "a favorite whipping boy of Soviet critics at the present time."

Gaev suggests that the Soviet leaders were aware that the two films would be well received in the West, and thus approved their submission to international film festivals, "providing an excellent illustration of how pure art and a philosophical viewpoint censured at home are exploited abroad for political purposes."

METRO STRATEGY MEET

Terry Turner Handling TV Exploitation for 'Gorgo'

Meeting of Metro division branch and homeoffice execs at New York's Hotel Astor last week focused major attention on marketing plans for current and upcoming theatricals on the lineup, including the roadshowing of "King of Kings," the continuing "Ben-Hur" and "Cimarron," the reissue of "Gone With the Wind," and others.

At a separate homeoffice meeting presided over by sales veep Bob Mochrie, attention centered on releasing the King Brothers' production of "Gorgo," which has had only one date so far. Film is to get the saturation-booking treatment, territory-by-territory around the country. Starts off March 29 in 100 theatres in the N.Y. area, followed by 50 spots in Chicago March 31, and 50 around New England April 19. Terry Turner has been assigned by M-G to supervise the television and exploitation campaign.

Rembrandt of N.Y. To Do 'Tom-Jerry' Shorts Overseas

Bill Snyder's deal with Metro for production of new Tom & Jerry cartoons in Europe, closed more than six months ago, was confirmed by Robert Mochrie, sales veepee, to more than 75 delegates last week before winding two-day sales sesn at Astor Hotel.

During past several years Metro has been reissuing Tom-Jerrys in color and other shorts.

About five years ago Metro curtailed all shorts production when $30,000 minimum cost per subject was found prohibitive. Snyder, through his Rembrandt Films, has produced cartoons abroad for half Metro's tally sheets. He's been quietly making T & J's to build backlog for one a month release, starting May 3.

WRITERS GUILD SLATES SET; ELECT MAY 18

Hollywood, March 14.

Board members: Nate Monaster, Barry Trivers, Robert Schiller, Ellis Marcus, Mary C. McCall Jr., Jerry Gottler, David Harmon and Robert Yale Libott.

Four holdover members from the screen branch are Richard Breen, Ernest Lehman, Isobel Lennart and Robert Pirosh.

Lawyer Fails to Show; Dismiss, With Prejudice, Greenes Vs. Atlanta

Atlanta, March 14.

Claim for $1,500,000 filed by William and Lavanda Ann Greene, operators of Glen Theatre, Decatur, Ga., in 1955 against Atlanta Enterprises Inc., et al, has been dismissed with prejudice by Federal District Judge William Boyd Sloan, following failure of plaintiff's attorney to appear for a pretrial conference. Defendants are major distribs, Wilby-Kincey, and other Atlanta and Decatur exhibs.

Another suit brought by same plaintiffs against the distribs, relating to the Palmetto Theatre in Palmetto, Ga., was tried before Judge Sloan in 1959 and resulted in a jury verdict for distribs.

Authors Production Co. Sets Two Exploiters

Hollywood, March 14.

Newly-formed Authors Production Co., headed by producer-director William Rowland and authors Paul I. Wellman and A. B. Guthrie Jr., will launch operations with pair of exploitation films.

Initialer will be "Color Blind," based on Guthrie's Pulitzer prize-winning newspaper story, dealing with problems of discrimination and miscegenation in a northern college, to roll March 20 at Hal Roach Studios.

Second, slated to go in June, is Wellman's biopic of Major Claude Eatherly, U.S. Air Force pilot who led the Hiroshima and Nagasaki atomic air raids and was recently in the news as harassed with a guilt complex. Both will be turned out sans release.

Rowland will handle producer-director reins, Wellman act as exec producer and Irma Berk associate producer. Vet George Moskov will act as production exec.

Minnelli on Oscarcast

Hollywood, March 14.

Vincente Minnelli, who directed last year's Academy Awards show, will repeat for upcoming 33d annual sweepstakes, held April 17 at Santa Monica Civic Aud.

Minelli was an Oscar winner as well for his helming of "Gigi," in 1958.

MUSSOLINI

Directed by Pasquale Prunas

● The first film based on documents contained in the secret archives of the Allied Forces and the Iron Curtain countries.

● The film which shows the true face — unknown until now — of the man who played such an important role in the history of the past 30 years.

● His private life, his family, his friends and his enemies, the immense tragedy which saw him kill the father of his grand children, the story of the woman who was his companion at the moment of his dramatic end, are told along a span of history reaching from the March on Rome, the intervention in Spain, the Anschluss, the pact with Hitler, to war, defeat, and death.

The Skeeters is a limited-membership (actually one is "tapped," like for a secret college fraternity) which revolves around the "21"-Toots Shor-Neal Lang (Plaza) set. Its "western delegate" is the ailing William Gargan. Film and tv star is learning to articulate through a soundbox following throat surgery and his upbeat communique to J. Walter Kennedy, secretary of the group (Kennedy, incidentally, is the Mayor of Stamford) was circulated to the "golden 50" membership who comprise The Skeeters:

"My ears have been burning and my pens are wearing out from trying to answer every well wisher and friend throughout the world. I'm going to go broke buying stamps! And, then, Sobol puts my home address in the paper and 'bingo' you'd think I'd just made a hit picture instead of cutting my throat. Speaking of losing my voice, while it has its drawbacks, to put it mildly, there are some humorous sides to it. I'm unable to smell so a couple of pals out here informed everybody 'no flowers—he can't smell—but booze is on his diet.' I figured I made about three cases on the operation!

"I'm trying to catch up with a lot of people whom I don't even know but have bombarded heaven (or hell) with masses, novenas, medals (I think I can go in business), prayers, jobs in real estate in Biloxi, Miss., insurance in Peru, public relations in Cuba (sick joke) and even a guy who had larngectomy and is in the trucking business offering me 10 bucks and a job. I have enough masses etc. stacked up. I just can't leave here until they get them said and brother that's going to take a long time.

"Trackwise, I'm a one-to-19 shot (as Man O'War was in 1917) to beat this rap. My trainer, Dr. Alvin Miller, says I'm a cinch. My agent tells me we can figure on a tv series with such titles as 'The Unspeakable'; 'Silent Knight'; 'The Quiet One'; 'The Silent Shamus.' I'll get the 'Lost Chord Club' to produce.

"But, best of all, my voice teacher, Dr. Harrington, says I've broken well, I'm training real good and in six months will be off and screaming. He's thinking of calling me 'Belching Willie' which as you no doubt know is the method by which I'm trying to talk. After five lessons I'm able to say such important things as 'Bourbon and water'—'Scotch and soda'—'Thank you'—'Make it a double'—'Let's eat' and 'Wait for Me'. . . remember?"

Just about the time a report came from Hollywood noting that producer-director George Stevens was interested in signing Swedish star Max von Sydow to play Jesus in "The Greatest Story Ever Told." VARIETY recieved a lengthy communication from Frank Talbot, "consultant to Russell Gary Heikkila," announcing that Heikkila was "no longer interested in Hollywood" and was taking a powder.

Talbot had been asked to make this announcement, he wrote, because of the "wide press coverage" about his client's playing the Jesus role in "Greatest Story." Heikkila is described as having left his pulpit in Chattanooga in 1957 to go to Hollywood "relative to playing" the Jesus role. He is further described as a minister, but the denomination is not mentioned.

Accompanying the Talbot letter is a leaflet promoting Heikkila's 1961 national speaking tour, describing him as "The Sir Laurence Olivier of the pulpit!" and a speaker "designed for today's Adventure-seeking, Thrill-craving audiences!" Among other topics on his agenda: "Stardom or Christ? What does Hollywood think of The Galilean?"

Picturegoing must be made something special—an "event." There's "a continuing need for new presentation techniques that lift theatre attendance to an event above the ordinary." This was the message given by Martin Davis, Paramount's ad-pub director, at a tradepress meeting this week. He said "Ten Commandments" set the standard for the current hard-ticket roadshow policy, and "Psycho" created a stir with the dictate of no admissions after the opening curtain.

The approach with Par's "One-Eyed Jacks" will be continuous performance at regular prices but with tickets available as much as seven days in advance—the sales not to exceed capacity. "Jacks" might well have gone hard-ticket, but the market currently is over-loaded with roadshows, said Davis.

Will the Motion Picture Assn. of America put its money where its mouth is on the censorship issue? MPAA, of course, has given its full support to Times Film in the latter's battle with the Chicago film licensing board before the U. S. Supreme Court. Some film industry observers feel, however, that the real test of the MPAA's declared policy to fight censorship "on all fronts" will come when and if the org decides to back censor battles involving films of slightly more pointed nature than the "Don Juan" opera pic, which figures in the Chicago case. Those industryites will believe MPAA's sincerity if, for example, it lends a hand to such a film as Zenith International's "Hiroshima, Mon Amour," which has raised the dander of censors from Atlanta to Evanston (Ill.).

Some 21 years ago, at the time David O. Selznick's filmization of Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind," was premiered in Atlanta, Jack Tarver was editor, advertising manager, mechanical superintendent, and circulation director of the Toombs County Democrat. He saw the picture and wrote a much-quoted review of it for his paper. Thursday (9) this review was reprinted in Atlanta Journal on the eve of the Civil War Centennial Anniversary return premiere of "GWTW." An explanatory note asks "Whatever became of Jack Tarver?" He's president of Atlanta Newspapers Inc., publishers of The Journal and the a.m. Constitution.

Shan Sayles, who operates Paris, Apollo and Vista Continental, Los Angeles art houses, exhibited 34 Russian features in last-named house during 1960. Because of demand, he hopes to increase number this year. A Russian Film Festival (two weeks) is set for Vista Continental. Old classics slated for four-day twin billing include "Battleship Potemkin," Eisenstein's effort voted all-time best in Brussel's 1958 Film Festival; "10 Days That Shook the World," "Ivan the Terrible" Parts 1 and 2, "Alexander Nevsky," "The Childhood of Maxim Gorky," "Peter the Great" Part 2, "Boris Godunov," an opera; and cartoon "Magic Horse."

When the Atlanta Public Library Board recently cited the ban against Lopert Films' "Tunes of Glory," it was the first time in many years that the board has overruled city's censor board headed by Mrs. Christine Gilliam. Mrs. Gilliam had originally banned "Tunes" because of the use the word "bastard" in the pic. She also banned Lopert's "Never on Sunday" because of the use of the word "whore," in addition to which she asked that one entire sequence be cut out. Lifting of the ban against "Tunes" followed an appeal by Lopert to the Public Library Board. As yet, board hasn't acted on a similar appeal re "Sunday."

Throughout the year VARIETY receives inquiries concerning the annual listing of grosses (domestic rentals) estimated for the pictures which have impact on the trade's economics. This year's roundup, it's now to be noted, inadvertently omitted "Room at the Top" (Romulus-Continental) which is hereby entered at $2,750,000. And somehow "African Queen" (Romulus-United Artists; 1952) got lost from the roster of all-time champs. This one garnered $4,100,000.

How do the names of independent production companies come to be? Well, in the case of Carl Foreman this is how. Foreman wanted to incorporate and went to his Coast attorney on the matter. Latter went through his files, found the papers set for an outfit that never materialized, so Foreman acquired the name of this company for his own—High Road Productions.

stimulates aggressiveness and sexual fantasies by means of either symbolic or real visual representation . . ."

Anxiety

Among other things, the child can develop "overwhelming amounts of anxiety" and "lowered sensitivity to the value of human life and dignity and reinforcement of attitudes of self-centered indifference."

Tv programs, it said, frequently give only a blurred picture of what constitutes "goodness or badness," "masculinity or femininity" or "love and eroticism."

Furthermore, the report asserted, excessive crime and violence in pictures and tv programs exported abroad "represent a serious threat to the image of America." It quoted an unnamed article which put it this way: "The trune image of America is being dirtied by shoddy, garish exaggerration of its worst aspects."

Raps Codes

The Television Code of National Assn. of Broadcasters and the MPAA code authority both came under fire. While they set commendable standards, the report said, "the reality is different—many movies and tv shows clearly violate the standards set by the codes."

Among other things, the report called for greater research into the field of juve behavior as influenced by the media, and since they have a big public responsibility in this regard, the tv and picture industries should foot part of the bill.

Also, the report continued, the tv industry has a special responsibility "to insure reasonable safeguards against harm to children" since they actually "enter the homes."

"Therefore," the report said, "it would appear that the burden of proof regarding harmlessness of the entertainment product should be upon the producing industry rather than primarily upon the parents, educators or others concerned about the welfare of children."

Among recommendations was the establishment of a "National Commission on Television and Motion Pictures" with either government or private support. It also urged Federal Communications Commission to monitor programs and use "more diversified and flexible sanctions" against broadcasters in the fight to root out harmful programming.

At the same time, the industries were urged to correct the "considerable gap" between the codes and the amount of crime etc. actually being depicted.

Those taking part in the conference which shaped the report included WMCA execs, psychiatric researchers, law enforcement personnel, child specialists, and sociologists, and educators—some fairly prominent.

Rackmil Renewal

Hunter super-soapers ("Imitation," "Pillow Talk," etc.) and since evidenced in such major entries as "Grass Is Greener," "Midnight Lace" (Hunter's most recent), "Great Impostor" and, of course, the hard-ticketed "Spartacus." Rackmil, in the report, is expectedly high, in fact, on "Spartacus" as a major money-minter for several years to come, having already, according to U, pulled in more than $5,000,000 in domestic and foreign rentals.
